COBOURG, Nov. 21 — (ENS) — Stolen Monday morning from in front of the theatre between 9:30 and 10:30, a car owned by John F. Lean of R.R. No. 6, Cobourg, was later picked up at Perth around two p.m. Police of Perth arrested William Affleck of Tilsonburg and Paul Elliott of St. Thomas when they recovered the car. They will be brought back to Cobourg to stand trial for car theft.

Chief W. J. Carey of Cobourg has issued a reminder for citizens to leave their cars locked as it is only inviting theft to leave the keys in the ignition with crime rampant throughout the province.

Centenary WA Gives $15 To Mission Band

ROSENEATH, Nov. 21—(ENS)— Misses Jessie and Emma Sherwin were hostesses to the members of the Centenary United Church W.A. when the regular meeting of the society was held in their home. Mrs. D. Timlin, president, was in the chair.

Business transacted included decisions: to donate $15 to the M. and M. fund; to forward parcels of candy to three boys from the community now overseas; to forward individual Christmas cards to enlisted men and women still in Canada; and to continue the exchange of Christmas gifts among the members as in previous years, at the December meeting.

Numbers on a program devoted to Remembrance Day included readings by Mrs. D. Timlin and Mrs. A. Elder; a vocal solo by Mrs. R. C. White and a Biblical contest won by Mrs. White. Rev. R. C. White offered a closing prayer, and the refreshment committee served afternoon tea.

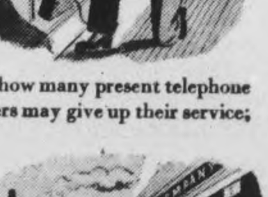
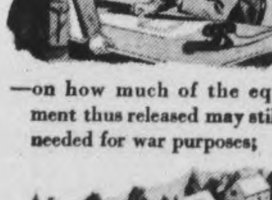
WONDERING WHEN you can get a telephone?

That's a hard one to answer . . .

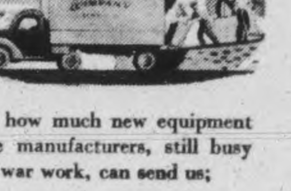
You see, it depends on a number of things beyond our control . .



—on how many present telephone users may give up their service;



—on how much of the equipment thus released may still be needed for war purposes;



—on how much new equipment the manufacturers, still busy on war work, can send us; —on the local situation in your particular neighbourhood (conditions vary greatly between localities).

So the only answer we can honestly give to all those whose names are on our waiting list for telephone service is that we are trying to be fair to everybody, and that all will get telephones, in order of application, just as quickly as they become available.

An Outsider's Opinion

Discussion of the conscription issue in Canada has reached boiling point, and a serious lack of proportion is shown in conducting it. In Canada the matter is of utmost importance, for it touches our national honour and our duty to the men of this country who are fighting abroad. But there is a tendency to blow it up into a matter of greater importance than that, and to suggest that Canada will never be able to meet other nations on equal terms unless the demands of the conscriptionists are fulfilled. We need perspective on this question, and we are lucky enough to have a great nation to the south which can supply it for us. It is significant that the press of the United States has had very little to say about our problem. Indeed, as a writer in the Ottawa Citizen puts it, we create about as much interest as the Duchy of Luxembourg.

We have seen only one extensive discussion on the Canadian problem in an American paper, and that was an article called 'Canada's Conscription Riddle' by Carlyle Morgan in the Christian Science Monitor of Boston. As an outsider Mr. Morgan writes about our problem without rancour and with a sweet reasonableness which falls strangely upon the ear, after our splenetic Canadian editorials. He says that Canada's attitude toward conscription has 'perplexed' many Americans, who do not realize Canada has 'a nation within a nation' and that this inner nation is not simply French, but 'Old French'—that is to say, pre-revolutionary French. He continues thus:

"It was untouched by the French Revolution, with the accompanying anti-clerical influences. It is a sort of anomalous and anachronistic civilization in the New World and a new age. French leaders have shown that they do not consider this mode of life to be acutely threatened by the reversion to Fascism in Europe".

Mr. Morgan goes on to tell his readers all that is familiar to us: that French Canada is a minority large enough and powerful enough to spike any move which seems to establish an Anglo-Saxon supremacy here, and that French Canada has opposed all constitutional changes in this country. And he puts his finger on the sore point in this paragraph:

"It is an axiom among Canadian leaders that no Government could maintain itself at Ottawa without French support. And it is remembered by these leaders that no Conservative Government has existed in Ottawa since the Conservatives imposed outright conscription during World War One. Republicans out of office for only 16 years in the United States will have some idea of what that single act of conscription cost the Conservatives of Canada".

This, of course, is not accurate. Like many American writers, Mr. Morgan does not know Canadian history except in a general way; he has forgotten, or never heard of, Lord Bennett's administration (1930-35) and Mr. Meighen's two brief terms of power. But he has hit the nail on the head. Conscription dealt a heavy blow to the Conservative Party, which would now like to see the Liberal Party suffer a similar disability. This is not the only cause of the present uproar, but it is one of the most potent causes. Of its possible consequences, the writer continues:

"And today Canadian leaders must look ahead another generation. The French population of Canada is growing so rapidly that some students of population trends estimate it may amount to as much as 40 per cent. of Canada's total in another 25 or 30 years. It would be asking a great deal of the Liberal Party, of which the Prime Minister, Mr. Mackenzie King, is the chief representative, to propose that it incur such an increasing hostility for the sake of all-out conscription, unless it can be proved that Canadian ranks overseas are in danger of serious depletion—a question Canadians are at this very moment debating".

To this American commentator it appears that the two old Canadian parties are locked in a struggle from which only one can emerge with the breath of life in it. If both should succumb, the third party, the C.C.F., would be the gainer. But the C.C.F. would gain only what it could achieve with the consent of Quebec. For, as this writer has shown by implication, Quebec is the political master of Canada, and will gain even more power as its population grows. Seen from Boston's Canada's problem appears at once simpler and more ominous than it does seen from Ontario.

Analysing The Draft

The analysis of the draftee army which is possible from the figures which have been given out by the Prime Minister and General McNaughton is of considerable interest. It is frequently said that French Canada has conspicuously neglected its duty in the matter of enlistments, and that 'the Zombie Army is full of Frenchmen'. As a matter of fact, French Canadians make up the same proportions of the draftee army as they do of the Canadian population—an approximate third.

Among the draftees who have been in uniform since 1941 slightly more than a third are French; in the 1942 group the percentage is 35; in the 1943 group it is 34 per cent. In the 1944 draft the number rises almost to 50 per cent. There are, however, considerable numbers of Canadians of foreign extraction, with foreign names, foreign appearance and foreign speech both in the active and draftee Canadian armies, and we suggest that the people who profess to see Frenchmen everywhere see some of these men and mistake them for draftees from Quebec.

The figures which have been made available reveal what the Winnipeg Free Press calls "a hard core in the draftee army which certainly cannot be regarded as favourable material for recruiting officers". But the French Canadians do not make up more than a reasonable proportion of this core; the core contains French, British and foreign draftees in the proportion which one would expect. It is extremely doubtful if any form of recruiting would induce them to fight. If they were conscripted for overseas service they would have to fight, but the question is: How well would they fight?

Not All Zombies Wear Uniform

Humility is one of the most precious, and certainly one of the rarest, of the virtues. At present a fire of contempt and ridicule is directed at those men of the Home Defence Army who are called 'Zombies'; to what extent they deserve this treatment we cannot say. But we should like to draw the attention of those who are most virulent in their condemnation of Zombies to this quotation from the Recorder and Times of Brockville:

"How many of the older people of both sexes who ridicule and censure these 'Zombies' can themselves say that they are doing all they possibly can to fight and win the war? How many refrain from presenting themselves at blood clinics to save the lives of the men overseas when it is quite within their power to do so? How many of them are by no means above cheating on their food or gasoline rations when both are short because of the pressing needs overseas? How many of them do not object to chiselling a bit on prices in disregard of the ceilings which have been established and held so far that Canada may be properly mobilized for the winning of the war?

"How many of these civilians are ready to perjure themselves in order to secure tires to which they are not entitled and which remain in short supply because of overseas demands?"

The desire for a scapegoat is deep in human nature and it leads to many injustices. Let us leave criticism of the Zombies to those who are themselves spotless. Not all Zombies wear uniform, and some have passed military age.

Who Done It?

The writer who calls himself 'Critic' in the London New Statesman and Nation prints this story about someone of our nation who, if not new, was certainly a very green statesman indeed:

"When a group of Canadian M.P.s were in this country in 1941, they were invited to Cliveden. Recently an authentic story of this visit came to me from a friend who was present on the occasion. One of the party (politically, I think, rather a back-woodsman) found the conversation, after tea in the library, a bit outside his range. He started looking round the shelves and at once found some enormous eighteenth century books with fine engravings, bound in an exquisite uniform ivory cover. Turning to Lord Astor (who did not tell me the story!), he said, with a smile of pleasure: 'This, I suppose, is the famous Cliveden set?' "

Parliament meets on Wednesday next, and we suggest that the Whips corner their victims in the lobbies and read this passage to them, and then demand, "Come on now, boys; who done it?" The offender should have his mouth washed out with soap, and be locked in the Commons Reading Room for the remainder of the day.

NOTE AND COMMENT

First the Kitchener Record and now a number of other papers are urging everybody to mix one part of inspiration with three parts of perspiration, and stir it. Sounds disgusting.

Relief In Europe

(By B. T. RICHARDSON)

MONTREAL: The responsibility for civilian relief in liberated countries of Europe will pass to the United Nations relief and rehabilitation six months after a country is liberated. Before that, the responsibility will rest with Allied military authorities, who are handling civilian relief on a strictly maintenance basis in the meantime.

This explanation of the transition to be made from military to civilian control of relief in the liberated countries cleared up many aspects of a controversy which has begun to develop over the relation between military authorities and UNRRA, the first United Nations' peacetime organization. The period of six months between liberation and the transfer of authority over distribution of civilian supplies will be interpreted with flexibility, of course, since military circumstances may make it longer or shorter in different cases.

In the case of Italy, military responsibility for civilian relief has already been extended, in southern liberated sections of the country, beyond six months. But as Major-General Glen E. Edgerton, U.S. army member of the combined civil affairs committee of the combined chiefs of staff at Washington, said to the UNRRA council, civilian supply operations by the military should be superseded as soon as possible by the comprehensive plans worked out by civilian agencies.

The case of Italy posed one of the most controversial issues arising at the UNRRA conference in Montreal, for treatment of ex-enemy peoples is a matter upon which the strongest opinions are held. A majority of the 44 nations represented on the UNRRA council, however, favoured furnishing relief for ex-enemies. The Chinese, for instance, were quite agreeable to including the Japanese people in future relief measures, once Japan is "liberated."

THE provision of supplies to feed and care for civilian populations is an entirely different problem from the restoration of civilian government in liberated countries. Lt.-Gen. G. N. Macready, British member of the civil affairs committee of the combined chiefs of staff, made this clear. In the import and transport of goods, military requirements will be supreme over civilian needs, as long as the military situation warrants. Looking after civilians in the war areas, he said, "is a limited objective." It is "primarily to facilitate the main task of defeating the enemy."

As General Edgerton put it, the military command must limit its responsibility towards civilian populations to "the maintenance of barely supportable conditions," in order to "minimize confusion and to avoid chaos, pestilence and disease." Anything beyond hand-to-mouth relief will have to be provided by other agencies such as UNRRA or the governments of a liberated country, some of which will have resources themselves for the task.

Military plans to provide civilian relief, as part of the wholesale planning of the invasion of Europe, were disclosed publicly for the first time when General Macready's remarks to the UNRRA council on Sept. 18, 1944, were released for publication. The original plan—Plan A—was based upon the assumption that all countries would be liberated at the same time and that the military would exercise the responsibility for relief for six months. This assumption was merely for the purpose of planning, for of course all countries would not be liberated at the same time and each liberated population would be found to be in differing circumstances. The revisions made in Plan A, which would reflect the present and future plans of the military commanders, were not disclosed. On the basis of Plan A, the British and American supreme command under General Eisenhower created stockpiles of relief goods to be required. They planned to take control of any supplies found in liberated countries, and they had trained officers ready to control distribution.

IN the case of France, as General Edgerton explained in a graphic account of civilian relief operations in the wake of the advancing Allied armies, Normandy was found to be rich in agricultural production. So steps were taken immediately to conserve supplies for metropolitan areas to be liberated later.

When the armies reached Paris, civilian relief officers entered the city with the forces. The Allies were able to transport 500 tons daily of food, medical supplies and soap by air from depots in England, to obtain 500 tons daily from stockpiles they had already brought to French territory, and a further 500 tons from French sources. Thus Paris had 1,500 tons of relief supplies daily immediately the city was liberated. It has lived on a day-to-day basis since, and normal services are being restored as trucks become available and rail lines are repaired.

Part of the success in providing relief for civilians in France is due to the French people themselves, who co-operated with the military authorities promptly in establishing ration systems and other forms of control. As the war moves into Germany and towards victory, the French people will in due course take over the relief problem, relying on UNRRA for help in returning displaced persons to their homes and in obtaining allocations of goods for shipments to France through UNRRA and its connections with Allied combined boards which control materials and shipping.

THE case of Italy was different, because the Allies landed in the south and internal distribution of supplies was controlled from Rome and the north. The main source of grain inside Italy is the Po valley, still in German hands a year since the Allied landings in the south.

In Naples, the most critical shortage was water. The Allies first rationed water and distributed it with their trucks. Then they brought in three small Italian submarines, whose motors served as an emergency power plant to operate the Naples pumping system so that city sewers could be flushed. The 82nd airborne infantry division drove the Germans out of the Naples aqueduct area, and it took ten days to repair the aqueduct. Meanwhile, other power sources were repaired.

Clearing the port of Naples, so that supplies both military and civilian could be landed, was a difficult job. But in ten days, 6,000 tons daily were being landed. It was five months before this tonnage was tripled, but now the port can handle five times its peacetime capacity.

Generals Macready and Edgerton constituted a delegation from the combined chiefs of staff to the UNRRA council. Their reports coincided in expressing the desire of the military authorities to hand over civilian relief as soon as possible to civilian authorities. "In the light of the rapid progress of military operations in recent weeks," said General Macready, "urgent consideration is now being given to the development of plans for the early accomplishment of this transition."

A statement like this may be easily linked with the recent Allied military planning conference in Quebec, for both Macready and Edgerton attended that conference a few days before they came to the UNRRA conference. In addition, Richard K. Law, British minister of state and members of the UNRRA council, conferred in Quebec with Mr. Churchill and Mr. Eden prior to the Montreal meeting.

TWO GREAT EXPLORERS MEET

Irritating

(LETHBRIDGE HERALD)

WE haven't the least doubt that there are a great many people in Northern Ireland who have been terribly irritated throughout the war by the fact that Eire (South Ireland), though a component of the British Empire, refused to join in the fight against Germany, refused even to allow Eire ports to be used by the British Navy in the war against German U-boats at a time when German frightfulness was sinking British vessels in the Atlantic faster than they could be replaced.

No doubt many people in Britain and in Northern Ireland are greatly irritated over the fact that, when conscription was instituted in Britain, the same compulsory service plan was not put into effect in Northern Ireland which sends its own members of Parliament to Westminster—because Prime Minister Churchill and his Cabinet decided that the results from imposition of conscription in North Ireland would not be worth the chance that the action would be followed by rebellion in Eire.

There are, and have been during two wars, a great many people in Australia who are irritated by the fact that conscription for general service anywhere has never been put into effect in that Dominion, that Premier Curtin is against it, and that the people of Australia in two plebiscites in the last war turned it down though Australia has no racial or language problem, being wholly Anglo-Saxon.

Field Marshal Smuts, Prime Minister of South Africa, is one of the British Empire's greatest statesmen and a loyalist who has never been doubted though he was fighting the British in the Boer War only some 40 years ago. Yet conscription has never been advocated by Prime Minister Smuts for the Dominion of South Africa. Voluntary service is the basis for South Africa's war effort. But there are, no doubt, many South Africans who are greatly irritated because they feel that conscription is the only fair method of carrying on that Dominion's war effort.

Conscription is the most irritating issue in Canada right now. It has caused a Cabinet crisis. Even the fact that Gen. McNaughton, one of Canada's greatest soldiers, believes that voluntary recruiting for overseas service is the better plan does not prevent many people from becoming so hot under the collar that they condemn Canada's whole war effort because they're fighting mad about the zombies. They call it weak-kneed politics. We doubt if they would agree with Gen. McNaughton if he were to say as Prime Minister Churchill did in the case of North Ireland, that the results would not be worth while.

A Hundred Dead Cities

(OTTAWA JOURNAL)

FIRE still destroys much forest in Canada every year. The curse is not what it was, for there has been vigorous preventive effort on the part of governments, Dominion and Provincial, and of lease-holders of timber limits. But there cannot be too much of such preventive effort, nor too much of carefulness by private citizens against fire start.

The evil that can be done by destruction of forest protection of soil is illustrated by a remarkable article in the magazine Forest and Outdoors for November, telling of a hundred dead cities in Syria. Once that country was one of the most fertile on earth, supporting a dense population on a high scale of civilization. Now, says the article,

"These dead cities in their almost perfect state of preservation seem to have been more asleep than dead for 13 centuries. In reality they are dead! dead! dead! and with no possible chance for resurrection."

As that great civilization in Syria developed, no care was taken to preserve the forests; and then came conquering hordes of barbarians, chiefly the Arabs, who not only cared nothing about forest preservation but did their best with fire and axe to clear the hills to pasture their goats. So the hills lost their soil first, washed down by the rains; then from the bare hills came torrent of water to sweep over lower land and carry the soil away into what rivers there were. Says the article:

"Man-induced erosion of the soil has in a region of about 1,150,000 acres done its worst; it has swept three to six feet of soil from the hill lands baring the limestone skeleton of the country. It has removed the support of the former prosperous population which found wealth and leisure enough to delight in and develop an art and architecture of unusual vigor and beauty. The people and the civilization vanished leaving the Dead Cities of North Syria as tombstones above a stark and barren landscape. They tell the tragic story of the terrible curse upon the land and future inhabitants when soil erosion is permitted to despoil the soil and water resources."

The author of the article is Dr. Walter Lowdermilk, assistant chief of Soil Conversion Service of the United States Department of Agriculture.

On our Western prairies there are no forests. What has protected the soil? The answer is, Nature—up to a point. In the long ages prior to the arrival of the white man with his plow there was that protection of Nature. The prairies were a vast stretch of natural matted grass, which held the moisture of the rains and the snows. Where the plow has come, the natural sod has gone, the naked earth is bare to the winds. That is the danger now on the prairies, and suggests the tremendous importance there of protective wood belts to break the force of the winds. The Prairie provinces are awake to the danger; all of them have vigorous forest promotion departments which do excellent work. But it is worth the while of every Canadian in this country of ours, which has the greatest forest wealth in the world, barring possibly Russia, to give the best support he can, political or moral, to all effort both to protect our forests from devastation, whether by fire or commercial greed, and to promote new forest growth where it can do good.

Ironsides

During the Battle of Shanghai, soon after the opening of the Sino-Japanese War, General Chang Faikwei defended the Chapei district of the city with an incredible tenacity. No one had expected that he could resist long with so little in the way of resources, but his men fought for every street corner, every block, every house. When those who still lived finally were forced to evacuate there was nothing left of Chapei but rubble.

This same general, who has so well earned his nickname "Ironsides," now is in command of the Chinese forces defending Kweilin. For weeks Kweilin has been expected to fall. As long ago as mid-September American airmen abandoned their base near the city and blew up all their installations—a decision made with extreme reluctance, for at one field alone they had 550 costly buildings. The withdrawal was accepted as wise, because every one agreed that the situation was virtually hopeless.

Since the day that the base was blasted to destruction the well armed and well supplied Japanese have maintained a constant pressure in their effort to capture the city. General Chang's men, supported by American and Chinese flyers from bases not far away, have fought the enemy from barricades and trenches for day after weary day and week after hopeless week. Unnumbered thousands of Chinese soldiers have died in the Kwangsi hills around Kweilin, but the survivors, hungry and ill-equipped and poorly trained as they are, still hold the city.

There is no substitute for courage in war and, whatever else they may lack, the Chinese have that quality in generous measure. — New York Herald Tribune.

A Bible Message

And on the seventh day God ended his work which he had made; and he rested on the seventh day from all his work which he had made. ....But there went up a mist from the earth, and watered the whole face of the ground. And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul.... And the Lord God took the man, and put him into the garden of Eden to dress it and to keep it....

And the Lord God caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam, and he slept: and he took one of his ribs, and closed up the flesh instead thereof; and the rib, which the Lord God had taken from man, made he a woman, and brought her unto the man.

And Adam said, This is now bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh: she shall be called Woman, because she was taken out of man. (Gen. 2: 2, 6, 7, 15, 21-23.)

Give not sleep to thine eyes, nor slumber to thine eyelids.... How long wilt thou sleep, O sluggard? when wilt thou arise out of thy sleep? (Prov. 6: 4, 9.)

The night is far spent, the day is at hand: let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armour of light. (Rom. 13: 12.)

For ever, O Lord, thy word is settled in heaven.... Through thy precepts I get understanding: therefore I hate every false way. (Ps. 119: 89, 104.)

THE JUDGE'S MOVE

Firmly brushing aside the possibility that the Court of Chancery might some day be asked to approve of crossword puzzles or bezique as an educational instrument, Mr. Justice Vaisey decided that a legacy for the establishment of a chess tournament for the youth of Portsmouth was a valid charitable trust.

Those profound experts who sometimes plead for a bigger board to make a harder game should remember this judicial compliment. They might introduce the Judge as a new piece. His place has long been neglected, and his move might be decided by international conference.—Manchester Guardian.

NO-RUN STOCKINGS

There is a new inducement to hasten the end of the war in the announcement that chemical treatment of fibres developed in recent months for war uses, has already attained such a state of perfection that women can be assured their silk stockings will be run-proof when the new process is applied to hosiery.

It is all due, the explanation goes, to a deposit of submicroscopic grains of sand or silica which prevents the fibres from slipping out of the positions into which they are knitted.

For the men, the same process means suits that won't wrinkle or wilt, that will never pick up a shine and will always retain their creases.—Boston Post.

All Is Well(e)s

Those interplanetary scaremongers, H. G. and Orson, have been at it again. This time it is some Chileans who have been scared out of their better judgment by a radio drama depicting an invasion of this peaceful earth of ours by the warlike men of Mars. The script for this radio program is reported to be an adaptation of "War of the Worlds," by H. G. Wells, as presented over the American radio in October, 1938, by Orson Welles. On that occasion many Americans who would not credit the possibility of an Axis attack on the United States were nevertheless convinced that the Martians had arrived in force.

Since then, one would suspect, the inhabitants of earth have been giving the Martians—if there are any—something to think about. We doubt that anyone from any other planet would today feel comfortable on this globe, where electronics permit men to look around corners, where harbors travel about in the ocean, where pilotless plane make a streamlined actuality of the old ghost-ship legends, and where robots fly from country to country to deposit explosives.

If any Martians landed in the United States in that memorable October of 1938, they all hurried home again, and the Chileans will find that none stayed in Chile either. But this question remains: When will people, listening to these broadcasts, realize that though a horrific experience seems in store for them, all is Well(e)s?—Christian Science Monitor.

French Worried At Number Of Purge Trials

By GLADWIN HILL
Associated Press Staff Writer

PARIS, Nov. 21 (AP) — With the present collaboration trials stalled a few weeks after they began, and only 20 cases judged and some 10,000 waiting, France's liberated capital is discovering that "purge" and "justice" are small words with vast implications.

"They should have shot 300 of the obviously most guilty people without trial the week of liberation and called it a day," a sober, conservative French lawyer said to me.

"That would have done something to appease the natural public rancor against the collaborators—and even if they had dropped the whole thing there, they would be a lot farther ahead in 'epuration' (purification) than they are now."

Instead, the French, trying to purge the country of the weak and the vicious who helped the Germans while adhering painstakingly to legal forms, appear to have bitten off more than they can conveniently chew.

Military and civil trials all over France daily are putting handfuls of collaborators before firing squads or in prison. But in Paris, where the biggest single block of France's 100,000 accused collaborators are concentrated, the purge is proceeding at a pace which is provoking two-way criticism.

The press complains on the one hand of flagrant cases evading judgment. It was announced officially that the widely-criticized occupation editor, Guy Buneau-Varilla, had fled while facing prosecution.

Many In Prison.

On the other hand even the ardent resistance papers are complaining that thousands are languishing in prison without sufficient charges against them, but are unable to regain their liberty because of the sluggish movement of epuration.

So far only one person in the Paris area, newspaper editor Georges Suarez, has been legally shot as a collaborationist. Of the 20 defendants, principally propagandists, whose cases have been judged, four were given the death penalty, 15 were given sentences of from five years to life and one was acquitted.

The purge court now is closed for a fortnight, officially because no more dossiers are ready, although it is likely for the purpose of side-tracking cases of small-timers and for preparing the big cases like Bony-Lafont and the French Gestapo gang.

It also may be for "retooling" for a larger-scale production of justice. When the trials are resumed, it is hoped to have 14 courts instead of one.

Surplus Freight Ship Big Post War Problem

By CHESTER A. BLOOM

WASHINGTON.— The real post-war international economic transport headache after the war is not going to be division of world air business after the war, but what to do with the enormous tonnage of surplus freight ships that have been launched by the United States. From virtually zero, United States shipping has risen to tonnages probably equal to the entire world supply prior to the war.

International aviation has been getting the spotlight for four years due to the magnificent fighting and transport feats of the R.A.F., the R.C.A.F., the U.S. Air Forces, and their transport commands. Magazine articles every week and month extol the world-girdling, swift transport of men, machines, and supplies by air.

There is a kind of romantic atmosphere about air transport which completely blinds the average taxpayer to its economic aspects.

Not so the economists and hard-headed shipping masters They regard the aviation transport enthusiasts somewhat coldly. In nearly every case, it can be proved that the long range transport of heavy freight and supplies by air is incredibly uneconomic. War counts no costs. It is not uncommon for the U.S. air transport command to fly plane repair parts and even heavy machinery in a single day of 24 hours to Africa, the Mediterranean or even to India (in a little longer time) on a radio demand message.

No one bothers about transport costs, damages, maintenance, and repair of flying fields and the planes, and the salaries of the men engaged in these perilous and romantic tasks. But these are all items which commercial air transport companies have figured out to a gnat's heel in pennies and pounds. Freight experts can prove with little difficulty that the bulk of this business will stop dead with the end of the war.

This is not to depreciate post-war international aviation. Without doubt it will continue and grow. But for a long time to come, commercial operation will confine the bulk of the business to travelling salesmen and corporation executives, tourists, and high priority, light-weight express. Probably 90 per cent of the world's trade in the post-war period will continue, as in the past, to be handled by water transport.

The real danger of post-war aviation competition will not arise over bases. That problem is easily susceptible of negotiation and compromise. The real difficulty will arise in the violent effort of aviation companies to obtain government subsidies to maintain uneconomic transport by air.

British ocean carriers who transported the bulk of the world's trade prior to the war are going to find themselves up against the stiffest kind of competition from U.S. steamship and shipping companies. This is already recognized by Chairman Emory S. Land of the U.S. War Shipping Administration.

In an address at New York recently, Admiral Land strongly urged American merchant marine companies to address themselves at once to improvement of ports and stevedoring methods, to reduce the handling costs and to go after the package freight business. He advocated knocking down trade barriers, multilateral instead of bilateral trade agreements, reduction of U. S. barriers against imports and establishment of long term credits.

For months now, the U.S. has been tapering off the construction of the slower and uneconomic Liberty ships to build instead fast, new combined freight and passenger ships. Mr. Land advocated scrapping of at least four million tons of obsolete ships of the "decrepit age of 20 years or more." He said "any surplus of our war built fleet that cannot be economically used by us or sold to the Allied nations should be put in sanctuary by statute and become 'untouchable' except by revocation of statute. They must not hang over the market," he said. And he also advocated selling some of the surplus shipping at what it would cost to build those ships in a foreign market.

This is merely one straw to show how the wind is blowing. Taxpayers need to be on their toes. The people should avoid being blinded by the publicity that will attach to jealous aviation corporations battling at international air conferences—they had much better watch the shipping situation.

Chiang Yields To Allies Fires General

By The Canadian Press

China's cabinet shake-up, involving the removal of Gen. Ho Ying-chin as Minister of War and H. H. King as Minister of Finance, indicates that Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek finally has yielded to Allied pressure for a housecleaning aimed at retrieving the tottering military and financial fortunes of Free China

In naming Gen. Chen to succeed Ho, Chiang has placed the reorganization of China's military forces in the hands of an able, forceful commander eager to adopt modern methods and willing to work closely with Americans assigned to train and equip an effective fighting army.

Retirement of Gen. Ho, Minister of War since 1930 and Chief of Staff since 1937, conceivably also may remove one of the chief stumbling blocks to a political settlement between the central government and the Chinese Communists.

Ho maintained a military blockade against Communist armies in the north, is known as an implacable foe of the Communists, and has been blamed for attacking them with some of his best divisions while they wages guerilla warfare on the Japanese.

Ho also has been accused of delaying tactics in accepting and employing American strategy, training methods and equipment, limited as such aid is because of the necessity of flying everything into China over the Himalayan hump.

The Chungking housecleaning follows the recall of Gen. Stilwell as American commander in the China-Burma-India theatre which brought to light abroad the fact that Washington had been insisting on a reorganization of the Central government and attempting to obtain a settlement of the Communist problem.

The new minister of war organized the Chinese Expeditionary Force, which trained in Southwest China under American instructors and now is fighting across the Salween river to join up with Allied forces pushing across Burma to reopen the Burma Road.

War Comes First

OTTAWA, Nov. 21.—(CP).—Military requirements must still have first place, Byrne Sanders, director of the Prices Board's consumer branch, said yesterday in a statement which said that shortages of labor in knitting mills were largely responsible for the inability of women to buy as many sheer stockings as they would like.

SEEMS TO BE QUITE A JOB—Two distinguished judges sort through a pile of entries to select the best picture of the year made by a member of the White House Photographers' Association. Legion Accepts 30 New Members

Branch 52 Canadian Legion, B.E.S.L., held their monthly meeting Monday night in the hall, with a large turnout of members.

The various committee chairman reported, Ernie Dummitt stating that the season's activities were progressing, hall rentals being fairly well filled for the coming winter. Harold Yelland reported that ten ailing members had been visited during the last month and P. Burke, entertainment chairman, said that the next open night for members and their wives will be December 5, with a Toronto troupe providing the entertainment, and a turkey supper and dance to follow their performance.

The bingo activities according to Robert Hotrum are still progressing, with larger crowds in attendance, and during October 149 lots of cigarettes for a total of 447,000 were forwarded overseas.

Harry Kelsey had one of the largest turnout of new members in recent months when 30 were initiated, and Robert Hotrum asked that this number be doubled for the next meeting, as Zone 29's quota to the end of December is 125.

Want Donors

H. A. Cranfield, Employment Manager of the C.G.E., addressed the meeting in the interests of the Blood Donors Clinic stating that 1,500 Blood Donors are wanted from the city of Peterborough in the next two weeks, and asked that Legion members sign up in a group and attend at the Clinic from 7 to 8 on Thursday night.

W. O. Harvey discussed the water and sewer in connection with his property on Lansdowne street and a motion was moved by Mel Morrow, seconded by A. D. Nelson that the branch support him in his efforts to get the necessary improvements, with a letter to be sent to the City Council to that effect.

The reinforcement issue was brought to the fore, and on the motion of F. Meeks, seconded by W. H. Bocock, Branch 52, heartily supports the contents of telegram published in the Examiner on Monday, November 20, from Alex Walker, Dominion President of the Canadian Legion.

J. L. Hughes has been appointed to the executive due to the death of the late Peter Wallace.

Caucuses Held By Opposition Before Session

OTTAWA, Nov. 21 — (CP). — Procedure for one of the most unusual meetings of Parliament ever held in Canada is expected to be discussed to-day with leaders of the Opposition Parties.

Two of the three Opposition groups are holding caucuses in advance of Wednesday's opening of the Commons the sitting to decide their attitude and the third, the Social Credit group, may caucus soon.

Progressive Conservative members will meet to-day and the National Leader, John Bracken, is expected to attend.

Attending the C.C.F. caucus, along with members of the House, will be members of the National Council, who are here to complete arangements for the organization's HELP KEEP THE HOME FRONT STRONG!

BUDGET YOUR SPENDING FOR VICTORY

Here's a simple budget method to help you—Send for free copy and join the Budgeteers

"I WILL do my part to keep the home front strong!" Surely everyone of us should live up to that simple pledge until full Victory is ours. Part of that pledge consists in keeping our personal finances sound—in planning our spending so that expenses don't get out of line with income.

Your income must do more now

Even before war brought new claims on your earnings, you probably found a budget could often be very useful. Now, with war savings, higher taxes, contributions and all your regular living expenses to come out of your pay cheque, wouldn't a budget be even more helpful?

A new way to budget

Not long ago Household Finance published the Budget Calendar as a service to customers. This is a brand new way of making a family budget. It gives no fixed spending pattern, no rules that you spend so much for this item and so much for that. On the contrary it asks you to take the expenses you now have and shows you how to go about meeting them out of the money you have to spend. Isn't that a simpler, more practical way to plan a budget?

Get more out of your income

Families who stay out of unnecessary debt, who spend their incomes wisely to keep themselves in fighting trim, can do a better job on the home front. Because we believe a budget plan that really works can help almost any family to get more out of their wartime income, we are now sending the Budget Calendar to everyone who requests a copy. We hope that it will help many families not our customers to plan their spending to better advantage.

What the Budgeteers receive

All who use the Budget Calendar seriously are invited to join the Budgeteers. Budgeteers receive a new booklet or letter from time to time to encourage them in their efforts. They may also ask for individual help with their problems at any time. All Budgeteers who complete a full year of budgeting receive special recognition.

Household Finance is Canada's largest and oldest Small Loans company. We offer the Budget Calendar to families everywhere in the hope that it will encourage more of them to budget their wartime spending. We will not take advantage of your request to send you a loan solicitation of any kind. Won't you ask for the Calendar and see if it doesn't help you budget your spending for Victory?

Coronation Lodge Of L.O.B.A. Celebrates Seventh Birthday

Coronation L.O.B.A. Lodge recently celebrated its Seventh Birthday, and had as their special guest, Miss Anna Grier, R.W.P.G. Mistress of Ontario East, also accompanying Sister Grier, were, Sister G. Campbell, R.W.P.G. Secretary, Sister F. Pilling, R.W.P.G. Treasurer, Sister R. Sexsmith and Sister Ethel Delong, R.W.P.G. Auditors, all of Peterborough, and Sister Cora Johnston, R.W.P.G.D. Treasurer, of Janetville, and Sister Moore, R.W.-P.G. Mistress of Lindsay. Visitors were also present from, Toronto, Lindsay and Janetville.

The guests and visitors were received by the Wor. Mistress of Coronation Lodge, Sister Hilda Bigelow and extended a hearty welcome. Each Grand Officer was presented with a corsage of carnations.

Three members were initiated into the Lodge, Coronation Officers exemplifying the first degree in an efficient manner.

R. W. Sister Grier, addressed the meeting with a splendid message, which in part was as follows:—

"As we meet together at gatherings such as this, where we can exchange ideas, we go home with new enthusiasm. We all have our faults and that's where Love and Understanding between L.O.B.A. members come in. If we would all make a definite effort to understand each other, to exert women's gift of love and to excuse each other's faults, how much better it would be. If we could just learn to blame ourselves, for our attitude, instead of blaming the other person, we would be accomplishing a great deal. People all have different characteristics. How momentous it would be if we were all alike. Yet so often we expect our fellow L.O.-B.A. members to think and do just as we would ourselves.

Pray for Members

"I think it would be an untold help to us all if we would include in our daily prayer, a prayer for members of the L.O.B.A., also if we would repeat on our way to the meeting, slowly and thoughtfully, "O Blessed Jesus draw us all closer to Thee and to one another, banish far from us all unkind or unholy thoughts, keep us from speaking all words that may hurt." Then when our meeting is over and we're on our way home, let us pass judgment on ourselves again. How did I measure up at the meeting? Was I a real help? Were the opinions I expressed worthy of the high traditions of the L.O.B.A.? Maybe we have reason to be discouraged but every meeting will be for us a new opportunity.

"To co-operate in the highest and most efficient sense, we must recognise the universal law of getting together, if we wish to be of the greatest service to the greatest number, not forgetting ourselves. The ideal of a pure democracy is Co-operation. Where it breaks down there always will be found someone who refused to co-operate—someone who placed his or her personal interest above the nation. The most successful business is the one that is most co-operative minded, down to the humblest worker. Where there is dissension something vital is an organization slips its cogs. We have this tragic war because there were too many disinterested nations to organize for peace before the tyrants and dictators struck. Together is a big and important word when applied to all the moves and affairs of life. Faith in man and God is essential to a wholesome and genius co-operation. If you don't believe in it you get nowhere. As members of a great fraternal organziation, we have the greatest opportunity of making the service of our association known. We must work together. We muts Co-operate.

Do Our Share.

"What a wonderful world it would be if we could all realize that we should not accept the many good things of life so carelessly, that we should do something to pull our weight in the boat of life. That "Service" is the only way in which we can give a practical demonstration of the fact that we appreciate these gifts from Heaven. The Boy

Fight Asthma Mucus Easy Way

Seven years ago J. Richards, 201 East 23rd Street, Hamilton, Ont., was asthmatic, lost weight, suffered coughing, choking, wheezing every night—couldn't sleep. Mendaco stopped his spasms promptly and he now reports normal weight and good health although 70 years old. To prove that Mendaco may do the same for you, we make this liberal trial offer: Get Mendaco from your druggist today! Unless it loosens and removes thick strangling mucus, brings free breathing, restful sleep and frees you from the suffering of Asthma attacks, simply return the empty package and get all your money back. You have everything to gain and nothing to lose So don't suffer another day without asking your druggist for Mendaco.

We Can Buy Our Way Into a Breadline!

History is a meek little word that covers a multitude of suffering. And only through profiting by past mistakes... will we suffer less! Remember how in the last war folks "blew" their money. Needless spending caused prices to rise... so that by 1918, the 25 lb. FLOUR you buy today for 89¢ cost $1.85 then; while baby's coat was $12.00 compared to a similar coat at $4.98 today. This was inflation and all too soon it was followed by the inevitable depression! That's why our government is determined to prevent inflation now... why there are price ceilings and other anti-inflationary measures to hold the cost of living down and keep our dollar value high. And YOU help prevent a future depression and keep your dollars high in value... every time you pass up a needless luxury $50. ... invest your money wisely VICTORY BOND ... and avoid black market spending.

Make This Pledge Today!

I promise to give my support to keeping the cost of living down. I will buy only what I need. I will observe the ceiling whether buying or selling goods or services. I will pay off old debts, save for the future, invest in Victory Bonds and War Savings Certificates. And I will support taxes which help lower the cost of living.

Plans Stadium To Seat Quarter Million

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21 — Congressman Sammy Weiss of Pennsylvania proposes a stadium in Washington to seat 200,000 persons!

That isn't exactly an eye-opener—something to "oh" and "ah" about.

Eight years ago Cmdr. Andy McFall was in charge of athletics at the United States Naval Academy.

On the way home from the Army-Navy game in Philadelphia, a show that drew over 100,000, with others vainly trying to get inside, Cmdr. McFall said:

"There will come, and not long hence, a stadium somewhere in the East that will seat 250,000 persons.

"It is a 'must' on the sports program. Football alone demands such a seating capacity.

"The Army-Navy game, for one, will fill such a stadium once a year, and one of the Notre Dame games in the East is another.

"Navy can't build such a stadium, nor can Army, but some one will build one for us.

A Triple-Decker

It will be, perhaps, a triple-decked affair, and every seat will be a good one, even though the plant is huge in size."

Soon after Cmdr. McFall's term at Annapolis was up we began moving into the war picture. There was no further thinking along the lines of bigger and better stadiums.

But the war's end is in sight now, and the talk is with us once more.

Congressman Weiss is not the originator of the idea of the Government building a stadium in Washington. That was talk after the first Great War. Weiss gets into print again only because he mentioned the size—200,000 seats.

The municipal stadium in Philadelphia, built for the Sesqui-Centennial, is, like most other municipal ventures of that nature, too big.

A stadium to seat 200,000 to 250,000 must be triple-decked. It can be done. It can be built to hug the field below, and that field can be big enough for the Olympic Games.

Such a plan would require many ramps and escalators, and a parking scheme taxing the ingenuity of the best traffic experts.

But once it is built, and that may be soon, sports will receive the greatest boom in its history. It will be the spark that will set off a national program dwarfing all sports booms of the past.

And when sports grow that big there never will be time to cook up another war.

Ontario Boxers On Toronto Card

TORONTO, Nov. 21.—(CP)— A well matched card featuring boxers from Toronto, Guelph, Oshawa, Sudbury, Hamilton, Port Colborne and Windsor was presented last night by Promoter Deke Allan.

Two Hamilton fighters scored victories in the 130-pound class. Bobby Gleason won a three-round decision from Andy Alex of Port Colborne and Albert Whitney won from Jimmy Carere of Guelph in three rounds. Two Guelph fighters were in draw bouts, Leno Sevido in a 130-pound, three-round go with George Palmentier of Oshawa and Mike Zaduk in a 126-pound, three-round meeting with Rolly Englehart of Sudbury.

In the 126-pound class Arthur King of Toronto took a decision from Bill Hagan of Windsor in five rounds.

Watson And Hall Both Confident

With the time limit removed Dr. Len Hall, the California buzz bomb and Whipper Billy Watson, the British Empire champion will battle it out in a finish bout as the main attraction of the Tunney wrestling show at the Brock tonight. And it should be a thriller. Hall has shown himself a past master in back alley tactics and he doesn't pull any punches when he finds himself facing a champion. As for the Whipper he is able to take care of himself in any kind of going. The result is bound to be action plus. There should be plenty of that too in the semi-final with a new star, Al Smith of New York meeting the tough Al Bunny Dunlop. The Toronto strongman will try anything to win and may have to against the smooth newcomer. In the preliminary the husky Bill Stack of Bowmanville meets the fast-moving Mike Demetre of Montreal. advt

SPORTS-Day by Day

By FRED D. CRAIG

Toronto Westsides who opened the local rugby season by defeating the Peterborough juniors here on Thanksgiving Day won the Toronto Rugby Union juvenile title on Saturday when they won over Vikings who also had a victory over Peterborough here during the season, 8 to 6 in the final game which was pronounced as the best battle of the season in the group. Players who helped to win over the local juniors were decidedly prominent in Saturday's argument. In the first period Al Patch kicked a single for Westsides but Johnn Studd, swivel-hipped quarter of the Vikings whose work here was about the best of the season evened up with a kick for a point in the second quarter. Early in the third session after Westsides had scored another single Studd threw two long forwards to Mazur the little flying wing who scored three touchdowns against the Petes and then Speers another star against the Petes tossed one to Brizell for a touchdown. It was not converted. Patch fired a touchdown pass to Stuart to make it 7 to 6 for Westsides and on the last play of the game Patch kicked another single to leave the final count 8 to 6.

Boston's centre ice star Bill Cowley has moved out into the leading position in the N.H.L. scoring race, passing Sweeney Schriner and Gus Bodnar of the Leafs and even playing with a second division club the Bruins' smooth-working pivot player is going to be hard to knock off the top. Cowley led the scoring parade last season for most of the schedule and was headed for a record when injuries took him out of the lineup for weeks and robbed him of his opportunity of not only carrying off the scoring championship but hanging up a new mark. The Ottawa puck-chaser is starting in where he left off last season and thousands of fans throughout the country will be pulling for him to come through and win the honors this season that bad luck deprived him of a year ago. Cowley has long been a credit to the game, one of the great centre ice players of all time and it would be tough luck if he were to run into the same kind of bad luck he encountered in the last campaign. Leading the scorers is a tough job at any time and it is particularly difficult when you happen to be playing with a club that is down in the cellar position.

Off To Good Start

Oshawa's debut Saturday night, witnessed by over 3,000 fans was voted a thorough success despite the fact that Scribe George Campbell was away deer-hunting and failed to see the new version of his favorite team open their campaign with a convincing victory over Young Rangers. The Generals had only three members of last year's championship team in action but the work of the new-comers indicated that as usual the Oshawa scouts had done a good job in locating recruits. The system used by the Motor City in keeping in touch with the best material available throughout the country is a military secret but it must be admitted that it works well for year after year the Generals turn up with imports who not only win championships but attract the attention of the whole N.H.L. lineup. Interestingly enough the boy who, made the biggest hit with Oshawa fandom in the Generals' first game of the season was Goalie Louie Crowdis, formerly of Montreal who starred in the Oshawa nets. In the early stages Young Rangers were dangerous often and Crowdis had to come up with some great stops to keep them off the score sheet.

Even before Galt juniors had defeated a somewhat make-shift Hamilton Barons team 9 to 0, Scribe Appel had gone out on the limb to name the Galt club as the team to be beat for junior A honors this season. Said the Stratford Beacon-Herald sports authority: "After one look at Galt Red Wings, and perusing the sport columns since, leads this corner to believe more than ever that Al Murray has the junior "A" club to beat for the marbles this winter, barring injuries and illness. Don't expect that will jell with Toronto, Oshawa, St. Catharines, et al, and it's sticking the neck out awful far to make any predictions, but on paper at least the Detroit farmhands look like the goods. It's not possible to list the team Al Murray will toss at Bill Grisenthwaites' Hamilton Barons, at Galt, tonight, because Al seldom announces his line-up much before the whistle, but the make-up of his goal and defence material alone would warrant at least the thought that they should be plenty tough. With Bruce Philbey and Ivan Walmsley to guard the nets, protected by Alex Barilko, Pete Babando, Curly Foglin, Bob Leckie, and later Harry Kazarian, the path to the Galt twine should prove a rather rocky one. Bill Curick, Pavelich, Kromptic are three of the front liners, who are almost certain to catch regular spots. That bunch in itself suggests plenty of moxie and punch."

Cooper Scores Again

"Carson Cooper, the man who has hit the jackpot in uncovering more future bigtime hockey stars than the maojrity of N.H.L. ivory hunters, has come up with another natural according to Detroit manager Jack Adams, who was in the area a few days ago for a Welland banquet date," says Bill Gagnon of the Niagara Falls Review. "Discussing the sport in general with the genial pilot, we learned that he regards Ted Lindsay, his new rightwinger, the season's finest rookie. Jack admitted that the group was not shy on fine recruits, but he did not think another measured up to the ability of last winter's St. Mike's star. He says the kid is a surefire major star and will be heard from in important roles throughout the race. Cooper predicted such a future for the youngster after getting the kid on his team's negotiation list last year, and Dick Irvin, Canadien leader, verified Carson's remarks after watching the player in a couple of Saturday afternoon games at Maple Leaf Gardens. Coop has a habit of coming up with good ones, having sent such good Red Wings into fast company as Johnny Mowers, Don Grosso and Joe Carveth. Jack Adams respects the scouting ability of the Hamiltonian, and never fails to admit that the grey thatched individual is a very important part of the Norris hockey empire."

Peterborough C.V.S. will meet Niagara Falls Collegiate on the back campus of the University of Toronto Saturday morning in a sudden-death game for the Cossa senior honors. The Peterborough students are drilling hard this week to put the final polish on their plays in preparation for the big test. And here is a Niagara Falls story in regard to the P.C.V.S. opposition: "Toronto is the next stop on the schedule of Gordon Dorst Falls Collegiate gridders, the coming week-end finding the new peninsula champs contesting all-Cossa laurels. The locals are booked for a busy practice siege between now and Saturday and with all regulars coming through the Pt. Colborne series in sound condition, they should be a capable match for what comes from other territories. They played smart football to down the lakesiders and their followers feel they eliminated a first class team in getting out of this area. After a first period lapse in the initial contest, the Epworth lads came up with smart work to outplay the Elgin Field occupants, and when they appeared on foreign soil, they used cautious tactics and had enough to offstand a strong bid from the upcounty students. Superior condition also assisted no little, and it's just possible that this youthful aggregation may continue its success when opposition from outside quarters is confronting it."

Petty Officer To Meet Danny Webb

LONDON, Nov. 21 — (CP. Cable). — Danny Webb, Montreal Negro who skyrocketed to ring fame in Britain overnight, will clash with a tough petty officer here Dec. 6. The following day Webb will appear before the British Boxing Board of Control, which is inquiring into a "no contest" bout between the Canadian and Kid Tanner, British Guiana Negro, last Wednesday.

Webb, a featherweight, on Dec. 6 faces Ben Duffy at the Queensbury Club—scene of his fiasco with Tanner and of his sensational victory last month over Glasgow's Jackie Paterson, world flyweight champion, in a non-title clash.

The principal witness at the B.B.B.C. inquiry will be Teddy Waltham, British boxing referee, who stopped the Webb-Tanner fight in the fourth round on the grounds the contestants were not striving hard enough. The total purse of £300 (about $1,350) is being held up pending the board's decision.

London boxing writers, commenting on the inquiry, expressed hope that the board will publicize its decision.

The Daily Mail's Geoffrey Simpson, noting it is not always the policy of the board to disclose official rulings, wrote: "In this case nothing but harm can come from any decision to withhold the result of the inquiry from the public."

He added: "Secrecy can only harm the sport and weaken public confidence in it."

The boxing correspondent of the Star said: "Everyone who paid to see the fight—and there were many who paid five guineas (about $23.60) is entitled to know what was wrong."

"It is only fair to the boxers, too. If one or both are found to be innocent parties," the Star writer added, "a no-contest decision is a blot on both men's reputations. Nothing the board can do is likely to alter the referee's decision, which is final, but it has put a stigma on both boxers."

Married Again

LONDON, Nov. 21—(CP). — Fifteen-month-old June Cooper put on her best bonnet the other day and was taken to church to see her father and mother get married — for the second time. The first time—four years ago — Pte. Ernest Cooper and Lilliam Bayley got married in a registrar's office on a brief leave. This time the ceremony was held in a church, with all the trimming — with daughter June watching — as Pte. Cooper decided this wife deserved "the real thing."

Navy Coach Selected In Big Three Bracket

NEW YORK, Nov. 21—What an athletic director's dream! Bierman, Leahy and Brown as your football staff. Esquire asked the sports editors, radio announcers and the public the question: "If you had your choice of three coaches which three would you select for your staff?"

Lieut.-Col. Bernie Bierman of the Marines, and Minnesota, was named on 45.13 per cent of the ballots. Lieut. (j.g.) Frank Leahy of the Navy, and Notre Dame, was selected on 25.40 per cent of the votes, and Lieut. (j.g.) Paul Brown of Great Lakes, and Ohio States, was the third high man with 19.18 per cent.

Bierman, after passing the 50-year age limit in the service returned to Minneapolis to help his assistant, Dr. George Hauser, with the Gophers the latter part of the grid season. When Bierman was a star back under the famous "Doc" Williams at Minnesota back in 1915 they say he was so bashful the coach was afraid to bawl him out. And today he is still the silent, retiring type, living his own life among his friends virtually oblivious to the furore he causes in the great world of sports. For all his quietness and unobtrusiveness, however, Bierman has, in addition to a magnificent conception of the technique of football, the knack of getting dynamite into his men. Never swept off his feet by the fancy-dan style of the "T" formation, he still holds that he can stop it and beat it with old-line football theories, given the material.

Rather Die Than Lose

Frank Leahy, too, demonstrated soundness in his basic approach to football, and he also, like Bierman, has the superb knack of getting a violently determined unbeatable spirit into his players, which derives directly from his own personality. A friend of Leahy's once remarked: "Here is a man who would literally rather die than be beaten." That spirit shows in his teams. Off the field, however, he is more of a mixer than Bierman, with that flashing Irish smile always near the surface. As a public speaker when he tells his stories he laughs at his own jokes as freely and readily as a boy.

Paul Brown is another of the little men like Bob Zuppke and Andy Kerr, who have made good as field leaders in the game. Considered too small at 135 to make the team at Ohio State when he entered that school with a big reputation from Massillon's Washington High, he transfered to Miami University. When he became coach at Massillon he immediately attracted attention with a phenomenal string of victories and on their basis moved up to Ohio State where he promptly put the Buckeyes on top before going into the Navy and becoming coach of Great Lakes' great team.

The old argument of whether it is the coach or the players got some settling during the fall when Brown's Ohio State players of last year soundly walloped his present Great Lakes outfit, 26 to 6 before 72,000 fans.

In other questions on the poll it was decided that the Midwest has the best football, that the colleges should open up their play more, and that subsidization and a national czar are not wanted in college football. The answer to the question: "From the spectator standpoint would you rather watch college, pro or high school football?" brought the following percentages: College, 62.35 per cent; pro, 29.74 per cent; high school, 7.91 per cent.

Sgt. Joe Louis Says Show Must Go On

NEW YORK, Nov. 21 (AP)—Sgt. Joe Louis, heavyweight champion of the world, has appeared before so many audiences since joining the army that he has adopted the old adage of the theatre — "The show must go on."

Louis, now involved in picking up a few extra nickles while on furlough by knocking over a few foes in exhibitions and acting as referee for wrestling matches, has been limping through his engagements.

Lew Diamond, fight manager and self-appointed mayor of Jacobs' Beach, who has been manager pro tem of the champ on the current tour, tells the tale.

"Spot of Golf"

"Down in Philadelphia last Sunday Joe was playing what he calls a 'spot of golf,' the champ having picked up the expression while in England. Anyway, Joe takes a terrific swing at the ball, and does something to a bone in his right foot.

"The foot swells up to twice its normal size, and Joe can't get his shoe on. So he cuts a house slipper to shreds and wears that. We finally, by using one of my old-time remedies, get the swelling down so Joe can out-punch Jimmy Bell in three rounds in Washington Monday night. I tried to get him to call off the bout, but Joe said 'we can't disappoint all those people.'

"He was no better Tuesday night when he flattened Johnny Davis with one punch at Buffalo. The foot pained him all the way up there in the day coach, and was puffed up pretty good. We had planned to soak it all the way up there, but couldn't because of the train conditions. Maybe that's why Joe didn't stay in there long against Davis.

"The foot was a little better Wednesday night at Elizabeth when he went the full three rounds against Dee Amos, and he hopes to be in better shape for the rest of the tour."

Diamond said Joe is "putting on a great show," and that so far on the tour has paid out of his own pocket for tickets for at least 2,500 service men who desired to see the exhibitions.

"He wants to stay the full three rounds in the exhibitions, to give the fans their money's worth, but a couple of the opponents got cute and tried to knock him out," Diamond said. "But Joe got 'em out of there pretty quick. He takes care of himself pretty good."

TORONTO, Nov. 21 — (CP). — Selection of budding hockey players may be placed on a strictly scientific basis in the future if George P. Smith of Westmount, Montreal, can get the bigwigs to adopt his new system of grading, classifying, and card-indexing the players according to their abilities.

Al (Montreal Herald) Parsley described the new Smith system which the latter has tried out successfully as athletic director of the Westmount schools.

To classifly a player, Smith gets some spectator with a broad knowledge of the game to watch the youngster and grade his hockey abilities while he skates through a complete game. The judge marks on a card the players good and bad points—in skating, stickhandling, teamplay or lack of it, shooting form, and so on.

He is given three such tests or examinations, and by that time the coach has a complete and intimate file on every angle of his play. There isn't any guesswork about the thing, because everything is down in black and white.

Then the coach can talk over the player's weaknesses and deficiencies and help him correct them.

Numerous hockey men around Montreal, like Paul Haynes, Jimmy Ward, Toe Blake, Wilf Cude and other pro stars have taken quite an interest in the experiments, and Parsley predicts much more will be heard of the Smith selection system before many years have passed.

Incidentally:

Baz (Montreal Star) O'Meara reports that Billy Gilmour of the old Ottawa Silver Seven and Victorias is in Montreal now....There is no dearth of topnotch hockey coaches in Northern Ontario, especially in the North Bay district. Of seven outstanding coaches two have had professional experience—Pete Palangio of S. Louis Flyers, Montreal Canadiens and Chicago Black Hawks, and ex-Toronto Leaf Pep Kelly. There is only one fly in the ointment — there aren't enough players to go around, to keep all the North Bay coaches busy....The football season was no sooner over for University of Western Ontario Mustangs' coach than he rolled up his sleeves and pitched into the task of forming a basketball squad. Coach Johnny Metras says he has talent enough this year to turn out quite a squad.

Here and There in Sport

By The Canadian Press

Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis spent his 78th birthday in St. Luke's Hospital, Chicago, yesterday, where he had spent the past 10 days for treatment. The Diamond's arbiter-in-chief complained because his release from the hospital had not yet been decided upon, although his condition was reported satisfactory. With him was Mrs. Landis who is recovering from a fractured wrist.

Individual scoring leader in the American Hockey League race yesterday was reported to be Tom Forgie, ace of the Hershey team who had rolled up a total of 20 points on eight goals and 12 assists. His nearest challengers were Bob Gracie, Pittsburgh, and George Patterson and Hector Pozzo, both of Hershey, with 16 points each. Gooden of Hershey was close behind with 15 points.

Although the £300 purse for his last bout in London, Eng., is being held up by the British Boxing Board of Control after it had been declared "no contest," Danny Webb, Montreal negro featherweight, goes into the ring at the Queensberry Club Dec. 6 for a clash with PO. Ben Duffy of the Royal Navy.

Seven Hearts Beats Bon Jour

BALTIMORE, Nov. 21 — (AP).— With Twilight Tear scratched just before post time because of track conditions, J. Graham Brown's Seven Hearts sped to an easy two-length victory over Bon Jour Monday in the 19th running of the $25,000-added Riggs Handicap at Pimlico race track.

Breezing to an early lead, Jockey Paul Keiper had the Louisville colt in front all the way, as Seven Hearts shook off a brief stretch challenge by Charles Turner's Bon Jour to annex the $21,600 first money and boost his year's earnings to $87,335.

Mrs. E. D. Jacobs' Stymie, moving up at the three-quarter pole in the mile and three-sixteenths test after getting away last in the field of six, finished three lengths back of Bon Jour. W. P. Wetherall's Lord Calvert was six lengths further away in fourth spot.

Seven Hearts covered the distance in 1:58 4-5 over a good track despite the day-long drizzle which caused Trainer Ben Jones to scratch Twilight Tear, a leading claimant to horse-of-the-year honors much to the crowd's displeasure. The time was four-fifths of a second off the best previous time for the Riggs at this distance, established by W. L. Bramn's Pictor in 1941.

The victory was the third in a row for Seven Hearth, and his seventh in 13 starts this year, including the Westchester Handicap at Jamaica.

The son of Grand Slam drew away apparently without effort when Bon Jour moved to a neck at midstretch, but the Turner entry couldn't close the distance in the stretch drive

Christiana Stable's Megogo, never in the running, managed to snare fifth, eight lengths in front of William Helis' Alfios, which showed an early burst of speed, but was through after being third at the half-mile marker.

Puck Breaks In Two Goal Is Disputed

WINDSOR, Nov. 21 (CP)—When a goal is not a goal is what puzzles officials of the Ford Motor Hockey League. So much are they puzzled, in fact, that they've called for help from the National Hockey League.

It all happened this week-end in a game between the Foundry and Office teams. Goalie Jimmy Hogan of the Office squad made a save on a shot by Al Shield of the Foundry sextet—or so he thought. The red light went on and Hogan turning around saw the puck nesting neatly in the nets.

But since the Office netminder thought he had the puck under his armpit, he raised his arm and down fell a second puck.

What happened was that the puck was made in layers and had split in two. Page the rules committee!

Wobbly Bruins To Meet Fast Canadiens

By ROBERT NIELSEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Art Ross' staggering Bruins will have the comfort of home surroundings when they take on Montreal Canadiens at the Boston Garden in the only National Hockey League game to-night, but if the records mean anything it's about the only advantage they'll have.

The Bruins' only other home game of the season was a victory, 7-5, over the tail-end Chicago Black Hawks, the only team they have beaten to date. They have a decision over Hawks in Chicago and a draw with New York Rangers to their credit, giving them five points in eight games and an uncertain grasp on fourth place, one point ahead of the New Yorkers.

The powerful Canadiens will be shooting for two points needed to put them in a first-place tie with Toronto Maple Leafs. In their previous encounters with Bruins this season, the Montrealers scored 3-2 and 6-3 triumphs.

A Boston victory would leave the standings unchanged, with the Bruins still four points off the pace of the third place Detroit Red Wings.

Kingpin of the Rossmen, as usual, is veteran centre Bill Cowley, proving again this season with Bill Jennings and Herb Cain that he can make a high-scoring forward line with any wingmen available.

Meanwhile, the front-running Maple Leafs lick their wounds in preparation for a Thursday night joust with the Bruins in Boston. High-scoring Sweeney Schriner will be out of action another two weeks with a severe Charley Horse suffered in Saturday's game with Chicago, but centre Gus Bodnar, injured the same night, is expected to be back in action.

Would Train Skaters For Tournaments

MONTREAL, Nov. 21 — (CP)— Branches of the Amateur Skating Association of Canada were urged to foster all types of skating in their territories to develop skaters for national and international tournaments after the war, in the presidential address of William Roughton at the annual meeting of the association here Saturday.

Manitoba, Alberta and British Columbia branches did not send delegates to the meeting, but reports of the branches were read at the gathering attended by delegates from Eastern Canada.

Honorary Secretary Champlain Provencher said in his report that public markings, as adopted by the international skating union, now were used in roller skating as well as ice skating competitions in Canada and that spectators had been able to follow the new system.

The fourth annual Canadian roller figure and dance championships were awarded to the Toronto Amateur Skating Association.

Cowley, Bodnar On Top In Scoring Race

MONTREAL, Nov. 21 — (CP). — Boston's perennial Bill Cowley and Toronto's young Bus Bodnar were tied atop the National Hockey League scoring race in official figures released by the league to-day, with Sweenep Schrintr of Toronto close behind the leaders.

The official statistics showed Cowley and Bodnar tied with 18 points each, one more than Schriner, who is expected to miss the next few games because of injuries. Tied for fourth spot were Lorne Carr of the Leafs and Syd Howe of Detroit with 16 each.

Canadiens' Toe Blake slid into sixth place, with 14 points, one notch lower than he was a week ago. Clint Smith of Chicago and Elmer Lach of Canadiens were tied for seventh spot with 12 each, one ahead of Mud Bruneteau of Detroit.

Schriner was well out in front among the goal-getters with 11, four more than any other player. In a five-way tie for runner-up honors were Carr, Blake, Jud McAtee of Detroit, and Maurice Richard and Buddy O'Conor of Canadiens. O'Connor made one of the best showings of the week, collecting five points to shoot up from 24th place to 13th.

Bill Ezinicki of Toronto continued at the top of the penalty parade with 17 minutes in majors and minors, one more than Bob Dill of Rangers.

University of Toronto won their second consecutive intercollegiate rugby title at Toronto 11 years ago to-day when they rode over Queen's for a 10-3 victory. The game was played after the regular I.R.U. schedule was completed with Toronto and Queen's winding up tied at the top. Halfback Jack Sinclair was the star of the Toronto squad.

St. Catharines Beats Toronto

By The Canadian Press

St. Catharines drew first blood in the season's opener of the O.H.A. senior series last night at Toronto with a 3-2 victory over Staffords but had to come from behind twice to turn the trick With only five seconds to go, it remained for Stuart, on a pass from Blink Bellinger, to slam the payoff counter past Goalie Thomas after Concessi had tied it up for his second time in 12.30 of the final frame.

In both the first and third periods Dafoe scored to put Staffords out in front only to have Concessi register the equalizer for the Saints. It was a keen but clean tussle, only five penalties being distributed, of which Grigor of Toronto drew two. St. Catharines offenders were Delmonte, Tottle and Reynolds.

The opening junior A fixture at Port Colborne resulted in a 3-1 victory by Toronto Young Rangers. Rangers scored a goal in each period, with Dewsbury. Dillon and Ringer each finding the mark Croft got the lone tally for the losers in the second period. There were 14 penalties, Dillon of Toronto getting three of them and Cox and Savicky two each.

Phil Terranova In 10-Round Draw

NEW YORK, Nov. 2' — (AP). — Phil Terranova of New York, former N.B.A. featherweight champion, and Harry Jeffra of Baltimore, former bantam and featherweight king, battled to a 10-round draw last night at St. Nicholas Arena.

Jeffra, at 130¼, had a weight advantage, and also a height and reach edge over his stocky foe who weighed 127¾. There were no knockdowns, but Jeffra suffered a cut under his left eye in the second, and a split nose in the ninth.

The Baltimore boy staged a fast finish to pull up even after Terranova had piled up an early lead at close range.

A crowd of 2,900 paid $3,836 to see the fight. The decision was unpopular with the crowd, which thought Terranova had an edge.

Calamity Insurance

ST. THOMAS, Nov. 21 — (CP). Legislation to give province-wide protection to farmers against damages through calamities such as the cyclone which struck Middlesex County was recommended in a motion before Elgin County Council yesterday. The proposal calls for the addition of one-fifth of a mill to the tax rate for all Ontario counties, the proceeds to go to property insurance. The motion was referred to the Finance Committee for further study.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—(AP). — Man the dykes, folks, the flood is coming....Lt.-Cmdr. Rip Miller and Maj. Andy Gustafson started it yesterday trying to build up each other's teams for the coming Army-Navy football game and with two weeks to go they'll have plenty of time for crying....A couple of samples—Gustafson: "We'll continue to use the two team system. We'll have to. No one team could stand up against Navy"....Miller: "Did George Munger wear that football suit during the Army-Penn game? I wouldn't dare do that. It wouldn't be safe the way those Cadets block."

The New York Boxing Managers' Guild has called a boycott against Joe Turner, Washington's promoter, because of Eddie Walker's suspension....They claim Eddie has has tried to get a new date from Turner for that postponed Chalky Wright fight and can't get a tumble....Paul Robeson, Jr., whose points beat Dartmouth Saturday, started the game for Cornell only because Navy trainer Edward Sharafanowich was caught wearing white socks that morning and was confined to quarters for the week-end....Must have been an American League umpire who dished out that punishment.

Air Conference To Require Another Week

By C. R. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

CHICAGO, Nov. 21—(CP)—Delegates to the International Civil Aviation Conference today expected to know within 24 hours whether or not they were likely to produce an acceptable and complete draft convention for control of supervision of postwar commercial flying.

The entire conference, except nine delegation leaders representing Canada, the United Kingdom and the United States, waited idly for a decision to emerge from the week-long huddle of the representatives of these three countries.

There were rumors that this conference, the largest and one of the most significant of the many international conferences of the war years, would end like that of Dumbarton Oaks, without agreement on the main points.

However, a high Canadian official said there was reason to believe an acceptable compromise of the widely differing plans of the Canadian and British delegations on the one side and the United States on the other, would be presented to a plenary session, possibly tomorrow.

Final and still untouched business of the conference will be the adoption of a system of operating international civil aviation during the transition period from war to peace and before the draft conventon is put into effect.

It now is expected that the conference will require another full week for completion of the agenda.

DO YOU HATE TO GET UP in the MORNING?

Doesn't it feel swell to wake up in the morning clear-eyed, refreshed, full of pep? Yet so many, especially over 40, get up tired all over, with aching joints, never really feel their best.

The reason is often a common complaint—a system clogged with poisonous food waste. Like many people, you need help to clean out a sluggish system, get back pep and sparkle rightfully yours. The mild action of BILE BEANS is an effective aid thousands rely on.

Made from 10 pure vegetable extracts, Bile Beans are so gentle, yet effective, they are called "The Medicine That Wakes Up Nature". These small laxative liver pills tone up the system by stimulating flow of liver bile, so essential to good digestion and daily regularity.

Why not enjoy that "glad-to-be-alive" feeling every day? Try Bile Beans tonight—they work while you sleep. Over 7 million boxes used last year, convincing evidence of how greatly they are helping others. 36

WITH THE BOY SCOUTS

Special Banquet

Many Scouters and members of the local Scout executive attended a banquet held in honor of J. T. Hornsby, who is leaving Peterborough to take up permanent residence in Ottawa this month. Mr. and Mrs. Hornsby were guests at this affair held in the Hooper palm rooms on Monday.

Parents' and Sons' Banquet

The St. John's 1st Peterborough Group are holding their first wartime banquet this fall. It is the occasion when the Cubs and parents will get together to chat over Cubbing and Scouting and get the parents acquainted with the leaders of their lads. Anyone wishing to attend can secure tickets from the members or telephone 3067 to make reservations. It is expected that about 140 will attend this affair.

At All Saints'

The Cub meeting began with the old game of "British Bulldog," giving vent to some of the steam from the youngsters. The inspection was taken by Baloo and Akela, and instruction periods took up 1st Star work. Bob Webb led the Grand Howl at the close of the evening.

St. John's

The Pack—Once again another lad placed his feet firmly on the Cub trail. Trevor Hawkins was the young Cub to make his promise before the Pack and the Old Wolves with his hand firmly gripping the Totem Pole. Mr. Hawkins was present to witness his son's advent into the world-wide brotherhood of Scouting. Two games were played during the evening. Scouter A. Ingham took the inspection and Akela Bill King was present to pass some of the boys in their Star tests. Baloo Lawless and Mrs. G. Groombridge took the instruction period in which darning socks showed that many of the boys were capable and willing. Tests passed during the evening were: Teddy Nobbs, collector; David Bacon, collector and savings; Harold Valois and Bobby Rogers, toymaker; Michael Craig, ball throwing; Keith Brown, Doug Laird and Bobby Martyn, time; George Franks, book balancing.

The Troop — A good attendance was on hand in the Troop meeting at which A.S.M. presented the Scouter with a small silver cup for competition. At the camp-fire a similar cup was presented to Akela for the Pack. Akela Groombridge also presented Albert Buckton with a copy of Scouting for Boy with the best wishes of the Pack for good hunting now that he has joined the Troop.

At St. Luke's

Once again the Council Rock was well attended as Billy Evans led the Cubs in the Grand Howl to start the work of the evening. Fees, inspection and special collection for the cheer-up fund was the next on the program. Then came a couple of lively games,, "Empty the Bucket" and "Brothers." Tests work was studied and Darrell Lipsett passed leap frog, hopping, somersault and time; Ralph Barker, leap frog and hopping; Peter Rose, book balancing. Three new chums were also made welcome to the Pack, Frank Tuck, Bobby Clark and Carl Butcher. Registration cards were distributed to the Cubs at the Red Flower and the songs, "Cubs Are Square" and "I Grieve My Lord," were enjoyed. Ralph Barker called the Cubs to the Grand Howl.

Attention All Leaders

We regret to announce that the patrol leaders' conference originally planned for December 8, 9 and 10 at Cobourg, has been postponed until early spring.

Quebec Gazette Original Found

KINGSTON, Nov. 21—(CP)—A second copy of the Quebec Gazette's first edition published June 21, 1764 and believed to be the first newspaper printed in Canada, has been found here in the possession of Lt.-Col. C. M. Strange.

This disclosure followed a report from Vancouver that Larry Wilson, Book shop proprietor, had bought a copy of the same edition in a Vancouver auction room after noting its yellow appearance and peculiar type faces. At last reports, Mr. Wilson was attempting to establish his copy as an original and not a facsimile.

The Kingston copy, like that uncovered by Wilson, is printed in both English and French. The first page is given over to the announcement of the publication of the paper and sets out the policy which the editor proposes to follow.

Items from Europe, London and the American Colonies are dated from March 13 to May 7, 1764. The chief news from the American Colonies concerned depredations of bands of Indians while the news from Europe concerned principally the movements and affairs of superiors, kings and princes. Oddly enough, the paper carries no news or any reports on Canadian affairs of the time.

A few advertisements complete the contents and nowhere in the paper is published the name of the proprietor or editor. Brown and Gilmore of St. Louis street, Quebec city, were named as the printers.

DESIGNED TO FOOL—Shown here for the first time is the new Nazi "glass" mine which was discovered by British sappers of the 8th Army in Italy. Designed to foil mine detectors the mine is non-metal and has a high percentage of glass used in its construction. The actual casing of the mine is of a fibre substance. Bolts, primer cap, and other parts are of glass. A British sapper holds the only metal part of the mine at left—the detonator. At right he holds the glass primer cap.

Says AP Set-up Cannot Be Equalled

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21—(AP)—The Chicago Sun described The Associated Press to the United States Supreme Court today as "a news gathering organization with an actual and potential power that cannot be equalled."

The Sun presented a brief as a friend of the court in connection with the government's civil anti-trust suit which seeks to change membership by-laws of the AP.

The paper said it sought membership in the AP or access to its facilities. After these were refused the Sun told the court, it filed a complaint with the Attorney General charging the AP violated the anti-trust laws.

A special three-judge federal court of the southern district of New York held the AP should be restrained from observing by-laws which permit members to consider the competitive effect of an application for membership. The court held, however, that the non-profit news co-operative might restrict admission on other grounds. The Supreme Court is scheduled next month to begin a review of this decision.

The Sun, citing the AP's news gathering facilities and the co-operative activities of AP members, told the tribunal:

"The combination of so great a majority of the American newspapers pooling their individual and their collective news gathering facilities creates a news gathering organization with an actual and potential power that cannot be equalled. No other American news agency has or, while the exclusive features exist, can have comparable facilities and resources."

The paper's brief suggested that new AP by-laws should be drawn "so as to declare that membership shall not be denied except for cause. Such by-laws would completely safeguard the legitimate interests of AP and of its members. Under such by-laws, membership could be denied to applicants who do not conduct bona fide newspapers (as distinguished, for example, from racing sheets or purely advertising media such as shopping information) or who are unable to meet their financial obligations as members of AP; it could be denied for other legitimate reasons, which are not a mere cover for arbitrary exclusion."

Press Freedom Must Be Held

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21—(AP)—Eternal vigilance is nowhere more necessary than in defence of freedom of the press, Archibald MacLeish, librarian of the United States Congress, declared Saturday.

"It must be fought for and won in every new generation, against the new enemies which, in every generation, beset it," he said in a statement signalizing the opening of a "freedom of the press" exhibition at the library.

"American history has seen numerous attempts, recently as well as in the past, to force libraries and bookstores to remove certain publications from circulation. Such practices are fatal to a free library system, to a free circulation of knowledge and of ideas and therefore to a free culture."

SOUND PICTURED—General Electric engineers developed the photographic technique shown in this amazing picture, one of the most outstanding ever made of air flow conditions, in which sound is pictured before it can be heard. A gun was fired, expelling a mass of air that was in the barrel ahead of the bullet, then the bullet itself and, finally, the hot gases that give the bullet its speed. The picture was taken in less than one millionth of a second—so fast that the sound wave produced by the explosion of the shell had not had time to form.

Airplane Carries 26 Young Babies

MONTREAL, Nov. 21. — Canadian flying men have moved a lot of strange cargoes both at home and abroad in the last several years, but when a Quebec Airways Boeing took off from Quebec City Airport the other day, bound for Chicoutimi, it carried one of the strangest loads of all—26 babies, not one of them over five months old.

The infants were being transferred from La Creche Saint Vincent de Paul in Quebec to Chicoutimi — a long train ride, but only an hour away by air. L'Abbe Germain, the priest in charge of the orphanage, contacted officials of Quebec Airways, a Canadian Pacific Air Lines subsidiary, with the result that the babies flew, and all in one planeload. Ordinarily, the aircraft carries ten passengers and a crew of three. But with Sister Coeur Immacule and Sister Marie de la Reparation, who were also making their first airplane flight, the total number of souls aboard was 31. Even so, with each baby weighing an average of 10 pounds, it was a far lighter load than customary.

Special three-place cribs, made of plywood, were built so that each box would fit into one seat in the airplane. Wrapped snugly in baby blankets, and strapped in both boxes and seats, even the roughest of air could not have tossed the tiny infants out. And as it turned out, there wasn't even one bump on the entire trip.

"They didn't give a bit of trouble," said Stewardess Joan Harland, a veteran hostess of the airline. "After the take-off, they just went to sleep, and that's all there was to it."

Bachelor Captain Art Leach, pilot of the plane, didn't have much to say: "They were squealing when I went forward before take-off and they were squealing after I landed," he announced grumpily.

Said First Officer Gordon Alexander: "I didn't hear a thing. Had the ear-phones on all the time." Then, musingly, "Seems to me the static was a little worse than usual, though."

Two Huntings Dogs Dies From Poisoning

WARSAW, Nov. 21.—(ENS). — Two valuable dogs belonging to Gordon Quirk, were lost this week while hunting in the White Lake district. They died quite suddenly and the stomachs of both animals were taken to Peterborough for examination and it revealed that both had died from arsenic poisoning.

The police are investigating and it is probable a charge will be laid.

Retake Convict In Shopping Jam

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 21—(AP)—A convict, who escaped from the Lansing, Kans., state prison 10 hours before, was shot and captured Saturday night after leading five carloads of police and deputy sheriffs a wild chase through a neighborhood shopping district jammed with a Saturday night crowd.

The prisoner was identified by police as Arthur William Lathrop, serving 152 years in connection with the shooting of a Leavenworth county deputy sheriff.

The capture ended a chase in which the escaped convict captured Helen Grady, 23-year-old daughter of Edward Grady, a parole officer at the Federal State Prison at Leavenworth, stole an ambulance for his drive to Kansas City and finally attempted to escape on foot among hundreds of shoppers.

Patrolman Russell Sage spotted the ambulance and radioed for help. After 20 minutes of dodging police cars through the shopping district, the ambulance finally was caught in a traffic jam.

Lathrop jumped from the machine and was shot in the hip. He was captured in an alley where he hid.

Lauds Quebec Units For Military Record

WINDSOR, Nov. 21 — (CP). — Walter G. Attridge of Montreal, president of the Canadian Junior Chamber of Commerce, said in an address here last night that politicians were using Quebec "to hide behind, thus creating misunderstanding through Dominion."

Speaking before a dinner meeting of the Windsor Junior Chamber, Mr. Attridge said criticism of French Canadians was based largely on ignorance, and that some Quebec regiments in this war have made records "that have not been equalled."

Civic Hospital Plan Approved By Minister

Formal approval of Peterborough's proposed Civic Hospital was received from Hon. R. T. Vivian, provincial Minister of Health, at Monday night's meeting of the council.

The Minister wrote that the building program was entirely acceptable to the Department, and was being recommended to the Cabinet.

"With other hospital programs in the city," the municipal hospital plan will provide for Peterborough a total of 360 beds for acute cases and approximately 40 beds for the care of chronic cases, Dr. Vivian's letter commented. It was referred to the special hospital committee.

Lose 10 Ships

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21 — (AP). — Loss of 10 American vessels, including a destroyer and two destroyer escorts, was announced by the navy department last night.

The craft, a communique said, were lost as the result of enemy action "or the perils of the sea" in the southwest Pacific but they were not in the recent great naval battle there.

The announcement brought the loss of U.S. Navy ships of all types since the United States entered the war to 228.

Legion Decries Recent Action

MONTREAL, Nov. 21.— (CP).— The executive of the Jean Brillant, V.C., branch of the Canadian Legion, in a letter sent last night to the Dominion Command said that action of the Dominion Command in asking its branches to write Members of Parliament urging use of home defence troops for overseas service was "untimely."

The letter said that the regulations of the branch did not permit calling a general meeting on short notice and that the only executive considered the request.

The executive said it was of the opinion that the case involved the relative merits of two ideas, two theories and two schools of thought.

"We humbly confess at this time, that we do not feel we have the necessary information to take a decision on the subject; we do not feel that we have the authority to settle, only by the repeated use of a principle, without the added consideration of facts and circumstances, a question so vital to our nation and we would like to add that, in our opinion, there is a doubt as to whether the Dominion Command is actually better qualified than we are.

"The executive of the Jean Brillant, V.C No. 27 have at this time the intention neither to approve the government nor to censure the opposition raised on the question involved.

"We feel that the question is solely and essentially political and that the Canadian Legion should confine its activities to the aims and ends for which it was instituted, unless it decides, after amending its letters patent and regulations—which now prohibit such a step—to take sides openly with a political movement or form its on political party."

The Jean Brillant executive endorsed the views of the Dominion Command that the troops overseas should receive "all possible and imaginable support" but questioned whether it would be refusing them this help "to express an opinion contrary to that formulated by the Dominion Command.

If the voluntary system should prove efficient and possible, the Legion would have nothing to gain by urging use of home defence troops overseas and would not keep the measure of respect and influence it now commands.

City Council Gives Pigeons Reprieve

Pigeons that roost on the upper cornices of the Public Library, with increase of brood causing concern to the library trustees, will not be chivvied about and shot at or otherwise attacked by order of the city council.

The Library Board wrote the council as "the senior governing body" asking their help in doing something about the pigeons which presumably have become something of a nuisance.

'Pigeons" said Alderman Dutton, "are an institution. They become part of public buildings, and I'd hate to see them destroyed."

"The Board is in charge of the library," Mayor Hamilton commented. 'I don't see why they want to call on us."

Alderman Swanston jokingly suggested that possibly Alderman Bradburn might turn his rifle on the pigeons, a recommendation based on Bradburn marksmanship in killing a bear recently back in the Ketcheum Lake country.

The council simply decided to leave the pigeon problem to the Library Board.

"They may think we're stool pigeons," Alderman Swanston remarked extending the spirit of jest.

Lack Background

OSHAWA, Nov. 21 — (CP). — Very few people of Europe are capable of democratic government because they lack the necessary background, training, ethics, and idealism, Gordon D. Conant, former Ontario Premier, said in a service (Rotary) club address here yesterday.

Four Young Boys Hold Sale At Market Stall

There is something very wholesome and constructive which augurs well for the future of their lives, when young boys voluntarily give up their Saturday morning leisure from school duties, to engage in a labor of benefit for other young people thousands of miles away, let alone the forethought and detailed work necessary prior to that time, in order to make this a real success.

Four young boys, Harry and Ray Yelland, Harry Hanwell and Jack Rowley, all members of a club with the rather foreboding name of the Vulture Club, made up a quartet who last Saturday morning utilized the stall on the market to benefit the Peterborough and District British War Victims' Fund, by holding a sale of canned goods and home-made baking all donated so that they could assist the special fund now being raised to send over to Britain for Christmas.

From this they were able to turn over the sum of $8.05 credited in their name today, representing a few hours of their young lives very well spent indeed, which who knows may yet redound in benefit to themselves in other ways, besides the good character building assist it cannot help but promote to their future in more ways than one.

This same group with a few others of the same club also assisted the fund to even a greater extent during their summer holidays, so their former experience must at least have given them the satisfaction which promoted the urge for this latest effort.

Lakefield Girls' Club Helps.

Then to balance the scales along comes a gift from the Busy Bee Girls' Club of Lakefield for $5, specially designed for the Christmas Cheer Fund for British Children, the manner of its raising also showing industry that promises well for the future.

Composed of Alta Bullock as president, Donna Edward vice-president, Ruth Graham secretary, Ann Samis treasurer, and Ruth Bullock, Barbara Graham, Mary Jane Foster, Alma Cherry, Alice Foster, Joyce Wannamaker and Joan Northey as members, this group of Lakefield Public School girls meet every Friday night after school hours, at the homes of each in rotation, for the special purpose of doing something to assist in helping the British children who are victims of the war.

Their gifts was raised by collections taken at their meetings, and by making small articles of sewing and knitting for sale to further swell their treasury for that purpose, for which they are to be much commended.

Assisting in the good work that the penny boxes continue to carry on to good effect, comes the proceeds of a collection made at the Bank of Toronto from the boxes located there. On this occasion the amount is $2.50, helping to swell the total which is now reaching close toward the $2,500 mark.

Salary Raise Given To Police Sergeants

The salaries of Sergeants W. E. Wigg and Gordon T. Puffer were adjusted at a meeting of the police commission Monday to correspond with the salaries recently fixed for Sgt. John Naples and Detective John Stevenson.

All four will receive $1,979, dating from October 1.

Pte. Ernest Beatty having completed two years' service, was on the recommendation of Chief Constable Thompson promoted to second-class constable, with the customary increase in pay.

E. Y. Cullen, Burnham street, Elwood R. Nicholls, 24 Rutherford avenue and Melvin Throop, Robinson street were granted taxi-drivers' licenses.

The clerk and City Solicitor W. F. Huycke were instructed to consider a change in the bicycle licensing by-law to provide for re-registration every three years.

Rose Brothers Back In Front Line Areas

Two sons of Mr. and Mrs. T. Rose, Homewood avenue, who were wounded a few months ago, have been released from hospital and are back in the fighting areas.

Cpl. T. J. Rose, a former employee of the Stationery Department of the C.G.E., is now at a holding unit in Belgium, waiting to rejoin his unit. He was wounded in the left arm August 3, while fighting in France, and was several weeks in the hospital. He was also suffering from nervous exhaustion.

His brother, Gnr. W. K. Rose, is back in action in Italy, having been wounded June 3. Both brothers enlisted in July, 1940 with the Stormont Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders.

TRIPLET BOY SCOUTS—Believed to be Canada's only triplet Boy Scouts, here are, Left to Right, Charles, Edward and Henry Mansell, who are members of the 44th Windsor, Ont., Boy Scout Troop at St. Anne's Church. The triplets are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Mansell, of Tecumseh, near Windsor. They were born in 1932.

Pals With Sense Of Humor Victimize Hunter Alderman Hotly Pursues Stuffed Deer

"When I fired my second shot two fellows staggered out from behind a tree and fell on the ground,—writhing; with laughter; and not just laughter either, but grand belly laughs."

The Examiner is reporting a story of the woods as Alderman Sands told it last night to some of the members of the council.

The two men who rolled in the recently fallen leaves were Harry Chenhall of Detroit, brother-in-law of the hospital committee chairman, and Norm Elliott of Hunter and George streets.

"One of them stopped long enough to say 'don't you know there's a shortage of shells?' and 'which way did he go' and I just stand there like a goof thinking of a little incident the night before. This was Friday night, and I'm on way to Beaudrie's to bring these two lugs out at the week-end. I'm driving along in the dark and getting near to Beaudrie's, twenty -seven miles east of Bancroft, when I set a deer up the road nearly a couple of hundred yards. He's standing in the light just off the road. To satisfy Price Morris and all the other Provincial Police and Game Wardens they can be assured that this was not on a highway.

"I stop the car, and he's still there, looking at me; seemed fascinated or hypnotized by the lights. So I get the gun out, and—bang; look up, and the deer hasn't moved; I wait a second and let him have another; and starting walking up toward him; and I fire a third shot; and still nothing happened. When I get up close I see that some one had rigged up this deer on sticks and standing there as if he was; stuffed a hide and so on. I wonder who the deuce would go to all that trouble, and drive on to Beaudrie; and the brother-in-law and this fellow Elliott suggest we get some hunting in the morning....Not too early.

"They point out the directions, especially the one I was to take and I hadn't gone far when up on a knoll I see a deer; and right off I let him have it. But he doesn't move; and he doesn't fall down dead either. So I pull the trigger again; and that's when I set off the roars of laughing. These two had gone out in the morning ahead of me and set up the deer on a runway they made sure I'd take. They said it was worth the money hearing the shots the night before, and then planting the "deer" again in the morning. Finally I got around to laughing at it myself, grudgingly at first; can you imagine people going to all that work just to perpetuate a joke on the innocent?"

Toronto Funeral Held For Harry Zacks, Sr.

The funeral was held in Toronto at 3:30 o'clock Monday afternoon for Harry Zacks, Sr., well-known Peterborough merchant, who passed away in Toronto General Hospital late Sunday evening after undergoing a serious operation. He was in his 57th year.

Ailing for about a year, Mr. Zacks was taken to Toronto three weeks ago. Interment was in the burial grounds of the University Synagogue, and the funeral was from the Benjamin Funeral Home.

For nearly twenty years, Mr. Zacks operated a furniture business on George street, on the premises now occupied by Northam's Bakery. Eight years ago, he moved to 283½ George street, south of Charlotte street, where he had since been in the men's and women's clothing business.

Born in Russia, Mr. Zacks came to Peterborough in 1905, and has lived here since that time. During his life in Peterborough, he belonged to the Peterborough Synagogue, and held membership in B'nai B'rith Lodge and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

He is survived by his wife, formerly Leah Rasminsky, and two daughters, Beatrice, of Toronto, and Mrs. Allan Moldaver, of Peterborough.

A great number of friends from this city went to Toronto for the funeral.

Off Ration List

OTTAWA, Nov. 21 — (CP). — The prices board announced today that unsweetened canned fruit packed in containers holding 105 ounces or more has been removed from the list of rationed fruits, together with unsweetened "pie filler" and "fruit filler" in these large containers. Rationing continues, however, on unsweetened canned fruit in small-sized containers.

Are You Aware Of The Fact?

That while the new Civic Hospital is estimated to cost $1,400,000 the ratepayers of Peterborough are only being asked in the by-law to be voted on December 4 for $600,000?

Truly a Modern and Up-To-The-Minute Hospital at less than half the cost.

But of the $600,000 being asked in the by-law approximately $300,000 will be paid by industry and business for their assessment is half of the general assessment in Peterborough. Thus the home owners are actually being asked to provide $300,000.

Truly a Modern and Up-To-The-Minute Hospital at less than a quarter of cost to the home owner.

Took To Ditch To Save Other Motorists

"I took to the ditch because if I had hit that car squarely in the middle I would have killed everybody in it" said Thomas Morris Johnston, Ottawa truck driver for Smith Transport in police court this morning in giving his version of an accident on Highway 7 three miles east of Havelock on October 16.

Johnston was charged with careless driving after a collision between his tractor-trailer combination and a car driven by Mrs. Rita Minaker. Lindsay. Mrs. Minaker also faces a similar charge as a result of the accident.

The Ottawa driver was defended today by T. J. Carley, K.C., and pleaded not guilty.

Mrs. Minaker in her account of the accident said that she was driving east on No. 7 Highway with her parents and her two children to visit a relative, George Hartin who live on the north side of the highway three miles east of Havelock.

Struck in Lane

She said that she saw the truck 300 feet west as she started to turn into the laneway of the Hartin property and that she had had her hand out for a considerable distance before she made the turn. Mrs. Minaker claimed that her car was off the highway altogether and in the laneway when it was hit. She said it was struck first at the left rear, swung around and then bumped again near the front and that it was driven 100 feet down the highway.

Mrs. Minaker's father, Willard Drury, Lindsay, corroborated her evidence as to the position of the car when it was hit and as to her arm being out to signal a turn. He put the speed of the transport at about 45 miles an hour.

Provincial Constable Archie Grayling of Havelock who investigated the accident said that from the marks on the road, the point of impact was three feet south of the north edge of the travelled portion of the highway and not in the laneway.

Tried to Pass

The Minaker car had come to rest 102 feet away from that point. Constable Grayling said that his impression was that the Minaker automobile had been struck near the left door.

Johnston, called by the defence, said that he had seen the Minaker car ahead of him travelling at around 22 miles an hour. His truck, he said, was moving at 35 miles an hour. It had a governor on it that prevented it from travelling faster than 38 miles an hour.

He edged over toward the north side of the road intending to pass the car when it suddenly turned in front of him. He said that he had seen no signal given or any indication that the other driver intended to turn.

"I need not have wrecked the truck" he said, "but I have children of my own and so I took to the north ditch."

He explained that the trailer had failed to follow the van when he drove into the ditch and as a result it struck the Minaker car.

At this stage the court adjourned for luncheon.

Ramore Village Raked By Fire

RAMORE, Ont., Nov. 21 — (CP). — Almost the entire business section of this farming village 30 miles north of Kirkland Lake was destroyed today in an early morning fire which caused damage estimated at $60,000.

The fire started at 1.30 a.m. in a general store owned by J. N. Cloutier who was awakened by the noise of the flames. He was unable to control the blaze with fire extinguishers and he and his family experienced some difficulty in getting out of the building. Store and contents, valued at $40,000, were a complete loss.

Th Ramore Hotel was destroyed with the loss being estimated at $8,000 and two other adjacent buildings valued at $4,000 also were razed. Several other nearby buildings were burned but loss in these was not known immediately.

Ramore has no fire department and calls for help were sent to Matachewan and Kirkland Lake. Pumps and extinguishers were sent but the lack of water facilities prevented the use of standard equipment.

No one was injured.

Building Inspector Makes 147 Check-ups

As assistant building inspector, Malcolm McIntyre made 147 inspections during October. In two instances work was begun without building permits. Notices were issued to three persons. In one case a building permit was taken out at the city hall after the inspector's notice.

"I recommend that the house on Douglas avenue east of No. 581 be taken down as it is in a very dangerous condition," Mr. McIntyre suggested "Workmanship is very poor and material is not according to the city's by-law."

Council Votes To Support Reinforcements

Seven members of the council voted last night endorsement of a Chatham council resolution "urging the Prime Minister to act immediately in sending overseas the army of inactive troops that are causing all the controversy."

The ayes were Aldermen Bradburn, Cotton, Ovens, Curtis, Sands, Dutton and Swanston. With an approving majority, Mayor Hamilton declared the resolution "carried" without calling for negative vote. All the members were present.

Two similar proposals were received from the Peterborough branch of the Canadian Legion and the Trent Canal Employees' Association.

When the Chatham letter was read by City Clerk Ontram, Mayor Hamilton said "received" as a routine disposal, but Alderman Bradburn suggested "there is no harm in endorsing it."

"All right," His Worship replied, "general business."

In that later stage of the session Alderman Glover was the first speaker when Mayor Hamilton re-introduced the Chatham circular letter. 'As long as I can remember, the city council has avoided controversial political matters," Alderman Glover said. "I believe that is one reason the council of Peterborough has been so successful in getting along with its affairs. I am as much interested as any one in getting recruits."

Alderman Glover said that with other agencies taking the matter in hand it might be well for the council to let it rest here for the time being.

"I don't think it is a political matter at all," Alderman Bradburn stated. "It concerns the welfare of our troops overseas. The need is very great, and I think we should endorse the resolution. The will of the people was expressed on this matter two or three years ago."

Alderman Bradburn's motion of endorsement was seconded by Alderman Dutton.

Alderman Dutton said he did not consider the council to be playing politics. "I feel there is an urgent need, and reports show that men are badly needed. It would be a blot on the nation's escutcheon if we failed to our men overseas."

"I don't think I can be accused of indifference in this matter," said Alderman Sullivan. "I can also say that I have voted for both parties. As Alderman Glover has said I have stated on different occasions that politics should be kept out of municipal affairs. I think this is a political matter. I don't think there is any one in the city who for personal reasons can be more concerned than I am. I wonder how much we can do by endorsing this resolution. Will it mean more to the city if we remain outside this matter?"

"We have an obligation to our conscience just the same," said Alderman Dutton.

"I don't think this is a political matter," Alderman Sands said. "There have been other resolutions to governments from this council. The issue of the government at the present time is no fault of ours. How are governments to know the minds of the people if we don't express them?"

Alderman Swanston said "if our skirts are clean I don't see any reasons why we should not declare ourselves. I haven't a son old enough to be in this war, but I am an ex-service man of the last war. I feel with Aldermen Glover and Sullivan, but I am also inclined to agree with Alderman Sands."

Alderman Swanston said various other organizations had supported the sentiment of the Chatham resolution. The Government and General McNaughton would be guided by what they saw as the facts in the situation. "I don't see any harm in endorsing the resolution."

Pour Out Shells

LONDON, Nov. 21 (CP-Reuter)— Gen. Eisenhower's appeal to American workers to "pour out" the shells has found an echoing response in Britain. British factories which had stopped production have been or are to be restarted. Others are to step up production to keep pace with the huge expenditure of ammunition on the Allied western front.

Burn Health Menace

CINCINNATI, Nov. 21 — (AP).— Firemen helped burn a five-room house in nearby Glendale on Sunday. The tenant, in hospital, and four of his children have tuberculosis. Women Expected to Act In New French Government

By MARGARET ECKER, Canadian Press Staff Writer.

PARIS, Nov. 21 — The first woman elected to the consultative assembly of the Provisional French Government after French women were given political equality with men was the wife of a Canadian—Marthe Simard, wife of Dr. Andre Simard, Quebec city surgeon.

Madame Simard who was elected in November 1943, when the assembly met in Algiers, now is one of the 12 women who took their seats in the Luxembourg Palace when the Provisional Government sat for the first time early this month.

The honor came to the attractive, blond woman—she is a grandmother although she doesn't look it — following her work in organizing Free French committees in Canada after the fall of France in 1940.

'I took no interest in politics before this time," said Mme. Simard, who has lived in Canada since her marriage in Paris to Dr. Simard. "Even though I lived in Canada I always loved France dearly, so when in 1940 Gen. De Gaulle called on all French people to rise and fight for the freedom of our country, I knew it was my job to work for a Freen France in Canada and so prove that the French wouldn't tolerate German domination."

Growing Interest.

Mme. Simard said she believes the interest of French women in politics will grow and when the new French Government is elected women members will sit in the Chamber of Deputies. "Most parties will put forward one woman candidate for election," she said. Otherwise they will be accused of conservation or anti-feminism."

"It is not in the tradition of older French women to participate in political life. But younger women in the towns are showing a growing interest in the Government of France. For many women the important role they played during the resistance was a school for politics also. Through their fearless work they won the respect of the men.

"In fact some say that women were more courageous and worked harder to support Gen. De Gaulle than men. If it hadn't been for the women, much resistance work would not have been possible. The women of France will learn to value the right to vote highly.

"Mothers of the nation have seen two wars and now will use their vote to influence a foreign policy that will maintain peace. None of them want to see their sons or grandsons in another war which they may be able to prevent by intelligent use of the vote."

Conservative Women Are Urged To Back Conscription

A compelling and vivid challenge to citizens, women particularly, to take more interest in politics, and in government affairs, was presented to a meeting of the Progressive Conservative Women's Association by Mrs. W. S. Haney, of Sarnia, president of the Western Association. She urged citizens to prepare themselves, by reading and study, to act wisely on questions soon to be presented to the public.

Her principal topic of discussion, and the subject on which she urged immediate protest, was the manpower question, and the sending of adequate reinforcements overseas to aid Canadians already on the fighting line. Deploring the "apalling delay" experienced recently in the dispatching of trained reinforcements overseas, Mrs. Haney exhorted her listeners to prepare to do something about "cosy haven for slackers," 70,000 of them, which the reserve army plan afforded.

Speaking of the recent overseas trip and subsequent resignation of Col. Ralston, the former Minister for National Defence, the speaker argued that he must have had his eyes opened when he visited the fighting lines, since he knew the strength that each army unit should have had. She said that insufficient rest and lack of equipment was handicapping gallant Canadian soldiers, because the "government does not have the courage to entirely mobilize Canada's man-power and material."

"This issue transcends any other at the present time," she continued. "Our men must have the help they need immediately. She asked citizens to join in a great protest to compel the government to keep its pledge, and accept the will of the majority of the people as exressed in the plebescite in 1942, which gave the government full ower to send draftees overseas should the necessity arise.

Great Power

Stressing the enormous power that women, banded together, could wield for the betterment of the country, Mrs. Haney explained that women's indignation and protests had quickened the government into action on the building of Sunnybrook Hospital. She explained that other countries had formulated detailed plans, to be put into action immediately the war ceased, and stressed Canada's need for something concrete for post-war problems. She said, however that in Ontario, the newly formed Ministry of Planning had studied plans for the post-war world, and that as one of the first steps in aiding servicemen and women to rehabilitate themselves, a school had been established. She explained that this school would provide proper education for professional or technical careers, and the fact that service personnel would be together, and not suddenly thrust into direct contact with a changed world was another of the advantages outlined.

Again stressing the part that women could and should play, Mrs. Haney said, that as mothers and wives, they could influence service men and women to take advantage of this real opportunity offered to them. She said that their interest would stimulate in the returned boys and girls, a greater desire for learning, since she felt that each person should be equipped with an adequate education to meet and surmount problems the world presented. As a further proof of the desire of the Ontario government to provide every comfort possible to service personnel, Mrs. Haney mentioned Col. George Drew's trips to Great Britain and his talks with servicemen, and the establishment of Ontario House.

In her opening remarks, Mrs. Haney said that she realized how proud the women of Peterborough were to have such a distinguished fellow citizen as Senator Iva Campbell Fallis. The speaker was introduced by Mrs. G. K. Fraser, and the vote of thanks was moved by Mrs. Harold Scott.

Hospital Plans

Alderman Adam Sands, addressing the meeting on the subject of the proposed civic hospital for Peterborough, briefly outlined plans, and gave the approximate cost to each taxpayer. He explained that the proposed 265-bed hospital would have 210 beds for acute cases, 40 for chronic cases, and 15 for isolation cases, thus eliminating the necessity for operating a separate isolation hospital, and the meeting of its deficit. The payments, which would cost a citizen one cent a week for each $10 in taxes which he paid, Alderman Sands explained would not begin until 1947.

In addition to the approximately $250,000 which would be turned over by the Nicholls Hospital Trust, he said that the county had realized its responsibility, and had generously voted the sum of $150,000 toward the building of the new hospital. In conclusion, Alderman Sands asked the endorsation of the Association for the plan, and members agreed.

G. K. Fraser, M.P., briefly explained the organization of the Women's Advisory committee, composed of urban and rural representatives, which met to discuss matters of interest to women. The president was instructed to take resolutions and recommendations to Toronto since she was an automatic member of the Provincial Progressive- Conservative Association. In conclusion, Mr. Fraser echoed Mrs. Haney's words, and said that the help of every woman was needed, urging them to become aware of their responsibilities.

Harold Scott, M.P.P., told of his recent visit to northern Ontario, where a group was studying plans to enable returned servicemen who wished to take up farming to clear enough land the first year to support themselves. He explained that government - owned machinery would be used to clear the land, and the owner would be charged on a per hour basis. He also said that twenty of the twenty-two planks in the Progressive-Conservative platform, as outlined last year, had been put into effect already. The others, he continued, had been partially implemented. A reduction in the school tax had been made, but there were problems of different rates in different localities to be met, while the twenty-second plank, the forestry planning, would of necessity be held up until experts, now serving in the army, returned to take up their jobs again.

Members decided that a letter of sympathy be sent to Mrs. M. Brown. Following the meeting, refreshments were served, with Mrs. T. H. Skinner in charge, assisted by Mrs. Walter Hughes, Mrs. F. Fisher, Mrs. F. Staunton, and Mrs. D. Miller, who poured tea. Mrs. W. Greenslade was pianist for the afternoon.

Allen-Forestell Vows Solemnized

A wedding of wide interest took place recently in St. Mary's church, Lindsay, when Reta Agnes Forestell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Forestell, became the bride of Joseph Sylvester Allen, son of Mrs. Robert Allen and the late Robert Allen, of Kinmount. Very Rev. Dean J. V. McAuley officiated, and Rev. Fr. Kay and Rev. Fr. Welsh were present in the sanctuary. Mrs. H. J. Gleeson was soloist, and was accompanied by Miss Ruth Shannon, the organist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in floor-length white satin and lace, with square neckline, gored skirt and full-length panels of lace. Her long veil was caught to a halo of shirred net, and she carried white roses. She also wore a pearl necklace, the gift of the groom.

She was attended by her sister, Miss Aileen Forestell, and Miss Bernice Allen, sister of the groom. They were frocked alike in floor-length white taffeta, with shoulder-length veils caught to white feather halos, and carried nosegays of pink carnations. Charles Allen of Kinmount, was his brother's groomsman, and the ushers were Fonse Coughlin of Hamilton, and Gordon Doherty of Peterborough.

At the reception, held at the Benson Hotel, the bride's mother received the guests on a two-piece dress of fuchsia crepe, and matching accessories, and a corsage of pink roses. The groom's mother, also receiving, wore heavenly blue crepe, matching hat and a corsage of red roses.

For a wedding trip to Montreal and Ottawa, the bride donned a purple dress, trimmed with sequins, matching accessories, and a grey top-coat, and yellow and white 'mum corsage. On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Allen will make their home in Kinmount .

Russian People Learn New Way Of Life

Miss Mary Gall ,Girls' Work Secretary of the Y. W. C. A., was guest speaker at the regular supper meeting of the Business and Professional Women's Club, Monday evening. Miss Gall chose as her subject, "Russia," since she had visted that country, shortly before the war.

She outlined the vast changes made in Russia in the last 25 years. Previous to the revolution, she explained, the wealth of the country had been held by about 20 per cent of the population, and the other 80 per cent were poor and illiterate. She said that actually, the work of the country was done by slave labor drawn form the 80 per cent. Miss Gall also explained that she could understand why they had abandoned the church since, as far as she could ascertain, there was little Christianity in it.

Three of the greatest improvements which the new regime had introduced, Miss Gall listed as: the parks of culture and rest; socialized medicine; and the equality in everything afforded to women and women.

Mrs. Bertha Austin, president, was in the chair for a short business period, when a successful report of the recent rummage sale was presetend to the meeting.

W.A. Raises $105 At Tea and Sale

MILLBROOK, Nov. 21 — (ENS) The afternoon tea and sale held in the waiting room on Saturday afternoon and evening, under the auspices of the Women's Association of St. Andrew's Church, proved a popular event, with a total of more than $105 taken in from all sources.

Saleswomen at the fancy work table were Mrs. J. McKnight, Mrs. P. Stinson, Mrs. M. McDowell, and for the country store: Mrs. J. Rowland, Mrs. J. W. Hamilton, Mrs. Clarence Ball, Miss M. Finnimore, Miss J. Sutton, and Mrs. P. I. Bentley, who as president of the hostess society, had a general oversight of the whole sale.

Pouring tea at the hostess table, which was lace covered with a central silver basket of pink 'mums flanked with tall rose tapers burning in silver holders, was Mrs. A. L. Sisco. Those assisting with the serving were: Mr. H. R. Edmunds, Mrs. W. R. Howard, Mrs. H. J. Barringer, Mrs. H. J. Armstrong, and Mrs. L. Wilson. The smaller tables were centred with bud vases of 'mums, and the general cashier was Mrs. McKnight, treasurer of the Association.

Association To Study Health Topics

Plans fo rthe January meeting were discussed at the regular meeting of the Home and School Council, Monday evening in the Y.W.C.A., members unanimously agreed to devote the January meeting to "Health" and have speakers on venereal diseases. Mrs. E. Chambers presided.

Mrs. Fred Hooper, of the Red Cross, gave a short talk about the work the Associations were doing, and pointed out the need for more volunteers to help at the library on Thursday afternoon. The "Save the Children" fund was brought to the attention of the meeting, and donations of children's clothing, clean and good, and new baby clothes, were requested.

Later the meeting divided into groups for leadership discussion. Mrs. E. Chambers and Mrs. C. Crowe took the group for presidents; Mrs. L. Vass, for secretaries; Mrs. R. Parnall and Mrs. J. J. Craig for treasurer; Mrs. G. W. Hutchinson, for membership; and Mrs. O. Laderach and Mrs. V. R. Henry for program. A question and answer period pertaining to Home and School work brought the meeting to a close.

Baptist Y.P.U. Studies Bible

The decotional commission, under Miss Jessie Haddow, was in charge of the regular meeting of the Murray Street Baptist Young People's Union, Monday evening. Miss Haddow gave a general outline of the topic, the "First Outline of Bible Study," and explained how the different books of the Bible fitted into history.

Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe conducted a discussion on this subject, and gave the number of books in each Testament, discussing some of the history, up to the Songs of Solomon. In place of the usual worship service, a revival song service of hymns was enjoyed, led by Mrs. Ronald Bishop, with Raymond Sutcliffe at the piano. Miss Joan Stenton gave the call to worship, Psalm 95, and Miss Haddow led in prayer.

Bewdley News

The ladies of St. Anne's W.A. provided a pot luck supper in the dining room of Rice Lake Inn. There was also a talent table when many useful articles were sold. After all were served, games were played and more than $150 was received.

At the weekly Red Cross meeting at Rice Lake Inn, Mrs. C. Manley was presented with a beautiful end table and ornament from her fellow workers. Mrs. K. Halstead read a short address and Mrs. H. Goss made the presentations. The gift was in appreciation of the use of the Manley's home during the summer months from May to November for Red Cross sewing and quilting each week. Mrs. Harry Bray also received a gift the same day from her friends on the occasion of Mrs. Bray's 25th wedding anniversary. She was presented with a table mirror and silver flower holder.

Mrs. Bruce Macklin was in Baltimore Monday at the home of her brother, Mr. and Mrs. Hayden, Buttar.

Eire Planning To Go After Dairy Markets

By J. H. MURDOCH
Canadian Press Correspondent

DUBLIN, Nov. 21—(CP)—Recommendations for improvement in post-war year of the great Eire cattle-rearing and dairying industries have been presented to the government by a government committee of experts.

The importance of these industries to Eire could hardly be over-emphasized and to some extent they affect Canadian, Danish, Australian, New Zealand and Argentine competitors in the British market.

Eire's dairying industry is admittedly at low ebb and it will take several years to put it right. The committee's report notes that cattle and dairy produce represented 36 per cent of the total value of Eire's agricultural exports in 1940-41.

Breeding stations for cattle will be established if the committee's recommendations are accepted. In these stations the best possible pedigree cows and bulls with a high milk inheritance will be made available for breeding purposes to the ordinary farmer.

To improve the standard of milk production a comprehensive scheme of milk testing will be started. At present only 6.6 per cent of the country's cows are tested for milk yield.

Dublin, whose turbid manners are a part of her tradition, has acquired a sense of discipline. She has accepted the queue system.

"Does this change of heart betoken a simple sullen acquiescence with 'emergency' conditions, or does it represent a genuine change of heart on the part of the populace at large?" asks a writer in the Irish Times. "What will happen when and if the 'emergency' restrictions are removed—when there will be, in addition to bacon and fresh bread, trains and buses enough to spare?

"Will Dublin return to her old tradition of every man for himself, or will the new practice of orderliness have taken such a grip of her as to have become second nature?"

Britain Faces Higher Factory Production Costs

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Nov. 21 — (CP) — Higher production costs than before the war and out-of-date factory procedures in some industries are serious problems facing Britain as she enters the race for international trade after the war — a race she must win to maintain her present living standards.

Official figures show British exports have dropped 70 per cent in volume and 50 per cent in value since 1939. Not only must that loss be overcome, says Hugh Dalton, president of the Board of Trade, but exports must be increased by 50 per cent — in volume — over the pre-war level.

That means that if average prices are 50 per cent higher than pre-war, the value of exports actually must be increased by 125 per cent from pre-war.

The financial news estimates that "prices are certain to be something between 60 and 100 per cent higher (or even more in some instances) than they were in 1939." It refers to cost-raising tendencies during the war as efforts were made to obtain the ultimate in production.

The financial news places on establishment of an exchange parity for sterling in relation to other world currencies, and particularly the dollar, one of its main hopes for balancing off Britain's increased export prices with conditions in world markets.

But that is only part of the problem. Quite aside from the exchange rate, a successful exporting country must have as thorough industrial efficiency as its principal competitors, especially a country like Britain which must pay at the set exchange rate for large quantities of foodstuffs and raw materials.

This vital question — how Britain can re-equip her industries to compete successfully — has been getting much public attention since an official cotton textile mission to the United States reported that for a given output British labor requirements exceed American requirements by 22 to 98 per cent in spinning, by 129 to 203 per cent in weaving and 366 to 787 per cent in beaming.

The mission said the reason was not that British textile labor is less efficient but that the United States industry is vastly more mechanized.

During the recent shipbuilding debate in the House of Commons, member after member said the cost of new shipping is much higher than before the war.

Other industries face similar or even greater price increases. T. L. Horabin (Liberal, Cornwall North), told the House:—

"One knows that, in the inter-war years, British industry, by and large, was more concerned in protecting its investments in obsolete plant than in taking part in the technological improvements which led to such tremendous increases in the output of workers in the United States, Germany and Russia.

"I am frankly very pessimistic about the future of British industry at the moment."

Senator Says Quebec Wants No Civil War

KINGSTON, Nov. 21 (CP)—Senator T. D. Bouchard told the Kiwanis Club today that "loyal citizens of our ancient province of Quebec have no desire to see on the soil they love the murderous street-riots, the horrors of civil war, that have been experienced in those countries where the masses have finally paid heed to the seditious advice of religious hot-heads or racial extremists."

In a speech prepared for delivery at a luncheon gathering, Senator Bouchard added that "these same French-Canadians are in a great majority in my province, and it is well to have this fact known by outsiders."

Speeches made in Ontario sometimes have good effects in Quebec, he said, in reference to his maiden speech in the Senate last summer when he charged that certain elements were seeking to set up a separate state in Canada.

Sees Change

"Everybody has observed that since the exposure I made in Ottawa, street-riots of the apparent zoot-suiter type, illegal jailing of international trade-unionists by Catholic youth organizations, and all excesses of this character have stopped.

"Some people, of course, will say that my speech has not been the cause of this change for the better. Maybe they are correct in this estimate. But if such facts have been shall we say, only coincident, it had been, then, at least a happy coincidence."

There are "some people" in Quebec in favor of creating an independent state "based on race and religion," he said.

"Before the war, the apostles of this policy were more active than they are now but they are far from having ceased their subversive activities and we never know where this propaganda may lead. It is the duty of those who are aware of its existence and its danger to oppose it with all their might so that it can be stopped in good time.

"The big majority of my compatriots of French descent, I repeat it, are against this new Utopia that would serve only those of the privileged classes and would starve the people at large . . ."

Canadians Get Courses At Brussels' School

By MARGARET ECKER
Canadian Press War Correspondent

BRUSSELS, Nov. 21—(CP)—Canadian soldiers who broke off their education to enlist are going to be able to slip back into academic life here in Brussels.

At present leaves are only for 48 hours, but later when seven-day leaves start arrangements will be made for men and women to spend a part of each day attending courses at the University of Brussels.

Lieut. Fred Price of Montreal as Canadian educational officer here is arranging these courses.

Concerts, sightseeing, theatre parties and shopping tours are arranged. In a large information room in Canada House, Canadian leave centre, guide books and books on Brussels and Belgium are available for those who wish a historical background to what they are seeking. Maps and news bulletins are also there to keep the people who fight up to date on the war.

Soldier Sees Buddy Risk Life For Nazi

MILLBROOK, Nov. 21 —(ENS)— Misses Gertrude Richards, of Brighton, Patricia Richards, of Port Colborne, and Pte. Ruth Richards, C.W.A.C of the Postal staff, Barriefield, were home for the week-end with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Richards, arriving on Thursday to greet their brother Pte. Albert C. Richards, invalided home after three years overseas.

Although his older brother, Arthur Richards, was with the supporting troops back of the battalion with which he was fighting in France, it was impossible for him to personally contact his brother.

Questioned as to how Canadians overseas feel regarding the home defence army being retained in Canada, the young soldier said "he would not like to repeat their expressions here; but unless these reinforcements are sent there'll be a revolution when the boys now over there come home." As to the untrained recruits being sent to France, Pte. Richards said he had personal experience of one such young fellow who was his companion in a slit trench in France, "he didn't know how to properly handle the arms we were using, and he was scared and so was I."

A lasting impression was made on this young soldier's mind when "I saw one of my buddies risk his life to crawl out and rescue a German soldier who had been shot and his leg laid open almost from knee to ankle. In fact I felt sorry for him myself, and gave him cigarettes when he was brought safely in."

No. 2 Nazi

LONDON, Nov. 21 — (CP) — Indications filtered out to Germany to-day that Heinrich Himmler is so busy taking Hitler's place he has found it necessary to bring up a new No. 2 Nazi.

He is Dr. Ernst Kaltenbrunner, who succeeded "Hangman" Reinhard Heydrich as chief of the super-Gestapo. For the first time, according to a generally reliable source here, Kaltenbrunner had just been accorded a selected battalion of super-Gestapo bodyguards — an honor previously enjoyed only by Hitler and Himmler.

Obituary

MISS MARY DEANNARD.

Largely attended by relatives and friends, the funeral of the late Miss Mary Deannard took place from her late residence, 479 Donegal Street, to St. Peter's Cathedral where solemn high mass was offered by her pastor, Rev. J. T. Finn, assisted by Rev. Father Gallery ond Rev. Father Marrocco. Present in the sanctuary were Right Rev. Monsignor J. J. O'Brien and Rev. V. G. McMadden of Downeyville.

Many people who expressed their sympathy to her only surviving sister, Miss Elizabeth, at her home, the profusion of flowers, and the number of spiritual offerings showed the esteem in which she was held in the city and community.

Interment was in St. Peter's Cemetery, with Rev. F. A. Marrocco conducting the burial services.

Casket bearers were Roy Deannard, Samuel Houlihan, George Lynch, John Rutherford, D. J. Emery, and H. B. Hamilton.

The Stars Say

For Wednesday, November 22.

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE.

Although this is read to be a lively and exciting day, there are also indications that the young, their pastimes and affiliations may be of a rather involved, difficult and threatening nature. There may be temptations to excess, extravagances and indulgences with strong antagonism from elders or feminine relations, with much wrangling and discontent. However, with an amiable and reasonable attitude there should be opening for decided benefits and promised happiness. Keep patient and poised.

If It Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a lively and progressive year with many curious or singular experiences, of an intriguing, mysterious or idealistic nature, beneficial and pleasant if poise and reason and not feelings and emotions be maintained, especially where elders or women are concerned. Placate these and use the intuitions for exceptional gains.

A child born on this day should be blessed with exceptional talents and skills and should shine in cultural, intellectual or artistic expression.

QUEEN ALEXANDRA SCHOOL

"Open school" was held Monday evening at Queen Alexandra School, and a great many parents were present to see their children's handiwork, and to discuss their progress with the teachers. The reception committee was Mr. and Mrs. C. McBride, Mr. and Mrs. J. Smith and Mrs. J. F. Curtis.

The rooms were decorated to show the work of the month, and the students' work on display spoke well for the industry of the teaching staff. J. E. R. Munro's room featured a fine display of printing and autumn flowers, as well as drawing and plans for houses. The kindergarten room and Grade one, with Miss I. Connolly and Miss H. Staples as teachers, were outstanding in art work and object decoration, showing the care taken to interest the youngest pupils in their work.

In Grade two, Miss O. Armstrong room, health posters and pictures predominated, while Miss G. Cox, a teacher of Grades one and two, had a display of art, with autumn subjects. Miss H. Bonneycastle, of Grade three, showed the children's study of the homes of other peoples and their interesting work in studying stores, while Grades four, five and six, with Miss B. Hart, Miss F. Rahmel and Mrs. C. Pilon in charge, displayed studies in the work of early exploration and travel, and art with autumn as the main subject.

Grade seven work, under C. D. Munro, featured an exhibition, compiled by the students, depicting the life of early pioneers of Peterborough and various industries in Ontario. A special feature in J. E. R. Munro's room and also Miss Staples' room, were the new tables and chairs, the pride of both teachers and pupils.

Room mothers welcoming the parents were Mesdames J. Hornal, C. Brown, E. Simmons, P. Vannest, H. Coleman, F. Shaw, G. McKinney, G. Ham, A. Bacon, G. Brown, G. Beals and E. Estlick. The literature table, supervised by Mrs. J. Hayward and Mrs. E. Pinn, was well patronized. Guests were welcomed to the kindergarten, where refreshments were served by Mrs. C. Althouse and her committee.

The Tea Hour Gossip . . . .

Some different ways of serving lamb are given today. Lamb is a rather expensive meat and it is nice to know some different ways of dressing it up, so that not so much of the meat is needed.

American Lamb Cutlets

6 lamb chops, ¼ inch thick, 1 tablespoon chopped parsley, 6 tablespoons butter, 1½ cups of milk, ½ cup fine bread crumbs, 2 egg yolks, 1 tablespoon water, 1 tablespoon flour, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, ½ teaspoon salt, dash of pepper, 3 cups (cooked) green peas. Use shoulder or sirloin lamb chops and wipe with damp cloth. Add parsley and 2 tablespoons butter to milk, and simmer covered an hour. Drain and reserve milk mixture for gravy. Roll each chop in crumbs, dip into mixture of one egg yolk, slightly beaten with water, and roll again in crumbs. Saute in 2 tablespoons butter until browned on both sides and remove to a hot platter, add remaining 2 tablespoons of butter and flour to milk mixture and cook five minutes stirring until thickened. Gradually stir in remaining egg yolk, slightly beaten and lemon juice. Add seasoning, strain and pour over cutlets.

Yorkshire Lamb Hotpot

6 lamb shoulder chops, 1½ tablespoons butter, 4 cups scalded milk, 12 small white onions, 12 small potatoes, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon black pepper, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, parsley. Method: Trim off excess fat from chops and brown in butter in heavy frying pan. Add milk, onions, potatoes, salt and pepper, cover and simmer about half an hour or until vegetables are soft. Arrange chops, onions and potatoes on hot platter and serve with gravy made by thickening liquid in pan. Garnish with parsley.

THERE ARE NO ENCORES IN LIFE

The Most Poignant Suffering Results in Reviving the Glory of Yesteryear

One of the bitterest disappointments and disillusions that we ever suffer is when we attempt to repeat a pleasant experience, or to revive the glory of a vanished day. For there are no encores in life. Nothing happens twice the same. When a thing is done, it is done. Finished. And not all our longing nor our prayers can bring it back again just as it was.

Who of us who has not gone away from the old home, when we revisited it after a lapse of years, choked on our tears? In our memories it was cloaked with all the illusions of childhood. We thought of it as a beautiful and stately house, with roses climbing over its walls, filled with gay and happy people, and with the spicy odors of good cooking permeating its every room.

And when we see a shabby old building that has shrunken to a shack, with the paint peeling from its walls and cows grazing in what used to be Grandmas flower garden, we wish with all our hearts we had kept our dream instead of trying to check up on it.

And who of us has not realized the worse than folly of trying to revive an old friendship that has been moribund for years and years? There was Tom who you made mud pies with when you were a kid, who you went to school and college with, who was as close and dear to you as a brother. Well, Tom moved West, /or went to Europe to live. For a little while you kept up a correspondence and then you both got too busy to write and you lost touch. But now Tom has wired that he is coming in on the 4.30 train and you are filled with joy at the prospect of seeing him again.

You Can't Be a Repeater

But when he comes and you have slapped him on the back and had a drink or two together, and rehashed all of the old college stories and asked about his wife and his children, you find that you have nothing on earth to say to him. You could get into conversation with the veriest stranger on a sleeping car easier than you could with him, and you are both relieved when he leaves.

And the summer resort that was so delightful one year. And the fishing that was so good at a certain camp. Or the restaurant whose cooking you have never forgotten. And the dinner that was so brilliant. They are never the same when you go back to them. You can't be a repeater.

And it makes one wonder if one of the great tragedies of the war is not going to be the shock that sweethearts, and even husbands and wives, are going to get when they meet in that reunion to which they are looking forward so eagerly. Now they see each other through the rosy mists of fancy, idealized into a perfection that no human being ever possessed. They have forgotten each other's faults and blemishes and are filled with romantic and passionate love for each other.

But when Johnnie comes marching home and they get a good look at each other, what then? They won't be so young. Nor so good looking. Nor so light-hearted. Experiences will have changed them. And one speculates about whether the prewar kisses will have kept their flavor and whether the husbands and wives of yesterday will still be each other's hearts' desires.

Caucuses Held

convention which takes place next week in Montreal.

The session is unusual in that so far as is known the Government has no concrete motion or piece of legislation to place before Parliament.

Expect Confidence Vote.

The Government is expected to seek a vote of confidence in its policy of the voluntary system to provide overseas reinforcements.

The meeting will be out of the ordinary in that the minister primarily responsible for carrying out the policy, Defence Minister McNaughton, has no seat in the Commons.

To meet this situation it is expected members of the House and Senate will be asked to meet on Thursday in an informal gathering to hear him make a statement.

The procedure is understood to be that when the House meets tomorrow Prime Minister Mackenzie King will report Col. Ralston's resignation and Gen. McNaughton's appointment. He also will table correspondence between himself and the former minister.

Certain other documents possibly including reports on reinforcements and the latest figures on enlistments and numbers and classes of home defence troops may also be tabled.

It is not known whether Mr. King will introduce any argument into his statement on the first day. The first caucus of Liberal members probably will be called on Thursday after the House generally has been put in possession of the facts on which the Government expects debate to proceed.

At this caucus Government supporters will have a chance to argue the case in privacy before they are called to take a public stand.

Hershey Hockey Ace Tops Scoring List

NE WHAVEN, Conn., Nov. 21. — (AP).—Maintaining the hot pace that a week ago lifted him from a low spot to the top, Tom Forgie, Hershey ace, scored two goals and set up a couple of markers to bring his total to 20 points, enough to lead the American Hockey League's individual scorers to-day.

Forgie's closest challengers were team-mates, George Patterson and Hector Pozzo, and Pittsburg's Bob Gracie. They were four points off the pace. Pozzo and Gracie were high scorers among the 11 leaders, each picking up five points during the past week.

Pete Bessone of Cleveland and Frank Kane of Indianapolis paced the rule violators, each having been banished from the ice for a total of 16 minutes so far.

The leading scorers:

Forgie, Hershey	8	12	20
Gracie, Pittsburg	4	12	16
Patterson, Hershey	6	10	16
Pozzo, Hershey	6	10	16
Gooden, Hershey	5	10	15

Scouts's creed, which calls for one helpful deed every day, is one which we all could subscribe with profit. If we lived up to that creed what a wonderful world it would be.

"We are living in a critical hour in the history of mankind. We believe that now, more than ever the things we stand for in life of men and nations, must claim priority. We hear so much talk of a better world. You know and I know, there is only one way, it is the Christian way. We must renew our Faith daily."

At the close of the meeting, the guests and members retired to the dining-hall, where a sumptuous banquet was served, under the convenership of Sister Endicott and Sister McPherson and committee. The tables were prettily arranged with Autumn flowers and the guest table was centred by the Birthday cake.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

COUNTING IT ESSENTIAL

THERE IS no such thing as a good bridge player who does not count his winning tricks when he is a No Trump declarer or his losing tricks when he is a suit declarer. Before ever playing a single card on the first trick, he should always do that simple counting job as soon as he sees the dummy. If he is going to be too lazy to make the logical inferences from the bidding and the lead, and count up the probable suit lengths and location of hostile honors, that is bad enough. But failing to count his winners or losers, as the case may be, is worse still.

(Dealer: East. Both sides vulnerable.)

South got the spade 3 lead with the J, led to the club K, back to the diamond A, scored the club A, went over to the club Q, scored the club 10, then finessed the diamond J, which West won with the Q. The spade 4 return was won by the K and the diamond K taken to see if the suit would break evenly, but it would not. West's 10 was set up instead. Frustrated, South now led the heart 8, which West took with the K, following with the spade A and 9 and the diamond 10 to beat the contract.

If South had counted, he would have reckoned four tricks in clubs, two in spades and two in diamonds, totaling eight and leaving him only one more required. It could have been scored as a certainty in hearts, instead of trying two doubtful ways in diamonds. Building the heart trick would have necessitated losing the lead twice, but that could have been afforded, as the spade suit was not dangerous, marked as being only four cards long when the 3 was led and South had the 2.

Upon winning the first spade and taking the club K and A to assure that this suit would break, he should have switched to a heart, and when the second spade got led to him, he should have led hearts again. That would have assured his contract.

Aged Men Lost In Woods Find Way Out

HAVELOCK, Nov. 21 — (ENS). — C. W. Coon, 86, of Havelock and his brother-in-law James Seeney, 79, of Stirling, and a former resident of this district, caused considerable anxiety in the community when they failed to return at dark on Saturday from a trip to examine timber lots owned by the latter, situated north of the McGill School and about seven miles from the village.

Leaving Mr. Coon's home about 1.30 in the afternoon they drove with a team of horses as far as they could go, and tying the horses at the side of the road they proceeded on foot about two miles further inland through bush land, arriving there about 3 p.m. They wandered around for a time and lost track of their directions. Mr. Seeney thought he saw the highway and suggested that they make for it, but Mr. Coon thought it better to try and get back to where they had tied the horses.

Search Party Sets Out

As they had not returned home by nightfall, relatives and friends became anxious and a search party was organized. They discovered the horses and took them to shelter and continued to search until 3 a.m. Sunday morning, when they returned home until daybreak, when the search began again. This time they were joined by Mr. Seeney's son, Clarence, and his son-in-law, Allen Simpson of Stirling, and Fred McGee of Campbellford, also a son-in-law.

When darkness set in Mr. Coon and Mr. Seeney decided it would be useless to try and discover their bearings and so camped in the open for the night. Both men are non-smokers and had but one match between them, but managed to get a fire going from loose brush. They had no rest during the night, because the gathering of brush for the fire kept them busy.

During the early morning they were able to find their way to the spot where they had tied the horses and arrived there just in time to be greeted by a party of the searchers. They arrived home at 10.30 on Sunday morning none the worse for their nights adventure.

Strong Municipal Government Is Necessary For Democracy

Continuance of democratic governing is possible only if there are strong units of local or municipal government, declared Professor E K. Crawford, of Queen's University, in an address before the Peterborough Rotary Club at their weekly luncheon in the Empress Hotel, Monday afternoon. Mayor James Hamilton and members of the city council were guests.

The majority of the people want democracy, he pointed out, and local government is absolutely essential if a country is to be operated on a democratic basis. Municipal government is the only government which the people understand, and in which they can participate freely. Therefore, it must be at a level which they can understand, Prof. Crawford said.

Municipal government resists the trends towards centralization. Power, he stated, can be dangerous when placed in anybody's hands. The more the centralization of government, the farther removed it is from the people. And it becomes more difficult to control.

More Important

The young, Nova-Scotia-born expert told the Rotarians that there is no question about the fact local government is more important in the daily life of the people, than either provincial or federal government. Because it does so many things for the people, it is taken more or less for granted too much of the time. People could scarcely move about the community without using the services of the local government. Those services are essential to the population, he said. People could not live in groups of 30,000 or more, without it, he declared.

Along the theme of practical post-war planning, Prof. Crawford said that in the post-war period, the problems which will be met will be infinitely more difficult to solve than is the winning the war.

"We will have to retain ourselves to rely on ourselves," he said, "and not have to run to Ottawa or Toronto regularly. The sooner we learn how to solve our own problems, the sooner we'll get results."

Three points the speaker left with the Rotarians included the fact people and government must keep their feet on the ground, during the post-war period. There must be no imitating of larger cities, no aping of the ideas that apply to larger cities. "We are not New York, nor Toronto", Prof. Crawford said.

"Secondly, generalities must be avoided. Rather than talk broadly of that 'better life' after the war, define that 'better life', and be exact, if you wish to get anywhere. 'Better life' has meaning peculiar to individual desires, and has no meaning."

Money should be spent to do what needs to be done, and not just for the fun of spending it, Prof. Crawford said.

Must Bear Cost

Post-war projects are going to cost money, everyone's money, and people should not be misled into thinking something is coming their way for nothing. If the tax-payers get full value for their money, then even if taxes should go up, there would be no trouble, as long as each tax-payer receives no less than 100 cents for each dollar paid in taxes, he said. Money should be spent where it is needed most in the interests of the public, and it is silly to plan municipal affairs if the whole picture is not take into consideration, and "you know where you are going", the speaker declared.

There is a great need for planning, and the development of strong local government, and out of both, are going to come leaders. If those leaders do not come from where they are expected, then leaders from somewhere else will take over. Someone or another is going to be a leader. If the citizens delay too long in paying personal attention to local government, they do it at their own peril. It will, he said, be a case of the well-known "too little, and too late".

Rotarian Robert Abbott expressed the thanks of the club to Mr. Crawford for his informative address. Mayor James Hamilton thanked the Rotary club in behalf of the city council for the privilege of being guests, and also offered his thanks to the speaker. George A. Gillespie introduced Prof. Crawford.

Among the other guests were J. A. McKone, principal of the Peterborough Business College, E. H. McKone, principal of the Normal School, Capt. J. McNeill, of Prince Rupert, B.C., and Rev. Dr. J. Semple, of George Street United Church.

Past-presidents' pins were presented to Rotarians Ian McRae and George A. Gillespie and two musical selections were played in duet style by Harry Northropp and Norman Harris, at the piano.

Pte. C. L. Carr Returns Home From Overseas

WARKWORTH, Nov. 21 — (ENS). — Pte. Clarence Lloyd Carr who arrived in Halifax Tuesday, November fourteenth on the hospital ship Lady Nelson, is spending a month with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Carr.

Pte. Carr who enlisted in the Ordnance Corps at Toronto, August 1942, went overseas in April 1943. He went to France with the 2nd Division the latter part of June of this year and on July 21 received a shoulder wound, after which he was taken to England where he was in hospital for about a month. He says "home and Warkworth sure look good to him."

Air Cadets To Continue

Reds Seeking Control Of Rail Network

40 Counter-Thrusts Fail To Stop Russian Armies

LONDON, Nov. 22 (CP)—The Red Army drive for control of northeastern Hungary's rail network has captured Verpelet, eight miles southwest of Eger Anfis edging closer to the strategic rail junctions of Miskolc and Hatvan, Moscow advices said today.

Still another threat to the Germans in that theatre was seen in a Berlin announcement that the Russians had uncorked a fresh push in Czechoslovakia southwest of Ungvar, 75 miles northeast of Miskolc. The Nazis said seven to eight Soviet divisions had ripped several holes in German defence betwen the Ung and Latorica Rivers.

A Moscow communique said German forces pocketed in southwest Latvia had made 40 vain counter-attacks in a single day south of Jelgava, losing 13 tanks, but the announcement still did not confirm Berlin assertions that the Russians had begun a major offensive Sunday.

The Russians, however, did announce the vitual clearing of the Baltic island of Saare (Osel) guarding the entrance to the Gulf of Riga.

In addition to Verpelet the Red Army seized four strongly-defended villages in Hungary. Russian troops have been reported in the outskirts of both Eger and Miskolc. Rains have hindered the Russian advance, Moscow said.

The Americans blasted 73 German fighters out of the sky and destroyed six more on the ground.

Second Attack Fires Oil Plants

LONDON, Nov. 22 —(CP)—The German radio indicated today that Allied planes from Italy were striking into Germany from the south, following up last night's attacks by upwards of 1,000 R.A.F. bombers from Britain on Ruhr oil plants and Nazi rail targets.

An estimated 7,000 tons of explosives were dropped in last night's assault, the second large-scale Allied blow against Germany's war vital oil reserves within 12 hours.

The oil plants were at Sterkrade and Castrop-Rauxel in the Ruhr area and Canadian bombers were in the force that hit Castrop-Rauxel.

It was the fourth attack since D-Day on the Sterkrade Works which resumed after being put out of production.

A new target, Aschaffenburg, a rail town 25 miles southeast of Frankfurt, also was visited by the heavy bombers. This attack was made in support of the advancing French Army.

The night assault followed a daylight attack by 1,250 American heavy bombers escorted by a record fleet of more than 1,000 fighters. Forty bombers and 17 fighters failed to return from the American operation, but some were believed to have landed away from their home bases.

In addition to the Ruhr oil plants the R.A.F. bombers hit Aschafenburg, railway junction 25 miles southeast of Frankfurt.

The American daylight force met fierce opposition from the German air force in battering refineries at Hamburg and Harburg and the large Leuna synthetic oil plant at Merseburg with 4,000 tons of bombs.

ALLIES MOVE THROUGH FLOODED FRANCE — An Allied motorized column, headed by Maj.-Gen. John Millikin, commander of the U.S. Third Army Corps, shown seated in a jeep next to the driver, plows through the flooded streets of Pont-a-Mousson, France, en route to the fighting area. This town, situated on the Moselle River, experienced its worst flood in 30 years as Allied forces moved through the district.

Bulk Of Home Defence Men Come From Towns, Cities

OTTAWA, Nov. 22—(CP).—Defence Minister McNaughton last night issued a statement showing that of 59,002 home defence troops on strength October 11, 39,756 came from Canadian cities and towns while 19,246 were from counties and rural areas. The statement followed an announcement last week that more than 7,000 draftees "went active" between the June 6—D-Day—and October 31. At the same time it was disclosed that 6,200 of the 31,500 men called up in 1941 still were in the home defence army.

Starting a campaign to create local competition in recruiting home defence soldiers for the overseas reinforcement pool, Gen. McNaughton last night listed the draftee strength by cities, towns and counties. It is understood he shortly will start to issue regular conversion reports based on the distribution figures. The reports would show the progress of his voluntary recruiting drive.

The latest figures disclosed that in Quebec, Ontario and British Columbia — big industrial provinces — a majority were listed from the cities and towns. In the other seven provinces with big rural populations the majority were from counties.

Quebec showed the largest provincial total—22,847—and the largest city total—Montreal, 9,524. There were 18,735 draftees coming from cities and towns while the remainder—4,112—were enrolled from the counties.

The Ontario total of 15,726 draftees was made up of 12,777 from cities and towns and 2,949 from the counties. There were 3,225 listed from Toronto — second highest city total.

Other cities of large draftee strength were Hamilton 1,071, Windsor 864, Kitchener 423.

McNaughton Seeks Report

OTTAWA, Nov. 22 — (CP). — A letter has been sent by Defence Minister McNaughton to Pacific coast army commanders asking that a full investigation be made of a press conference at which officers were quoted as saying the voluntary system of overseas enlistment would not work, it was understood here.

Gen. McNaughton is known to hold the view that press interviews by officers on matters of policy are a breach of military discipline and can be made subject to court martial.

However, it was understood the letter did not call for disciplinary action which, in normal military procedure, would not be asked until a full report of the interviews were available.

It was recalled that when Maj. Connie Smythe of Toronto criticized quality of overseas reinforcements there were reports in military circles that he would be disciplined. No such action, however, has ever been reported.

Meanwhile, it was reliably learned if any disciplinary action were taken as result of the Vancouver press interviews it would be applied by commanding officers on the spot and Gen. McNaughton and defence headquarters here would merely be kept informed of proceedings.

King, Ralston To Speak In Commons

Taken For Granted Some Liberals May Bolt Party

By FRANK FLAHERTY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, Nov. 22 (CP)—As the hour approached for the opening of what may be an historic meeting of the Canadian parliament it became evident that developments during the meeting will hinge largely on the words and action of two men, Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Hon. J. L. Ralston.

On the eve of the meeting both kept their own counsel. Neither disclosed what he intended to say or do during the few days of intensive and perhaps bitter debate ahead.

The former defence minister, who resigned after Mr. King and the cabinet declined to act on his advice that home defence troops be sent overseas as reinforcements, was in the capital but not available for questioning.

Mr. King had a busy day yesterday, largely devoted to preparations for proceedings today. At noon he met Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative House Leader, and M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. Leader. The meeting lasted two hours and he then presided over a cabinet meeting which lasted more than three hours.

In advance of the meeting it was taken for granted among arriving members that some English-speaking Liberals would not support the government on its voluntary system for overseas service.

No Change Expected

Just how many will leave the ranks of the Liberal party and on what terms, it is believed, will depend on what they hear from Col. Ralston and Mr. King.

It is considered certain that Mr. King will not, at this stage, change his policy. It is not known what additional arguments he and Defence Minister McNaughton may advance in support of it.

On his part, Col. Ralston may confine himself to a statement of his own position or may take the offensive with what amounts to an attack on his former leader and cabinet colleagues.

Many private sessions and caucuses will precede any open show of position by most of the Liberal members. The Progressive Conservatives made their position known in a statement following a caucus yesterday. They are in favor of making home defence troops available for speedy reinforcement of

U.S. Robomb

WRIGHT FIELD, O., Nov. 22 — (AP). — The United States Army air forces disclosed today it had developed a "good" robot bomb that could be used "if we need it" and said the weapon had been in test flight since Oct. 11. It is a version of the German V-1 which was loosed on Britain last summer, the Air Technical Service Command said in relating how it raced to reproduce the Nazi terror weapon in 60 days and then sent it skimming jet-propelled through the skies a month later.

Arthur W. Nelson Found Near Hunt Camp

APSLEY, Nov. 22 (ENS).—Arthur W. Nelson, Peteborough hunter, who had been missing since Saturday morning when he failed to return to camp at Serpentine Lake from the watch on which he had been stationed was found at 5 o'clock Tuesday evening alive and well but very tired, near Grassy Lake.

> Arthur W. Nelson, who was missing from Saturday afternoon until late Tuesday afternoon, arrived home this morning in excellent condition. He enjoyed a hearty dinner and was able to move around, and declared he felt no ill effects, not even a sore back or sore feet.

Chesel McCall and Wellington Smith, whose hunt camp is only five minutes' walk away from where Nelson was found, spotted the fire the missing man had lighted early last evening and brought him into their camp where he was put to bed.

Nelson told the rescuers that he had used his last match to start his fire going. The previous night he had thought that he was out of matches but Tuesday he found one more among some papers in his pocket and it was enough to ignite the fire that led to his rescue.

Grassy Lake, near which Nelson was found, is six or eight miles north of the Tucker Hunting Lodge on Serpentine Lake where the party had been located for the hunt. It is thought that the lost hunter had been still further north in his wanderings and that he was working his way south when McCall and Smith saw his fire.

Some Food.

Nelson said that on Saturday

Canadian Spitfire Pilots Active

LONDON, Nov. 22 (CP Cable)—Four Canadian Spitfire pilots shot down two Focke-Wulf 190s and damaged a third yesterday when the Germans reacted in "some strength" to R.C.A.F. fighter-bomber operations, it was announced today. The kills were made when the Spitfires encountered 24 Focke-Wulfes in the Nijmegen-Geldern area of Holland

More than 100 sorties were flown yesterday by R.C.A.F. fighters and fighter-bombers based on the continent. A number of successful railway cuts were made in the Kempen, Koesfeld and Gladbach areas of Germany behind the German forces facing the British 2nd Army push from southeast Holland.

Typhoons destroyed or damaged six locomotives and more than 30 freight cars

R.C.A.F. heavy bombers last night attacked the synthetic oil plants at Castrop-Rauxel, northwest of Dortmund, and laid mines in enemy waters.

From these operations three R.C.A.F. fighters and four heavy bombers are missing

Americans Near Strasbourg Aachen Sector Progress Slow

By WILLIAM FRYE—Associated Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Nov. 22 — (AP). — French troops captured the Maginot Line fortress city of Mulhouse today and part of the staff of the imperiled German 19th Army while Americans to the north punched within 23 miles of the greater stronghold of Strasbourg on the Rhine. The break-through of the U.S. 7th and the French 1st Armies on the southern end of the Western Front erased a definite German front along the northern slope of the difficult Vosges Mountains, encrusted in snow.

The last German resistance dissolved in Metz and the official fall of that fortress city was announced while troops of four American divisions of the 3rd Army were cleaning their guns. Metz, a city of 83,119, is 80 miles northwest of threatened Strasbourg and was ringed by 40 or so forts which made it one of the strongest positions in the world.

More than 1,000 prisoners surrendered with the staff officers at Mulhouse, normally a humming industrial city of 96,697, 61 miles south-west of Strasbourg. Once a free city of Alsace, it lies nine miles from the German frontier on a tributary of the Rhine.

The drive on Strasbourg carried through German defences before the Savenne Gap and 10 miles beyond the French communications centre of Sarrebourg, where three railroads and 11 highways converge.

Slow and painful progress was reported in the Aachen sector in the north. British 2nd Army troops north-east of captured Kellenkirchen, 12 miles north of Aachen, slowly were eliminating Germans fighting in Siegfried Line pillboxes, while American troops fought nearly a half-mile into industrial Eschweiler, six miles north-east af Aachen.

In South-east Holland also the British 2nd Army was making progress.

Great Tank Battles.

Melancholy German broadcasts said great tank battles were being fought all the way from Aachen to the Swiss border and "exceed in violence anything hitherto known since the invasion of Europe."

"Von Rundstedt's armies have to cope with a task of the greatest magnitude, but notwithstanding some local successes of the Allies, the positions of the German forces in the west are still very strong," Berlin said.

Violent street fighting ocntinued in the southern part of Belfort and a French communique said "the fall of the citadel is imminent."

Its left flank collapsed, the endangered German 19th Army hurled what strength it could into a counter-attack against the French units moving northward along the west bank of the Rhine.

There were no immediate details at Allied Supreme Headquarters on the strength, exact focal point or initial gains, if any, of the enemy counter-attack. First reports indicated that it was thrown in from the direction of Colmar southwestward past Mulhouse against the flank of the French 1st Army armored drive out of the Belfort Pass area.

Thinnest Spot.

The enemy thrust apparently was aimed in the general direction of Suarce and Delle—the thinnest spot in the reinforcement line where every road is jammed with more men and supplies moving up to the Rhine.

Farther north along the sprawling 400-mile Western front, the British 2nd Army and three other

Bobbysockers Who Are Shoplifting For Fun Baffle Juvenile Officials In Portland

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 22—(AP).—Bobbysockers who shoplift for fun are baffling juvenile officials here and have Portland retailers gasping.

Young girls, who seem to skip classes to shoplift as casually as boys play hookey to go fishing, have been arrested from nearly every high school and grade school in town and from some of the city's better homes.

The thefts—practically all believed for personal use, not for sale—have been increasing for two years. The bobbysock brigade seems to be doing its Christmas shoplifting early, and police say it beats anything they've ever seen.

One 12-year-old was caught with $150 of cashmere sweaters, beads and bracelets in a shopping bag.

Insults Won't Get Recruits Quebec Brigadier States

QUEBEC, Nov. 22—(CP).—Brig. Edmond Blais, officer commanding Military District No. 5 here, said today he had "complete confidence" that plans he has worked out for furnishing supporting battalions to two Quebec district units overseas would be successful. "I want to make sure my two units—the Royal 22nd Regiment and Le Regiment de la Chaudiere—never go short of men," he said. "When I have my boys in hand, I am willing to guarantee that they will go wherever they are needed.

"I've made arrangements. My committees are formed. We must work fast, because time is the important factor right now."

Brig. Blais said he had not yet received definite word from Ottawa concerning his plan, submitted yesterday, to have French-Canadian members of the home defence army made available on a voluntary basis as reinforcements for Quebec units. He said last night that the plan had been "favorably" received and that "action on this may be taken in the very near future."

"Under my plan, we would take

Americans Lose Three Superforts

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—(AP).—Superfortresses plunging into probably their greatest air battle over the Japanese homeland yesterday lost two, and possibly three, of their number to enemy fighter planes.

A communique said to-day it was the first time Japanese airmen had succeeded in bagging a B-29 since inauguration of the 20th Bomber Command last June 15.

Twenty Japanese fighters were shot down, 19 probably lost and 22 others damaged in the three-pronged strike by a large force of B-29's from China aiming principally at the Omura aircraft plant on Kyushu, the southernmost home island of the Japanese archipelago.

(Tokyo radio broadcasts claimed that 63 of the B-29's were shot down or damaged over Kyushu and China.)

Welshmen Battle Way Out Of Jungle

KANDY, Ceylon, Nov. 22 —(CP-Reuter)—Welsh troops of the British 36th Division in North Burma have won a fierce skirmish with the Japanese after they had been cut off fo two days in dense jungle, it was announced today.

From Myitkyina it was reported today that Japanese troops well dug-in near Pinwe station in the so-called railway corridor, succeeded in setting up a road block which cut off the Welshmen from a British eastern counties battalion.

While the counties men were clearing the block the driver of a ration lorry ran the gauntlet with supplies. He overran the Welsh positions and found himself among the Japanese.

The Japanese rushed the lorry and the Welshmen, catching them in the open, killed 56.

Poles Retake Monte Fortino

By LYNN HEINZERLING
Associated Press War Correspondent

ROME, Nov. 22 — (AP)—Polish troops have recaptured Monte Fortino, hill position five miles southeast of Faenza from which they were driven by the Germans several days ago, and have advanced a mile beyond and seized Monte Piano, Allied Headquarters announced today.

Monte Fortino overlooks a wide stretch of flat ground leading to Faenza, a junction point on the Rimini-Bologna highway.

British troops on the right took Castiglione, about 2½ miles from the highway, and pushed ahead for a mile to the Cosina River.

More than 1,600 sorties were flown by the Mediterranean Allied air forces. Fourteen planes were missing.

Allied 5th Army troops beat off further German attempts to drive them from previously-won positions in central Italy. British, American and Indian troops were involved in these local actions.

Reds-Yugoslavs Form Pact

Tito Takes Part In Moscow Talks

LONDON, Nov. 22 (CP-Reuter)—A Russian-Yugoslav pact similar to the Russian-Czecho-Slovak pact is being negotiated in Moscow between Vyacheslav Molotov, Soviet commissar for foreign affairs, and Dr. Ivan Subasic, Yugoslav premier and foreign minister, a good authority said today.

This is regarded as the most important item on the agenda in the talks between the Yugoslav delegation, whose arrival in Moscow was announced yesterday, and the Russian authorities. It can be taken for granted that the Russians will also be informed about the proposed composition of the new joint government, agreed upon by Dr. Subasic and Marshal Tito, and of the regency council to be formed to guarantee legal continuity until a popular vote has decided what form of constitution Yugoslavia will have after the war.

Although nothing definite will be known about the opposition of the cabinet and the regency council until Premier Subasic returns to London, Edward Kardel, vice-president of the National Liberation Committee, is regarded as the most likely choice for the premiership by informed people here.

M. Kardel who is with Dr. Subasic in Moscow, is the young secretary general of the Communist party of Slovenia.

Dr. Subasic and Marshal Tito, in addition to one representative each of the six autonomous countries to form the new Yugoslav federation, are expected to be members of the regency council.

Huns Say Allies Seek Yuletide Victory

Chaos May Come If German Line Cracks Under Terrific Allied Pressure

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

This column preached a sermon yesterday against over - optimism about when the European war will end.

Nazi propagandists are telling their people that the Allies are going all-out for victory by yuletide—and that is true. Germans, although not broken in morale, already have accepted the inevitability of defeat.

The 450-mile German battle-line in Western Europe is stretched as taut as a bow-string—so taut that strands of it are snapping. The Nazis have no way of repairing this damage.

This terrific Allied pressure is growing. Eisenhower says his plan is to increase pressure steadily all along the front until the Germans are crushed. He didn't add what we know to be true—that he has unrevealed striking power up his sleeve. The Nazis can't strengthen their resistance as a whole. They can only increase it in one sector by taking strength from another and this lays the weakened area open to fresh attack.

Can the enemy take it? Thus far he's been fighting with fanaticism, impelled partly by loyalty and partly by fear of being shot in the back by Himmler's picked killers. There's no doubt that, as Eisenhower says, "To get peace, we have got to fight like hell for it." In this connection there's another thought which General (now Field Marshal) Montgomer gave me in Africa during his campaign against Rommel:—

"The German is a good soldier and will fight, although I believe it is true that once you get him down he cracks up."

If that's a correct estimate—and history bears it out—it's up to the Allies to get him down." Two of the most important factors in this task most certainly are:

1. The state of Allied war supplies on the fighting front.

2. Whether the weather is favorable for all-out attacks.

The weather is on the knees of the Gods. The matter of supplies is on the doorstep of the home fronts. Gen. Eisenhower warns that he wants more supplies than he's getting now.

If Eisenhower gets those supplies and if the weather is favorable, I believe it's militarily possible—I say "possible"—for the Allies to achieve victory by Christmas. However that's not a prediction. And the war will run into 1946 if the Allies don't get the breaks."

Industry Taxed Too High

Taxes Take Money Needed For Expansion

TORONTO, Nov. 22 (CP) — Tax measures "of an exceedingly wise nature" are necessary if Canadian industry is to have the finance to equip itself for post-war employment and competition, Hugh Lawson, president of the Canadian Woollen and Knit Goods Manufacturers Association said in a speech prepared for delivery today at the 22nd annual meeting of the Association.

High taxation necessary to finance the war had taken much of the money necessary for replacement and rehabilitation and the industry was "increasingly concerned that because of these high rates we may conclude these war-time operations with insufficient monies available for the purpose." New tax measures should be instituted by the taxing authorities to enable Canadian Industry to enter the post-war field on at least an even footing with other countries.

Mr. Lawson spoke of the difficulties of supplying civilian demand under the handicaps of war production labor shortages and high buying power. As long as these handicaps were present all civilian demand could not be met. At present labor shortages were more acute than at any time during the war, "as a result of which we face shortages in the production or essential civilian goods."

Americans Gain Slowly In Leyte Drive

GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Philippines, Nov. 22 — (AP). — American infantrymen hacked away at Limon's defences today in the face of an evident Japanese intention to hold its positions at almost any cost.

The 32nd Division was subjecting Limon, Japanese stronghold, to steady pressure and enemy installations were being put out of commission one by one.

General MacArthur's communique said "the enemy has committed his 1st Division in a desperate effort" to hold its bastion at Limon and the belief was the Japs were prepared to sacrifice the whole division if need be.

The Americans have occupied all strategic positions in the north except Limon itself. What appeared as an intended Japanese counterattack to retake positions on the north coast of Leyte was frustrated by an American movement south along the highway to Limon.

The 96th Division smashed an isolated Japanese strongpoint west of Dagami, and on the south end of the American line the 7th Division repelled the fourth Jap counter-attack in approximately 10 days.

American heavy bombers are now operating from Leyte bases, the communique disclosed.

MUSICIAN DIES — Norman Wilks, noted Canadian musician and principal of the Toronto Conservatory of Music, died in Toronto General Hospital after three weeks' illness. Mr. Wilks was a Liberal candidate in the 1943 Ontario provincial election, and contested a Federal seat in 1935. He won the Military Cross in the First Great War.

Trucker Faces Drunk Charge

Carman Coones, Smith township truck driver, faced a charge of drunken driving in police court this morning, following an accident on the Lakefield Road on October 18, in which a truck left the highway and was badly damaged in a ditch.

Coones was defended by W. J. Arthur Fair and Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C. prosecuted.

Bernard Page, McClelland Avenue swore that while driving on the Lakefield road he had seen a truck in the ditch and saw Carman Coones lying beside it bleeding from a cut on his head and unconscious. Witness and his companions had brought the driver to the office of Dr. Fraser in Lakefield and on the strength of what the doctor told them removed Coones to the town hall.

Page said that the accused came to when they were taking him out of the car at the town hall and witness said that Coones was not sober. He smelled very strongly of liquor, he declared.

Dr. Alex Fraser told of the truck driver being brought to his place on the night of the accident. Witness said that he had examined Coones in the car and saw that he had a cut on his head which he did not regard as at all serious.

"I satisfied myself that he was not suffering from any concussion but that he was in a state of intoxication," Mr. Fraser said, adding that the man was in no shape to be taken into his office.

Chief Garnet Samis who saw Coones at the town hall after he had been taken there by Page, said that in his opinion the accused was drunk. He smelled very strongly of beer and was swearing a lot as he tried to operate the telephone. Chief Samis said that he knew the accused well and his ordinary behavior was quite different to his actions that night.

Witness said that he saw the cut on the accused's face and suggested a doctor, but that Coones had replied: "To hell with the doctors." However Dr. J. C. Smith was called and treated the accused's injury in the town hall.

Dr. Smith, called as the next witness, said that at first he had associated liquor with the case, but afterward found that the accused had a serious injury on his forehead and was suffering from contusion, although there was no actual concussion. Mr. Smith said that he did not notice any smell of liquor from the accused's breath, and that Coones' actions were likely the result of the contusion. He had seen the accused later that night and found the condition had cleared up and Coones had made such a complete recovery that he was satisfied that liquor had had nothing to do with the man's condition.

Provincial Constable Price Morris said that he saw Coones after 10 o'clock on the night of the accident and that the accused was very obstinate and would not answer any questions. The next day he admitted that he had been driving the truck at the time of the accident. Constable Morris said that he thought the accused had been drinking although at that time he could not say that the man was drunk.

This concluded the crown evidence and the court adjourned for luncheon.

Scouts Honor J. T. Hornsby Prior To Moving

A representative group of scoutmasters, cub leaders and executive officers of the Peterborough Boy Scout Association gathered at Hooper's Parlors to honor John T. Hornsby who for 13 years, 1929 to 1942, was commissioner for the district of Peterborough. After the dinner, prepared by Percy Hooper, a member of the local Association, Barry Ottewell, the president, called on Scouter Henry Nokes of No. 2 St. Luke's group to express to the guests of the evening regrets that they were moving to Ottawa, and assure them that the best wishes of all Peterborough scouts, cubs, leaders and executive officers would go with them.

Scouter Nokes expressed his own feelings of regret and those of his fellow members of the Scouters Club that their old commissioner and friend, John Hornsby, was breaking the final ties that bound him to the city of Peterborough and was taking up residence in Ottawa. He recalled the days when scouting was in its early stages in Peterborough and gave to John Hornsby, the major part of the credit for having given to Peterborough a live, active and flourishing scout movement. On behalf of the local Association he asked him to accept the gift of a brief case as a token of their regard and esteem and thier good wishes for his future health, prosperity and happiness. On behalf of the lady members of the organization, Miss Ruth Murray of No. 13 Mark Street scout group presented Mrs. Hornsby with a bouquet of chrysanthemums assuring her that the good wishes extended to her husband were equally meant for her.

Mr. Hornsby, on behalf of himself and his wife, expressed his deep appreciatoin of all that had been said assuring those present that he never could forget the years he had spent as commissioner. Friends he had made and the memories of many pleasant days spent in helping the various groups in the city to get going and to keep going.

During the evening Ernie Wolff, the present commissioner, presented Long Service Medals to George Houghton of No. 3 St. George's scout group and to Mr. Hornsby, also to Miss Barbara Meiklejohn of No. 1 St. John's scout group a medal for completing a course in Cub Leaders' Training at Gilwell Camp this past summer. A telegram from Frank Irwin, provincial commissioner, was also received expressing to Mr. Hornsby the good wishes of the provincial headquarters. The president requested the past commissioner, Mr. Hornsby, to present a long service medal to the present commissioner, Ernest J. Wolff. Mr. Hornsby spoke in the highest terms of the splendid work he had done as assistant commissioner and congratulated him on the present fine standing of scouting in Peterborough. The remainder of the evening was spent in recalling many days and evenings spent around the camp fire on scout hikes and in the scout rooms of the city.

boys from anywhere, from wherever they might be stationed, providing they wanted to come," he said. "If a boy wants to come to my battalions, nothing should stop him. I've got only one thing in mind — the honor of my country, my province and my people."

Brig. Blais said he was putting his faith "on the NRMA men — the trained men who could be used in the support battalions with a little brushing up here in my own district." He added that his plan was primarily designed to make such trained men available now, rather than having men, yet to be trained, available months from now.

"It's just the way you do it that counts," he said. "The soldier of today needs a special approach. We can't get a boy to come with us if we insult him. If you approach him right and show him where his duty lies, he'll work for you."

Demand Growing In India For Christianity

Addressing the fall missionary rally of the Peterborough Presbytery of the United Church of Canada in St. James' United Church Tuesday night, Rev. A. Russell Graham, who has been for thirty years a missionary to Central India, gave a dynamic and challenging story of his unique work in the Far East.

Rev. F. W. Craik, the pastor, was in the chair and welcomed the large congregation to St. James' and introduced the speaker. Assisting in the opening devotions, Rev. E. W. Rowland, Mark Street, offered prayer, and Rev. Mr. Graham read the scripture lesson from Isaiah 42. Mrs. R. C. Searles presided at the organ throughout, and the choir sang the special anthem, "Rock of Ages," with Mrs. H. F. Doig singing the solo parts. "Love Divine, All Love Excelling" was sung in duet by Mrs. Doig and Mrs. Goldie.

Cooperation Needed

Rev. Mr. Graham spoke of his field in India as "our" work as well as his own, declaring that it would be impossible without cooperation from base to front. His field in Central India has been described as one of the hardest mission fields in the world. The problem there is that the Hindu groups are well organized and bitterly opposed to the Christian Church which they are determined must not take root. The whole atmosphere was one of discouragement. However, the speaker went on to show that in spite of that the Christian work did progress as a result of faith in Christ.

As an example, he cited the town, Agar, where there were only six Christian men and it was thought the work must be closed. Soon, two other men came for baptism. They were beaten shamefully and in fear of their lives and had to appeal to the magistrate for help. Through this a nearby farmer, Kana, came for baptism and through him, his wife too was converted. This couple lost land and crops, yet declared they had something in their hearts that could never be touched. Have you this foundation in your life? Today many people who are nominal Christians are facing a crisis and going to pieces because they lack this foundation.

Popular Demand

Persecution gradually died down and enquiries came in so fast it was impossible for the missionaries to meet them. One native convert asked Mr. Graham if he had any "medicine" for bad habits. It transpired he was an addict to opium from childhood. This habit was interfering with domestic happiness and business. The missionary pointed out the saving power of Jesus and prayed with the man, who later gave public testimony of his release from this sin. From this beginning of six converts at Agar, there are now 450 baptized adults who have organized a new church. One poor outcast in five years became a paying Christian in his church.

In starting his last voyage home Rev. Mr. Graham said that his friend Kara and his wife walked forty-two miles to say good bye and bring them parting gifts. On the busy station platform this Christian native offered prayer for their safe return to Canada and for their family and asked the missionary to tell the Canadian people what the saving power of Christ has meant to the people of India.

Rev. Mr. Pugsley of Norwood offered prayer at the conclusion of the address and Rev. Dr. Semple of George Street United Church pronounced the benediction.

American armies reported gains as they brought increasing pressure against crumbling German positions.

The U.S. 7th and French 1st Armies, operating as the 6th Army Group under command of Lt.-Gen Devers, have freed approximately 1,600 square miles of French soil containing 433 towns and villages in the first week of their offensive Since Nov. 19 the two armies have taken approximately 10,000 prisoners

North of the 6th Army Group, the U.S. 3rd Army merged its holdings inside Germany to a continuous 11-mile front running southeast from near Besch on the Luxembourg border. Lt.-Gen. Patton's men thus solidified their hold on some 25 square miles of enemy soil.

At Metz, Fort Queleu on the southwest surrendered with its garrison of 200 Nazis, but two island pockets and six other forts around that pierced fortress city of France continued to hold out.

The battle inside Germany on the sector east and northeast of Aachen continued. There were indications that the Germans were about to lose Eschweiler. U.S. 1st Army troops fought a house-to-house battle there yesterday while other units closed in toward the stronghold from both the north and south.

A front dispatch said the U.S. 9th Army had rolled forward to within 2½ miles of the Rhine.

The 9th enveloped nine towns in 24 hours in an advance of 2½ miles and was a little more than a mile from the Roer River. There were some signs of a German withdrawal on the 9th's southern flank but enemy resistance on the northern flank was furious.

North of the 9th's sector the British 2nd Army ground slowly ahead in the Geilkenkirchen area where the Germans were putting up a powerful fight.

British troops also chopped deeper into the Thingerman-held sector west of the Maas River in southeastern Holland.

Hockey Player To Serve Jail Sentence

Ronald Horton, described by his counsel as a professional hockey player, was sentenced by Magistrate E. A. Gee in police court this morning to two months' imprisonment in the county jail after he had been convicted of leaving his employment at the Canada Packers without obtaining the necessary permission of Selective Service.

Magistrate Gee said that in view of the fact that the accused had previously been fined for failing to act on a notice to accept employment he had first thought of sending him to the Reformatory for six months. He issued warning that any other persons who were convicted before him of the same offence could expect to go to the Reformatory.

"In a democratic country we do not like being tied down by such regulations," said His Worship, "but in war time we have to abide by them."

Horton was defended by W. J. Arthur Fair while W. F. Huycke, K.C., prosecuted the case.

Didn't Get Permit

L. A. Grant, selective service official, said that on August 19 Horton had been given an order to accept employment at Canada Packers and had also been given the necessary permit. The witness said that Horton had been in his office a number of times between October 11 and 25 and had wanted a labor exit to go to the United States to play hockey.

No notice of separation under the regulation had been given the accused, Grant said, adding that when he asked Horton why he had quit his employment at Canada Packers accused had said that he had just left.

Evidence was given by Ray A. Ballantyne and George A. Barns of Canada Packers that Horton was not at work there between October 11 and 25.

The defence did not call any evidence and Mr. Fair argued that the prosecution had failed to prove its case. He said that Horton was charged with ceasing his employment but that all that had been shown was that he had been an absentee. Defence counsel said that Horton was a professional hockey player and that he desired to play in the United States.

Mr. Huycke said that in view of the fact that the accused had already been fined under the Selective Service regulation a jail sentence might be indicated. "I do not quite agree with my learned friend that the accused is a professional hockey player" said counsel for the prosecution "It may be that he just hopes to be one." He added that Horton having been discharged from the army as physically unfit should be glad to serve his country on the industrial front.

night he spent the night in the open, but Sunday night he reached the lodge of the Eagle Lake Hunt Club and slept there. He also was lucky enough to find a little bread left behind by the members of the hunt club who had just vacated the premises. He ate one slice of toast Sunday night and another on Monday morning, but left the remaining bread when he left, figuring that he could easily find his way out to safety during the day. However, he failed to do so, spent Monday night in the bush and the toast he ate Monday morning was all the food he had until he was found Tuesday night.

News of Nelson's safety was brought to Apsley shortly after the search party that had been combing the woods all day without finding a trace of the missing man had returned to the village for the night. Word had been sent to Provincial Constable Price Morris in Peterborough to enlist the services of more searchers.

Provincial Constable Morris told The Examiner this morning that he had wonderful co-operation early Tuesday evening when he started in to organize a party of 100 searchers to go north this morning to assist in the hunt for Arthur Nelson. The officer got busy on the telephone early in the evening and in an hour's time had promises from the C.G.E. and other firms and from individuals that the required men would be on the job this morning and from Walter Ferguson had obtained the offer of a bus to take some of the searchers north.

Just at that stage news came from Apsley that Nelson had been found and the officer had to get busy again calling off the expedition.

Constable Morris also reports ready assistance from the R.C.A.F. Three planes were sent over the area from Trenton Tuesday and late in the afternoon their pilots reported that they had seen a number of men in the bush but were unable to say whether one was the missing hunter or if all the persons they spotted were members of the search party.

Last evening the commanding officer at Trenton promised to have more planes engage in the hunt today and to send machines over again tonight in the event that Nelson had not been found before then.

the overseas army.

Liberal members meet in provincial caucus groups to-day and the liveliest discussions are expected to be in the Ontario and western province caucuses. They are expected to meet in a full party caucus Thursday after they have before them the correspondence and other documents to be tabled at the brief sitting of the House to-day.

Oppose Procedure.

In the Progressive Conservative group there is some opposition to one point in the line of procedure understood to have been put before other party leaders by Mr. King.

That is the scheduled joint meeting of the Senate and House of Commons at which Gen. McNaughton, not yet a Member of Parliament, would state his position.

It is not yet settled whether objection will be taken to hearing a speech by a minister not in Parliament, but the matter will be settled at another meeting of the Progressive Conservative caucus after all members have arrived in the capital. There was something under a full attendance yesterday but two party executives not in the House, John Bracken, national leader, and C. P. McTague, national chairman, were there.

The statement issued by Mr. Graydon on yesterday's caucus left the way open for such a point to be raised when it said:

"The causus came out strongly against the suggestion of a secret session as the facts sufficient for Parliament to form its own judgment are fully known now."

In Liberal circles the view was expressed that Gen. McNaughton should be heard whether or not the Progressive Conservatives choose to attend the meeting. From the C.C.F. group the opinion was expressed that Parliament should get all the information available and should not stand on precedent.

Meanwhile rumors persisted that further resignations from the cabinet were not yet beyond the range of possibility. The rumors were that there were differences among the ministers on other questions besides conscription for overseas service. The name of Resources Minister Crerar was mentioned as one of the dissenters.

Obituary

MISS MARY C. GREENLEAF

A former resident of Belleville, Miss Mary C. Greenleaf died Tuesday at her residence, 212 London street, after a lingering illness. She was in her 78th year.

Miss Greenleaf was born in Belleville, the daughter of the late Orlando and Anna Greenleaf, and came to live in Peterborough about two years ago. Educatde in Belleville, she was a member of the Tabernacle church there.

She leaves to mourn four sisters, Mrs. Earl Kidd, Peterborough, Mrs. Rev. S. A. Kemp, Havelock, Mrs. Martha Gordon, Vancouver, Mrs. C. Lovell, of New York, and one brother, Harry W. Greenleaf, of Belleville.

The funeral will be Thursday morning at 11 o'clock, from the Comstock Funeral Home, 305 Water street, and burial will be in Belleville cemetery. The funeral will leave Peterborough on the 12.26 noon train for Belleville. Rev. Dr. Jaes Semple, of George Street United church, will conduct the service.

Near Starvation

LONDON, Nov. 22 (CP)—Germany has drained Europe to the starvation point in order to feed her troops and workers on the home front, an Allied economic survey disclosed yesterday.

Meanwhile, German officials admitted reserve food stocks built up from the occupied countries were practically depleted and that Germany will have to face this winter on her own resources.

P.G. Wodehouse Arrested By French Police

LONDON, Nov. 22—(CP-Reuter)—P. G. Wodehouse, famous British humorist and author, and his wife, have been arrested by the French authorities, it was confirmed in London to-day.

Details of the charge were not known here.

It was stated here that the creator of "Jeeves" was arrested in Paris.

Procedure to be followed by the French authorities and questions of extradition and trial, are being considered in consultation with the British Government, it was learned.

The world-renowned author made the five English-language broadcasts from Berlin in 1941. Because of the content of the broadcasts, many said he was collaborating with the Germans.

"The broadcasts were on five phases of my concentration camp experiences and were addressed to my American readers, from whom, while living with 65 other men in the dormitory of a lunatic asylum in Upper Silesia, I received nearly 100 lettars," Mr. Wodehouse said in Paris in October.

"I didn't think for a moment that my talks would be interpreted at home as pro-German propaganda," he told a Reuter correspondent.

The creator of "Bertie Wooster" added these broadcasts were "a great mistake."

Mr. Wodehouse was captured in France in 1940 by the German army as it swept through that country. He was taken to Berlin.

His captors are said to have allowed him to return to Paris before its liberation this year by the Allies.

Larger Fire Hall Recommended To City Council

Enlargement of the Aylmer street fire hall was suggested in a report to the council Monday night by a special committee which estimated the annual cost of maintaining a substation with twenty men in the south end of the city at $32,000.

The report was presented by Alderman Sullivan, chairman, as follows:—

"The Committee, consisting of Chief Gimblett, Alderman Mark and myself, accompanied by Engineer Parsons and Alderman Swanston, appointed by the Council to report on the advisability of building a Fire Hall in the south end of the City, beg leave to report—

Suggested Locations

(1) South east corner of Lansdowne and Park streets, (Exhibition Grounds property), considered most desirable. A substation at this point would be removed a reasonable distance from any residence and land would, I believe, be available for a lot 100 feet square.

(2) North east corner Princess and Park streets — on property of King Edward School grounds. This is the Committee's second choice.

(3) North east corner Prince and Park streets. This lot is large enough but is, in the opinion of the Committee, too close to the residential section and objection would undoubtedly be made by property owners near that property.

Chief Gimblett recommends the erection of a Fire Hall in the section of the City as above described. He advises:

(1) That twenty men would be required in order to efficiently operate this station.

(2) That a pumper and ladder truck would be required.

Your Committee, with the exception of Fire Chief Gimblett, recommends as follows: That steps be taken to enlarge the present Fire Hall, making it a Central Station to serve the entire City. The dimensions of our Fire Hall are 40' by 80'.

Reasons For Advice

Here are the reasons for this recommendation:

(1) Geographically our Fire Hall is as centrally located as it is practical to have it. The area of the City is approximately seven square miles.

(2) A conservative estimate of the cost of maintaining 20 men at a substation would be approximately $32,000 a year. To this must be added a capital expenditure in land for location, construction of a new fire station, purchase of pumper and ladder truck.

I grant it is necessary that we add to the number of firemen at the Central Station, after first providing for the members of the Department now serving in His Majesty's Forces. Your Committee believes the adding of additional men to the Central Station would still result in a saving to the taxpayers as compared to the manning of a substation.

(3) With high powered pumpers with a speed of 35 to 45 miles an hour, any section of the City can now be reached in a much shorter time than with the machines in use twenty to twenty-five years ago.

I might at this time refer to the maximum speed limit of 25 miles in our Fire Department responding to alarms. This is set out in Article 43 By-law 2765, which by-law was passed on March 5, 1928. The members of the Council may think well of giving some thought to increasing this speed limit to say 35 miles an hour.

In making the above recommendations your Committee is fully cognizant of the responsibility of our Council in protecting the lives and property of our citizens."

Hun Money Expert Reaches Buenos Aires

NEW YORK, Nov. 22 — (AP) — The Moscow radio declared today in a broadcast reported by the Federal Communications Commission that a German financial expert identified as a George Mainz, has arrived in Buenos Aires from Germany via Spain "to act as advisor to Cesar Ameghino, Argentine Minister of Finance."

Quoting the Montevideo newspaper Espeja Diario, the Moscow broadcast said Mainz was "one of the principal agents transferring Nazi funds to Argentina via Spain."

The Montevideo newspaper also published "a list of Hitlerites who have arrived in Argentina to direct the mining industry and other branches of Argentine economic and industrial life," the Russian broadcast said.

Counties Council Criticizes Road Expenditure Records

COBOURG, Nov. 22 —(ENS)—Inability to secure data on how much was spent in each municipality in road expenditures was the subject of comment Tuesday at the session of Northumberland and Durham Counties Council. A. S. Miller, counties road superintendent, pointed out that the Department of Highways had inaugurated a system of bookkeeping in the road office which had to be used and that this system did not permit analysis of road expenditures on a municipality basis. Road expenditure also was criticized by Reeve F. Barnard of South Monaghan who asked if it were a case of having to come down to Cobourg and "pull somebody's leg to get anything done on the roads."

The report of Road Superintendent Miller, for the period up to November 1 was as follows:

Total expenditure, $79,358.89; one and one-half of mulch in Murray township, $4,440; 12,000 cubic yards of crushed gravel, $14,400; pitching, digging and grading in Darlington and Cartwright townships, $2,600; calcium chloride, $9,000; snow removal and sanding, $5,500; surface treatment, $2,200; patching pavements, $1,800; brushing, cutting, spraying weeds $6,800; maintenance, $8600; new snow fences $2,200; removing old fences, $1,400; rebates to towns and villages, $10,000; outstanding accounts $1,000. Mr. Miller estimated a surplus of from $5,000 to $6,000.

Reeve C. R. Carveth of Newcastle asked the road superintendent what the internment camp at Bowmanville had paid for snow removal by the counties. Mr. Miller said that he did not know offhand but the plow was used in keeping the few miles around the camp clear of snow. Terms of the contract with the government were payment to the counties of $1.40 an hour and wages of two men for standby time and $4 an hour when in use. Nearby communities could use the plow when it was not needed by the internment camp.

Reeve H. Woodley of Hope township asked how one could tell how much had been spent on county roads in each township and was informed in reply that the bookkeeping system which the Department of Highways had ordered installed, prevented it being known per townships. He suggested that their own road superintendent might be able to tell.

"You mean you can't give an estimate?" asked Deputy-Reeve A. Wartman of Percy township.

"I can give you the figures for maintenance and snow removal but not in other work," replied Mr. Miller.

No Gravel Crusher

Discussion then swung into crushing gravel. Mr. Miller said that it had cost 65 cents a yard. Reeve W. Cole of Hamilton township said that their old crusher had done it for 50 cents a yard in the township but Mr. Miller in reply pointed out that to get it crushed fine enough for county roads it would cost more than 50 cents a yard.

"What about the money that was to be spent on a crusher. It came up at the last session and it had been left to the Road Commission. The $14,000 that had been spent on crushing gravel would have paid a large part of buying a new crusher," commented Reeve Robert Love of Cobourg.

Mr. Miller recalled that at the last session, the information that a crusher was available came just before the session. It was later found on investigation that it was a used one and the Department of Highways would not subsidize purchase of used road equipment. One which was large enough to do the county gravel crushing could not be purchased for $20,000. One had been lined up for $25,000 but it had not materialized.

Reeve W. R. Pickell of Darlington said that when the matter was brought up at the June session the crushing contracts for the year had already been let.

"I thought that it was just a case of getting permission from the counties council and then the Road Commission would go ahead and buy a crusher," declared Reeve Love.

The Road Commission asked for $25,000 to spend on a crusher but got only $20,000, the Road Superintendent reminded Reeve Love.

"Then we lost out by $5,000 and spent $14,000 this year for crushed gravel," replied the Reeve of Cobourg.

Reeve Bert Reid of Clarke township, said that in the first place there would be the $25,000 tied up in a crusher. The $14,000 includes labor and cost of gravel and with a crusher there would still be the cost of gravel and labor, so that it was not a straight case of using $14,000 for purpose of comparison. Mr. Miller said that he believed the counties could crush their own gravel at 35 cents a yard as compared with 65 cents by having it crushed by a private concern. The saving would pay for a crusher. Wear and tear on the equipment

Vital Clauses Lacking In Aviation Plan

By C. R. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—(CP). —International control of civil aviation goes into open debate here this afternoon when delegates from 54 countries represented at the air conference discuss in plenary session the partial draft convention.

But the draft, released Monday night, lacks the most important clauses, those dealing with the powers an international air administration should have to control competition for world flying routes and regulate frequencies.

Nor does the draft deal with the "freedoms" of the air in respect to the extent and detail of business that air operators of one state may handle in states to which and over which it flies. These are the points which have held the drafting committee, made up of three each from the Canadian, British and American delegations, in close and reportedly heated debate since a week ago Sunday.

The partial draft leaves blank the clauses dealing with those and kindred subjects and goes little beyond proposing an international air administration and its detailed make-up, and covering the technical matters associated with international flying.

The partial draft does declare against uneconomic wastefulness created by unreasonable competition and aims at safeguarding the rights of all countries to participate in international aviation.

But it does not specify what authority would decide when competition is uneconomic or "unreasonble" and fails to meet the Canadian and British proposals. These would define the decrees of freedom which would be granted air line operators of one state to operate in others, and provide an international authority to allocate routes and frequencies.

The United States, the country best prepared to enter at once into world commercial flying and expand it into an unlimited degree, is standing firm, through its delegation leaders, Adolph Berle, against international control which would prevent America taking full advantage of that preparedness.

There have been reports about the hotel conference headquarters that President Roosevelt might instruct Mr. Berle to be less unyielding in his stand and seek to make a compromise.

Husbands think about it !

Make no mistake—husbands often think about coffee. They, too, remember the lesson that coffee rationing proved to be so true:

To make sure of full satisfaction in every cup, you must use really good coffee.

To be absolutely sure of really good coffee, give your husband Maxwell House. It's a truly wonderful blend—full of the fragrant flavor and fine body that men look for in coffee. And here's why:

1. Maxwell House is blended from rare, extra-flavor coffees—the finest the world produces.

2. This finer blend is roasted by a remarkable process that roasts every single bean evenly all through.

Maxwell House is packed in a Wartime Bag, in an All Purpose Grind and at less cost to you.

20 Per Cent Deer Shot Wounded, Not Killed

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 22 — (CP). — The general run of deer hunters are not hard fellows to get along with, even under abnormal weather conditions, but a couple of days tramping through the slushy bushes of Western Elgin County convinced many residents and transient sportsmen that changes should be made in the rules governing the first open deer season in Aldborough and Dunwick Townships.

Approximately 200 hunters, 60 per cent of them residents of Elgin County, found deer reasonably plentiful in the first two days of the hunt which opened Monday, and by tonight reports showed that over 50 hunters can look forward to venison dinners.

It wasn't the near-blizzard weather that disturbed the hunters, but the restrictions on the use of dogs and the rule calling for shotguns only came up for considerable discussion.

Sportsmen said today that a single charge of buckshot is not nearly sufficient to stop a deer, and in many cases the animals had to be hit six to eight times before they were killed. Some hunters estimated that as high as 20 per cent of the deer shot were only wounded and escaped into the bush, where many may die.

10 Skating Rinks Winter Scheme

Operation of ten public skating rinks is being planned by the parks committee this winter, Alderman Curtis, chairman, informed the council Monday, "providing our program is adopted at the next meeting." He was instructed in a motion by Alderman Dutton seconded by Alderman Swanston, to call a meeting of all persons interested in outdoor public hockey rinks to discuss this suggestion as conveyed by the council from the Peterborough Hockey Club by Alderman Glover.

"We've already overrun our appropriation," Alderman Curtis said, but it was felt that possibly some of the service clubs and others wishing to promote athletic sports for the teenage young people, and especially the boys, might be willing to make some financial contribution to these proposed hockey rinks.

Alderman Glover said the parks committee had already intimated that it was planning hockey rinks in Ashburnham and King Edward Park.

"Appreciation of all the parks committee has been doing and intends to do was expressed at the annual meeting of the Hockey Club," Alderman Glover said. "With a rink for hockey in the south end and another in Ashburnham, it was felt that perhaps the parks committee could also provide similar rinks in the north and west ends, and a central rink at Brock and Aylmer streets, where intersectional games could be played. That arrangement would meet all the wants of the young people in every section of the city.

Appoint Coaches.

The idea is to appoint two of the senior hockey players as coaches for each district rink, and it was thought that service clubs might sponsor the various group teams. If it is not possible to build additional hockey rinks in the west and north ends, probably the committee might be able to enlarge the skating rinks more nearly to the size required for hockey with special time from 6 to 8 o'clock in the evening for practices and games.

Alderman Curtis said he agreed that some additional rinks should be provided only for hockey. In recent winters hockey has been permitted at the skating rinks only at certain hours. "The parks committee is meeting within the next week, and we intended to go into this question then."

Alderman Dutton said he was in favor of "placing all the resources we can at the disposal of the young people for the encouragement of good clean sport.

Alderman Curtis told the council that one open air rink costs around $300 for the winter. Three would involve about $1,000.

Alderman Dutton said he considered it would be money well spent and invested in the boys of today who are without the hockey

British Troops Take Maasbree

By NED NORDNESS
Associated Press War Correspondent

WITH BRITISH TROOPS, Nov. 22 — (AP). — British 2nd Army troops captured Maasbree, 4½ miles west of the Dutch border city of Venlo, to-day, edging closer to the gateway to Germany's Ruhr.

American and British troops north-east of the German city of Geilenkirchen, 12 miles north of Aachen, slowly were eliminating the Germans fighting in Siegfried Line pill-boxes.

"This is our first encounter with German pill-boxes," a British Army spokesman said, "but we shall continue our advance. Pill-boxes are slowing but not stopping us."

The Council Goes Outside Its Sphere Of Influence

We are sorry that the City Council voted on a resolution which had already been passed by the Council of the city of Chatham, urging the Prime Minister to send drafted troops overseas. We are sorry because the Peterborough Council has a reputation for attending to affairs within its own sphere of influence, and leaving politics out of city matters. By its action in voting on the Chatham resolution it has stepped outside its sphere of influence, and has lost a certain amount of prestige by its action.

If the advice of Alderman Glover and Alderman Sullivan had been followed, the Council would have dismissed this matter as not coming within its jurisdiction. But the argument was put forward that the conscription issue was not a political question, but was above politics; just how far it is above politics time alone will tell, but there are several clear indications at present that it is being conducted on both sides with strong political intention. By voting on the Chatham resolution the Peterborough Council has put itself in the ranks of the many protesting and resolution-passing bodies which have no official standing of any kind, and which are entering the present conscription dispute as pressure groups. Every Alderman is at liberty to express his opinions freely and to urge conscription upon the Government by any means in his power as an individual, but the Peterborough City Council is itself a branch of government, and it has no right whatever to express an opinion on the policy of another branch of government, providing that branch is dealing with a matter which comes wholly within its own jurisdiction.

The custom of urging policies of every kind upon the national government by means of pressure groups is one which has gained a hold in the United States, and we do ill to copy it. This city is represented in Parliament by a competent member who may be relied upon to do his duty; he was properly elected by the citizens to speak for Peterborough; why not allow him to do so? The members of the Council have no right to place the Corporation on record in a matter of purely Federal influence, and their action in doing so is as unjustified as would be the action of the Dominion Parliament if it expressed itself upon a matter which was the Council's own concern. We believe that the Aldermen who supported this action were moved by the best of intentions, but that does not change the fact that they acted improperly, and have cost the Council something in reputation by doing so.

How Reliable Are Polls?

The many 'polls' which undertake to weigh public opinion have been increasing both in accuracy and popularity during the past two or three years and a superficial glance seems to place the recent presidential election in the U.S. in their list of good performances. They predicted that the election would be a very close one by popular vote, and their prediction of the difference between the candidates was remarkably accurate.

But even the best of them, the Gallup Poll, was far out in matters of detail. Dr. Gallup asks for a margin of four per cent. in his predictions. The day before the election he put himself on record thus: 18 states with 165 electoral votes were for Roosevelt; 10 states with 85 electoral votes were for Dewey; and 20 states with 281 electoral votes were doubtful, but were thought to lean one way or the other. But a look at the final results shows that Dr. Gallup consistently overestimated Mr. Dewey's vote, and with equal consistency underestimated the Roosevelt vote.

In the 18 states which Dr. Gallup conceded to Roosevelt he underestimated the vote in 12, was correct in one, and overestimated Roosevelt in five. In the 10 states which he gave to Mr. Dewey he overestimated his vote in 9 and underestimated it in one. In North Dakota he allowed Dewey 62 per cent. and he got 55 per cent.; in Michigan he gave Dewey 54 per cent. but the state went for Roosevelt by a little better than 50 per cent.

Of the doubtful states Dr. Gallup gave eleven of them a bias toward Roosevelt, eight a bias toward Dewey, and one unpredictable. But Roosevelt got all of them except Ohio and Maine. Roosevelt got all the states the poll gave him, one from the list allotted to Dewey, and 18 of those which were in doubt, including seven of the nine which were supposed to lean toward Dewey.

In most of these cases Dr. Gallup was within his 4 per cent. margin of error. He underestimated the Roosevelt vote by 4 per cent. in ten states, and was beyond that margin in seven states. The Roosevelt percentage was underestimated in 34 of the 48 states, and Dewey was underestimated in eight states, though never by more than two per cent. Upon the whole it was an interesting performance, and broadly accurate, though often far astray in detail.

Is Scotland In Decline?

There are great numbers of Scotsmen in Canada, and even more who are of Scots descent. They will be interested, and perhaps alarmed, to hear that a committee on postwar housing in Great Britain recently reported that "the Scots are a dying race, at least in Scotland"; the birthrate is declining rapidly, and more and more Scots are leaving the country. The result is a great decline in population.

The Scots have always been great colonists and travellers. They are naturally adventurous, and the extreme hardness of their own land drives them abroad to look for opportunities. For whatever may be said of its beauty, Scotland is a hard land to live in, and the proud poverty of the Scottish peasant has its bitter and its sordid aspect.

Have so many Scots gone abroad that they are in danger of dying out at home, and becoming a minority in their own land? We doubt it, for the climate of Scotland will not permit such a condition. Bernard Shaw has said that an Englishment who lives in Dublin for five years will be more an Irishman than a native Hibernian who has lived all his life in England; the climate will instill Irishism into him. We think that the same may be said of Scotland. A man who lives there for a few years will find the ruggedness, the solemnity and—it must be said—something of the hardness and penuriousness of the landscape entering into his soul. If he goes to the Highlands he will grow proud, metaphysical and passionate, as the Highlanders are: if he goes to the Lowlands he will become jolly, hospitable and witty as the Lowlanders are (for it is a slander to say that the Scotch are incapable of jokes and fun). We think that there will always be Scotsmen, for their country made them, and it will make more of them, however unpromising the material may be. And how would the world be colonized, and what should we do for engineers, if there were no more Scotsmen?

NOTE AND COMMENT

The city of Brantford boasts that it had its last case of diphtheria on November 19, 1930. That is really a record to be proud of, and one which every Canadian city could equal if every child had its three toxoid treatments at the proper time.

Mrs. Fahrni, a C.C.F. speaker in British Columbia, says that Canada could assimilate its Japanese population by intermarriage. Well, they are very cheap to feed: We suggest that Mrs. Fahrni set an example.

From its ivory tower, the Windsor Star issues a bull on child rearing:

"Of course the loud play of the little ones is sometimes wearing on the nerves. The annoyance, however, is usually due to the fact that we older folk have lost our touch with childhood. A good remedy is to unbend a bit and do some romping with the youngsters. The yelling and stamping would not bother us at all if we were contributing to it rather than trying to remain aloof and sedate. And we would all probably be a little better for having climbed down, for a time, off our high horse of dignity".

This is obviously written by a bachelor, at ease in Zion. We suggest that he allow a forty-pound infant to bounce up and down on his stomach, while another uses his face as a substitute for plasticine. It won't be his dignity or his nerves, but his poor tortured flesh which will suffer.

Mixed Bag For Christmas Gifts

COLLECTED POEMS, by E. J. Pratt (Macmillan.) If Canadian literature may be compared to a garden it is only fair to say that much of it is filled with non-flowering grasses, bachelor's button, forget-me-not and petunias which do not quite know whether they are mauve or pink; but in this undernourished welter there grows a fine rosetree, well fertilized with seaweed at its roots, and that is the poetry of E. J. Pratt. A poet who is masculine, meliorist, eloquent and comprehensible is a rarity in these days, but Mr. Pratt has all these qualities and this collected edition of his poems is an important book added to the small shelf of first-rate Canadian writing. Because the work contained in it has all appeared before I shall not repeat what I have said about it in this column, but I will say this: if you want poetry of a high order, which is also deeply Canadian, here is your book; if you want to send a book abroad which will give a friend in Britain or one of the Dominions a real taste of Canada, here is your book; if you want poetry which ranks with the best that is being written in our language anywhere today, here is your book. If you think that this sounds like unqualified enthusiasm, you are quite right; that is what it is. Any academic critic could find faults enough in Pratt's book to fill this column, but there is not another man in Canada who could equal its excellence. That is what really matters.

ON LIVING IN A REVOLUTION, by Julian Huxley (Harper). Most of us look at our time through political spectacles, but Julian Huxley wears biological spectacles, and this makes his view of contemporary affairs interestingly different. Mankind, in his opinion, has come to one of his great moments, when he must accommodate himself to a rapidly changing environment or perish. In these days of new and efficient instruments of destruction guided by old and inefficient brains, it is not hard for us to see what he means. These essays present several facets of the problem concisely, and sometimes with wit. Two or three of the essays are not concerned with this profound discussion and, perversely, I liked them best of all. The memoir of Dr. Spooner, the discussion of the birds and the inhabitants of the island of St. Kilda, and the discussion of the habits of rats in wartime are all first-rate. The book, though serious, is anything but dull, and the writer has a notable talent for avoiding extreme views on topics which drive most of us violently to Right or Left.

NONE BUT A MULE, by Barbara Woollcott (Macmillan). The late Alexander Woollcott had four nieces, none of whom had anything to recommend her to public attention but a relationship to a man of wit and some cultivation. But one of them has written a book about herself and her sisters which shows that she thinks her family fascinating, and is sure the public will share her enthusiasm. For myself, I was unable to do so. Almost anybody's childhood is interesting to hear about, but most stories of childhood are repetitious; everyone plays detective, makes indiscreet remarks at table and has a pet dog; to hear these things mentioned in conversation may be charming, but to pay $3.25 to be made privy to the secrets of the young Woollcotts is quite another thing. Nor has this writer much power to make her subject attractive; she and her sisters appear to have been rowdy little girls, but not rowdy enough to be arresting; they had imagination, but it was of tinsel quality; they swore, but not with virtuosity; they were silly about young men, but not amusingly or passionately. In fact, they are very thin material for a book, and this is a very thin book, written by an author who has not her uncle's knack of making thin books worth the price.

THE ROAD TO SERFDOM, by Friedrich A. Hayek (Chicago University Press). The author of this important little book is an eminent Austrian economist who has been a member of the faculty of the London School of Economics since 1931. He saw the rise of Nazism at close quarters and he saw how the freedom of the German people was taken from them, bit by bit, until they were powerless. It is his opinion that Great Britain and the United States are headed in the same direction and that our advances toward collectivism are undermining our democracy. Like many another, Dr. Hayek sees in 'social planning' as it is understood today, a net in which all political and economic freedom is restricted—a tyranny which reduces most of us to ciphers in the body politic 'for our own good.' This is a book which will receive the bitterest hatred of many people who consider themselves 'progressive, but they will not find it an easy book to discount. Hayek cannot be confuted in his own field of economics, and as he has seen totalitarianism arise in Europe his illustrations and comparisons have great cogency. The book is not a defence or plea for the status quo but it is a warning against planning which is tyranny, and progress which is merely progress toward a servile state.

THE CHURCH LOOKS FORWARD, by Dr. William Temple (Macmillan). This is the last work of the late Archbishop of Canterbury, and it comprises some of his chief sermons and speeches during the time that he held that office. Thorough admiration of the book will be possible only to those who are able to accept all the Archbishop's dogmatic assertions, for in spite of his eminence as a scholar there were many matters, primarily religious, upon which he did not admit the existence of any possible doubt whatever. This is to be expected in an Archbishop, but it was also characteristic of Dr Temple himself; with him, scholarship was a mechanism for the defence of his beliefs. His dogmatism in matters of spiritual belief mingles strangely with his 'advanced' political doctrines; the late Archbishop was a socialist and in a limited sense a fascist for the Kingdom of God's sake; he possessed in high measure the desire to boss people for their own good. But although his book provokes objection and controversy in every line it reveals him as a humane and within bounds a tolerant man, determined to use his great position for the betterment of mankind, as he saw it.

A POOR EXCUSE

Poor sermons may furnish the excuse for many (who do not go to church), but a poor one is better than none at all. There are many atractions in this modern age that lure folk away from worship. This is one of the problems of the modern church, and the cause may prove to be more closely identified with the pew than with the pulpit.—Guelph Mercury.

HELL'S ANGELS!

Father On The School Board

WHEN Father was elected a trustee of the Tucson public schools he was terribly proud.

"Here I am, an ignoramus," he boasted, "and I'm on the School Board".

"You stop talking like that", Mother ordered. "In the first place, you're not an ignoramus. In the second place, it's a reflection on me, that I'd marry an ignoramus. You're a very well-educated man'".

"I am?"

"You certainly are. You've read and you've studied, and you've got more sense than lots of people with college degrees".

Father also had a great deal of tact and, more than tact, he had that quality—so rare—of not only liking people himself but of making people like one another. He was a great smoother-outer. It was for this reason he was asked to run for the Board, for Tucson at that time was torn in two about its schools. Students had gone on strike, a superintendent had resigned, and so much bitterness had arisen that a bond issue for some desperately needed new schools had been defeated, the first and only time school bonds were ever defeated in Tucson.

Because of this bad situation, a group of citizens came to Father and told him it was his duty to announce his candidacy for the Board, that he was just the man to pour oil on the troubled waters. Father agreed to do it.

Mother said, "There you go, attending to other people's business", but Father replied, "Educating children is the most important thing in the world and is everyone's business". Continued Father, "The better schools Tucson has, the better town it will be. Why shouldn't I help to make them better?"

Father ran and was elected....

Father was on the School Board for 15 years and loved it. It made up to him for his own lack of education about which he was so sensitive. As is the case with any trustee he was often called upon to make speeches to the children, and he especially like to do this in the old part of town where he used to live. He had a good eye for resemblances and as he'd look over a roomful of children he'd call out, "That one, in the third seat, that's a Pacheco. There's a Carillo just behind him. And you can't fool me about that little girl in the last row; she's a Mendoza"....

Father then had a pat little speech about the advantages of getting an education, and how much he'd been handicapped by being able to go only to the fourth grade.

Once a Spanish friend of his — one of the Pachecos, I think—stopped him on the street. "Amigo", he said, "you must stop these talks of yours to the children".

"Why?" demanded Father.

"My son, he now wants to leave school. He says why should he keep on studying? You went only to the fourth grade and you are on the School Board and the big man around town".

After that Father changed his talk a little. He said he had gone only to the fourth grade and since then he's been studying by himself.

"You are getting education the easy way", Father told them, "with teachers to help you. I had to get it the hard way studying all by myself"....

It was a long way from that one-room schoolhouse on Scott and Congress Street and August Brichta with his score of pupils. Now there were hundreds of teachers, thousands of pupils, and fine schoolhouses all over the city.

"It makes a man feel mighty proud", Father told us, "to have had anything to do with it".—Reprinted by permission from "Ridin' the Rainbow — Father's Life in Tucson", by Rosemary Taylor.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

PROPHECY FROM DANIEL

Sir,—I see that the Brantford Expositor has challenged you to produce a prophecy that has been fulfilled. I thought maybe you would be interested in this one from the 11th chapter of Daniel, in the Old Testament beginning at the 18th verse; that may be taking place at the present time.

If it follows through, the war may last for some time yet. Russia may join Germany, then the war will move into Egypt where the heaviest battles will take place and when Hitler is finally in a real bad position he will set out to destroy as he has said he will.—Yours truly,

ROBERT THOMPSON.

17 Amelia Street, Paris, Ont., Nov. 15, 1944.

11th Chapter of Daniel:

18. After this shall he turn his face unto the isle, and shall take many; but a prince for his own behalf shall cause the reproach offered by him to cease; without his own reproach he shall cause it to turn upon him.

The Kaiser, on his last offensive, headed through France towards Britain, but was defeated.

20. Then shall stand up in his estate a raiser of taxes in the glory of the kingdom: but within few days he shall be destroyed, neither in anger, nor in battle.

Then Hindenburg took charge and died a natural death.

21. And in his estate shall stand up a vile person, to whom they shall not give the honour of the kingdom: but he shall come in peaceably, and obtain the kingdom of flatteries.

Hitler by flattering the German people into thinking they were a super race and should rule the world, took charge.

23. And after the league made with him he shall work deceitfully: for he shall come up, and shall become strong with a small people.

He deceived all whom he made pacts with, and built his war machine.

24. He shall enter peaceably even upon the fattest places of the province; and he shall do that which his fathers have not done, nor his father's fathers; he shall scatter among them the prey, and spoil, and riches: yea and he shall forecast his devices against the strong holds, even for a time.

He took Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, Sudetenland France without fighting. He divided France with Italy, Poland with Russia, gave Romania, Hungary and other countries land and materials to join him.

25. And he shall stir up his power and his courage against the king of the south with a great army; and the king of the south shall be stirred up to battle with a very great and mighty army; but he shall not stand: for they shall forecast devices against him.

He attacked Russia, and Russia has returned the attack. It would be well to watch what happens now. While Russia is a northern country it also extends to the south much farther than Germany.

University Women

The Board of Education of Kingston, Ont., recently refused to allow the University Women's Club of that city the use of a school building on Saturday mornings "for a story, music and games hour for children four to seven years old." The refusal was legitimate enough, being based on a regulation of the Board that school premises are not to be used by outsiders on Saturdays. But we are fascinated by some of the discussion which preceded the decision. Trustee Elmer Cogswell said he was afraid that the story hour might be used for inculcating in the children's minds ideas that were not advantageous to the democractic way of life, and added that "a lot of sin can be covered up in the words 'University Club'."

The theory that university women's clubs are sinful, and are likely to mislead children into ways that are not advantageous to democracy, is new to us. That there is a certain distrust, in some quarters, of persons possessing university degrees had come to our attention, chiefly through the columns of the Toronto Telegram. But we had not supposed that anybody thought them likely to lead astray young Canadians of four to seven years of age. The idea is alarming. Persons with degrees are rather favoured by our educational system for the instruction of children of slightly maturer years, and it may be necessary to start a movement for the expulsion of all university-trained persons from the teaching profession, and the substitution of people like Trustee Elmer Cogswell who can be relied upon to teach only the pure word of the democratic faith, including presumably the doctrine that the less a person knows the better fitted he is to teach democracy. — Toronto Saturday Night.

Enter not into the path of the wicked, and go not in the way of evil men.... The way of the wicked is as darkness: they know not at what they stumble....

Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life.... Let thine eyes look right on, and let thine eyelids look straight before thee. (Prov. 4: 14, 18, 23, 25.).

Be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour: whom resist stedfast in the faith, knowing that the same afflictions are accomplished in your brethren that are in the world. (I Pet. 5: 8, 9.)

Ye therefore, beloved, seeing ye know these things before, beware lest ye also, being led away with the error of the wicked, fall from your own stedfastness. (II Pet. 3: 17.)

Contemporaries

END THIS CLAPTRAP

When pacifism appears under the cloak of religion, it is particularly difficult to deal with. In London, Ont., for instance, Dr. E. Stanley Jones is preaching a doctrine of "Charity" for the Germans after we have won. He claims that he is asking for the "Christian" way of settling the grave problems that will face the world after the war.

Let no one be misled by this religious camouflage. This man is dangerous and should be silenced. He oversteps the bounds of speech permitted by considerations of security.

There is nothing "Christian" in proposing that the Huns be put back in a position to carry out their campaign of aggression against helpless countries, to reinstitute their obnoxious campaign of slaughter based on the vile theory of racial superiority, to try once again to wipe out all religion and substitute therefor a doctrine of worship of force.

Let us have no more of this claptrap. Let the good people of London tell this preacher that he and his delusive gospel are not wanted in their community.—Windsor Daily Star.

WRENS OF DOVER

Shell-fire and flying-bomb attacks on Dover turned what was previously a dangerous job for the Wrens of the Dover Command into one of the most hazardous tasks of the war.

I learned their story in a naval machine shop in the forefront of "Hell-fire Corner." The shop was crammed with racks of live torpedoes. The "Torpedo Wrens," as the girls whose job it is to overhaul the Navy's torpedoes are known, were working as usual, testing the torpedoes, cleaning and greasing them, and loading them by crane on to waiting trucks. This vital work never stopped, even during the fiercest bombardment of the area.

A single shell-splinter, I was told by an R.N. officer, would have sufficient to have sent "the whole works sky-high." But the Wrens never faltered. "They were magnificent," said the officer. They refused to take cover, except on one occasion when they were ordered to do so, and then they returned to work within 10 minutes.—Leeds Yorkshire Post.

There Are Other 'Zombies'

The term "zombie" is one of contempt now widely applied to young men of military age and the proper physical qualifications who decline to bear their share of national responsibilities in time of war by volunteering for general military service.

How many of the older people of both sexes who ridicule and censure these "zombies" can themselves say that they are doing all they possibly can to fight and win the war? How many refrain from presenting themselves at blood clinics to save the lives of the men overseas when it is quite within their power to do so? How many of them are by no means above cheating on their food or gasoline rations when both are short because of the pressing needs overseas? How many of them do not object to chiselling a bit on prices in disregard of the ceilings which have been established and held so far that Canada may be properly mobilized for the winning of the war?

How many of these civilians are ready to perjure themselves in order to secure tires to which they are not entitled and which remain in short supply because of overseas demands?—Brockville Recorder and Times.

No Easy Job To Agree On Aviation Rules

By B. T. RICHARDSON

CHICAGO: The first phase of the United Nations' civil aviation conference was sufficient for sober warning that the task of securing agreement among a majority of nations of the world on measures of future co-operation will not be easy. Yet at this late day in history, when the intangibles of public opinion in many countries include a vase increase of thinking about the world relations, a measure of success is within the grasp of men of goodwill. As Mr. Berle, the conference chairman, said at a press conference, there is here plainly a good deal of goodwill.

The crux of this conference, as in so many other international conferences in the future, must be the position of the United States. As outlined by Mr. Berle, the United States is seeking no more than a very limited international agreement at the present time. Its proposals have been much weaker than one might have expected in view of both the internationalist sentiments which command a wide hearing in the United States and the economic interests of this country.

Commercial aviation around the world will earn profit or loss in accordance with world prosperity. If U.S. air operators fly back and forth on world airways, they will need customers who can buy tickets with American funds. In a trading world there will be plenty of air business. So aviation policy is only part of larger policies of world relations.

The American proposals should properly be regarded as the judgment of what is feasible and desirable at present for getting ratified by the U.S. Congress. That is the whole case for a limited American position, assuming that the concept of completely catch-as-catch-can competition is repugnant to majority American opinion, as it probably is. This is the reason why observers are anxious to reappraise the American position in the light of November 7 election results.

The American press, at least as far as it is reflected in the Chicago newspapers, started off by assuming that the British Dominions represented a single bloc supporting the United Kingdom viewpoint. This mistake was rectified by conference action to point out to reporters that three distinct views had been expressed among the British nations— the British Government White Paper, the Canadian draft convention, and the Anzac proposal for international ownership.

The Canadian plan, as it struck many American writers, offered middle ground on which to seek an adjustment between American and British views. In any case, it became noticeable that the press was talking about "the Canadian plan" that it was a compromise between two extremes of free enterprise and fairly tight regulation.

At the same time, Australia and New Zealand, which had prior consultations on aviation policy, found no converts to their No. 1 proposal, which was international ownership, and no scope at Chicago for arguing the alternative, which was British-bloc operations. Their position was greatly weakened through not having compromises to offer on their No. 1 proposal.

Strongly nationalistic, the Latin-American nations soon found an area of agreement in first demanding that there be no sacrifice of sovereignty and, secondly, in opposing the American proposal for a council dominated by the big Powers. They therefore fell back on the extreme position of asking that all powers be regarded as equal which, of course, is far from reality and would require considerable compromise to become both acceptable and workable.

Absence of Russia, which was understood to have agreed to come, left Russian policy on international aviation a complete enigma. It was possible, as some sources suggested, the Russians had no time or interest to devote to aviation outside Russia at present and might not have for some years. Whatever world pattern of aviation emerges at Chicago, it will have to depend on routes which avoid Russian air.

The position of European nations centred on two issues: Interest in general principles which would be generally acceptable, and interest in how long the "interim" period will be between the end of war and the full-scale operation of international services. The Americans suggested not more than three years as the interim period. Many European nations, like France, Belgium, the Netherlands, and Poland hope to establish air services as soon as possible. Most of them are interested in one or several international routes. They want to be able to take their places later.

Choice of Chicago as the scene of an important international conference may have interesting reactions in American politics. The aviation conference has been designed as the most open international conference from the point of view of information, yet held. The publicity value in the American Mid-west of a conference dealing with speedy communications between Chicago and all parts of the world is evidently great. Few areas, one supposes, have had as little understanding and background knowledge of the problems of world diplomacy.

They'll Do It Every Time — By Jimmy Hatlo

Watson Tosses Hall Through Ropes, Wins Bout

Whipper Billy Watson finally disposed of the troublesome Dr. Len Hall in the main bout of the Tunney wrestling show at the Brock Street Arena Tuesday night, but only after 78 minutes of rugged action in which the tough Californian carried a lot of the battle.

It was a finish affair and after the two had split a pair of falls Watson finally took the match by the simple but strenuous method of tossing Hall out through the ropes so often that the Doc weakened at last and was counted out before he could crawl back into the ring.

The Whipper garnered the first fall after 28 minutes with his Canadian avalanche grip and Hall evened it up after 14 minutes by softening Watson up by throwing him out of the ring repeatedly and finally pulling him back in to pin his shoulders with a flying mare.

The Californian got a lot of assistance from Referee Maxwell in that triumph and most of the fans didn't like it a little bit.

It was a tough, grim tussle with no quarter asked. Watson, usually a clean performer, took a leaf out of his opponent's book and sneaked in the odd punch with a real John Katan flourish. Hall, aggressive as ever, was on the attack over a lot of the route and he made it plenty hot for the British Empire champ.

Honors were about even in the first round. In the early minutes Hall devoted his energy to straight wrestling but soon switched to his usual rough-house methods and with Watson ready to meet him on his own ground it was lively going. Both men were in frequent difficulties and both were out of the ring several times. At one stage Watson nearly took the fall after he had flattened the Californian with a series of flying tackles but Hall finally worked out of that jam and came right back on the attack, with a hair-pulling and gouging assault that Watson at last broke up with a punch to the jaw, followed by a couple of drop kicks that did Hall no good. The Whipper applied a stepover toehold and missed out on an attempt to turn the grip into his avalanche hold. However he got another opening to use it a few minutes later and after he had given the Doc a ride around the ring, pinned him for the fall.

Hall Comes Back

Hall came back viciously in the second round and began with a series of kidney punches that slowed up the Whipper visibly. The Californian then slapped on a toehold and for the next few minutes worked on the Watson underpinnings. Whipper finally got out of that predicament and staggered Hall with a barrage of punches. When Referee Maxwell went in to break it up he ran foul of a few jabs to the jaw himself and on one occasion was bounced around between the two big grapplers. Finally however the official helped in the downfall of the Whipper when he started to separate the pair and was holding Watson when the Doc laid the champ low with a vicious right to the jaw. Hall was quick to see his opportunity. He pounced on the prostrate Whipper, picked him up and hurled him out of the ring. Twice as the Toronto favorite tried to climb back in Hall knocked him back to the floor again. Watson climbed to the ring apron and this time Hall instead of belting him out applied a flying mare, heaved the Whipper in through the ropes and dropped on him to take the fall. The crowd booed the ruling.

It was just as strenuous in the final round. Both battlers took a hand in forcing the fight and both

By The Canadian Press

The proposal has been put forward in London, England, to stage an Allied Army Olympiad at Paris, following the cessation of hostilities in Europe, for all former athletes, including women, now with the Allied troops overseas. The Army-sponsored plan, which would be similar to the Allied military championship meet at Paris at the close of the First Great War, has already received the support of many sport officials, coaches and players now serving in the European theatre.

Staff Sgt. Joe DiMaggio, who will be 30 years of age next Saturday, is spending a 21-day leave from the U.S. Army Air Force in New York City. Asked yesterday if he were headed for medical discharge because of a stomach ailment, Joe declared he was in the Army and would go where he was sent.

Word was received at Wilkes-Barre, Pa., yesterday that Pte. Millard (Dixie) Howell, former pitcher for Syracuse Chiefs in the International League, is a prisoner of war in Germany. His wife and two daughters live at Wilkes-Barre.

Georgia Tech and Tulsa University have been signed again for the Orange Bowl football fixture New Year's Day, it was announced at Miami, Fla., last night. Last January 1 Georgia whipped Tulsa 20-18 in a sensational finish.

Three N.H.L. Stars To Be Discharged

WINNIPEG, Nov. 22 — (CP). — The Winnipeg Free Press said today that under the new R.C.A.F. demobilization orders issued at Ottawa last week, it is believed that several members of the R.C.A.F. Bomber hockey team of Winnipeg will get their discharge this week from the service and be placed on the reserve list.

Wally Stanowski, Neil Colville and Jack Stewart, three former National Hockey League stars, are prominently mentioned.

A physical instructor at No. 5 Air Observers' School, Stanowski would neither confirm nor deny the report, but said that if he received his discharge he would rejoin his old N.H.L. team, Toronto Maple Leafs, for the balance of the season.

Colville, formerly with New York Rangers is completing a course leading to a commission at No. 5 A.O.S. Stewart who played with Detroit Red Wings, has been stationed at No. 12 Service Flying Training School at Brandon, Man.

Peterborough fans may get a chance this Saturday to see another good rugby battle. The local junior club was in touch with Sammy Manson of Hamilton yesterday with a view to arranging a series with the Hamilton Juniors and it is altogether likely that the team from the Ambitious City will be seen in action at Riverside Park Saturday afternoon with the Petes making the return trip to Hamilton on the following Saturday. The Peterborough club deserves all kind of credit for the manner in which it has carried on all season with no opportunity of getting into a group and this latest move to give local fans another game should be appreciated by the sporting public. Already the Petes have brought three Toronto teams here for exhibition games, an expensive way of providing competition and now they are going further afield and bringing the Hamilton youngsters here. Hamilton is a football nursery and the juniors from that city will probably prove the toughest opposition the local team has encountered this season. However the Petes have been steadily improving and have won their last two starts so that they should be able to make it interesting for Saturday's visitors.

With P.C.V.S. playing in the Cossa finals in Toronto Saturday it is interesting to recall that 20 years ago today the Collegiate team won a notable victory over Toronto Humbersides in the semi-final of the O.R.F.U. interscholastic series. It was a close, hard-fought battle with Peterborough students finally winning out 7 to 6 by scoring a single point after ten minutes overtime. Humbersides opened the scoring by getting a rouge off an attempted drop kick field goal in the first period and "Ollie" Bookhout the big half who scored all the Peterborough points evened it up early in the second quarter by kicking a rouge. Later in the same session he burst through the Humberside line, crashed the secondary and ran 40 yards for a touchdown that was not converted. The Toronto students tied the score in the third period when Kirkpatrick picked up a loose ball after Pogue had fumbled and dashed 50 yards for a touch to sew up the game. It remained tied at the end of the regulation period but early in the overtime when a Humberside fumble provided the opening Bookhout kicked to the deadline to win the game. The Peterborough team was as follows: Flying wings, Outram, Cheu; halves, Cole, Bookhout; quarter, Pogue; snap, Yelland; inside wings, Craw, Killaly; middles, Rye, Ebbs; outside wings, Wood, Henry.

Another Good Card

Another good basketball card is lined up for the patrons of the Ladies' League at the Y.W.C.A. this Friday night when the two winning teams of the opening double-header will swing action again. In the junior division the Normal School, last year's champions who opened the 1944-45 season with a close win over the Westclox team last week will meet the Y Cadets at 7.45 o'clock and in the senior section, Transports, who won the senior title last season will face St. John's in the 8.45 o'clock game. The two rivals who met in the final round for the title at the end of last season and staged a series that was about as exciting as anything in the history of the league will pick up where they left off in the second game Friday night and it should be a real battle. Transports have lost some of their stars of last season but still have plenty of power left while the Saints showed in their opening game that they still possess the fighting spirit that made them tough opposition for all and sundry in other seasons. They began in characteristic fashion by coming from behind to beat C.G.E. in the opening game. Friday night's double-header should produce two lively tussles and another good crowd will undoubtedly be on hand.

* * * * * *

Although basketball has been hit harder by enlistments in the armed services than any other branch of sport in Peterborough and the ranks of the available players have been so depleted that only a handful of the eagers who used to perform in the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium are now available a valiant effort is being made to keep the game alive and with that end in view the annual House League has been organized, with four teams already entered and a possibility that the Military Training Centre will also enter the loop. The roster of the teams shows that the responsibility of carrying on has been laid on the shoulders of younger players, few of them with much House League experience. The material has been divided as evenly as possible among the four Y.M.C.A. clubs and that should provide for keen competition. The league will open its schedule on Saturday night when a double-header will be staged with Ray Routley's team meeting Bill Kemp's aggregation in the 7.30 o'clock game and teams led by Gord and Roy Johnston will clash at 8.15. A glance over the lineups shows that many of the players who were in the league last season are missing. Like earlier members of the loop they are now in the country's uniform. Among the most notable absentees from last season is Joe Stewart, the scoring ace of Y basketball, who is in the Navy.

* * * * * *

Still Deadlocked

The race in the Ladies' City Five Pin League continues as close as ever so far as the top positions are concerned. Monday night's games failed to break the deadlock for first place between Outboard Marines and Westclox, both of whom made a clean sweep. Westclox with Marg Hawthorne setting the pace with a cross of 743, including a 298 single, rolled up a total of 3118 pins to take three games from the Beavers. Meanwhile Outboard Marines, with Marion Timm's 714 heading the parade won three from the Commandos. As a result Outboards and the Big Bens are tied for first place with 18 points each. In third position are Merry Macs who won three games from the Five V's and are now two points behind the leading pair with 16 points to their credit. Brintons were also a three-game winner over Empressettes and improved their standing appreciably, as did Corvettes who made a clean sweep at the expense of the Arcos and are now tied with Brintons for fourth spot with a 14 point total. Commandos and Empressettes are tied for sixth with 10 points, the Beavers are in seventh slot with nine. The Five V's next with six points and Arcos in the basement with five to their credit.

* * * * * *

Canadiens, last year's champs, have climbed into a tie for first place with the Toronto Maple Leafs as a result of their 4 to 1 victory over the Bruins in Boston last night. The Rossmen put up a stubborn defence and Canadiens did not succeed in beating Harvey Bennett in the Bruins' net until 31 minutes had gone, Toe Blake ringing the bell. Maurice Richard scored three minutes later on a pass from Blake and when Rookie Gauthier added a third Canadien goal early in the third period the Boston team was well beaten. They finally managed to find the nets, Guadreault doing the trick but Wilf Field picked off another marker for the Canadiens near the end of the session to make it 4 to 1. The Flying Frenchmen in addition to beating the Bruins also managed to keep Bill Cowley off the score sheet and that is quite a task for any man's hockey team. Cowley generally manages to pick up a point or two no matter how tough the going.

68 Horses In 86th Renewal Of King's Plate

TORONTO, Nov. 22 — (CP). — A field of 68, including Uttermost, top money-winner as a two-year-old in Ontario this year, have been nominated for the 86th renewal of the King's Plate, major Canadian turf classic, over Woodbine Race Track here next May 26, it was announced to-day by Secretary Palmer Wright of the Ontario Jockey Club.

The nominations this year closed for the first time while the horses were two-year-olds and it also was the first time in the history of the race, the oldest fixture run continuously in North America, that nominations closed in the winter. Previously, candidates for the race were not revealed until the spring, when the horses were three-year-olds.

The King's Plate, which next year will have an estimated value of $14,000, is confined to Canadian-bred three-year-olds, the property of a British subject resident in Canada, which have never won a race other than a race exclusively for two-year-olds or the plate trial as offered by the Ontario Jockey Club for three-year-olds on the opening day of the Ontario racing season.

56 Last Year.

Last year 56 three-year-olds were nominated for the classic won by H. C. Hatch's Acara.

Rules were changed for the 86th running to allow horses which trained and ran in the United States during the winter months an opportunity to compete. It will be the second year in which three-year-olds foaled anywhere in Canada are eligible to compete. Until last year, only Ontario-bred three-year-olds were allowed to enter.

Of the 68 nominees, 19 are colts, 20 are geldings and 29 are fillies.

H. C. Hatch of Toronto, owner of Uttermost, led the list of nominators with five. The Garden City Stables of St. Catharines have four — Smoky Joe, Shootin' Joe, Pattergal and Baypyprus. Medway Stable of London has nominated Lowermost and Floral Gift. The J. E. F. Seagram establishment of Waterloo has nominated Pat Fuller and Pattoy.

Uttermost, top nominee from the Hatch Stable, earned $12,870 for his owner last season. He won five races and finished second once in eight starts. Among his victories were the Coronation Stakes, Mrs. Orpen's cup and saucer, the Clarendon Plate and the Winnipeg Futurity.

Four women have nominated five horses. They are Edna Fair of Cainsville, Ont., with two; Mrs. B. Hulse and Mrs. G. H. Irwin of Toronto, with one each, and Mrs. Ryland H. New of Oakville, Ont., with one.

Marmora IODE Party

MARMORA, Nov. 22 — (ENS).— Under auspices of Marmora Chapter I.O.D.E., a bridge, euchre and dance program was carried out at Deloro Hall on Monday evening. Gregor Murray and Mrs. Thomas Reid were the winners at bridge. Prizes for euchre went to Charlie Cronkwright and Mrs. William Brown. Lunch was served prior to dancing.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—(AP). — Everybody who knows anything about baseball remembers Fred Merkle and his famous "boner," but who recalls Warren Gill?....He was the victim when Johnny Evers tried out the same stunt of touching second while the runner headed for the clubhouse in Pittsburg three weeks before Merkle was caught the same way....The papers merely reported: "The game was protested on a technicality."

Alliance, Ohio, has organized the first women's auxiliary of the "National Hot Stove League"....Wonder if the gals will split the kineling?....The football Giants could field an entire backfield without college varsity experience. Bill Paschal played only a few minutes of frosh ball at Georgia Tech, Howie Livingston is a product of Fullerton (no relation) junior college, while Bill Petrilas and Vasser Joe Sulaitis didn't attend college.

Fielder's Choice

When St. Charles High school of Columbus, O., played at Worthington the other day, the whistle tooted on the first play and Referee Billie Howard gave the Worthington captain his choice of five penalties....The officials had detected five St. Charles fouls—illegal formation, backfield man in motion, offside, holding and clipping.

Nelson Routley Leads Bowlers

Nelson Routley carried off the individual honors in the Y.M.C.A. Five-Pin League this week when he came through with a 757 cross while R. Courneya was right at his heels with 756, Isadore Black rolled 741, Charlie Orr, 704 and Lou Loftus 667.

Routley also had high single with 335, which was not only high for the night but also for the league to date. Black was second with 313 and Courneya 302. Other good singles were H. Graham 265, C. Orr 270, L. Loftus 264, and W. Suddards and W. Brown 261.

Artists hung up their fourth consecutive sweep when they downed the Commercials 4-0. They have chalked up 16 points in the last four weeks.

Where's Joe?

Gone to order Cigarettes for the soldiers!

Cigarettes! Every one a white comrade of mercy! Ready and waiting to provide relaxation for taut and tired nerves.

That's what a soldier finds in the cigarettes you send him—that's why tobacco, for him, is almost as essential as food.

Don't forget the boys who are overseas. The tobacco and cigarettes you send are reminders, too, that you appreciate what he is doing—that you haven't forgotten.

Canadiens Beat Boston 4-1 Tied With Leafs

By ERIC SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

Montreal Canadiens did what was expected of them when they defeated Art Ross' Boston Bruins 4-1 last night and as a result now are tied with Toronto Maple Leafs for first place in the National Hockey League.

Before 12,000 spectators at Boston Gardens, the 1943-44 Stanley Cup champions worried Rookie Goalie Harvey Bennett throughout the entire game, but it wasn't until the second period that they were able to reach his cage.

Bruins, on the other hand, were literally handcuffed by the Flying Frenchmen. Goalie Bill Durnan of Montreal was robbed of his first shutout of the 1944-45 season when, with less than seven minutes to go, Armand Gaudreault, former member of Quebec Aces, last year's Canadian senior amateur champions, flipped in a screened shot. Veterans Art Jackson and Aubrey (Dit) Clapper assisted.

A slashing penalty to Gaudreault midway through the second period paved the way for Montreal's first goal. Toe Blake hooked a Boston clearing shot and fired directly at Bennett, and three minutes later he set up the play for Maurice Richard who countered with a 12-foot angle shot.

Fern Gauthier made it 3-0 for Canadiens when his hard drive at Bennett bounced after the latter got his stick on the puck and angled back into the cage. Wilf Field scored as he sprang from the penalty box where he had served a minor for tripping.

Canadiens clash with the third-place Detroit Red Wings at Detroit to-morrow night, while Toronto take on the Bruins at Boston. Rangers play Paul Thompson's cellar-dwelling Black Hawks at Chicago.

Country Chaps Purchase Racer

By ALLAN NICKLESON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

NEWMARKET, England Nov. 22 — (CP). — A couple of country chaps came up from Somerset to Newmarket to watch the fall yearling sales — and returned home as a syndicate of race horse owners.

"Just for fun" they started the bidding for one of the brown daughters of Orwell, famous winner of the 2,000 Guineas classic race.

It was noon and the crowd had thinned out. In a corner, Clifford Cox who runs a garage in Bishopsworth village, near Bristol, sat with his pal, Harold Patch, a farmer of the same district. They whispered together, then Clifford crossed his fingers and bid 25 guineas ($117.50). A woman, eating a sandwich on the other side of the ring, upped the bid by five guineas, and then it went to 40.

The Somerset chums exchanged glances, then the farmer nodded to the auctioneer.

"Forty-five guineas bid," said the auctioneer. "Come along, please. Remember this filly's sire won the 2,000 Guineas."

But there was no reply — and to amazement of the two Somerset men, the proud daughter of Orwell was knocked down to them for 45 guineas.

Only a few minutes previously, Trainer J. L. Lawson paid the equivalent of $12,200 for a filly by classic winner Blue Peter — and the two chums had gazed wide-eyed in wonder.

"Harold and I and another chap — Bob Smith, a dock hand — will go shares in the filly," Clifford said later. "Harold will keep her on his farm and Bob, who was brought up among horses and has ridden in races, will train her.

"Harold and I often dreamed of having a race-horse of our own. But we never dreamed of getting one of first-class blood — and for 45 guineas."

Frank H. Bowcher is a farmer with 600 acres near Colchester, Essex, and "one or two horses." Mr. Bowchester also is a character.

At the Newmarket bloodstock sales he looked out of place, this amiable, beaming bachelor of 74, without a collar, and a rough tweed cap over his head.

Around this red-cheeked man with the white moustache were millionaires, ready to bid for the nameless colt swishing around the ring.

When the bidding began at 500 guineas, Mr. Bowcher nodded. The bidding reached 1,500 guineas, Mr. Bowcher nodded again. He kept on nodding until the hammer fell and the colt was his for 2,400 guineas (approximately $11,400).

Then Mr. Bowcher trotted off to see his colt — the horse that may never see a racecourse.

Because Mr. Bowcher doesn't buy horses to race them. Some he buys are not even trained. They are put out to grass, to a life of leisure.

"He loves horses," a friend explained. "They are his life and he doesn't buy them to go pot-hunting."

TORONTO, Nov. 22 — (CP). — The good Burghers of the West, who always have maintained that Eastern Canada couldn't get along without players from the sunset side of the Great Lakes, are chuckling audibly now. They are waiting hopefully to see how hard hit the Easterners will be by the Manitoba Amateur Hockey Association edict banning the export of junior hockey goods from the province..... First indication of its effect came when the Hamilton, Ont., junior team announced its withdrawal from the Junior A setup. Three Winnipeg players were counted on to make the club a contender, but they just aren't available now.

No full house?

Two bouncing boys and an equal number of girls make up King Clancy's family now, and the old favorite of the icelanes is quoted as saying: "Two of each no, a pair of Kings and a pair of Queens. That's all there is — there won't be any more."

New job for coach:

Bob (Calgary Herald) Manini comes up with a novel suggestion to give football coaches a more active part master-minding their charges during the game. His idea is to take off the flying wing and throw the coach in as twelfth man. Then the prexy could give the players the strategy in the huddle, afterward retiring out of range while the boys carried out the play. It probably wouldn't appeal too much to coaches of losing teams, though— they couldn't blame the quarterback for calling the dumb play that lost the game.

Incidentally:

The Peden bicycling team was re-united in Calgary the other day, but on a strictly non-professional basis. Torchy, now in the R.C.A.F., and brother Doug of the Army spent a short leave in Calgary discussing old times on the six-day bike trails.....Who wants to take patent medicine when he can play in the N'H.L.? J. P. Fitzgerald of the Toronto Telegram commenting on Bill Ezinicki's aceptance for Army service after playing a few games with Toronto Leafs, says it "has a touch of those cure-alls so prominent in print years ago." Bill previously was discharged from the R.C.A.F. and rejected by the Army doctors....Coach Percy Page of the old Edmonton Grads pays tribute to the late E. E. (Cappy) Kidd, one of the staunchest supporters of the classy girls' basketball team. Page says Cappy's encouraging "Come on, the Grads" often provided the spark that set off a winning rally.

Hockey's Big Seven

By The Canadian Press.

Toe Blake, great linesman for Montreal Canadiens, collected two points last night as the Canadiens whipped Boston Bruins 4-1. Blake thus moved in with Lorne Carr of Toronto and Syd Howe of Detroit, both holding 16 points. Other scoring leaders paced by Bill Cowley of Boston Bruins were idle, with Clint Smith of Chicago and Elmer Lach of Canadiens both clinging to the seventh position with 12 points each.

Wildcats Ready For Final Tilt

HAMILTON, Nov. 22.—(CP). — Hamilton Wildcats are in good condition after Saturday's rugged encounter with Toronto Balmy Beach and Coach Eddie McLean expects to have all but Joe Soyka ready to start against the H.M.C.S. Donnacona-St. Hyacinthe Combine in the Eastern Canada championship here on Saturday.

Soyka was injured by a tackle in the Toronto game, and examination showed the speedy back had suffered a torn chest cartilage that would probably keep him out of action for more than a week.

The Wildcats went through a light workout last night and will complete their preparations for the contest with a scrimmage on Thursday.

Advance sale of tickets is brisk and a large crowd is expected for the game, which will also decide the Grey Cup winner, emblematic of the Dominion championship, as no Western Canada team has challenged.

Oshawa Scores Second Victory

By The Canadian Press

In the brace of O.H.A. Junior A engagements last night, the Falcons handed a stiff 10-4 setback to the Galt Red Wings at St. Catharines, while at Toronto the Oshawa Generals, Memorial Cup defenders, scored their second victory of the campaign, 4-3, with Marlboros as their oposition.

There were no less than 25 penalties in the St. Catharines encounter, with 11 offenders being benched in the lively last period. The Falcons led 2-1 in the first stanza, 4-2 in the second, and ran in six counters to two in the final frame to make the totals 10-4. Peterson paced the barrage with four goals and one assist, while McMurdy extended a helping hand with no less than five assists during the fray. Other Falcon scorers were Edwards and Unger, two each, and T. Smellie and Dawdy, one apiece. Scores were well divided for the Red Wings, the sharpshooters being Mousseau, Bahando, Adamo, and Krompotic.

Once more Shewchuk started the ball rolling for Generals at Toronto with the initial counter and Leachman equalized for Marlboros in the first period, but Gallagher and Denny salted the game away for the champions with a tally each in the second frame, followed by McNabney early in the third period. Kane and Naylor for Marlboros concluded the scoring.

Bisons Defeat Fliers 4 to 2

By The Canadian Press.

Buffalo Bisons, taking an easy 4-2 win from St. Louis Flyers last night, rolled into first place in the Eastern Division of the American Hockey League by a one-point margin over the idle Hershey Bears.

Centre player Len Halderson sparked an early four-goal lead for the visiting Bisons with one goal and two assists, while his linemate Doug Lewis upped his scoring average with three smadt assists. Davidson, Webster, and Jones registered a goal apiece for the winners.

Rookie Nick Evanshen halted the one-day scoring in the final minute of the middle frame by notching one for the Flyers in a combination play with Hudson and Nakina Smith. Blake made it two for St. Louis early in the third period.

The Flyers suffered a casualty in the second stanza when regular defenceman Red Doran was retired with a sprained ankle.

To-night Cleveland visit Pittsburg Hornets in the only A.H.L. game scheduled.

2 Strong Teams In COSSA Finals

Two of the strongest teams ever to gain the finals will battle it out Saturday morning for the Central Ontario Secondary Schools' Association football championship.

Niagara Falls C.V.I. and Peterborough C.V.I. are the contenders in a sudden death game which will be played at the Hart House back campus at 10 o'clock Saturday.

The Falls squad is reputed to be one of the best ever to represent that city, boasting a hard charging wingline and a speedy backfield. Peterborough has overcome tough opposition in its own group, and should offer the Niagara crew plenty of opposition.

London People Resigned To Restrictions

By J. W. SUTTON
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

LONDON, Nov. 22 — (CP). — Londoners have become resigned to the fact that, until the end of the war, they can expect little relief from the restrictions that made life uncomfortable and irritating since 1940.

Many optimistically thought the end of some of the 10,000 wartime restrictions would coincide with the invasion.

Flying bombs which came a week or so after D-Day were the first things to shake the Londoner's belief that his war was over. With the sirens wailing 10 and 12 times during the day and night he found himself becoming less interested in the relaxation of four-year-old regulations and more interested in the state of his air-raid shelter.

Since flying bombs have no eyes Home Secretary Morrison agreed to substitute a dim-out for the black-out and Manchester, Liverpool and many other Midland and Northern England towns flashed on their lights.

Everybody looked forward to London's "lighting up" but the night Londoners were told they could allow light to stream from their windows the Germans staged their first air-raid in weeks, and since then the Capital has been as dark as it was before the Morrison announcement.

Mr. Morrison, however, subsequently announced that London would have a modified street lighting system which would give it better illumination than any other city in wartime Britain, when necessary equipment has been installed.

The invasion hadn't progressed far before the Londoner was hit in a vulnerable spot. There was a beer shortage which ministries attributed to supplies being sent to the troops. But investigation did not confirm this and after a first-class press rumpus beer became more plentiful.

Although Prime Minister Churchill stated recently that 2,000,000 to 3,000,000 Allied troops are on the Continent you would never think any had left these isles if transportation is a criterion. Many trains were withdrawn without notice and workers still travel in the overcrowded carriages.

On the homefront, practically nothing has changed with advantage to the civilian—food is still strictly rationed and uninteresting, luxuries few, entertainment is costly, fuel is scarce. Londoners have reconciled themselves to the fact that as long as the war lasts there can be for them no real return to normal conditions and their battered city will remain in the frontline

Wife Human Torch Police Nab Husband

NEW YORK, Nov. 22—(CP)—Police said yesterday a 44-year-old house painter, identified as Abraham Gold, had admitted turning his wife into a human torch by pouring a mixture of kerosene and carbolic acid on her clothing, then setting it afire with a match. He was booked on a homicide charge after his wife, Mrs. Betta Gold, 49, mother of four children, died in hospital.

"She nagged me," police quoted Gold as saying. "She said I was beating the children."

Police quoted him as saying he threw a gallon of the fluid on his wife as she stood in the bathroom, set it afire, then held the bathroom door closed until her screams had stopped.

Vivian Opens Drive For 50,000 Donors

TORONTO, Nov. 22 — (CP) — Health Minister Vivian of Ontario last night opened the campaign of the Ontario Division of the Canadian Red Cross Society for 50,000 new blood donors in the province, saying in a broadcast address that blood plasma has proven the most necessary item for immediate treatment of wounded overseas.

Since September the demand for plasma was greater than the supply. Weekly blood donations in the Dominion numbered 20,000 and in the province 12,000. Many of the regular donors were offering to give blood more often in an effort to keep up the supply but as this might prove harmful, the Red Cross was emphasizing the need for new donors.

Wants Newspaper

TORONTO, Nov. 22 — (CP) — Earl P. Bergman of Erskine, Alta., last night urged a national newspaper for Canadian farmers in open discussion by provincial entrants in the 14th Annual National contests sponsored by the Canadian Council on Boys' and Girls' Club work.

Theodule Turcotte of Baie Des Sables, Que., said that union with other people across Canada was the present object of the farm clubs. Frank Rigney, of Bon Accord, Alta., said a national newspaper would promote the union.

RCAF BRITISH WAR BRIDES ARRIVE IN CANADA—It will be their first Christmas in Canada for forty-two British girls who arrived recently to join their RCAF husbands at points across Canada. (Upper Group) It's a small world as Mrs. Marie Bertrand (left) and Mrs. Barbara Owen found when they embarked for Canada. Both were members of the WAAF, and at one time worked at adjoining teletype machines on the same station. Neither knew the other had married nor left the service until they met on the draft for Canada. Mrs. Bertrand and baby Michael were met at Ottawa by WO-1 L. H. Bertrand. They will make their home in Botha, Alberta. Mrs. Owen was also met at Ottawa by her husband, Sgt. J. M. Owen of 231 McGregor street, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont. The friends find it hard to realize that they will be living in the same country and yet be so many miles apart. (Lower Group) Left to Right, Front Row: Mrs. Eileen Miles, wife of F.-Sgt. Sudden Fires Cause Death Of Two People

HAMILTON, Nov. 22—(CP)—Two persons lost their lives and a third was seriously injured in three separate fires here last night and today.

A soldier on the staff of the army trade school was burned in an iron tank which caught fire on the grounds of the school this morning. Next of kin have been advised and his name will be released later.

William McDougall, 53, died in hospital today from burns received when his clothes caught fire as he was attending a furnace last night at the Hoover Cleaning Company plant on King street west.

Roy Sweeney, a mechanic who was repairing the tank in a gasoline truck at a service station, was severely burned when the tank burst into flames as he was operating an electric drill.

Deer Hunter Shoots Large Timber Wolf

WARSAW, Nov. 22 (ENS) — The many hunting parties have returned from the north and report a good number of deer, and many wolves. The Rock Lake party lost some of their dogs believed due to wolves, and Reg. Bolton shot a large timber wolf the first day of the hunt in the Burleigh district.

Blackwell Urges Change In Taxes

TORONTO, Nov. 22—(CP)—Attorney-General Blackwell of Ontario today issued a statement saying that it was not his intention in an address at Windsor last night to suggest that co-operatives be subject to taxation. He had been reported in a Windsor dispatch as having made such a suggestion.

"What I advocated was not the taxation of co-operatives but a revision of the tax structure whereby neither co-operatives nor private industry would be taxed....but instead that individuals who finally received the profits should be taxed on the distribution of such profits."

Seeks Re-election

WINDSOR, Nov. 22 (CP)—Mayor Arthur J. Reaume will seek re-election as Mayor of Windsor, he said today. Having served for two terms Mr. Reaume said he was a non-partisan candidate and would not be a party to any particular slate.

113 More Donors Each Week Need Of Clinic

One hundred and thirteen more donors a week are needed if the Blood Donors' Clinic in Peterborough is to reach its new objective of 300 donations a week, beginning with the drive in Peterborough for two weeks to enlist 1,500 more people in this vital war work.

The average attendance at the Red Cross Clinic since May of this years has been 187 each week and in order to help replenish the increasingly shrinking supplies, available to the wounded on the battlefields of Europe, a drive across Ontario has begun to sign up 50,000 more blood donors.

All the fighting is not done with a gun in the front line facing the enemy. The percentage of casualties among Peterborough men in the Army overseas has been high since D-Day, and several have written home that it was only the plasma, administered before they even reached a first aid post, that kept them alive.

Good Record.

There is not a person in this city who would knowingly withhold the means of giving life to a boy, maybe one of the neighbour lads, with legs or arms pierced by the destructive 88 mm. shell. Even the best of medical attention cannot take the place of blood plasma.

Since the Clinic here opened in July 1942, 18,775 donations have been given, up to Monday of this week. This represents a splendid effort on the part of patriotic citizens, clinic officials reported. But they emphasized that the people giving these donations had done and were doing their share, and more help is needed to bring supplies up to the minimum.

Seventy people from Peterborough and district have made tenth donations and Allen George Gribble of Bethany has given his 20th donation and Arthur Morris of Young's Point, his 16th. One third of the donations come from women, statistics reveal. Many of those who have given their 10th donations have already reached their 13th and 14th.

One of the most striking uses of plasma was in the case of Lieut. Allan Park, a casualty at Ortona. The young Peterborough officer was so badly injured that doctors at first held out no hope. But extensive use of blood from Canada and brilliant medical care patched him up.

No donor is allowed to give blood oftener than once every eight weeks and medical sheets and cards are scanned carefully to see that the rules are obeyed. This is an opportunity to keep blood supplies flowing along the assembly line to the front line hospitals, and clinic officials are positive that the people of Peterborough and district will not fail to answer their plea for help.

Hunter Becomes Hunted In Woods' Attack As Wounded Buck Turns On Attackers

Attacked by a wounded buck that was determined to chase him out of the woods ...or else, William Davidson, 626 George street, saved himself by pumping three or four bullets into the charging animal, killing him just before he reached his side, while on a hunting trip Saturday, in the country skirting the Oregon Trail near Buckhorn.

Others in the party included Keith Davidson, his brother, his father, J. W. Davidson, manager of the Quality Cake Shop, and Lawrence Cassy, Aylmer street. Mr. Davidson brought home his quota, while his two sons bagged the other one.

Although the men didn't get into the woods and ready for the hunt until just before noon, by four o'clock in the afternoon, two deer had been shot. Clear weather and excellent hunting conditions made the trip a big success. Earlier, Mr Davidson had taken part in another trip, but luck was not with him.

TO MEET HERE.

First meeting of the Liquor Authority Hotel Control Board will be held at Barrie to-morrow, to be followed by meetings at Peterborough, November 29, and Kitchener December 4.

SUPPORT W. HARVEY

The Board of Health having granted W. O. Harvey, 4 Lansdowne street, permission to put in a septic tank on his property, the council Monday night sent a recommendation to the Utilities Commission that serious consideration be given to laying a water service on that part of the street.

CASE DISMISSED

Without hearing evidence from the city, Judge Smoke dismissed on Tuesday the assessment appeal of David Humber which the Court of Revision had disallowed in direct application. The assessment on the double house at 814-16 Water street was increased $100 and on the house at 846 George street, $100, by W. J. Henry's department. Mr. Humber objected, but Judge Smoke confirmed both assessments without asking the Assessor for evidence.

FOR ORPHANED MISSIONS

Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe, secretary of the Inter-Church Missionary Conference, which conference was addressed by Dr. John R. Mott in St. Paul's Presbyterian church recently, reports the total receipts were $221.27. After the deduction of expenses totalling $39.71 there was remitted to Rev. H. C. Priest, Toronto, for Orphaned Overseas Missions $181.56.

LOWEST BIDDER

Fried Construction Company, Toronto, was the lowest bidder at approximately $100,000 for the alterations to convert the former Staff House on Monaghan Road into a hostel for ex-service men, as reported in the Commercial News.

The tenders were received by the Department of Public Works. The supervising architect is W. R. L. Blackwell of Peterborough.

C.G.E. RINK

Permission to the Canadian General Social and Athletic Club to use the city's property on Park street, between Lake and Chamberlain streets, for a skating and hockey rink, was renewed by the council Monday night. As previously, children will be admitted from 2 to 6 p.m. every day, but the evenings are reserved for hockey games on Tuesdays and Thursdays, and for the members' families on other evenings.

Ontario Department Lauds Work Of Children's Aid Society

An excellent grading report from the Department of Public Welfare for Ontario, reviewing reports made by representatives on inspection visits to Peterborough, was read at the regular meeting of the Children's Aid Society, Tuesday afternoon. James Dutton, chairman, who read the analysis expressed his pleasure at such a splendid report.

The analysis, signed by B. W. Heise, provincial superintendent of Children's Aid, discussed the work of the Peterborough society under several headings, including board, staff, program, records, shelter, health, education, and also under several sub-headings. The report mentioned the good attendance at Board meetings, and commended the lively interest of Board members in planning and directing the activities of the Society, and other community planning. The work of the sewing committee also received special mention.

Covering the period from April the first, 1943 to March 31, 1944, the work of the staff, both in the field and clerical, was commended, especially since the increase of work in war years made the load much heavier. Evidence of "an excellent standard of work being carried on for the families where intensive supervision was being given" was shown in the protection work, and a high standard has been maintained in unmarried parents work, child care, and foster home investigation.

The child care program, including the shelter and health was given high praise, especially the emphasis is on health supervision for preschool children, and the cooperation with the Society of the teachers, in providing adequate reports, and the interest of the Society in providing opportunities for children commensurate with their ability. The budgeting and bookkeeping set-up of the Peterborough Society was reported as satisfactory. On the basis of the reports in each category, the report concluded; "It is to the credit of both your Board and staff, that, despite continued heavy pressure of work due to war conditions, a few points have been gained. Your Society has somewhat bettered the position held in "B" category".

Miss Rachael Young, superintendent of the Society, in her report, said that she felt that the cooperation and efforts of the Board had been of immeasurable aid to the staff. She reported a total of 337 visits for the month, and 113 office interviews. Sixty-three families came to the attention of the Society during the month. Investigations for the Department of National Defence, as well as covering eligibility for allowance or for assistance through the Dependents' Advisory Committee, included special inquiries in regard to posting soldiers near their families, compassionate leaves and discharge. Miss Young said that it was most important that the investigator be most careful in securing the information, in order to be fair to all concerned.

The report said that the finding of a child on the doorstep of a home in the city had provided some excitement and considerable tragedy. Miss Young said that she wondered if the mother realized how unfair she had been in depriving the child of her name, and a birth certificate, making it much more difficult for the Society to plan, when nothing was known about the child's background, and where the question of age, on which a child's formula is based, was only an approximate thing. She expressed the hope that the mother would make herself known and offer the information to give the child a better opportunity.

Concluding her report, Miss Young said that in the last edition of "Welfare", Dr. George Davidson, previously Executive Director of the Canadian Welfare Council, now Deputy Minister of Welfare in the federal government, outlined the possible future responsibility for Children's Aid Societies. He felt that the network of Children's Aid Societies should be used for Family Allowance work in the Department of National Defence, and that field reports could be used for making a decision in complaints. Miss Young therefore concluded that the task of the C. A. Societies would be just as heavy in the future, and that the consideration of accommodation and of staff should be discussed in this light.

Make 124 Articles

In her sewing report, Mrs. J. R. Marshall said that sewers for the month had been Mrs. A. Graystock, a new member, Mrs. G. Sproule, and herself, with a total of 124 articles mended and 23 garments made over. Mrs. V. Selkirk made a boy's coat from a man's overcoat, and her help was appreciated. Donations were gratefully acknowledged from Mesdames Shantz, J. Heffernan, F.W.K. Harris, B. McCoy, of Lakefield, J. R. Marshall, J. E. Keyes, Charles Rusk, J. H. Daynes, A Rudd, W. R. Potter, T. Edwards, John Comstock, Chesher, D. McIntyre, Stockle, G. H. Batley, Miss Elizabeth Scott, and the Red Cross, Lakefield, Junior Welfare League, St. Paul's Group, St. Paul's Sunshine Group, Victory Workers, and King Edward School. Mrs. W. Fanning reported eight children in the shelter on November the first, and told of the various Hallowe'en entertainments provided for them.

E. B. Fowler gave a report and recommendations of the finance committee, which included the decision to give the superintendent authority to increase the boarding house rate to $15 where she thought the conditions warranted the increase. Additional permanent clerical assistance was also recommended. In connection with requests from the sewing and shelter committee for cupboards and various small improvements in there, as well as more larger toys, such as tricycles, for the children, $50 was voted to begin the work.

Discuss Court

The establishment of an urgently needed juvenile court was again discussed, and a committee was appointed to take correspondence already collected in this regard, and make recommendations to the Board. A letter of appreciation is to be sent to Mrs. R.T.F. Brain for her assistance in giving music lessons to some of the girls, and a letter of congratulations will be sent to Clifford Roydhouse. Mrs. F. Lynch was named as the Board's representative to the Health League of Canada. The Board also decided to endorse the proposed plan for a civic hospital.

The gratification of the board for the work of the sewing and shelter committees, and the interest and help of Peterborough citizens, was expressed by the chairman. Plans for the Christmas party for the children at the shelter were left in the hands of the women of the Board.

Aid For Victims At Christmas Given By School

At no time of the year do the victims of any form of tyranny need help to reassure their faith in the belief that goodness still prevails, than at the season of Christmas, which is really the rock on which all the better things of this life have been founded.

Christmas with all its joy and gladness, to them appears only as a mockery, unless its true spirit is made to carry consolation and cheer which can assist them to rise above those things which have caused them so much distress.

All schools that exist for the purpose of teaching the tenets of the Christian Faith, may add considerably to the teachings they give to young receptive minds in their respective Sunday Schools, if they follow out this spirit in practice as well as precept, and there never was a time in the history of the world, when opportunities for such were more prevalent than now.

At the moment the Peterborough and District British War Victims Fund is endeavouring to do this very thing, by raising a special gift to send over to give some cheer to the hundreds of thousands of people, a large proportion of whom are young children, who have lost their homes in Britain, which could well find a place in the good work that any Sunday School or Church may plan to do this Christmas.

Leading the way this year in this respect, a nice donation of $15 is to-day listed as coming from the pupils and teachers of Salem Sunday School, through Miss Jessie Bell, their secretary-treasurer, and it is hoped that many many others will join them in this blessed work, for the sake of Him, whose life story they teach, and whose coming to earth to redeem mankind is celebrated at this time.

Hastings Gifts Assist.

Bearing a name that has appeared in prominence in British History, besides having suffered to a large degree from enemy air raid attacks during the present titanic struggle for liberty, the town of Hastings in the neaby County of the same name, would seem to have at least a sentimental interest in giving its support to a movement to assist those who are in trouble there at this presetn moment.

Only in very recent weeks have some of the evacuated residents of this much war scarred city been allowed to return to what remains of their former homes, so to-day the fund is very happy to report two gifts from this place named after the spot where William the Conqueror landed nearly one thousand years ago, through C. A. Putnam, who represents the fund in that district.

One of these comes from Iden Bonds, Sr., who has supported this fund on previous occassions, this being the fruit of the sale of old batteries and tires, from which he desires no personal profits, even although it could most certainly be classed as legitimate, since he is in the garage business.

The other gift comes from a penny box located in the Royal Bank at Hastings, where the fund representative is the manager, and Mr. Putnam will be glad to receive and forward any further contributions to headquarters that may be given to him there.

Obituary

MISS VIVIAN L. BROWN, Reg.N.

More than 500 people attended the funeral of Miss Vivian Louise Brown, Reg.N., which was held from the Nisbett Funeral Home in Peterborough with interment in Fraserville cemetery. Rev. Mr. Everson of Springville United church was in charge of the service.

Miss Brown died recently in the Welland County Hospital where she had been serving on the staff. In her 26th year, she had been ill only about six weeks.

Born in Springville, daughter of Mrs Margaret Brown and the late Harry Brown, she attended Peterborough Collegiate, after which she entered Nicholls Hospital to train as a nurse.

Graduating in 1941, she was employed on the staff for a time, before going to Welland

Pallbearers were six cousins, Vert Reynolds, Wilfred Reynolds, Herb Reynolds, Gordon Reynolds, Lorne Reynolds, and Walter Brown. Honorary pallbearers, attending in uniform were graduate nurses of Nicholls Hospital: Mrs. T. Watson, Mrs. T. Ada, Misses B. Beer, J. Stone, J. Gillespie, M. Ross, M. Robson and K. Cronkwright.

Among those present at the service were John Hornal, superintendent of Nicholls Hospital, Miss Edith Young, superintendent of nurses at Nicholls, members of the Nicholls Hospital staff, and six nurses from Welland County Hospital. Miss S. Brown, former night superintendent at Nicholls Hospital, and now assistant superintendent of Picton Hospital, also attended.

Officer In Belgium Has No Money Worries

Major J. L. Collins of Waterloo, who has many relatives in Peterborough, is a man with whom it pays to be friends. He is the field supervisor paymaster for Canadian troops and a story recently told how he drove alone the other day from Brussels carrying 40,000,000 Belgian francs (roughly $1,000,000) in his truck.

He is the grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Collins, 194 McDonnel street and a nephew of Miss Mabel Collins, Water street; Mrs. N. C. Hatton, Park street; Fred Collins, 194 McDonnel street, and Durham Collins, Gilmour street.

Major Collins supervises all matters pertaining to money for Canadian troops. They get the money from British Base cashiers in sealed boxes of 5,000,000 francs, then transfer it to any of their three heavy safes kept in a well-guarded spot at army headquarters.

Bulk of cash on hand at time of writing consists of Belgian francs, but French francs and Dutch guilders are also carried in smaller quantites.

The field supervisor unit is the clearing house for all obsolete French and Belgian paper money and also credits to the pay books of wounded and dead personel, the amount of mutiliated, bullet-pierced and blood-soaked bills removed from the wallets by members of the medical corps.

Fiendish Nazi Booby Traps All In Day's Work To Engineer

No place, either large or small, is forgotten to be mined by retreating Germans in Italy, and land-mines and tricky surprise bombs are searched out and made harmless daily by Royal Canadian Engineers, according to Sapper Clarence R. Spencely, brother of Mrs. K. C. Sanderson, 520 Bonaccord street, who returned home on leave from overseas recently.

Severely wounded near Florence, Italy, in four years of overseas service, this young veteran has also seen action at Dieppe, in Africa, and in Sicily. Out of his experiences, comes one of the memorable accounts of an engineer's work in wartime, from spanning mighty rivers with bridges to locating and destroying Nazi booby-traps.

Spr. Spencely, who left his wife and baby daughter Maureen at their home in Mountain Ash, Wales, suffered compound fractures of the right arm and also back fractures, when struck by Nazi .88 mm. shrapnel, near Florence. It was night, and a bridge had just been completed across a river. All but three of the engineers had left for their posts; Spr. Spencely, with two others remained for a few minutes.

"I was just ready to say, 'come one, let's get back', when the shell hit. It hit the bridge, but I don't know if that's what they were aiming at. It didn't knock me unconscious right away, and I knew I had been hit. I didn't know by what though. The .88 is a powerful weapon, with a heavy explosive effect. It blew me off the bridge, down the bank, and I landed on the river bed. It was partly dry at this time of year."

Of the other two soldiers, one was killed outright, and the other was reported missing.

Luck With Him

This young engineer claims that plain, every-day good luck is what saved him from the fate of the others, that night. Three hours later, he was found by a South African soldier, who was taking part in a troop movement. Otherwise, he might not have been discovered until morning. He spent three months in a hospital.

Spr. Spencely holds reasonable respect for the ingenuity of the Nazis, through long and dangerous hours of working with the engineers combatting the booby-trap menace.

"Jerry leaves booby-traps anywhere our soldiers are expected; you find them under books, in typewriters, in telephones, fountain pens, doors, windows and hundreds of other places."

As an example of German cunning, he told of an incident in Italy, when engineers, looking for booby-traps, decided to attach a string to the door of a house recently vacated by the enemy, and open the door while taking shelter in a nearby slit trench. A young lieutenant occupied the trench, and when he attempted to open the door, nothing happened to the house, but the trench in which he was stationed went up in a terrific explosion. He was never seen again!

Must Take Chances

No technical weapons are used by the engineers, he said, for the purpose of tracking down booby-traps, and removing their danger to infantry troops. It is simply a "test and try" proposition. If an engineer has a suspicion a telephone dial contains a trap, he inspects it as closely as possible, then casually lifts the receiver and dials.

"If there is no explosion", Spr. Spencely said, "then of course you know everythings all right, but if it isn't all right, you'll get 'it' ".

It is a nerve-wracking job, in the opinion of those who do not have to do it, but to this veteran, it is now dismissed with a slight smile, and, "It's my job".

The safety of hundreds of infantrymen and other troops is brought into consideration when engineers are fearlessly freeing a town of these traps. Spr. Spencely said that when an engineer is killed while fighting against booby traps it serv– to make the others much more fighting mad and determined to clean up the Nazis once and for all. But they die for a cause, he said, not only because of much talked-about patriotism, but because there are hundreds of young soldiers moving in, and "it is better for one or two of us to die, than hundreds of others".

Always Second Arrow

Minefields are treacheous and dangerous places to be, he said, and told of a German trick of attaching booby traps to mines. Land-mines are located, marked, and removed, but in the process of removing them, a booby-trap attached to a second mine further in the ground causes an explosion. When the Allies caught on to this gag, the Germans started laying mines three deep, with the inevitable booby-trap still there.

Once, a large number of soldiers were enjoying an open-air stage show, when word came through that their entertainment was taking place in a heavily-mined area. Rigid soldiers sat ghostly still in their seats while they watched daring engineers remove mines right from under them. And it's all the day's work for the engineers.

Clever Germans again played their trump card after engineers had just finished building three excellent bridges over the Sangro river. When all the work was completed, the Germans blew up a large dam, and the water carried away the three newly-built bridges. "We just waited until the water had calmed down", Spr. Spencely said, "then built the bridges all over again".

The Hitler Line in Italy proved the toughest fighting; one of the big days for the soldiers there was when Rome fell; there was no "blackest" day, because confidence in victory and morale was always high, Spr. Spencely said, in a brief review of events.

Shops in Rome were filled, and miles of elastic, scarce in Canada, can be bought there. His sister, Mrs. Sanderson also helped in keeping up morale, and new of shortages of commodities in Canada came as a complete surprise to this soldier, because she never mentioned hardships on the homefront in her letters.

All last winter was spent in Ortona, where a celebration of Christmas was held, if only a small one. At the entrance of the town, a big sign set up by Canadians proclaimed, "You Are Now Entering A Western Canadian Town". German gunners were blasting away at the town only a short distance away, but Christmas day went on regardless.

Employed in London, Ontario, before enlisting in the Engineers, Spr. Spencely first attempted to join the air force. But when that didn't come his way, his next choice was with the engineers, whose work, incidentally, is writing new chapters in Canadian military history daily.

He enlisted in 1939, and went overseas early in 1940. Soon, he hopes to have his wife and daughter from Wales join him in Canada. Mrs. Spencely was educated at the University of Toronto, and rumor has it that she is the possessor of a very pleasant Welsh-Canadian accent. Spr. Spencely will return to a hospital for future medical treatment after his leave.

Report Three Wounded

Three Peterborough district men serving overseas with Canadian armed forces have been reported wounded in action. Serving with the Canadian Armoured Corps, Tpr. Edward B. Flindall, son of Mrs. Alice Flindall, R.R. 2, Brighton, has been listed as wounded.

Sgt. Harold S. Bennett, whose wife lives at 83 Glenelg street, Lindsay has been reported slightly wounded while serving with an Eastern Ontario regiment, and Gnr. Ray E. Mutton, son of Mrs. Olive McCracken, R.R. 2, Colborne, was wounded, but remained on duty.

Are You Aware Of The Fact?

That while the new Civic Hospital is to cost approximately $1,400,000 the sum of $800,000 is already in sight. This sum is made up of $250,000 from the Nicholls Hospital Trust, already approved by the interested churches; $150,000 from the County of Peterborough, already provided by a by-law passed by the County Council; $50,000 from the Peterborough Utilities Commission, already passed by that body; $50,000 promised by the Provincial Government, and $300,000 from the City Trust Commission to be approved in a referendum submitted to the ratepayers on December 4.

This leaves $600,000 to be provided by the ratepayers of Peterborough, of which $300,000 will be paid by home owners and the rest by industry and business. Truly a Modern and Up-To-The-Minute Hospital at less than half the actual cost.

19 Reductions Made In Assessments

Of the ninety assessment appeals to the Court of Revision, reductions were made in 19 cases, amounting to $4,070, City Clerk Outram reported to the council, reviewing October.

"The Assessor has not yet returned his assessment roll for Monaghan Ward. It is expected that this roll will be returned at the end of the year, and that the Court of Revision will hear appeals early in the new year. It is hoped to have the roll confirmed and figures entered by the end of January in order not to delay council and school boards in striking tax rates."

16,427 Voters

No appeals were entered against the voters list for the municipal elections. Its components are:

Owners 6,459; tenants 5,127; municipal franchise 4,841—Total 16,427.

Last year—Owners 5,515; tenants 4,577; municipal franchise 4,053. Total 14,145.

"All arrangements have been completed for mailing to the voters the cards giving information and directions for voting on December 4. There will be 8,500 of those cards mailed. Through the cooperation or the women of the Women's Voluntary Services, under the direction of Mrs. E. H. Crowe, the big task of addressing these cards has been finished.

The No. 5 ration book was issued in October, with the City Clerk as secretary of the local ration board, being responsible for the arrangements. The number of books issued totalled 37,555. Again there was splendid cooperation from Mrs Weldon Fanning and her ladies of the W.V.S. and the factories of the city in aiding in the distribution."

Vital Statistics

Vital statistics to the end of October: Births 907; marriages 277; deaths 362. And last year for ten months—births 847, marriages 287, deaths 371.

"Among the 95 births recorded in October, 70 were to city residents; also 93—of 97.8 per cent of the month's births occurred in local hospitals. Four were to unmarried parents. Twenty of the twenty-nine deaths in October occurred in hospitals, and six were non-residents.

Fees and Fines

Receipts at the clerk's office included 18 marriage licenses $90; various city licenses $222.50; and from the police department $206 for dog tags. Eighty-seven motorists paid $1 each for parking offences.

Police court fines, mostly in the sumptuary category, totalled $666.70. The city received $400 of that amount; the province $246 and Justice of the Peace $45. Of the 74 cases disposed of, convictions were registered in 33.

"There were 63 convictions under the Liquor Control Act; 7 under Highway Traffic Act and 10 under the Traffic Bylaw."

Wolsley Street To Get Sewer

Preparations of a local improvement by-law for a sewer on Wolsley street was directed by the council Monday night in response to a petition signed by three of four affected property owners. They were J. J. Devlin, G. E. Compsty and V. W. O'Toole.

It transpired that Mr. Compsty had bought property and began building a house when he discovered that the nearest sewer was 26 feet away. "His difficulty could have been avoided if he had been told when he took out the permit that there was no sewer connection in front of his property," Alderman Dutton said.

Car Passenger Hurt In Bus Collision

Miss L. Reid, 465 Monaghan Road, was taken to Nicholls Hospital suffering from a scalp wound that required seven stitches to close, following a traffic accident on Park Street on Tuesday

She was a passenger in a car driven by J. F. Peel that was being driven south on Park Street. When the automobile stopped to pick up another passenger, a city bus driven by E. Northey, Bolivar Street, also travelling south collided with the rear of the car, with the result that Miss Reid was injured.

City Council Endorses New Arena Project

The following resolution by Alderman Bradburn, seconded by Alderman Cotton, was unanimously passed by the council Monday night:—

"Whereas it is felt that the Peterborough Memorial Community Centre will fill a great need in the community, recreational and social life of the city;

And, whereas approximately $200,000 has been subscribed toward the erection of the first unit of the Centre by industry, business and the citizens generally;

And, whereas the council of the Corporation of the City of Peterborough is submitting a money bylaw for $75,000 to the votes of the ratepayers at the municipal elections on December 4th;

Therefore, be it resolved that this council indorse the Peterborough Memorial Community Centre project and recommends its support to the ratepayers."

IN BELGIUM—Capt. C. E. (Cy) Whatley, whose wife and son Richard live at 218 Westcott street, is serving in Belgium with the Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders of Canada. He is the son of RQMS Sidney Whatley and Mrs. Whatley, 220 Murray street, and prior to enlisting worked at the CGE.

Praise Given Mayor's Work

"For the last fifteen years Peterborough has had virtually the service of a city manager in the two men who have been Mayor during that time," said Alderman Dutton in a nominations comment this morning.

"I do not know the intentions of Mayor Hamilton, but I feel that he has done a magnificent job. In fact I don't think most of the citizens appreciate the kind of job he has done, and the time he has given to it," Alderman Dutton said. "If he were engaged as full time city manager and at a salary commensurate with that position, I don't think Mayor Hamilton could have given much more of his time than he has given during the years of his service as Mayor.

Peterborough has been exceptionally well served by its last two Mayors, the late Roland Denne and Mayor Hamilton. Not only have they had the time to devote to the city affairs, but they had a special interest in it. The municipal service was something that strongly appealed to them, and for that reason alone I think that it would not be an easy matter to follow in their footsteps. Probably the citizens would not actually expect of their Mayor all the service in time and care which it has received during these last fifteen years, but the fact is that we have had it without most of us being aware of the extent of it."

Alderman Dutton said he had not been considering any possibilities of himself being a candidate for the mayoral office beyond his realization of the demands in time and responsibility which would have to be faced.

"I am not a free agent and could not spare the time that Mayor Hamilton has given to his duties. However, if I am nominated on Friday night I think I will be a candidate again for the council."

Lindsay Woman Convicted In Traffic Case

Declaring that on all the evidence he could not find that the accused had been guilty of driving without due care and attention, Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court Tuesday afternoon found Thomas M. Johnston, Ottawa transport driver, not guilty of careless driving.

Johnston was defended by T. J. Carley, K.C., and hearing of the case and the argument took nearly all day.

The charge arose out of an accident three miles east of Havelock, involving a Smith transport driven by Johnston and an automobile driven by Mrs. Rita Minaker, of Lindsay, and owned by her husband. Careless driving charges had been laid against both drivers by Provincial Constable Archie Grayling, of Havelock, who investigated the crash.

There was considerable variance in the evidence. Mrs. Minaker had sworn that her car was clear of the highway when it was struck as she was driving into a farmer's gateway and that she had put out her hand well before making the turn.

Evidence of Provincial Constable Grayling was that the point of impact was on the travelled portion of the highway, and Johnston swore that he had not seen Mrs. Minaker put out her hand or give any notice that she was about to make a turn. Johnston also said that he had sounded his horn repeatedly, and Mrs. Minaker, called in reply, swore that she did not hear any horn.

Pleads Guilty

After Magistrate Langley had dismissed the charge against Johnston, Mrs. Minaker pleaded guilty to careless driving.

In her behalf A. T. Lacey, Lindsay, pleaded that if anything his client had been guilty only of misjudgment not of deliberate carelessness.

Magistrate Langley agreed that there had been nothing deliberate about it, but that Mrs. Minaker had failed to discharge the responsibility that was upon her to make sure that the operation could be performed safely before making a left turn.

His Worship imposed a fine of $15 and $2.50 costs upon the Lindsay woman.

Soldier Drives Stolen Truck

Police had a chase over northern roads early this morning trying to round up a soldier in a stolen Canadian Pacific Express truck. The vehicle had been taken from the Hood & Cumming garage some time after midnight, for the doors of the establishment had been tried several times earlier in the night by the police and everything was all right then.

Constable Gordon Trennum saw the truck near the corner of Antrim and George Streets and tried to flash it down when he saw that the driver seemed to be having trouble handling the vehicle. The truck failed to stop, an as it passed the officer noticed a soldier at the wheel.

Constable Trennum telephoned the Police Station and a police cruiser was given a radio message to take up the hunt. The truck had travelled north and the officers found no sign of it.

However, early to-day the stolen machine was abandoned near the Hood & Cumming garage where the joy-riding thief had apparently left it.

Pte. Irene Vivash At Post In Belgium Area

By MARGARET ECKER.

SOMEWHERE IN BELGIUM, Nov. 22— (CP) — Back of the front line but still in the area of excitement, Canadian Women's Army Corps members are doing their job.

It isn't an exciting job—typing filing and other secretarial work similar to which they might be doing in an office somewhere in Canada—but up here, not far from the Belgian-Holland border, they get the contagious thrill in the air when the 1st Canadian Army is pushing ahead.

The windows of their headquarters have been smashed and now that winter is coming and fuel short they know what cold is. But of the 130 stationed here you don't find many who want to go home until the fight is finished.

A great many of the CWAC'S work in the records department, in the army group of which Lieut. Nancy Riley of Winnipeg is assistant camp commandant.

Lieut. Marjorie Unsworth of Victoria, their commanding officer took us through the large building where record cards for every man and women over here with the Canadian Amy are kept.

Sgt. Irene Vivash of Peterborough, as supervising N.C.O. worked in an office where Pte. Edna Bautz of Arnprior, flicked through cards in answer to official enquiries of the where abouts of certain soldiers.

Sometimes it's humdrum. but it's an important job these girls do, helping keep check on every Canadian soldier, entering on cards every move a soldier makes, so that he can be located without difficulty.

More CWACS were working in another records section under Capt. B. T. Saunders of Calgary, whose personal assistant is Pte. Marea Doughty, Toronto.

"I have Doughty and Doty with me," he joked, indicating Pte. Thelma Doty, High River, Alta., who with Pte. Muriel Forrester of Victoria were compiling statictic sheets on Canadian casualties.

In the section where the documents of men who are missing are handled, Cpl. Thomas Murphy of Montreal was supervising a staff of CWACS, including Pte. Elsie Jukes, Hamilton, Ont., Pte. Laurette Beaulne, Lachute, Que., and Pte. Doris Gardner.

Doris looked up from her work long enough to say, "most of us like the Belgians better than any one we've met since we've been overseas. They seem more friendly.

The girls live upstairs in the big building in which they work, which is in the middle of a pretty Belgian town.

"The girls have a good time," said Lieut. Unsworth, as we left the building. "They play basketball, and bowl. When there are days off they go on sightseeing tours. Most of them went to visit the fields of Waterloo the other day."

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Brooks Observe Golden Jubilee

YOUNG'S POINT, Nov. 22 (ENS) —Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Brooks of Young's Point quietly celebrated their golden wedding anniversary Monday evening with a dinner at their home, attended by members of their family and close relatives and friends. Their son, FO Clare Brooks, was reported killed overseas recently, and the anniversary was observed very quietly in view of their recent sad bereavement. During the evening, the couple were presented with a purse of money by Adrian Brooks, on behalf of the children, and with a purse of money by little Shaaron O'Brien, on behalf of the grandchildren.

Members of the family who were present were: Russel Brooks, and Mrs. Brooks, of Toronto; Adrian Brooks and Mrs. Brooks, Miss Helen Brooks of Peterborough; and Mrs. E. Johnston and Mr. Johnston of Young's Point. Another son, Sgt. O R. Brooks, is serving in France. The grandchildren are: Mr. and Mrs. James O'Brien, Mr. and Mrs. J. Pasciano, Miss Frances Brooks and Jack Brooks of Peterborough; and Sgt. A. R. Brooks, R.C.A.F. overseas; Leading Stoker William Brooks, R.C. N.V.R., and LAC. Clare Johnston, R.C.A.F., Moncton, N.B. The great-grandchildren are Jimmy and Shaaron O'Brien, and another great-grandchild was born on the evening of the anniversary, to doubly mark the occasion.

Mrs. J. V. Elliott Heads Kinette Club

Mrs. J. G. Wharry, Middleton Drive, was hostess to the Peterborough Kinettes for their annual meeting on Tuesday evening. The meeting took the form of a pot luck supper, served buffet style.

The secretary's report was read by Mrs. J. King and the treasurer's report was given by Mrs. M. Holt in the absence of the treasurer, Mrs. N. Giles. The sum of $950 has been forwarded by the Kinettes to headquarters for Milk for Britain fund.

Mrs. W. J. Gordon, convener of Milk for Britain bottle collections reported approximately $300 had been collected from bottles during the year. A donation of $10 has been received from the Victory Workers, George Street.

Mrs. M. Holt, the retiring president, thanked the executive and members for their co-operation throughout the year. Mrs. W. Osborne, convener of the Nominating committee, presented the slate of officerss for 1945 and those elected were:

President, Mrs. J. V. Elliott; vice-president, Mrs. J. King; secretary, Mrss. N. E. Elliott; treasurer, Mrs. N. Giles.

Mrs. M. Holt thanked Mrs. Wharry for her kindness and also the committee in charge.

The next meeting will be held on January 16 at the home of Mrs. T. Lister, 581 Murray street.

Diplomas Given Pupils At Mann Recital

An excellent program of varied musical and vocal selections was presented in a recital by pupils of Frederic G. Mann, L.Mus., Tuesday evening in St. John's parish hall. In connection with the recital, the presentation of awards from examinations from McGill University Faculty of Music, Toronto Conservatory of Music and the Dominion College of Music was made.

All the vocal selections were marked by clear diction and good delivery, the voices clearly carrying throughout the well-filled auditorium. The piano presentations showed painstaking study and application on the part of the pupils and expert and careful guidance by the teacher. All numbers were outstanding in expression, since an intimate knowledge of their pieces enabled those taking part to devote more attention to expression and execution.

Canon W. P. Robertson, in his remarks preceding the presentation of diplomas, congratulated Mr. Mann on his excellent standard in music maintained in the 21 recitals his pupils had presented. He also warmly congratulated the successful applicants in the examinations. Mr. Mann, briefly thanking the large number of interested guests present, said that their presence was an encouragement for those taking part in the program, and added his appreciation for their interest.

Present Diplomas

Musical Evening Held At School

A musical evening, sponsored by members of the Confederation Home and School Association, was held Tuesday in Arnold Olmstead's room at the school. The program included instrumental and vocal selections, as well as several readings.

Vocal selections were presented by the following: a quartette, from St. George's boy choir, Jack Doleman, Billy White, Ronald Strickland and Edwin Curtis, "O for a Closer Walk with God"; a duet, by Mrs. E. W. Cooper and Miss Gwen Cooper, "Peace I Leave With You"; solos, "Roll On Thou Deep and Dark Blue Ocean", "One Alone", and "Bells Of The Sea", by W. Farr; a quartette from St. George's choir, Mrs. R. Pilling, Mrs. E. W. Cooper, W. Farr and J. Bransom, "Now The Day Is Over". Mrs. A. Watkins was accompanist for these numbers. Miss Helen Parkinson, accompanied by Miss Elsie Chambers sang "A Page's Road Song", "Love Is The Sweetest Thing", and "Little Yeller Dog".

Miss Chambers played two piano solos, "Valse in E Minor" and "Fashionette". Mrs. E. Foster played the following violin solos, "Cavatina", "The Swan", "Souvenir de Sorento" and "Cradle Song", accompanied at the piano by W. Potter. Electric guitar duets, "Hilo March" and "Aloha" were presented by Mrs. G. Welch and Miss Carter. Mr. Sharpe gave two readings "The Battle of Trafalgar" and "Little Aggie". and Mrs. K. Savigny also gave a reading, "White Sox Ball Game".

Girl Guide Work Outlined to WMS

Mrs. R. Whalon, speaking on Girl Guide work, was guest speaker at the regular meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of St. Andrew's United Church, Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Whalon gave an outline of the work in general, and said that the training the girls gained in Guide work was beneficial to them all through life.

Mrs. F. W. K. Harris presided in the absence of the president, Mrs. H. Tremaine. In answer to a letter from G. A. Gillespie, president of the Health League of Canada, Peterborough branch, Miss M. Ferguson was named as representative to the League, and Mrs. B. Hawley as a alternate. Mrs. W. Henry read the Scripture, Mrs. W. Nelson led in prayer, and Mrs. C. M. Scott offered the dedicatory prayer. Miss M. Ferguson, whose group was in charge of the meeting, took the lesson from the study book.

Twenty calls were reported by the community friendship committee, the group decided to endorse the plan for the new civic hospital. It was also decided that the mission band would be entertained at the next meeting on December 12. Mrs. Ford Turner was guest soloist, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. R. B. Harle. At the close of the meeting, refreshments were served by the group in charge, with Mrs. T. H. Skinner as convener.

Mrs. Kitney Is Class Hostess

Mrs. Ernest Kitney was hostess on Tuesday night to the King's Own Bible Class of St. James Sunday School at her home, River road south.

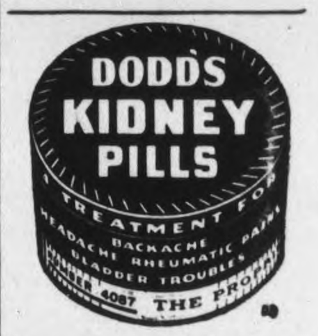
A devotional service, led by Mrs. W. K. Sloane, opened the meeting, and a reading by Mrs. E. R. Frost, "There's Always Another Day." A brief outline of the lives of Rev. A. R. and Mrs. Graham and their splendid work in India was given in an interesting story by Mrs. Sloane.

Mrs. James Goldie, 1st vice-president, led the business session. Reports on sewing, visiting and Sunshine work given. Final plans for the class bazaar on Friday, November 24, were completed. A nominating committee was chosen as follows to prepare for the coming election of officers: Mrs. George Rowe, Mrs. E. Kitney, Miss M. Collins, Mrs. B. Pitchford and Mrs. Walter Wright. Mrs. George Butcher, program convener, presented a varied and very interesting evening's entertainment when Mrs. Harry Northrop, accompanied by Mrs. H. F. Doig, sang a delightful group of solos, "Life's Lovely Things" and "The Slumber Boat." Equally enjoyed was the charming duet, "When I Come to the End of a Long, Long Road," by Mrs. H. F. Doig and Mrs. George Butcher, who were accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Goldie.

Everyone entered whole-heartedly into the clever contest, a test to our present-day vocabulary, "Do you know your abbreviations?", in which Mrs. H. F. Doig was the winner.

The social committee served dainty refreshments, and a vote of thanks was tendered by Mrs. A. Clarke and Mrs. R. Allen.

The December meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. A. Wilson, Westcott street, and will take the form of a Christmas party.



Mother, Mix Your Own Cough Syrup. It's Fine

Gives Quick Relief. Saves Money. Easily Mixed.

This well-known medicine, mixed in your own kitchen, costs very little, but it gives delightful, swift-acting relief from coughs due to colds. It takes but a moment to prepare—it's so easy anyone can do it. And it saves real money.

Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments until dissolved. No cooking is needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Then get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist. Pour this into a 16 oz. bottle and add your syrup. Thus you make 16 ounces of really splendid cough syrup—and it gives you four times as much cough medicine for your money. It never spoils, lasts a family a long time, and children love its taste.

And for quick, satisfying relief, you'll say it's really splendid. It has a three-fold action. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear air passages. You'll be delighted by its prompt, pleasing results.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, a well-known and reliable soothing agent for winter coughs. Money refunded if it doesn't please you.

Two new inspirations

Families love Jell-O and Jell-O Puddings; women appreciate their wholesomeness . . . their ease and quickness of preparation. Now, wartime restrictions make it difficult to get as much of them as you'd like. So get more servings, by making delicious dishes like the ones below, and those on the packages.

BUTTERSCOTCH APPLES

4 apples
Sugar syrup (⅓ cup sugar, ⅓ cup water)
1 package JELL-O Butterscotch Pudding
2 cups milk

Peel apples, cut in eighths and remove cores. Simmer gently in sugar syrup, a few at a time, until tender. Drain. Prepare Jell-O Pudding with milk, as directed on package. Cool. Arrange apples in dessert glasses and cover with Jell-O Pudding. Chill. Serve with the syrup in which the apples were cooked. Eight servings.

JELL-O FRUIT PARFAIT

1 package Lime JELL-O
2 cups hot water
2 cups mixed fruits

Dissolve Jell-O in hot water. Turn into wet shallow pan. Chill until firm. At serving time, cut jelly in cubes with a warm sharp knife. Pile lightly in parfait glasses, alternately with mixed fruits. Eight servings.

Marines Tied At Top With Westclox

Outboard Marines and Westclox failed to break the deadlock for first place in the Ladies' City Five Pin League in Monday night's games. Both outfits made a clean sweep and as a result they are still tied with 18 points each.

Merry Macs, Brintons and Corvettes also won three games each and for the first time this season the five winning teams failed to drop a game.

Marg. Hawthorne of Westclox won the individual honors with a cross of 743, with Marion Timm second with 714 and M. Graham and Betty Castle tied for third with 676. Other good scores were M. Goldie 655, Marg Selkirk 648, M. Sanderson 645 and P. Hawthorne 638.

Highest single was Marion Timm's 323. Marg Hawthorne had 298 and 254. M. Graham 280, Betty Castle 275, M. Goldie 271, M. Batley 248 and M. Fallon 247.

Canadians Play Ball In Soccer Sweaters

SOMEWHERE IN BELGIUM, Nov. 22 (CP)—The Canadian game of softball was introduced to a Belgian town for the first time when two teams from a Canadian Army bridge company staged a sports meet under a warm fall sun before moving "up the line."

The winning team—the score was 4-1—received a great ovation from hundreds of Belgian spectators—not because the townspeople understood what it was all about but because the winners wore the borrowed sweaters of the town soccer club and called themselves the "Belgium" team.

Included in the "Belgium" lineup were Pte. N. Jones of Hamilton, Ont., who pitched, Sgts. F. Speck of Kirkland Lake, Ont., and J. H. Atherton of Toronto, and Ptes. J. W. Crowe, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., and D. P. Armstrong, Sinclair, Man. Among the losing team were Sgt. W. D. Hannah, Toronto; Cpl. Ken Reardon, Winnipeg; Ptes. J. M. Freve, Mattawa, Ont., and Spr. I. Napolsky of Halifax.

Pte. J. E. Stone of Cranbrook, B.C., won the 100-yard dash with Reardon, former professional hockey player, second, while the pick-a-back race went to L.-Cpl. N. Swirla of Weston, Ont., teamed with Pte. R. J. McConnell of Pembroke, Ont. Swirla also won the biscuit race.

The heavies from the workshops, including Sgt. H. Sparrow of Winnipeg, Cpl. C. W. O'Brien of Moncton, N.B., and Ptes. G. R. Clark, Provost, Alta., and A. I. Boyce, Blenheim, Ont., won the tug-of-war competition.

DOROTHY DIX . . . .

POSTWAR ADJUSTMENT TO HOME LIFE

It Will Take All of Love, Patience, Wisdom and Courage To Solve This Problem.

DEAR MISS DIX—My husband was in the service for over three years and since his discharge from the army about a year ago there seems to be something lacking in our married life which is causing dissatisfaction on his part. We love each other dearly and neither of us wants a divorce. He hasn't fallen in love with any other woman, yet he seems uninterested and bored and wants only to be by himself or with men friends.

Since we are living in the home of his parents I am not free to entertain our friends, particularly as they are the old-fashioned kind who would not approve of any gaiety. Is there anything I can do to salvage our marriage and make it a success?

C. H. O.

It Can Be Done But It's Hard

ANSWER—You are confronting a problem which millions of other wives are going to have to face after the war, and that is how to house-break their husbands again and adjust them once more to domestic life. The situation is full of complications and it is going to take all of the love of a bride, the patience of a martyr, and the wisdom of a seer to solve it, for it is made up of conflicting emotions and dreams and disillusions and disappintments to which is added the cussedness and contrariness of human beings.

For three years you and your husband have been parted and you have been through all sorts of experiences that have changed you both. You are no longer lighthearted and gay, yet that is what each of you expected the other to still be when you were united again. You can't take up your marriage just where you laid it down and feel towards each other just as you did when he marched off to war. And that feeling of frustration creeps into your attitude towards each other without your realizing it.

Then your husband has been through ordeals that left him physically and mentally and emotionally exhausted. To a man who has known the horrors and excitements of war; who has seen death and known suffering; ho has watched commonplace men turn suddenly into shining heroes, just ordinary, everyday life, where nothing more exciting than having steak for dinner happens, is bound to fall flat.

And that is why the returning soldiers find their only comradeship with men who have fought side by side with them, and who know what they know, have seen what they have seen, and felt what they have felt. And no matter how much they and their wives love each other, they cannot have a oneness again until they build up new points of contact.

It is a long job and a hard job that the war wives have cut out for them before they get their husbands really back from the war. But it can be done if they have the love and the patience to do it.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX — My mother has T.B. and is very careless of where she spits and her general habits. In consequence my kid sister has contracted the disease from her. My husband is in the service and I get an $80 a month allotment. Mother has $37 from my brother who is in the service. But that is not enough for us to live on and even my watch is now in pawn. I would love to go to work and try to make some money, but I have to stay at home to do the housework. What can I do?

J. M.

ANSWER—Present your case to the Board of Health. It would do something about putting your mother and sister in a sanatorium where they could get the proper care and not spread the disease any farther. If you go on living in the house with these two T. B. patients who refuse to take any sanitary precautions, you will be the next victim. I know of one family of eight who were completely wiped out by this dread disease because they would not be separated and so infected each other.

DEAR MISS DIX—Is it all right for a girl of 16 to start her hope chest?

A CONSTANT READER.

ANSWER— — It is perfectly all right, but it seems a little premature, unless you see some youth with a wedding ring in his ves pocket, coming down your stree Anyway, it shows that you have a lovely, optimistic disposition, so ge on with working monograms on your towels.

Eight Hunters Return Bag Only 4 Deer

Deer were plentiful, but a party of eight Peterborough men failed to bag any more than four, during a week's hunt in the Cavendish district recently. Among those in the party were Roy Hutchinson, Charles Elliott, Chris. Hughes, Frank Hughes, Reuben Wilson, Dr. R. Chenoweth, Walter Head, and Ed. Hill.

Mr. Elliott admits that three deer were missed by himself, and others in the party can tell of deer walking right by them, and living.

Frank Hughes told of hitting one deer, knocking it down, then, approaching it after a while and seeing it get up and dash away. There were no more shells in his gun, and by the time he reloaded, the anima had escaped into the woods again. Others in the party couldn't fire because he was standing there.

Although the party only managed to bring home the four deer, all say the hunt was a most enjoyable one.

Northey Hits Homers At Opportune Times

NEW YORK, Nov. 22—(CP)—When Ron Northey, leading hitter of the Phillies, belts a homer, it usually means something, says Bill Brandt, veteran National League publicity director. Bill has clippings to prove his point.

In 1943 Northey was the first southpaw to homer against the St. Louis Cardinals. During the past season his 15th inning homer beat the Boston Braves, 1-0, the same day Jim Tobin hurled his second no-hit, no-run game in the first inning nightcap of a twin bill. Later in the season he homered off Tobin with the bases loaded.

Northey hit 22 homers last season and batted in 104 runs.

Cards' Martin Marion Voted Most Valuable Player

NEW YORK, Nov. 22 — (AP). — Martin Marion of St. Louis Cardinals Tuesday was named the most valuable player in the National League in 1944 by a margin of one vote over Bill Nicholson of Chicago Clubs in the annual balloting of a 24-man committee of the Baseball Writers' Association of American.

In the closest finish since the current vote tabulation system was adopted in 1938, the lean 6.02 shortstop from Iva, S.C., picked up seven first-place votes to four for the Chicago slugger but the graduated point allotment closed the gap to make the final point total read Marion 190, Nicholson 189.

People's Choice Third

Fred (Dixie) Walker of Brooklyn, batting champion with an unofficial .375 mark, finished third with 145, nine points ahead of Stan Musial of St. Louis, who took top honors a year ago. Two pitchers, Bucky Walters of Cincinnati and Rookie Bill Voiselle of New York, tied for fifth at 107.

Ray Mueller of Cincinnati, who caught every one of the Reds' 155 games, was ranked next with 85, followed in the first 10 by Walker Cooper of St. Louis, 72, Mort Cooper of St. Louis, 63, and Bob Elliott of Pittsburgh, 57.

Marion was the third successive Redbird to capture the coveted award, following Musial in 1943 and M. Cooper in 1942, becoming the first shortstop to be honored in the history of the poll dating back to 1924.

Despite a batting average of only .269 Marion accounted for 64 runs batted in but it was his brilliant fielding that tabbed the genial Southerner as the No. 1 man in the circuit.

Bob Elliott Gets 57

Ray (Iron Man) Mueller of Cincinnati, who caught every one of the Reds' 155 games, pulled down 85 markers to finish ahead of the Redbirds' Cooper brothers, Walker who had 72 points and Mort who received 63. Bob Elliott of Pittsburgh rounded out the first 10 with 57 credits.

On the bases of 14 points for a first-place vote, nine for second, eight for third and so down to one for 10th, other members players receiving 10 or more votes were:

Rip Sewell of Pittsburgh, 49; Babe Dahlgren of Pittsburgh, 33; Frank McCormick of Cincinnati, 32; Phil Cavarretta of Chicago, 27; Ray Sanders of St. Louis, 25; Mel Ott of New York, 20; Jim Tobin of Boston, 13; Johnny Hopp of St. Louis and Ron Northey of Philadelphia, 10.

Of the 24 first place votes, seven went to Marion and four to Nicholson. Walker, Musial and Voiselle each had three, Mueller two and W. Cooper and Dahlgren, one each."

Chin Brothers Balk At Signing

PORT COLBORNE, Ont., Nov. 22 —(CP)—The Chinese hockey-playing brother from Lucknow—George, Albert and William Chin—have returned to their homes without taking part in any games with the Port Colborne entry in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

This was made known last night by officials of the Port Colborne club who linked their departure with a notice of motion presented at the annual meeting of the Ontario Minor Hockey Association last year. Under the motion, players participating in a junior game are barred from playing in the O.M.H.A. juvenile series.

Officials here said they were unable to learn whether the regulation is actually in force but the Chins and other lesser known juveniles were advised not to play with the Ports even in one game in case it is.

The Chins had a tryout this season with Toronto Maple Leafs.

Hard Game Feature Of Army Tennis Contest

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Nov. 22—(CP)—Highlighted by a hard-smashing singles match, the Canadian Army (England) team tennis championship was won by a Canadian Ordnance and Mechanical Engineers Reinforcement Unit which defeated Canadian Ordnance Depot five matches to three.

The tournament followed Davis Cup rules with two singles and two doubles matches in a round-robin contest. Outstanding was a battle in which Pte. Yolland of Penticton, B.C., member of the losing team, beat Capt. H. P. Penwarden of Winnipeg 7-5, 6-3. Yolland went on to defeat Pte. E. E. Wall of Ottawa, 6-4, 6-1, while Penwarden defeated Lieut. J. A. Cook of Montreal, 6-3, 6.4.

Among the doubles matches, Capt. A. MacLaren of Ottawa and Pte. E. Harbinson of Victoria, COMERU members, walloped Pte. W. Bodden of Winnipeg and F. Taggaret of Kelowna, B.C., 6-0, 6-1.

The Tea Hour Gossip . . . .

As Christmas is only about six weeks away, you might appreciate a few recipes for Christmas dainties. We all know that butter and sugar are rationed but we will all put forth an extra effort to have a few things at Christmas, and do with less in the weeks that follow. Following you will find some recipes that will prove useful to you in preparing for Christmas.

Christmas Cake

2 cups butter, 2 cups brown sugar, 6 eggs, 1 cup strong coffee, 3 pounds currants, 2 pounds seeded raisins, 1 pound citron, ¼ pound almonds, 4 cups flour, 1 teaspoon mace, ¼ teaspoon nutmeg, 2 teaspoons cinnamon, ½ teaspoon soda.

Wash fruit and chop finely. Cream the butter, add sugar gradually and beat well. Beat the white of eggs until stiff. Beat the yolks until thick and lemon-colored. Add both to the first mixture. Then add coffee, the flour mixed and sifted with spices and soda and the well floured fruits and nuts. Place in greased pans, lined with greased brown paper. Bake three to four hours in a very slow oven.

Cocoanut Macaroons

4 egg whites, 1½ tablespoons cornstarch, 1½ cups of icing sugar, 3 cups shredded cocoanut, vanilla, pinch of salt.

Beat egg whites until stiff. Cook the egg whites, cornstarch, icing sugar and salt in a double boiler, about seven minutes stirring constantly. Remove from the fire, add cocoanut and vanilla and drop by teaspoonsful on a greased baking sheet. Bake in a moderate oven, until slightly browned.

African Nougat

2½ cups white sugar, ½ cup corn syrup, ½ cup boiling water, 2 egg whites.

Boil the sugar, corn syrup and water until the mixture forms a soft ball in water. Take out ½ cup and add to well beaten egg whites, beating all the time. Boil the rest until it forms a hard ball in water. Remove from the stove and add the flavoring. Let cool slightly, then beat into the other mixture. When it starts to stiffen drop by teaspoonful onto a buttered plate.

Watson Tosses

took a keen delight in tossing his opponent out of the ring. The result was plenty of spirited action. The end came after Hall had thrown Watson out through the ropes and had repeatedly knocked him back again. He tried the strategy once too often however for the Whipper met him with a stiff right to the jaw that knocked him off his feet. Then the champ leaped the ropes and dived on top of the Californian. It looked like the winning fall then and there. Hall managed to squirm out of the grip however, but he did not delay his defeat more than a minute or two for Watson softened him up with a couple of drop kicks and then hurled him right over the ropes. Hall tried to come back but he was tossed back to the floor of the arena several times and after hitting the apron of the ring on the way out after one of those Watson charges he was unable to climb in again before Referee Maxwell had counted ten and the grim battle was over.

Dunlop Back.

Al Bunny Dunlop, who has been out of action for some time on account of illness, made a comeback in the semi-final and had quite a tussle with a heavily-built newcomer in the person of Al Smith, New York. The bout went 30 minutes to a draw. Dunlop started out like a tornado going somewhere to happen and for the first few minutes the New Yorker took a terrific ride as Bunny dug out all his back alley technique. Then Smith started in to demonstrate that he had a few tricks up his sleeve himself. He applied an arm stretch to Dunlop's left flipper and worked on that member so long that it looked as if he were going to tear the arm off and send it home for a souvenir. Bunny could not break the hold and twice Smith marched the Toronto strong man around the ring on his knees.

When Dunlop finally worked out of that predicament he worked out of the ring and applied an osteopathic treatment to his injured arm. bit of the night. He blithely tried to jump the ropes on the way out, got his dressing gown tangled in the strands and fell in a heap. Angrily tossing the robe back into the ring Bunny attempted to jump back himself and once again missed the leap and landed heavily on the mat, while the crowd roared.

Stack's First Win

Bill Stack, the tall young Bowmanville boy, won a surprise victory over the smooth-working Mike Demetre of Montreal in the preliminary. Stack had the edge in reach and height but the Montrealer had a big advantage in experience. However the rookie from down Bowmanville way held his own in a good battle and finally won just at the moment when it looked as if Demetre had the bout in hand. He knocked Stack over with a couple of flying tackles and the tall boy was apparently ready for the cleaners. The Montreal Greek cut loose with a third one but instead of being hit Stack met the attack with a flying scissors hold in the best McCready manner and before Demetre could figure out what had gone wrong with his strategy his shoulders had been pinned and the bout was over.

All three bouts were handled by Referee Bert Maxwell with Fred Scates master of ceremonies and custodian of the official timepiece.

was figured in on the 35 cent rate, he said.

Some Are Neglected.

Reeve Barnard of South Monaghan brought up the lack of road work in his township. For some years he had been voting on the yearly road appropriation. He knew from inspection that some roads in the north end of the county, his own for instance, showed no signs of the money that was being spent yearly on roads. He said that he didn't desire to appear personal, but he felt that the Road Commission could stand some efficiency.

"We should be able to get things done without having to come down here to pull somebody's leg to get it done. Pretty soon we will have broken down county roads and what machinery is not being used will be rusted and finally all we will have left will be the county road superintendent," declared Reeve Barnard.

Alnwick Township.

Reeve H. D. Davidson of Alnwick township, said that the snow plow was not covering all that it should. It would come out to Harwood and then go back to Cobourg and for three and four days in a week, a section of road would be blocked with snow through failure of the plow to get to work on it.

Mr. Miller said that he was sure that Mr. Davidson would agree that there had been no complaints in that regard last winter but in the previous winter when conditions were very bad, the equipment couldn't get up Dodge's Hill. This particular hill was down in the post-war program for elimination. As far as Mr. Bernard was concerned, it was a fact that the road commissions of past years and this year, did not spend the money on roads on a mileage basis. Some day South Monaghan township will see the construction gang come in and the roads would be put into good shape.

Deputy-reeve H. Cathcart of Cavan township asked Mr. Miller who set the rate for snow plows and he was informed that the Dept. auditor set the rate. The rate was $6 per hour. Mr. Cathcart said in reply that in Peterborough county the cost was $4.50. Mr. Miller said that it may have been that the Peterborough county plow was one which cost less to operate. However, it should be realized, said the road superintendent, that any profit on the operation of the snow plow went back into the counties.

Few Road Bosses.

"On the whole we thought the roads in good shape," commented Warden L. Kelley. "However, it looks like our road organization could be handled a little differently. We have 15 or 18 road bosses, who are farmers and do their farm work and road work. We can never get experienced road bosses like that. We have 195 miles of gravel in our 233 miles of county roads and I think that after the war it might be a good idea to narrow it down to four or five road bosses who would be working on the roads the year round and would be [illegible] in charge of say fifty miles of [illegible] It has worked out in other [illegible]ties and it should work out all right here," suggested the Warden.

Council then adjourned until two p.m. this afternoon.

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Thursday, November 23

According to the lunar aspects dominant on this day there is hope of placing the future and its fortunes on a sound and secure basis, but this by concentration of the energies, faculties and talents, with well-laid plans, tactics and enduring objectives. These should be sustained by patience, fortitude, and persistent effort and industry, against obstacles, impediments and personal influence of those in high places. With a conservation of assets and resources steadily increasing, benefits and possessions should be in sight. Restrain impulses to strife.

Those whose birthday it is may be obliged to wrest security and enduring good fortune from difficulties, frustrations and obstacles of a tenacious nature. With restraint of the feelings and intemperate emotions, supported by a determined effort and industry against many odds and reverses. In the long run there should be stability, sound foundations and growing possessions, of real value. However, do not overdo, take time for relaxation and some leisure.

A child born on this day may have much character fortitude, industry and application, with which to overcome reversals, frustrations and impediments. It may reap solid rewards with advancing years.

YOU MUST DO IT TWICE

THERE IS ordinarily no use in taking a finesse when you hold the A-Q-J of a suit unless you are prepared to do it twice. That is, if you are hoping to set up the rest of the suit and run it all without losing any tricks in it. If you can't put the lead opposite it a second time to try a second finesse, you must stake your hopes on laying down the ace on the second round in an effort to catch the king. But it is better to prepare in advance to take the finesse twice if you can.

West led the spade 4 to the K, and South decided right away his contract was a cinch. He led the club J, which East ducked, then the 10, overtaking with the K in dummy. East ducking again because his part[illegible] 6-3 told him he h[illegible]'s and South therefore three in the suit. The declarer then finessed the diamond Q, but had no other quick entry to finesse again, so laid down the diamond A in the hope that the K would drop, but it didn't. So then he led the J to the K to set up the rest of the suit.

East also took his club A, seeing that the dummy was blocked, then led his spade 7 to the A. South scored the diamond 7 and 3, but that made only eight tricks. He then had to lose the lead to the heart A, whereupon two finishing spades beat him.

When leading clubs, South should have used dummy's K on one lead, as an entry for one diamond finesse, then the club Q on the next as an entry for a second finesse. By so doing, he could have scored five tricks in diamonds, plus two in clubs and two in spades.

COST OF LIVING IN POLAND—The pictogram above shows the purchasing power of 100 Polish zlotys (approximately $20 in Canadian money) before the war and after four years of German occupation. The average monthly wage in pre-war Poland was 300 zlotys or $60 but the cost of living was low in comparison with other European countries. After four years of occupation the cost of existing was astronomical. Money has little meaning and such foodstuffs and clothing as are available are acquired by the system of barter. Since the above figures were released another year of occupation has been added and Polish information sources indicate that the situation today is, if anything, worse.

Nubbins Enjoys Early Christmas

DENVER, Nov. 22 — (AP) — A little boy lay in a Denver hospital bed today "in bad shape" after a tiring pre-dated Christmas celebration.

Forest (Nubbins) Hoffman, three, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Hoffman of Cheyne, Wyo., opened presents Sunday that came from as far away as Maine and Florida and then was whisked 100 miles to Denver last night in his doctor's automobile for an examination by a urologist.

The boy's physician, Dr. G. B. Savory, said that he was in "bad shape" and that he didn't think the examination would help but that everything was being tried. Nubbins was under treatment about a month ago by the unnamed urologist who will examine him today.

A bladder malady which doctors described as incurable may take Nubbins' life before December 25. That's why the Hoffmans decided to hold the party early—a party that attracted attention throughout the continent.

Son Given Leave Killed Next Day

TORONTO, Nov. 22—(CP)—Mr. and Mrs. John Purdy a few days ago received a letter from their son, Sgt. John Russell Purdy, in Italy, saying that he would be home for Christmas under the rule permitting Christmas leave for a certain number of overseas veterans. Sgt. Purdy had been overseas for five years and wrote that his officer "came around today and placed my name on the Christmas leave list."

Yesterday the parents were notified that Sgt. Purdy was killed in action a few days after he had written the letter. Plans had been started for a Christmas wedding by the parents and by Sgt. Purdy's fiancee.

No Happiness in the Home When Mother Is Sick

The tired, worn out mother cannot make a happy home if she is sick and worried by the never ending household duties.

She gets run down and becomes nervous and irritable, downhearted and discouraged, can't rest at night, and gets up in the morning feeling as tired as when she went to bed.

Women suffering in this way may find in Milburn's Health and Nerve Pills a remedy with which to help recuperate their health, build up the run down system, and assist them back to health—happiness again.

Price 50c a box, 65 pills, at all drug counters.

Maurice Chevalier Given Clean Bill

PARIS, Nov. 22 — (CP-Reuter) — Maurice Chevalier, French stage and screen star, suspected of "collaborationist activity" during the German occupation, has been given a clean bill, the Music Halls Purge Committee announced today.

The committee said M. Chevalier gave only one entertainment at a German prison camp, that he was not paid for it, and 10 prisoners were released in exchange for his services.

Broadcasts which he gave over Paris radio were kept to the minimum, the committee said.

The 55-year-old Chevalier has persistently denied reports that he was a collaborationist.

Warsaw News

A crowd of neighbors and friends gathered in the hall recently to honor Mr. and Mrs. David Davidson (Dora Payne) with a miscellaneous shower. They received many beautiful gifts of linen, glass, silver and blankets. The evening was spent in dancing.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Morgan and Freddie, Norwood, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Morgan.

Mrs. Gordon Quirk, Mrs. Emma Selkirk, Mrs. Stewart Clysdale and Mrs. George Weller attended the Women's Institute convention in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Fife, Peterborough, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Payne.

Pte. Hector Monro, Camp Borden, spent the week-end with Dr. and Mrs. Monro.

Miss Violet Darling, who has been a guest of Mrs. Fred Sharpe, has returned home.

The war workers will hold their next meeting December 12 at the home of Mrs. Arthur Payne for the purpose of packing Christmas parcels for boys in Canada and electing new officers.

16,000 DRAFTEES ORDERED OVERSEAS

Men Ordered Overseas To Fill Gaps

Order-In-Council Extends Service Of Required Number

OTTAWA, Nov. 23 — (CP). — Prime Minister Mackenzie King today read to the Commons an Order-in-Council making 16,000 draftees available for service overseas.

The order authorized their dispatch to the United Kingdom, Europe, and other war zones, including the Pacific.

The House listened in silence as Mr. King read the order and then tabled it.

A burst of applause arose from some government supporters but others remained silent

McNAUGHTON'S STATEMENT.

OTTAWA, Nov. 23 (CP) — Defence Minister McNaughton told the Commons today that 16,000 drafted home defence soldiers will be sent to the European theatre of operations.

He said an Order in Council under the provisions of N.R.A.M. has been passed to this effect.

This he explained is the number required to meet reinforcements needs for overseas infantry formations over and above those likely to be available under the voluntary system.

The announcement came at the end of the new minister's first speech to the House, one made by courtesy of the members, since he has not yet been elected and in which he discussed the reinforcement situation frankly.

Maintain Voluntary System

"I have said that except for some 16,000 men we are able to meet all requirements from men who have come forward voluntarily," he stated. "I have said that it is our purpose to maintain the voluntary system to the limit.

"I have stated that 5,000 additional trained infantry must be available early in December to safeguard the position at the end of January, that another 5,000 must be found in January and some 6,000 in the succeeding months.

"I have brought these facts before my colleagues in the cabinet. An order-in-council has been passed extending the service of this number of men to the European theatre of operations.

"This power will be used only to the extent necessary to make up the numbers of reinforcements required."

Gen. McNaughton said there was no difference between himself and his predecessor in office, Col. J. L. Ralston, on purpose but there was a difference on methods of providing reinforcements.

On coming into the Cabinet he believed the traditional voluntary system, given full public support, would provide the men. To have abandoned it at that time might well not have increased but actually decreased the flow of reinforcements.

"Since then," he said, "conditions have altered. Public attention has been riveted on these matters. The paramount need of reinforcements in adequate supply has been recognized throughout our land from coast to coast."

Since taking office he had pressed the application of the voluntary system and pressed completion of the organization and training of home defence soldiers.

Difficulties deterring them from volunteering for overseas service had been in large part removed. District officers commanding had told him they doubted requirements could be met through the volunteer system but loyalty undertook to make another effort.

"This they have now done," he said, "and I must admit that the result have not been adequate. I am advised that there are very many N.R.M.A. men who will not volunteer under present circumstances but who are quite willing to be sent overseas.

Phone Operators Strike Spreading Fast

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23 —(AP)— "Definite action" in a spreading strike of women telephone operators was forecast for late today as the Ohio-born walkout spread to Washington and war-busy Detroit.

Almost simultaneously Miss Jeannette Reedy, vice-president of the striking Ohio Federation of Telephone Workers, was disclosed to have wired union associates from Washington that prospects for settling the dispute today were good.

A spokesman for economic stabilization director Fred Vinson predicted the action here without hinting what it might be. Mr. Vinson, however, usually routes unsolved labor disputes to the White House. Only President Roosevelt can order government seizure.

A settlement would forestall federal government action.

A. J. Krug, war production board chairman who last night conferred with Robert G. Pollock, president of the Ohio Federation today was reported closeted with army officials. The army presumably would take over the struck exchanges in the event of a seizure order.

Orderly

In Washington company officials said its long distance switchboards were "about two-thirds" covered. They added that calls were light, even for a holiday.

The strike everywhere was orderly. It had little effect on the public generally, because most cities affected have automatic dial systems. These do not require operators.

The Washington and Detroit strikes began formally at 6 a.m.

Like a thunderstorm crackling along the lines that link city to city, there were rumblings of still more strikes in answer to the Ohio Federation of Telephone Workers' appeal for assistance from 41 affiliated unions.

Long distance calls were primarily affected.

Michigan Telephone Employees Federation members chose 6 a.m. for their walkout. When that time came, a shift of Detroit workers left their jobs and formed picket lines, leaving a skeleton crew to handle essential calls.

Picketing was orderly in both Detroit and Washington. The shift changes here, staggered over several hours, found only a trickle of workers—both men and women—entering the exchanges.

A company spokesman said he anticipated no serious interruption, adding that there were enough supervisory employees with operating and maintenance experience to service equipment and provide skeleton staffs for suburban exchanges not equipped with automatic dial systems.

No estimate was immediately available on the number of oper-

Power Resigns?

QUEBEC, Nov. 23 — (CP). — The French-language newspaper Le Soleil said in a dispatch from Ottawa today that Air Minister Power "has handed his resignation to the Prime Minister of Canada." Mr. Power is member for Quebec South.

"Word of the resignation came from an authoritative source in parliamentary circles," the newspaper said.

Chiang Accepts New Battle Plan

CHUNGKING, Nov. 23.—(AP).— Maj.-Gen. Wedmeyer announced to-day that Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek has accepted the general outline of a plan he submitted for disposing Chinese forces to meet the Japanese threat and that it now is going into effect.

Wedemeyer, who came to Chungking as commander-in-chief of United States army forces in China after the recent recall of Gen. Stiltwell, made the announcement at a press conference.

He also declared the Japanese would not be defeated by the island-hopping strategy now under way in the Pacific but would have to be ultimately defeated on the continent of Asia.

He said his command automatically would embrace any American seaborne forces landed in China.

To root out the invader "we've got to get to grips with him on the continent," the General declared. "We must get a lodgment in China and sea communications."

Asked if he would bring American troops over "the hump" from India to China, Wedemeyer said: "I visualize the employment of all kinds of resources from all directions."

He asserted the Japanese were "terribly concerned" about their over-all position. He declared the Allies would disclose many things in the future which would increase the enemy's concern.

Eisenhower Asks More Supplies

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23 — (AP). — Gen. Eisenhower said today his soldiers are making daily headway by courage and suffering but they need "myriads of shells and tires and guns and blankets and planes."

The man commanding the gigantic Western Front offensive against Germany appealed personally to his compatriots to over-subscribe the Sixth United States War Loan and "transform the money quickly into vital fighting equipment."

It was Eisenhower's second urgent appeal to buy war bonds. He made it in a talk prepared for broadcast from his European headquarters.

Mud, cold, bullets and minefields can't stop millions of Allied troops from pushing the enemy back if they are plentifully supplied and supported from the homeland, Eisenhower declared.

The equipment is needed "now", he said.

Admiral Nimitz, commander-in-chief of the United States Pacific fleet, said in a Thanksgiving Day message on the same program that "we give thanks . . . to the men and women and children on the home front. Their toil and their savings invested in war bonds have made possible the outfitting and supply of the great fleet which has struck the enemy so effectively."

Brave Tommies Oust Huns In Third Attempt

By CHARLES LYNCH
Reuter War Correspondent

WITH THE BRITISH 2ND ARMY, Nov. 23.—(CP-Reuter.) — This is a story of how a band of British fighting men, their formation broken up twice by heavy German machine-gun and mortar fire, formed for a third time and advanced through the ramparts of the Siegfried Line to gain their objectives and hold them.

It happened yesterday northeast of Geilenchen. British troops were ordered to fight their way on to a high feature and capture the village of Hoven. Twice the tanks formed for the attack. Twice the curtain of bullets and mortar bombs and shells that the Germans sent screaming in, broke up the formation.

For the third time the officers of this formation rallied their men and gave the order to attack.

Across the starting line went these troops and up the shell-scarred slopes to the tiny hamlet of Hoven. In among the wrecked houses they went and word came back "objective reached."

Beaten Off.

The Germans were quick to react. In a matter of minutes after the British had battled their way into Hoven the enemy counter-attacked with crack troops supported by maximum mortar and artillery fire.

Inside Hoven there was bedlam but then came word "enemy beaten off."

Still there was no respite for these wary troops who had had more fighting in three hours than most soldiers experience in as many days even in this sector which has been flaming now for seven days.

French Units Drive Into Strasbourg

Gain 18 Miles In Dash Across Rhine Plain

LONDON, Nov. 23 — (AP). — The famous French 2nd armored division of Maj. Gen. Jacques Le Clerc dashed 18 miles across the level Rhine plain today into the outskirts of Strasbourg, largest French city still in German hands.

Meanwhile, troops of the British 2nd Army cut a big new gap in the German bridgehead in front of the Dutch citadel of Venlo with the capture of Horst, important road communications centre three miles north of Seveum.

In the soggy, heavily fortified Roer River valley 26 miles from Cologne, German divisions threw a series of counter-attacks at the U.S. 9th Army despite the loss of more than 75 tanks in the week-long battle in the fortified zone approaching the Rhine.

Veteran Troops

The whole German front in the south was dissolving. The French, who had fought across the Sahara wastes and helped Marshal Montgomery break the Mareth Line guarding Tunisia, encountered only light resistance. The Germans obviously were scurrying across the swift and broad Rhine by any means at hand. The fate of six to 10 divisions of the German 19th Army was at issue; only soupy weather saved them from slaughter from Allied air power.

After the success of the British 2nd Army troops, only a thin-skinned "balloon" of German resistance badly pinched all around the perimeter, was left tonight in front of Venlo.

The U.S. 1st Army, which captured the battered industrial city of Eschweiler yesterday, mopped up remaining opposition in nearby Durwiss and Lohn and inched slowly forward in the dense and gloomy

Germans Control Vengeance Rockets

LONDON, Nov. 23 (CP)—A Berlin broadcast asserted today that "continuous improvement" had been made in robot and rocket bombs and that the range of the vengeance weapons "is no longer a problem, in spite of the withdrawal of the German front line."

"The flying bombs are becoming more and more the flying artillery of the Germany army," the account said. "The target aiming has been perfected to such a degree that flying bombs may be used against important small enemy centres within the front line."

Work Stoppages In Mines Reduces Australian Coal

By J. E. HOLDSWORTH
Canadian Press Correspondent

SYDNEY, Australia, Nov. 23 (CP Cable)—Recurring work stoppages in Australian coal mines, due to strikes and absenteeism, have brought a warning from Francis Forde, acting prime minister, that "a grave calamity could be averted only by concerted effort by all miners and managements in the industry."

The minister declared that production in the first nine months of this year was 366,000 tons below that in the same period of 1943 and that the railways, despite reducing services to save coal, had only a fortnight's stock on hand and gas companies in some large cities had only a one-week reserve.

Key to the situation is New South Wales, Australia's main coal supplier, with 25,000 miners working in about 10 small townships.

Strikes in New South mines affect the railways, gas production and electric power for munition factories in the greater part of Australia.

Recently the Australian trades unions council calculated if the coal production situation was not improved 100,000 other workers — in steel foundries and a large number of war factories would be thrown out of employment.

As a result of that estimate and a threat to the government by a censure motion made by R. G. Menzies, a former prime minister, there was a marked reduction in work stoppages. However, the position grew worse since then and hardly a day passes without from five to a dozen pits being idle.

These stoppages do not concern general wage conditions, fixed several years ago, but result from individual pit-top meeting, when someone raises a minor grievance and the rest refuse to work. Production of a few hundred tons in that mine is lost and so it goes at mine after mine.

Recruiting Deadline Likely McNaughton Speaks Today

Heal Liberal Breach In Caucus Of Cabinet Members

OTTAWA, Nov. 23 — (CP). — A Liberal caucus of 2¼ hours today ended without comment from Prime Minister Mackenzie King or any other government member on persistent reports that the cabinet had decided to approve compulsory overseas service if the voluntary system fails to raise the necessary reinforcements by a certain date.

Nearly 30 reporters waited at the door of the caucus room as the members emerged.

Mr. King walked out with Senator J. H. King, Government leader in the Senate.

He smiled and shook his head when the reporters asked if he had anything to say.

Occasional applause was heard in the caucus room where private members were assembled for their first meeting since they returned to Ottawa yesterday to discuss the question of overseas reinforcements.

It was understood that some Cabinet members urged at a meeting of ministers last night that a date should be set beyond which the voluntary system would be abandoned unless it had provided the necessary reinforcements.

Five or six ministers were said to have indicated they were prepared to resign unless this date—believed to be not far distant—were established as the limit of the period of trial of the voluntary system.

Mr. King today placed on the order paper a motion he will move in the House on Friday asking that the Commoners declared they will aid the government in its policy "of maintaining a vigorous war."

This motion is believed to have been approved by the Cabinet last night.

After the Cabinet rose last night it was learned a "satisfactory understanding" was reached, but it was considered possible that the Cabinet may not have been entirely unanimous.

Breach Closed.

There was no doubt in political circles, however, that some decision was reached which largely closed the breach caused by differences of opinion on how much longer the voluntary recruiting system for overseas should be given a trial.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King to-day placed a resolution on the House order paper stating "that this House will aid the Government in its policy of maintaining a vigorous war." This was regarded as the Government's procedure to obtain

German Spies Busy In Aachen

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

The Allied advance into the Rhineland is encountering new problems of security, due to dangers from Nazi underground units and from spies—threats which Gen. Eisenhower has recognized by issuing an iron-clad rule against his soldiers fraternizing with German civilians, even speaking to them, under penalty of fines.

This menace originally was brought to the attention of the folk back home when Lt.-Gen. Hodges' U.S. 1st Army reached the Aachen sector. The mysterious disappearance of some of his men, apparently victims of the underground, resulted in the issuance of orders against fraternization, and since then the rules have been made more rigid.

Every mile of pentration into Germany by the Allied armies increases the difficulties. Many "civilian" operatives are Nazi soldiers who've discharged their uniforms for mufti and who are equally prepared to play the part of spies or do murder.

Of course that's not the whole story. Apart from the spying and underground operations, it's damaging to the morale of soldiers to fraternize with the civilians of an enemy country. You can't be friendly with folk and be tough with 'em at the same time.

The greatest danger lies in the spying. Spies are the bane of every commander during a crucial offensive like the present. These trained observers swarm the fighting zones in civilian clothing and pour a stream of valuable information back to the German command.

Naturally fraternization between troops and enemy "civilians" provides an admirable setting in which to acquire information.

More Liquor, Perhaps

TORONTO, Nov. 23—(CP). —The Telegram yesterday said reports at Queen's Park were that Ontario's monthly liquor ration of 26 ounces will be increased to 52 ounces for December. It quoted Liquor Commissioner V. T. Goggin as saying of the report: "No comment."

Lost In Woods Hunter Didn't Give Up

"I never for a minute lost hope that I would eventually get out to safety". Arthur W. Nelson, Peterborough hunter who was found in the bush in the Apsley area Tuesday evening after having been lost in the woods for three and a half days, told an Examiner reporter at the Nelson home Wednesday afternoon in relating his harrowing experiences.

"Strangely enough" said Nelson, "I feel little the worse for what I have been through. In fact I do not even feel tired today and last night after I had been found by Chesel McCall and Wellington Smith and taken to their camp nearby we sat up until 11 o'clock talking over hunting experiences. They certainly did everything possible for me."

The story of Nelson's wandering through the rough bush country and travelling in a huge semi-circle that finally brought him to a point south of where he had first disappeared begins with his being left on a deer watch, two miles south of the Tucker Hunting Lodge on Serpentine Lake on Saturday morning by O. J. Hayward, another member of the party.

"Soon after Hayward left me" said Nelson, "I became violently ill with a vomiting spell and I guess I passed out, for when I came to I did not know where I was. I had left the watch but what direction I had travelled I could not tell."

"I had a compass with me but like other hunters who have been in a similar predicament I soon began to mistrust the instrument. The direction it points seemed to be all wrong and so I did not rely on the compass but kept walking, hoping that I would eventually come to a familiar spot or reach a camp or the highway."

Only Two Matches

"I see it was said that I had plenty of matches with me. That was wrong. I eventually found that I had two but at first I thought I only had one and I decided to hoard

Crewless Plane Flies 400 Miles

SIOUX CITY, Ia., Nov. 23—(AP). —A B-17 Flying Fortress, abandoned by its crew of 10 near Marion, S.D., was the plane that crashed near Isabella, Minn., 70 miles northeast of Duluth, it was announced by the public relations officer at the Sioux City army airfield where the plane was based.

Crewmen reported they were forced to bail out when they were unable to "feather" the propeller of a dead engine which threatened to set the flying boat afire. None were injured.

Directed by its automotic pilot, the plane finally crashed in a wooded area north of Isabella and was spotted by Minnesota forest rangers who reported to the police. The public relations officer said he believed the plane flew alone for about 400 miles.

Full-Dress Debate To Begin In House Friday

OTTAWA, Nov. 23—(CP).—A full-dress debate on the Liberal Government's war policy probably will begin on Friday.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King today gave notice in the Commons order paper that he will move on Friday:

"That this House will aid the Government in its policy of maintaining a vigorous war."

Political observers said that the motion probably would lead to a vote showing whether the House had continued confidence in the Government.

It was almost certain to be opposed by the Progressive Conservatives, who, on Wednesday, attempted to move that the House express itself in favor of full implementation of the National Resources Mobilization Act and the sending overseas of draftees as reinforcements immediately.

Amendment Likely.

The Progressive Conservatives again may present this proposal in the form of an amendment to the Prime Minister's motion. It was understood this procedure now is being considered by the Opposition group.

The Government motion permits a far wider discussion than the exact question of whether draftees shall be sent overseas, the issue which led to the resignation of Col. J. L. Ralston as Defence Minister November 1.

In a letter to Col. Ralston on November 3, Mr. King indicated that he opposed any action which would divide the country if it could possibly be avoided. His reference was to the question of sending draftees overseas.

Mr. King wrote that he had striven to see that Canada's effort in the present war should be the maximum of which the country was capable. Division in the country at this time would "prejudice much that has been so magnificently accomplished throughout more than five years of war—and this on the eve of certain victory."

Debate To Be Long.

It was understood Mr. King and his supporters are prepared to discuss the efficiency and extent of the 8th Army Starts New Offensive

LONDON, Nov. 23.—(CP).—The German broadcast communique today claimed a new large scale attack had been opened during the night by the British 8th Army moving up the Adriatic coast of Italy.

The German claim, not mentioned by Allied sources, said the "centre of gravity of the attack" was reported at Forli, on the Bologna-Rimini Highway, less than 20 air-miles in from the Adriatic coast.

The enemy communique, describing the battlefield as being lighted by searchlights, said "enemy artillery and battle plane activity developed violence almost unprecedented here."

River Loop Cleared

ROME, Nov. 23 — (AP).—British 8th Army troops battling strong enemy resistance have cleared the Germans out of the Cosina River loop less than four miles south-east of Faenza and captured a few more villages in substantial gains in that area south of the Bologna-Rimini highway, Allied Headquarters announced to-day.

Polish troops of the 8th Army have continued their advance farther west beyond bitterly-contested Mount Fortino and captured the villages of Oriolo, San Biagio, and San Mamante.

Only action reported along the Allied 5th Army front was carried out by Indian troops who occupied high ground north of Modigliani.

Claim Hitler Has Double

Picture Reveals Difference In Two Men

LONDON, Nov. 23—(CP). — The London Daily Express said today it had "incontestible proof" that the Nazi leaders have been using a double to impersonate Hitler since the July 20 attempt to kill him.

A difference was noted in measurements of Hitler's ears in pre-war photographs and one issued by Berlin a week ago purportedly showing the Fuehrer at his headquarters September 25.

When these photographs were given a photo-microscope test, the Express said, Hitler's right ear in the latest picture measured nearly half an inch larger each way. This proved, the paper said, that the new photo was faked "because the ear stops developing at the age of 21. After that there is practically no change and a man's identity can be established as accurately by measuring his ears as by taking his fingerprints."

Recruiting Expert Arrives

Recalled To Canada For Unnamed Duties

MONTREAL, Nov. 23 — (CP). — Brig. James A. Mess, assistant adjutant general of the Canadian Army in charge of recruiting, arrived in Montreal by plane from Britain last night and said he did not know yet what his duties would be in the future.

Asked if he would be carrying on the new voluntary recruiting program of Defence Minister McNaughton, if the Defence Minister carried out his announced plans, he replied "I do not know yet."

Brig. Mess, who has been engaged in the United Kingdom in reinforcements, educational and auxiliary services matters for the last two months, said he had been out of touch with developments in Canada for more than a week and did not wish to make any statements on recruiting in Canada until he has talked to Gen. McNaughton.

Speaker Vetoes Tory Demand For Action Now

By JAMES McCOOK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, Nov. 23.—(CP).— Defence Minister McNaughton to-day will appear as a guest before the House of Commons to support his opinion that required reinforcements for overseas may be obtained without resoring to conscription of 60,000 men in the home defence army.

Gen. McNaughton will speak in a House still warm with the excitement of a 1½ hour session yesterday when members just in from their constituencies heard Prime Minister Mackenzie King read correspondence he had exchanged with Col. J. L. Ralston who resigned as Defense Minister Nov. 1.

They heard, too, Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative House leader, demand that the House take action immediately so the draftees might be sent overseas forthwith. A motion to have the House express this opinion was ruled out of order by Speaker J. A. Glen on the grounds that notice of motion was required.

Reads 7 Letters.

The seven letters read by Mr. King in the tense House showed the divergence of opinion between the Prime Minister and Col. Ralston, who listened impassively in his new seat just to the right of the Cabinet benches.

They indicated a common concern over Canadian unity. Mr. King's letters showed he did not think the necessity for reinforcements was such as to make necessary a course of action which was not certain of accomplishing its purpose and would divide the country "on the eve of certain victory."

To that, Col. Ralston replied that "it seemed obvious that some measure of difference or disunity could not be avoided whatever course was taken.

"What weighed so heavily with me in the stand I have taken were our pledges to our fighting men and indirectly to their families.

Mr. King spoke without trace of emotion, his voice low. In a gallery opposite him sat Gen. McNaughton looking down in the government benches and listening intently.

The meeting of parliament has been occasioned by the controversy arising from the resignation of Col. Ralston, said Mr. King. But for a public statement made by Col. Ralston on Nov. 12 there might have been reasons of military secrecy which would have made it necessary for the Prime Minister to advise against disclosing certain portions of the correspondence.

Ralston Dissatisfied

But after Col. Ralston's statement he had received the consent of the governor-general to make public the letters in full.

Col. Ralston returned from a visit to the battlefronts in Europe on Oct. 18 and recommended in light of the information he had gathered that men called for compulsory military service under the National Resources Mobilization Act be made available for overseas. His letter of resignation, dated Nov. 1, said he did not consider it possible that the required reinforcements would be provided in time by a further appeal to volunteer to trained N.R.M.A. personnel to volunteer.

"Consequently, I wished to be assured that it was government policy that if, after the appeal, the need for reinforcements still existed and volunteers were not available, N.R.M.A. personnel would be sent," Col. Ralston wrote.

"This was the course which I and some other colleagues had understood would follow from your speech in 1942 (when the government was granted authority to send draftees overseas if necessary). It was in effect what I, as minister, have repeatedly said in the House since then.

"No such assurance was forthcoming. On the contrary, it has developed in the discussions that the government as a whole, certain colleagues excepted, do not consider that your speech committed the government to this course."

Col. Ralston said he considered the differences between himself and the Prime Minister on reinforcing troops "fundamental".

Premier Replies

Mr. King replied on Nov. 3 that only on Oct. 19 had Col. Ralston presented a report saying that the army reinforcement position was causing concern. Assurance had been given the cabinet in the first week of August that additional military commitments then being sought would not adversely affect this position.

Mr. King wrote that Col. Ralston "surely" was in error when he wrote that their differences on reinforcing troops were fundamental. From the outset the government had been agreed that the reinforcing of the troops was vital. The only difference was, in respect to the method or methods of meeting "this fundamental vital necessity."

"I have made it clear that I am prepared to follow the course outlined in my speeches in parliament in 1942, if that course should ever be necessary, but I do not believe that it has become necessary Mr. King wrote.

A general election on the conscription issue at this stage would endanger the war effort and Canadian unity and strength. But such an issue would almost certainly arise if the House were asked to endorse an order-in-council making draftees available for overseas.

On Nov. 6, Col. Ralston wrote that as early as Oct. 13 he had cabled the Prime Minister from Britain indicating his apprehensions on reinforcements. He had reported the need of reinforcements at the earliest possible date and had given information fully.

"I think, when my recommendation has not been accepted, when there is disagreement between us as to what was the policy to which the government committed itself in 1942, and when there is disagreement as to what is the present policy, that these are fundamental differences," Col Ralston wrote.

When the authority for the government to send men overseas was discussed in 1942 there was no mention of an election, and Mr. King's suggestion of a general election on the matter now "is the introduction of a new condition not contemplated or discussed at the time government policy was laid down two years ago."

No Conscription

Mr. King sent Col. Ralston two letters on Nov. 10. In one he said that the reference to a general election in his previous letter "was not to its being 'a condition' to the application of conscription under existing legislation, but to a general election being an almost inevitable consequence of any such attempt to impose conscription at this stage of the war."

In the second letter he noted Col. Ralston's suggestion in a public statement that the prime minister should make public the correspondence. Mr. King wrote that the privy councillor's oath of secrecy was binding upon the prime minister as on all other councillors.

Mr. King wrote that he believed there should be an exchange of letters "with respect to which no question as to the propriety of publication should arise."

This was the last letter by Mr. King made public, but the tabled correspondence included two other letters from Col. Ralston, both dated Nov 14.

In one, Col. Ralston said that Mr. King's speeches in 1942 had envisioned the very possibility of conscription for overseas being necessary, and the desired authority was given the government in the light of that possibility.

In the second, Col. Ralston wrote that Mr. King's broadcast address November 8 contained references to matters "treated, debated and resolved in council discussions." Permission to make such matters public was vested in the Crown and Col. Ralston asked assent to the release of the correspondence be sought.

Praised Ralston.

When he completed reading of the letters, Mr. King said he praised the services Col. Ralston had given Canada.

Mr. Graydon said the issue of overseas reinforcements had been thrown up by public opinion like "lava from a great volcano."

Mr. Graydon moved, seconded by J. G. Diefenbaker (PC—Lake Centre), that the House express the opinion that the full provisions of the National Resources Mobilization Act should be put in effect forthwith and that all trained troops in the home defence army should immediately be dispatched for reinforcements overseas.

Speaker Glen said the motion would require notice and ruled it out of order.

"No justice," said Gordon Fraser (PC—Peterborough West).

In reviewing the House business for tomorrow, Mr. King said it had not been possible for Gen. McNaughton to obtain a seat in the House, which was master of its own procedure and could have Gen. McNaughton appear before it.

Mr. Graydon said his party was opposed to any secret session when Gen. McNaughton was before the House. Mr. Coldwell said the CCF would be prepared to receive information in secret session if this was considered necessary.

Again the enemy came into the attack lunging across the fields which were sown with their own mines. Again the attack was met and beaten off. Back again came the Germans to carry out their final dash to recapture Hoven at all costs.

This time the task of the British forces was complicated by the fact that they had 30 German prisoners captured during the two previous counter-attacks.

But they managed to guard these fanatics and once again the line held.

Today the Hoven feature is in British hands thanks to the almost inhuman fight put up by these veteran troops of a famous regiment.

Canadian war effort on a broad basis, not only on the question of overseas reinforcements. This would extend the debate far beyond conscription for overseas and might mean the sitting will continue for a considerable period as the general war program is reviewed.

The possibility was seen that Col. Ralston would take part in the debate, supporting his recommendation that the draftees should be made available for overseas. This recommendation was made to the Cabinet after he had visited the European battlefronts and consulted with army commanders in the field.

Havelock L.O.L. Supports Christmas Fund

Brotherhood of all men under the sun is a utopia towards which the world must progress if civilization is to survive. This is evident today with the tremendous amount of destruction and human suffering that has been caused through a lack of these precepts in a national way, for the selfish ends of a people who have been led to believe and blindly follow a few people who have become demi-gods in their own midst

All fraternal groups naturally have a special benefit that accrues to their own members, otherwise they would never have become identified together. But from a public sense in these days, they mean very little to the outside world in a way that counts towards ringing in a better world order, unless they can justify their position in this respect, by branching out to do something towards this, from their own select circle.

For the second time in two weeks from widely separated points within the district covered by the Peterborough and District British War Victims' Fund, two separate Loyal Orange Lodges have subscribed to this feeling of fraternity and brotherhood to other peoples, by making a contribution towards the special donation for Christmas now being raised to relieve the distress caused by the robot and rocket bomb to their fellow Empire citizens in the British Isles.

This latest gift comes from the L.O.L. No. 326 at Havelock through their recording secretary, and follows a similar gift of $10 made by the L.O.L. at Omemee, which undoubtedly displays this spirit of brotherhood mentioned for other peoples beyond their own immediate circle.

Former Club Members Assist

The Get-Together Club in the past played a notable part in assisting the objects for which the fund operates, proof of which may be seen in their having previously contributed the splendid total of $318.25 to the fund. When through various causes some of their small group found it impossible to carry on, a real sincerity of purpose was demonstrated by a few, who laid a small amount weekly aside, to continue the good work.

Today sees a second contribution come to the fund in this manner amounting to $9.50 from Mrs. Babbs, Mrs. Kiff, Mrs. Fairbairn, Miss Hope and Miss Thompson, emphasizing this loyalty to the cause which was the object for which the group first came into existence.

Oftentimes in collecting the penny boxes, some interest is shown by a little addition being made at that time by either the proprietor or one of the staff, and this happens to be the case in the last contribution of $3.10 from the box at Grafton's Ltd. which was assisted to that point by a 50 cent coin from one of the employees.

Hero's Sacrifice Recalled

The memory of those who have sacrificed all they had to give, is worthy of being perpetuated to flourish in immortal green forever. In the giving of life itself for others, there is no doubt but what they would wish that the memory of their sacrifice should be so associated with the act of giving assistance to those in distress.

Such a deed of goodness for others is recorded today in a gift of $5 to the fund "In loving memory of Flight Officer Carl Grose" to do its share in spreading cheer at Christmas time to those who have been afflicted by the enemy attacks on the civilian population in Britain.

that for an emergency."

"That Saturday afternoon I kept on walking through the bush but failed to get my bearings and night overtook me. I decided to save the match and to sleep without a fire as it was not too cold. So I made a bed of evergreen boughs and cut down a small evergreen tree a little longer than myself. I cut a wide V-shaped wedge in the thick branches, lay down on the boughs and pulled the tree up around me like a blanket and I slept as snug as if I were in bed. In fact I think I only awakened once during the night and I did not get up until 8 o'clock the next morning."

The lost hunter apparently had travelled in an easterly direction when first lost and then had swung north and finally west with the result that he passed around the head of Serpentine Lake.

Then when he resumed his journey on Sunday morning and kept walking most of the day he swung around in a circle to the west and finally wandered south, passing Bottle and Sucker Lake and eventually arriving at the vacant camp of the Eagle Lake Hunt Club on the lake of the same name late Sunday afternoon.

Supped On Bread

"I used what I thought was my last match to life a fire in the camp" Nelson said, "I found some bread that the hunters had left and had three slices for my supper that night. I slept in comfort in the lodge and in the morning breakfasted on three more slices of bread fried in some bacon fat. When I was leaving the camp Monday morning there was half a loaf of wholewheat bread there and I debated a while as to whether or not I should take it with me but finally decided that I was going to get out all right, I had better leave the bread there in case some other lost hunter might come along who would need it worse than I did."

However Nelson failed to get out Monday and just where he wandered that day he is not quite sure. He said that he came back four times to the same spot, recognizing the place by a fresh gash he had made with his knife in a log. He again spent Monday night in the open and was quite comfortable in his bed of boughs despite the fact that two or three inches of snow fell.

Slips Into Creek

Tuesday morning he resumed his walk and this time obviously moved east again. Early that afternoon he slipped off a log into a creek and was wet nearly to his waist.

"I thought I had used up my only match" said Nelson. "I tried to figure out a way to start a fire by firing a cartridge into some papers I had in my pocket and some kindling I cut. However when I pulled out the papers a match dropped out from them so I soon had a big stump fire going, and took off my wet clothing and dried it. Later in the afternoon the planes came over and I was sure they would see my fire.

As darkness approached I was just getting ready to go to bed for the third night in the open when Chesel McCall and Wellington Smith noticed the blaze of the fire I was keeping burning and came to where I was. They were surprised to find I was the lost man everybody was hunting. They were sure that I would not be walking around after three days and a half wandering through the bush."

The McCall-Smith camp to which Nelson was taken was only a quarter of a mile from where he had lit his fire. Close by, too, is the Jopling Hunt Camp.

The man whose disappearance caused so much excitement in Peterborough and in the Apsley area for the last few days seemed little the worse for his adventure as he talked to the reporter. During the comparatively brief time the interview lasted friend after friend of the Nelson family arrived to congratulate him upon his escape and he talked freely to all of them of his experience.

ators out here, but the spokesman said it was large.

The strike started in a protest by Dayton operators against the granting of $16.25 living expense accounts weekly to outsiders brought in to help run the switchboards. Operators in 28 other Ohio cities fell in line.

The Washington operators said they likewise objected to a similar practice here, sympathized with the Ohio strikers and in addition had some wage grievances as to basic pay scales.

Company officials have said the practice is necessary in these times of much work and shortage of help—that it is only fair to help out-of-towners meet extra expenses.

Effects of the strike were quickly felt in busy Washington, where thousands of calls are handled daily to and from war production centres and military establishments.

Variety Show Sponsored By B'nai B'rith

B'nai B'Rith variety show again excelled itself in putting on an entertaining show to over a thousand soldiers and friends on Wednesday night, sponsored by the local lodge of B'Nai B'Rith organization, a service lodge which has become famous for its many acts of war services. Every act was in itself a headline, ably handled by the master of ceremonies, Sgt. Hal Shaw.

A quintette of girls, dressed in doll costumes, gave a specialty number of the Paper Doll, accompanying vocalist was Miss Helen Thompson. The dancing quintette, Miss Pearl Shredd, Isabel Chittenden, Olive Cooper, Doreen Glavin, and Myrtle Williams, were outstanding and were brought back for an encore.

Attractive and full of personality Nancy McCaig played on her accordion popular classic songs which thrilled the audience. She came on later in the program, accompanying Marge Waters, who was dressed in Scottish costume and sang some familiar Scottish songs. Then they both mixed with the crowd and with songs such as "Cuddle Up a Little Closer" and "The Band Played On" and danced with some of the soldiers, and kissing others. Then they coaxed Capt. Johnson to come up on the stage with them and with the tune "Put Your Arms Around Me, Honey," Marge and the Captain danced and sang to a few good laughs.

Two good-looking girls, the Melvin Twins, thrilled the crowd to such numbers as a specialty, "Here Kitty, Kitty" and a medley of Irish lullabies.

A star among the others was Beth Watson, who performed beautifully in playing the saxophone with a medley of military tunes, then wound up by playing "Tiger Rag" and tap dancing at the same time. The soldiers wouldn't let her go.

A brilliant performer was Aleda Mitchell, who was blind-folded and her mind-reading act was very outstanding. She told a lot of things, all of which were treu to a number of soldiers in the audience.

Last, but far from least, as a Charlie McCarthy act put on by Bob Logan and his Mickey, and had the crowd laughing heartily with his ventriloquial act.

All in all, the show was a huge success, and the soldiers gave it a star rating. Mr. Goldstone, representing the local Jewish lodge, spoke a few words in thanking the acting commanding officer, Major Bowen, for co-operation, and also thanked Mr. Irwin, the auxiliary officer, for his assistance. The entire cast was entertained in the officers' mess following the show.

This is the eighth in a series of professional shows put on in training camps in Peterborough, Trenton and Belleville, sponsored by the Peterborough B'Nai B'Rith Lodge. Peterborough branch as established in 1939 as a branch of this 100-year-old service oranization, devoted to communal welfare and service work.

ler, in the pre-dawn darkness.

On the 1st Army's left, the U.S. 9th Army overran several villages in a slow advance but encountered dug-in tiger tanks near Koslar, two miles west of the communications Hurtgen Forest against tense rifle, machine-gun, mortar and artillery fire.

Gains 2 Miles.

Infantry of the 1st Army thrust two miles forward to the outskirts of Weisweiler, due east of Eschweihub of Julich on the Roer and on the highway from Aachen to Berlin. Resistance stiffened all along the 9th Army front.

North of Geilenkirchen, the British 2nd Army took Hovem and won high ground beyond Gereonsweiler in battling toward the Roer—first major terrain obstacle in the fortified Cologne plain.

Victors of Metz, where five isolated outlying forts held out, the U.S. 3rd Army pushed another mile into Germany to within 15 miles of the sprawling coal and steel city of Saarbrucken, a major rail hub. The 10th Armored Division moved forward to Kesslingen, extending tank force control to 30 square miles of Germany. Infantry of the 3rd was 14 miles due east of Metz, plunging toward the Rhine against reinforced German defences.

Far to the south, the French 1st Army continued its advance through Alsace on Colmar, thrusting north through the Rhine valley from captured Mulhouse. Strong pockets of Germans still fought in the eastern outlet of the Belfort Gap, but Gen. Eisenhower's communique said their counter-attacks had been contained.

In Squeeze Play

Another force of French armor and American 7th Army infantry provided the northern arm of a squeeze on the survivors of the German 19th Army by crashing through the Lower Vosges before Saverene in the northern corridor to the Rhine and Strasbourg.

The French 2nd Armored Division took Weithersweiler and Burkenwald in the hills, then closed on Saverene from north and south. The American 44th Infantry joined them and today the team was pressing forward toward the German frontier.

Between these flying wings of the Allied 6th Army Group offensive in the Vosges, other units took the charred ruins of St. Die, which the Germans burned in retreat. Others rolled up extensive gains east of the Meurthe River.

The 3rd Army made new advances inside Germany in the Ounsdorf area. Heavy artillery checked progress west of Merzig. The towns of Rohrbach, Angweiler, Bisping and Mittersheim were reached in the Dieuze area.

Other units drove north through the Maginot Line beyond Bambuderstroff, six miles from the German border.

The battle in the north of the Cologne plain was described in front dispatches as the most severe since the break-through at St. Lo. Tanks, artillery and infantry all were violently engaged.

Southeast of Weinweiler, near Hoistern, American infantry threw off two early-morning German counter-attacks. One was by infantry and tanks, the other by infantry only.

Infantry in the Geilenkirchen sector captured a hamlet two miles northwest of Wurm and was fighting slowly into Wurm and Beeck.

British troops cleaning out the last German pockets against the Maas (Meuse) in Holland captured Baarlo in an advance on the threshold of the industrial Ruhr through oozing black mud. The bulk of Germans were believed pulled across the river, leaving only rearguards to delay the British advance upon Venlo. One British column moved more than a mile beyond captured Massbree in conditions described thus by a 21st Army Group spokesman:

"The going is absolutely shocking. The Germans planted masses and masses of mines all over the place. It's nothing but mud and mines, mines and mud."

from the Commons a vote of confidence.

The wording of the resolution probably was approved at the 2½-hour cabinet meeting last night.

Meanwhile, there was a tenseness around Parliament Buildings as all Liberal members gathered for a party caucus. The meeting was 40 minutes late getting underway, starting at 11.40 a.m., E.D.T.

Mr. King, who arrived late, was greeted with a round of handclapping. Col. J. L. Ralston, former defence minister, attended the caucus, but it was not known whether Defence Minister McNaughton was present.

The meeting gave private members the first opportunity to expound their views on the voluntary policy since arriving in the capital yesterday. A caucus was called yesterday, but was adjourned by Mr. King who said he had something to discuss with the cabinet.

Surprise Likely

As the Liberals met political circles were forecasting that "big developments" might be expected later today. They suggested these developments would surprise the public.

Mr. King may make some announcement in the Commons this afternoon, it was learned. Some thought he might define the government's policy on reinforcements either before or after Gen. McNaughton addresses the House on the reinforcement situation.

Cabinet Solid

There was an impression the cabinet would be fairly united whatever the prime minister might tell the Commons, but reports persisted there might still be resignations from the cabinet.

The Progressive Conservatives also held a caucus today, probably to discuss whether they should again present a motion asking that the National Resources Mobilization Act be fully implemented and trained men of the home defence army of 60,000 dispatched overseas forthwith.

Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative House Leader, yesterday attempted to have the motion brought before the House for immediate debate, but Speaker J. A. Glen ruled that 48 hours notice was required.

Meanwhile, there also were reports some C.C.F. members, who have declined to commit themselves on the reinforcement issue now are convinced draftees should be sent overseas immediately. It was understood they came to the decision after perusing the exchange of correspondent between Mr. King and Col. Ralston, tabled in the Commons.

Earlier reports on Parliament Hill said a number of ministers would resign if the Cabinet did not agree to an out-and-out policy of sending the drafted Home Defence Army of 60,000 men overseas if the voluntary system failed to "make good" by a fixed date, but it was learned last night that no resignations were tendered by ministers at the Cabinet session.

Howe Mentioned.

Ministers forcing a showdown said to be Finance Minister Ilsle, Resources Minister Crerar, Navy Minister Macdonald, Revenue Minister Gibson, and Postmaster-General Mulock. One report also included the name of Munitions Minister Howe.

But when the ministers left the Cabinet meeting after sitting for almost 2½ hours they had nothing to say. Prime Minister Mackenzie King left the East Block about 11 p.m., (E.D.T.), but, like his ministers, told reporters he had no statement to make.

The question of sending the Home Defence Army overseas was said to have been brought to a head after the Progressive Conservative Party attempted to move a motion in the House yesterday asking that draftees be made available for overseas service forthwith. The motion was ruled out of order on the grounds that 48 hours' notice was required.

Japanese Fail To Get Reinforcements

GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Philippines, Nov. 23—(AP).—American fighter planes and light naval craft tightened their precautions against landing of Japanese reinforcements on Leyte Island today as Gen. MacArthur reported the enemy has apparently chosen the Limon bastion for his major stand in defending the Ormoc corridor.

Fighter pilots sank or heavily damaged four troop-laden freighters, four luggers and 14 barges, headquarters communique said, they fended off an apparent Japanese attempt to send much-needed help to the Yanashita line.

No important American gains were reported in the deadlocked battle for the Ormoc corridor but infantrymen, fighting over a waterlogged terrain, drew tighter the noose they hav thrown around the Japanese at Limon. They were supported by artillery, which was laying down "steady counter-battery and interdiction fire" on the Japanese rear, the communique said.

American air patrols made new attacks on enemy ground installations and communication routes in the Ormoc corridor. Japanese air activity was dismissed by MacArthur as negligible.

There were indications the Japanese are attempting to sneak reinforcements to Leyte in small units under cover of darkness, rather than risk heavier losses by sending in large convoys.

In a supplemental communique Gen. MacArthur announced that American heavy bombers had damaged two Japanese transports of 6,000 and 1,000 tons at Brunei, Borneo, Sunday night during air strikes throughout the southwest Pacific.

Base Metals Showing Gain

TORONTO, Nov. 23 (CP)—The base metal group registered a small index gain at noon today on Toronto Exchange and other groups were narrowly lower. The New York market holiday no doubt reduced the bidding for the industrial stocks and they weakened .47 in the index. Aggregate volume was down to 258,000 shares for the first three hours.

Hiram Walker weakened 1⅝ to 76⅝, the Foods and Papers were lower and other groups remained generally firm.

Giant Yellowknife, Macassa, McIntyre, MacLeod-Cockshutt and Omega were strong spots in the gold list. O'Brien slipped back 10 cents and losses of 5 cents appeared for Teck Hughes, Wasa Lake and West Malartic, Noranda, Steep Rock and Lake Dufault were slightly weaker base metals.

Convalescing

NEW YORK, Nov. 23— (AP). — Ethel Barrymore will leave hospital here early next week for Hot Springs, Va., to complete her convalescence from influenza, hospital officials said to-day. The actress was taken to the hospital two weeks ago.

Think, Before You Vote

During the past four years the City of Peterborough taxpayers have paid to Nicholls Hospital $58,800.00. Of this sum almost $26,000.00 was for the benefit of patients outside the city although the Act incorporating the Nicholls Hospital Trust, Chapter 87, assented to 25th March, 1886, distinctly states the hospital and endowment to operate same is "for the benefit of the Protestant population of the said town of Peterborough." Are we so wealthy in Peterborough, that we can pay a part of the hospital bills for "outside" patients in addition to our own?

Wouldn't it be fair if other governing bodies paid a part of the deficits at the hospital, instead of throwing it all on to the city taxpayer?

Remember this when you vote on the new hospital by-law.

Department Asked To Subsidize Road Maintenance In Towns

COBOURG, Nov. 23 — (ENS) — Subsidp on road maintenance in the towns and villages the same as townships by the Department of Highways was urged in a resolution sponsored by Reeve Robert Love of Cobourg, at Wednesday's session of Northumberland and Durham counties council. The resolution was endorsed by council and passed. The resolution is to be forwarded to other county councils and to the local members.

In introducing the resolution, Reeve Love said that things had got to the point where the Department of Highways was forgetting the towns and villages while the expenditures by these municipalities were going higher year by year, with no reimbursement for keeping the connecting links open.

"From the amount they get in gas tax and licenses they can easily reimburse us for the upkeep of highways which are to their advantage as well as our own," declared Reeve Love.

"I am very glad to hear that, Reeve Love," agreed Councillor C. Carveth of Newcastle. "I have been for eight years trying to get something started along that line. The Department is well aware of the situation."

Want Subsidy

"Do I understand, Reeve Love, that you want a subsidy on those connecting links? Remember, I am not criticizing your proposal one bit," asked Reeve Bert Reid of Clarke township.

Reeve Love pointed out that the towns and villages got a small amount for the connecting links but they should get a grant the same as the townships. Port Hope, for instance, had to spend money on the upkeep of the bridge on the highway there. The grant which Cobourg got was only for the upkeep of the connecting links.

"If we could get a subsidy, it would be to the counties' advantage too, because they would save $10,000 in rebates," observed Reeve Carveth.

Reeve Gene Sanders of Port Hope pointed out that Port Hope spend $20,000 a year on roads and bridges and got $2,000 rebate from the counties. The balance is a levy on real estate which is already burdened to the very limit. It made one wonder, he said, what could be done to halt the ever-growing burden on property. Port Hope donated $125,000 a year in gas tax alone, to say nothing of the revenue from other sources and all they got in return amounted to crumbs from the table. A fair and just proportion should be remitted to the municipalities which pay it. Reeve Sanders branched into a discussion of governments, declaring that the country was overgoverned with nine provincial governments. One central government and the rest handled by county councils or borough councils like in the Old Country, might well be the system here, he said.

Deputy-Reeve H. M. Fowlds of Campbellford expressed agreement with Reeve Love's motion.

Refust to Accept

An echo of the discussion that morning in the meeting of the Roads and Bridges committee, in which alarm was voiced over the prospect of having the Hastings bridge dumped back into their hands by the Department of Highways, council approved a recommendation of the Road Committee Wednesday afternoon that the counties disclaim ownership of the Hastings bridge or any liability for its upkeep. At the committee meeting, Warden L. E. Kelley pointed out that the bridge had been kept in repair by the Department of Highways ever since it was taken over. There was coming a time when this bridge would have to be replaced. It would be just too bad if the counties had to rebuild it as it would run into about a half-million dollars. The counties should refuse to accept it back after the Department had had it for five years. It was right on a through highway, he declared

Road Superintendent Miller said that the Hastings and Trent Bridges had been maintained by the Department. The Frankford bridge on the highway was looked after by the Department and he felt that it had the same status as Hastings. The same applied to Tweed and Bancroft.

At the session of council in the afternoon, the Warden again referred to the matter. A letter from the Department advised that the Department did not feel that the bridge was their responsibility and that accordingly they had so instructed their road man. Following discussion along the same lines as in the committee meeting, council endorsed the recommendation of the Road Committee in this regard.

Bylaws Passed

Three bylaws were passed. one repealing the bylaw setting aside a reserve for post war work, the other covering reversion of all bridges, 20 feet and under, not on the county road system, to local municipalities in which situated and a bylaw constituting certain road diversions in Darlington, Seymour and Manvers townships as part of the county road system. The second bylaw was just a matter of form, the Road superintendent told the Road Committee when the matter came up in committee, which did not alter the status of any bridge. The bylaw brings it under the Highways Improvement Act with its 50 per cent subsidy instead of the earlier arrangement under the Municipal Act with 40 per cent subsidy.

Missed The Boat

In connection with the revocation of the post war reserve bylaw, Reeve Wilbur Cole of Hamilton township said that he was sorry to see it happen. He said that he felt that the counties had "missed the boat" in not setting up a post war fund. Future road expansion and an addition to the Counties Home were just such things which the fund might have handled.

It was a black mark against the 1944 council, was the opinion voiced by Reeve F. Barnard of South Monaghan township. With the end of the war apparently in sight there were no funds to carry on post war work. The boys will be back and there will be a need then for something to keep them going until re-established. He said that he even felt two mills not too much for such a program.

"We increased our pay but we seemed to have forgotten the service man," commented Reeve Barnard

Reeve Bert Reid said that like Hamilton township, his municipality had bought bonds for the post war work and each should be able to spend it right in their own municipalities, he declared. Reeve Sanders of Port Hope spoke along similar lines.

Prior to the close of the session, Bill Barr, assistant clerk, who has been married recently, was presented with a gift by Reeve Norman Green on behalf of the council

Committee Reports

The following committees reported Wednesday:

Road and Bridge Committee. "We have examined the Bylaw passed to this Committee by the Legislative and Bylaws Committee on the matter of reversion of Bridges of 20 feet or less in span not on Road System. We recommend that it be passed by the regual procedure.

We recommend that ownership of the Hastings bridge remain with the Department of Highways and that the counties assume no liability for its upkeep.

We recommend that Clause 2 regarding an increase of 5 cents per hour in wages to Road Foreman, Laborers and Operators of Equipment be granted and that the Adams Power Maintainer be purchased at a cost of $8,931.20.

Legislative and bylaws committee: We have examined the bylaw to be passed and we recommend that all the bylaws to be passed at this session bc passed on the floor of the house except the bylaw to repeal bylaw No. 1170 which is referred to the Road and Bridge Committee. We recommend that no action be taken on the resolution from the County of Waterloo regarding increasing the amount of Old Age Pension and the lowering of the age for eligibility and we recommend that this council endorse the resolutions from the Counties' of Prince Edward and from Kent County regarding the increased gasoline rationing for municipal work and for blood donors. We recommend that the resolution from the County of Wentworth regarding actions for damage caused by improper drainage be endorsed.

Board of Management: We recommend that an allowance of $18 a month be granted to James Caldwell, to cover his rent, dating from December, 1944, and that a dwelling be erected on the County Home property for the use of our farmer and his family at a cost not to exceed the sum of $3,500. Or that the Old School House Building now used as a garage be renovated into a house.

Due to the bad construction and poor workmanship, certain parts on the outside of our building required immediate attention. The roof on the top of the verandah was leaking, two verandah floors were not slanted properly to run off water. The water therefore in winter froze and opened up the cement floor, and in the spring, fall and summer, the water would come through the cement, many large cracks could be seen and a grave danger that certain portions of the cement would fall down. We had the roof repaired and floors of the verandah recovered. Certain portions of the east wall is cracked badly, due to the water getting in behind the plaster, we are having the plaster removed and replaced, we are having the front and east of the building dampproofed which will protect the building against the weather.

Our building was originally constructed to house 65 patients and at the present time there are 101 patients in residence. The problem of over-crowding must be met as soon as building material and workmen are available and a new modern addition to our present building will solve the problem. The superintendent, Mrs. Thompson, has only spent one night away from the Home since she assumed her duties, and that in itself speaks of her great devotion to our work. Some plan will have to be followed to see that she is given a vacation each year and someone placed in charge during that period.

Warden L. Kelley Given Watch

COBOURG, Nov. 23.—(ENS). — Warden L. E. Kelley was presented with a gold watch Wednesday night at the Warden's Banquet in the British Hotel. Chairman was Reeve C. Carveth of Newcastle. Judge J. C. M. German delivered an address on municipal government and he was introduced by Crown Attorney Harry Deyman.

The gold watch was presented to Warden Kelley by Deputy-Reeve Fowlds of Campbellford and the address was read by Reeve C. J. McCubbin of Percy township. Mayor Jack Burnet of Cobourg, Mayor Charles Stephenson of Port Hope and a number of ex-wardens attended. The presentation marked the close of Warden Kelley's term of office.

Red Cross Officials Visit Eight Groups

KEENE, Nov. 23—(ENS).—Eight groups of Red Cross workers belonging to the Otonabee branch were visited by the president, Rev. George Murray; the convener of supplies, Mrs. Gerald Adamson, and Mrs. M. Knox, who represented the local branch at the annual meeting held in Toronto.

Otonabee is the only township in the county that is organized. It has 100 workers that turned out 23,000 articles and raised $2,400 last year. Mrs. Knox gave an interesting report of the volume of work that is being done by the Canadian organization through its many active voluntary workers at home and abroad. This was shown by the large number and variety of supplies for hospital, bombed victims, parcels for prisoners of war and blood plasma. Otonabee has about 100 blood donors, and an honor list is in Gall's store showing names and times of each donor. More knitters and sewers are needed, and those willing to help are asked to get in touch with the local group or call Mrs. Adamson who will be glad of help.

Roseneath News

At the last meeting of the Cobourg Presbytery of the United Church held at Port Hope, Rev. R. C. White, pastor of the Roseneath charge was appointed superintendent of the Alderville United Church mission, following the resignation of Rev. M. C. Fisher of Gore's Landing from this office.

Mrs. Fannie Blodgett visited her daughter-in-law, Mrs. E. Blodgett, Norwood, on Sunday.

Trooper Gordon Pacey of Camp Borden is spending a furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Pacey. Pte. Kenneth Fenton of Camp Borden was a week-end visitor with Mr. and Mrs. Pacey.

When Needed

KINGSTON, Nov. 23.—(CP). — Navy Minister Macdonald, Liberal Member of Parliament for Kingston City, in a telegram to the Canadian Legion branch here said he will support the sending of home defence troops overseas "whenever they are needed as reinforcements for troops in battle theatres." The wire, released yesterday, was in reply to a letter from the Legion asking his view on the reinforcement situation.

Why Not Make a Job Of It?

The Dominion Government is about to appoint a Royal Commission to investigate the rights and wrongs of taxing co-operative business organizations. We think that a great number of citizens will want to know why this Commission should not be empowered to look into the whole structure of Canadian taxation, and make recommendations which would eliminate its present unfairness and unsoundness. If a Commission is going to look into one aspect of taxation, why not do it all?

Such an investigation would take a long time, but the job needs doing, and it is better to do it now than to wait until the war ends. As soon as the war in Europe is ended our tax plan will need re-adjustment, and if the re-adjustment is made in a hurry it may serve to confirm and sanction errors and unfairness which now exist. But if the findings of a Royal Commission were available to whatever government is in power at that time, it would have a firm foundation of information and recommendation upon which to build a tax system which would be fair to everybody.

As soon as the war is over it will be necessary to relieve Canadian business of some of the exceptionally heavy burden which it now carries. If this is not done Canadian business will not be able to compete on favourable terms with foreign business and the country will suffer in consequence. During the war business competition has virtually disappeared, but it will return with peace, and it will need skill and freedom to meet it. Canadian business and industry are doing a fine job during the war, and they deserve consideration in times of peace. If they do not get it they will suffer from economic anaemia, and the country will suffer with them, for it must not be forgotten that our national economy is built on trade. Let no taxpayer feel that a reduction of the corporation taxes would benefit the rich shareholder alone; the rich shareholder will be the last man to have his taxes reduced. But such a reduction would benefit trade, which is important to all of us. And let no one say that we cannot reduce corporation taxes while the U.S. keeps them high; we gave an example to the U.S. with our price control scheme, which they copied, and we could do it in the matter of corporation tax, as well.

There are injustices in our tax system which do not exist either in Great Britain or the United States, and they should not exist here. Let us consider a few of them. In the first place, our tax officials have too much power and too much leeway in using it. There is no satisfactory system of appeals against the ruling of tax officials, and for most citizens there is no method of appeal at all; there are good systems of appeal, within the reach of everybody, both in Britain and the U.S. In Canada tax officials can re-open an account of 25 years' standing, say that they made a mistake in collecting, and demand more money; they cannot do that in Britain or the U.S. In Canada the citizen has to pay interest on any money which he owes the country through under-estimating his tax; but if he over-estimates it (as he often does) the country gives him no interest on his refund, though this is done in Britain and the U.S. In fact, our tax-gatherers are too powerful, too arbitrary and too unfair and their dictatorial powers should be curtailed.

Another abuse is the familiar one in which all money earned by a corporation is taxed twice—first through corporation and excess profits tax, and second as part of the shareholder's income. In this way the man who has his money invested pays twice, and if he is a small shareholder he is taxed at the same rate as the richest one. Yet another familiar abuse is the income tax on annuities. An annuity is merely the return to the owner of invested capital; no other form of capital is taxed. And another aspect of our tax system which needs rectifying is the tax form. At present every taxpayer files a form, and every form has to be checked; as the form is complex this takes years of work, and slows up the nation's business. In the United States an excellent simple tax form for low incomes has been devised, which saves much work for the taxpayer and for the taxgatherer. Could we not borrow the idea and adapt it to our own use?

An examination and a revision of the tax system is a necessary part of the nation's business, and it should not be delayed. Why not give the whole job to the Royal Commission, recommending that our system be examined in the light of the superior systems already in use in Britain and the United States?

How Funny Is Profanity?

The Ottawa Journal has had a short but interesting correspondence about what one letter-writer describes as "the nasty language used in plays produced by the Ottawa Drama League". The paper has admitted that some of this language is indeed nasty, but asks if the Ottawa public would like a censorship which proclaimed that they were too squeamish to listen to plays unexpurgated which had been accepted in New York and London? The question seems to us to be one of general interest.

A good deal of profanity is used on the modern stage by authors who like to consider themselves realistic, because a good deal of profanity is used in daily life by people who are considered 'smart'. But there is a deeper reason for the usage than this. Great numbers of modern plays have very little merit as drama, and are content to present stock situations, somewhat twisted or dressed up to give an appearance of originality. Profanity is an unfailing aid to such plays. If the heroine explodes with a few oaths in her otherwise undistinguished lines the audience is titillated, and jolted into attention. The younger and prettier the girl is, the greater the jolt, for playgoers are usually romantic souls who are delighted by such simple contrasts. One of the plays which has offended in Ottawa is Claudia, a simple-minded work in which the simple-minded heroine swears rather a lot. Claudia without profanity would be like a rice pudding without raisins—fit for the nursery and nothing more.

We have always been interested in the fact that the subversiveness of a play is usually in inverse ratio to the amount of profanity contained in it. Plays which attack the existing society, or the sacredness of marriage, or the super-sacredness of motherhood, or the goodness of God, are invariably couched in the most elegant and refined prose; see the works of Strindberg for confirmation. But plays which are unsullied by thought or ideas of any kind are usually plentifully garnished with oaths and obscenities which give the audience a pleasant sense of iniquity. Many people consider profanity either funny or shocking, and it is fun and shocks which draw the largest audiences to the theatre.

NOTE AND COMMENT

The Winnipeg Tribune is eager that Canada should grab Labrador from Newfoundland. The passion for Lebensraum runs pretty high out there on the prairie.

The Chatham News is of the opinion that Roosevelt has gone through his last election; next time he will probably get in by acclamation.

"The emotion of love often brings on a cold" says a physician. Noses are red, violets blue, sugar is sweet and so are you!

A Boston paper criticises the comedian Bob Hope for what it calls his "sly leers at decency". In some of its Bostonian disguises decency certainly provokes a leer.

In the recent U.S. elections a former Minneapolis street cleaner was elected to Congress. And as the Ottawa Citizen points out, this was probably the first time he swept all before him.

An item printed in the 'Sixty Years Ago' column of the Hamilton Spectator says that an English girl who arrived in Manitoba "succeded in getting a husband for herself and 117 of her fellow-countrywomen". The confusion in this piece of reporting reminds us of the old Latin rhyme:

Hogamus, higamus,
Men are polygamous;
Higamus, hogamus,
Women, monogamous.

Destruction Of Art In War

By PETER MATTHEWS

ON June 11, 1940, the Fascist Government in Italy took the tragic decision to throw its country into the war against Britain and France. It is true that, at the time, there seemed but little prospect that war would be carried to the mainland of Italy. The British, who had lost the equipment of thirteen divisions in France, seemed so weakened that there was every prospect of an early German victory. The small British air force, facing an enemy immensely superior in numbers, seemed in no position to attack targets on Italian soil.

But it was the decision, taken on June 11, 1940, which resulted, rather more than three years later, in the landing of British, U.S.A. and French troops on the land of metropolitan Italy. When, after the Italian armistice, the Germans reinforced their divisions in Italy, it became inevitable that the peninsula, with all its incomparable architectural and artistic treasures, would remain a theatre of war. There was no course open to the Allies save that of driving out the Germans, a process which is now well advanced.

"In war," as General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson writes in the introduction to a pamphlet "The preservation of works of art in Italy" and distributed to the commanders of all Allied units, "great damage to buildings, including churches, and towns of great historical value, has to be accepted when it is operationally unavoidable." Every war has entailed the destruction of irreplaceable historic monuments, yet the amount of that destruction can be limited. Measures can be taken to ensure that damage due to carelessness and thoughtlessness is reduced to a minimum. Immediate first-aid repairs can ensure that, when such buildings have been damaged, the harm caused is not increased by the action of wind and weather.

IT is, however true that the amount of damage caused depends more upon the retreating army than upon the forces in pursuit. If the retreating army insists upon including buildings of historic value in its system of defence, the attackers have no choice but to eject it. Thus, when the Allied advance reached the town of Cassino, it was found that the Germans were in occupation of the monastery of Monte Cassino. Through field glasses, German soldiers could be seen going in and out of the monastery buildings. It was even possible to count the German machine guns mounted in the windows. In view of the commanding position of the monastery, which the Germans were exploiting in their system of defence, there was no alternative but to bombard it, for, though such action was delayed for several days in the hope that the Germans would make it possible for the historic buildings to be spared, they still remained.

Fortunately, despite the ferocity of much of the fighting in Italy, the amount of damage suffered by such historic buildings, works of art and archives has been surprisingly small. Among the towns which have fallen into Allied hands Siena, Perugia, Rome and Florence have suffered but little. Even San Gemignano, bombarded by the Germans for four days after it had been occupied by the Allies, has suffered much less than might have been anticipated.

One of the gravest losses is, of course, the library of the Royal Society at Naples, which was deliberately set on fire by the Germans just before they evacuated the city. Indeed, not content with setting the building on fire, the Germans actually prevented the Italian fire brigade from extinguishing the flames. As a result, a very fine collection of manuscripts, many of them going back to the time of the Hohenstufen emperors, has been lost.

OWING to the speed of the Allied advance from Rome to the approaches to the Gothic Line, damage was fortunately minimized, for there was never prolonged fighting. Here, the main loss was of sacred vessels and vestments—the result of looting by the retreating German troops. At a certain stage in the retreat there appears to have been a breakdown of discipline, for, in church after church, it was found that the most valuable of the sacred vessels and vestments had been removed. Though it is not believed that this looting was done under orders, the extent of its proves that no measures were taken by German officers to prevent the systematic spoliation of churches.

There are several reasons why the destruction of architectural and artistic treasures has been on a much smaller scale than might have been expected. Much credit is due to the Italian officials, whose precautions included the transfer of moveable art treasures to places of safety and the erection of blast walls and the sandbagging of buildings. If there had been protracted fighting between the Adolf Hitler line and the line of the Arno, destruction would have been much graver, but, fortunately, the fighting, particularly after the fall of Rome, developed into a relatively rapid Allied pursuit.

But an important share too, of the credit for the avoidance of more serious destruction belongs to the Allied authorities. Both General Alexander—himself a painter in his spare time—and Air Chief Marshal Tedder, have made it their especial and personal care to see that the destruction of historic monuments and works of art is reduced to a minimum. Booklets have been prepared for distribution to officers and men giving an account of the history of art in Italy and enjoining upon officers the strictest measures to prevent damage.

FOR example, General Alexander writes, in the introduction of a list of Protected Monuments in Emilia and Lombardia: "I direct that every officer bring continually to the notice of those serving under him our responsibility and obligation to preserve and protect these monuments and art treasures to the greatest extent that is possible under operational conditions."

Under the authority of Allied Military Government, a sub-commission of the Allied Control Commission has been set up to care for monuments, paintings and archives in Allied occupied territory. The duty of this sub-commission is to take steps to prevent careless or wilful damage and to see that measures are taken to prevent further damage to buildings or other works of art which have suffered as a consequence of the fighting. Officers of this sub-commission often work under shellfire, and their work has achieved most important results.

THE PYROMANIAC

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Sir,—You are carrying a series of advertisements from the "Peterborough Property Owners' Association" and presumably before accepting this advertising you have assured yourself that they are a bona fide organization. In fairness to the public you should advise us to what extent this Association is representative of the property owners of Peterborough and also to what extent the sentiments expressed in their advertisement is representative of the opinion of the members.

To assess the motives back of the propaganda I would like an answer to the following questions:

(1) How many members are there?

(2) What percentage of the property owners of Peterborough does this represent?

(3) What assessment do the members of the Association own?

(4) What percentage is this of the total assessment?

(5) What is the assessment of the portion of the property so owned that is rented and lived in by others than the owners?

(6) What percentage of the property owned by the members of the Association is rented?

The sentiments expressed by this Association is not in accord with those I have heard expressed by those who live in the property that they own. To one whose property is his home an adequate hospital is an essential ingredient of community life the same as roads, sewers and utilities; the physicians and nurses are a essential as the police and firemen.—Yours truly,

H. R. SILLS.

542 Gilmour Street, Nov. 21, 1944.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Property Owners' Association is an organization which has been in existence for some years; we do not know how many members it has, but it is generally believed that the number is not large, and that some are holders of extensive properties. Perhaps the Association will reply to our correspondent through these columns.

Injustice In Taxes

(TORONTO SATURDAY NIGHT)

MR. BRACKEN is perfectly correct in his belief that the whole difficulty arising from the non-taxation of the profits of publicly-owned and co-operative enterprises is due to the improper and illogical character of the tax on the profits of corporations. Whether he would, if he attained power, be able to abolish entirely the tax on profits is another question altogether. It is a large revenue-producer, and it is far from being unpopular with the general body of the electorate, who do not own stocks and would not realize that they were being unfairly taxed even if they did.

It is obvious that the same identical business can be carried on by a profit-making corporation, a co-operative or a publicly owned enterprise. It is possible for all three to be in competition with one another in the same market. All three employ capital, which is provided on different terms in each case. In the publicly owned enterprise the capital is provided by persons who lend it on the credit of the community; there is no risk of loss to them, and whatever risk there is is taken by the community. In the co-operative the capital is provided by the customers, who are prepared to take their remuneration in the form of a price reduction on the product. Only in the corporate enterprise is the capital provided by the owners, who risk its loss and seek their remuneration in the form of profits.

Neither of the first two need to make any profit at all, and if they make no profit they need pay no tax. The third must make a profit if its owners are to receive any remuneration, and if it makes a profit that profit is taxed, no matter how modest it may be and how small may be the incomes of the owners to whom the balance of the profit, after taxation, is distributed. There is no equitable justification for that situation whatever. It deters private capital from going into corporate enterprise, a fact which will be of grave disadvantage to the nation when private capital is called upon to adventure itself again, as it will be after the war if we are not to go entirely socialist. And if continued it will ultimately lead to the conversion of corporate enterprises into socialistic ones on a large scale, after the manner of the Montreal Power Company, and the consequent loss by the government of increasing amounts of revenue.

The tax on corporation profits should be nothing more than a collection of personal income tax at the source, and every shareholder should be credited on his income tax account with the sum which his equity in the company has already paid to the government. Investors in co-operatives and bondholders of publicly owned enterprises, having paid nothing to the government by the tax on profits, would get no credit, and everybody would be on an equitable basis. We do not hope to see this ideal situation realized in the near future, but we do hope to see so large a reduction in the corporate profits tax that it will cease to be the glaring injustice, and the invitation to socalization, that it now is.

Finland's Master Composer

IT is as impossible to think of Finland without music as to think of it without pine trees and lakes....For the songs in Finland's brooks, the tongues in her trees, the symphonies in her stones, and the orchestral colouring of her Northern Lights have been immortally embodied in the purest music created in our generation, composed by the greatest symphonic writer since Beethoven....

Jean Julius Christian Sibelius, whose seventhieth birthday was celebrated on December 8, 1935, still lives in his quiet Villa Ainola in the parish of Tuusala, thirty miles from Helsinki, surrounded by his children and grandchildren, his wife and neighbours of a lifetime. Villa Ainola is built of logs, as are so many country houses in this region, and it is as unpretentious as any other comfortable and cultivated Finnish home. Neither it nor its master is accessible to all the world all the time. But when they are accessible, they extend a friendly hospitality unaffected by Olympian airs. For Sibelius has no need of the idiosyncrasies which lesser men create to extend their reputation or bolster up their personalities. His private life, with a gifted and devoted wife, with his graceful daughters, with the friends who have loved him since boyhood, is really private. Neither does he care to discuss his music, leaving it to speak for itself. For Sibelius is a man's man, toiling at musical composition with an artist's dedication to perfection and with none of the egotism of a bohemian or the vanity of a matinee idol.

The facts of his life are easily ascertainable. ...His childhood was fortunate: in the winter living in town, in the summer in the country. His grandmother's house typified the old culture: the white sofas and chairs and gilt-framed mirrors of the Gustavian era, and the spinet on which his grandmother and her two sisters played Beethoven, Mozart, and Haydn.... One of his aunts taught him to play the piano, and he began early to compose childish pieces. He was given a violin and was so enamoured of it that after passing his examinations for the university (1885) he went to the Academy of Music with the idea of becoming a violinist. However, after studying in Berlin and Vienna for several years, he definitely concentrated upon composition, and at the first concert he conducted in 1892, only his own works were performed.

While he was still a young man the government pensioned him so that he could devote himself to composition. The pension was not large, and Sibelius has had his share of thin living. But he has had the extraordinary satisfaction of knowing that what he was doing was appreciated by his own people....

For years writers have played up the fallacy that the music of Sibelius is sombre and gloomy in the extreme, full of morbid introspection, shot through with Nordic inhibitions crying out, with Oswald, for a glimpse of the sun. Although Brahms said that "writing a symphony is no laughing matter", the symphonies of Sibelius, especially the third and the fifth, are full of laughter and the refreshing gaiety of the ice and snow and the sports of winter....

Tradition, taste and training have led logically to the present power of those who create music in Finland and to the enthusiasm and discrimination of those who listen to it.—From "Finland, the New Nation", by Agnes Rothery.

A Bible Message

Truly God is good to Israel, even to such as are of a clean heart. But as for me, my feet were almost gone; my steps had well nigh slipped. For I was envious at the foolish, when I saw the prosperity of the wicked....

They are corrupt, and speak wickedly concerning oppression: they speak loftily. They set their mouth against the heavens, and their tongue walketh through the earth ....And they say, How doth God know? and is there knowledge in the most High? Behold, these are the ungodly, who prosper in the world; they increase in riches....

When I thought to know this, it was too painful for me; until I went into the sanctuary of God; then understood I their end. (Ps. 73: 1-3, 8, 9, 11, 12, 16, 17.)

CHANGE QUICKLY

Speaking in the British House of Commons the other day, Lieut.-Colonel Wickham, M.P., recalled an experience narrated to him by a distinguished officer. The latter was travelling in Italy in a jeep with a captured German officer. As they passed through one village they were given a great welcome by the inhabitants, who threw flowers into their car. The British officer observed to the captured German, "I suppose they did the same for you." To which the German officer replied: "Yes, sir, and, what is more, they did it in this village yesterday." This incident conforms to the ideas of many Canadians who have served in Italy and had contact with Italian civilians. — Brockville Recorder and Times.

SHOOTING ROBOT BOMBS

Low over the horizon comes a swift light, soon picked up and followed by a flat searchlight beam. Red tracer shellbursts are thrown up in its path.

Then the big fellows open up—they are the A.A. man's "Spitfire," his special favourite, the 3.7 which chucks 120 tons of metal a minute into the sky.

Each shell is timed to split-second exploding point, for each of these "engagements" lasts approximately eight seconds, and the target is eight times as difficult to hit as a 'plane. There is actualy a margin of error amounting to 120th of a second.

Suddenly the whole sky is lit with a red glow. The flying bomb has been hit, a crimson globe hangs in the sky, a few starlike fragments fall.

It is not long before another target appears, sweeping southward into the area of other gunners. This one is hit, but not exploded, and vanishes — possibly out to sea on a changed course.

Another "sunset" marks a third bomb spared to Londoners and others in Southern England.—London News Chronicle.

Unconsidered Trifles

A golfer had just completed a very successful round and gave his caddie threepence as a tip.

"Thank you, sir," said the caddie. "I can tell fortunes with pennies. Would you like me to tell yours?"

"Yes, go ahead."

"Well, sir (looking at his hand with the three pennies on it), the first tells me you're a Scotsman."

"Right."

"The second that you're a bachelor."

"Right again."

"The third that your father was also."

UNRRA At Work In Europe

By B. T. RICHARDSON

MONTREAL — In nine and a half months since the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration was created for the purpose of arranging relief for the populations of liberated countries, preparations have gone ahead for war relief work in western Europe, the Mediterranean and the Balkan areas. The areas in which no clear programmes have been devised are eastern Europe and the Far East.

The first relief problem in every war is timing. When should UNRRA or some other agency take over from the military authorities? The first agency that will feed hungry people in liberated countries will be the Allied armies. During the military period—six months, more or less—the Allies will feed people as a matter of military necessity. But once the military period ends, humanitarian effort begins. At that stage, UNRRA will begin to operate in the field. The task of planning and preparing, now going on almost a year, is one of the most complicated in the global war.

The questions that arise show how complicated it is. Will ex-enemy people be taken care of? The answer is Yes, but obviously many questions of rehabilitation of enemy countries will await the peace settlement. Will liberated countries pay for their relief? The answer is Yes, as far as they are able. Should only food be sent, or should seeds and farm tools be sent? Food will be sent where needed, and tons of it will be needed; but the purpose of UNRRA is to help liberated people to help themselves. This means helping them to place their own food-production back in operation. Will other relief agencies still operate, or have the United Nations taken over the field from voluntary relief organizations?

THIS last question is important, but hardly mentioned at the UNRRA conference. In one sense, UNRRA is a glorified, international community chest, a co-operative effort to handle the war relief job that is fast developing. Mr. Lehman's report made it clear that UNRRA was not occupying the whole field of war relief, that other agencies would be at work also. After the Allied armies, war relief will be carried on by the governments of liberated countries which are members of UNRRA; by governments of neutral countries possibly, which are not; and by foreign voluntary organizations.

The director's report shows that contributions of relief goods and of cash are being received from voluntary groups, though gifts will not be accepted if designated for a particular purpose. In the United States this month, the churches are collecting 15,000,000 pounds of used clothing. UNRRA will serve as the go-between in forwarding such gifts, and will distribute them as far as possible to the geographical area designated by the donor. In Canada, the council of voluntary agencies assisting UNRRA, which is part of the department of national war services, is designated to co-ordinate war relief efforts.

In a world in which the economic resources of all the great Powers and almost all other countries have been co-ordinated for global war, the problem of obtaining relief supplies is not easy. Both Mr. Lehman and W. L. Batt, chairman of the combined Production and Resources Board, promised the UNRRA Council that supplies will be available when needed, except for a few minor items. To obtain a thousand medical kits, a hundred trucks, or a million pairs of shoes, UNRRA must consult with the combined boards which the Allied Governmtnts have set up in London and Washington, since these boards control the economic resources of the United Nations.

UNRRA will have $2,000,000,000 to spend, and doubtless more if needed, and it has secured "allocations" for $377,000,000 worth of food, soap, textiles, clothing, footwear, medical and sanitation supplies, agricultural equipment and industrial repair equipment and supplies. The combined production and resources board has organized 14 programs of production for UNRRA, covering these items Mr. Batt reported that relief goods to be issued by the armies would be produced by the end of September, and then UNRRA goods would quickly become available.

The problem of estimating in advance what will be required has imposed a severe limit on the planning of war relief. Mr. Batt told the UNRRA council that up to now the complete program for any member country had not been received by his combined board. But advance purchase proposals have been handled by UNRRA for Norway, the Netherlands, Belgium, France, Czechoslovakia, Luxembourg, Poland, Greece, Yugoslavia, Denmark and Albania.

In speaking of Eastern Europe, Mr. Lehman said: "I have every hope and expectation that arrangements can soon be effectuated to provide the relief which is so urgently needed." This problem may soon become clearer, as the UNRRA council is sending a mission to Moscow at the invitation of the Russian government. Up to date, no one has known when and if transportation will be available to send war relief goods the long way around through Russia to the liberated areas of Eastern Europe, and whether such goods can be distributed there.

The Far East will be a gigantic relief job once the territories occupied by Japanese forces are liberated. At the present stage, UNRRA is limited to sending out officers to obtain information upon which relief plans can be based. Offices will be operated by UNRRA in Chungking and in Sydney.

The philosophy of the UNRRA organization assumes that its task will be temporary and limited in the post-war period. Mr. Lehman said in his report: "The period of time during which relief and rehabilitation operations can be conducted will obviously be severely limited by the extent of the financial resources that will be available from all sources for this purpose. There-

Ezinicki Joins Canadian Army

TORONTO, Nov. 23.—(CP).Officials at Military District No. 2 Headquarters said to-day that Bill Ezinicki, rookie right winger of the Toronto Maple Leafs in the National Hockey League who was accepted last Saturday for active service in the Canadian army, now is on a seven-day enlistment leave. No information is available as to where he will be posted or to what unit he will be attached, they added.

Ezinicki, 20 year old Winnipeg native who starred in junior hockey with Oshawa Generals before joining the Leafs this season, was reported last Friday night to have been placed under close arrest for an act committed while he was undergoing medical examination after receiving his callup notice. It was said he tore up his medical papers. He was discharged from the air force for medical reasons earlier this year after four months' service and after his discharge was rejected for army service.

Authorities said no charge was laid against Ezinicki in connection with the tearing up of the papers.

By FRED D. CRAIG

With Transports and St. John's clashing in their first senior battle of the season at the Y.W.C.A. tomorrow night the second double-header in the Ladies' Basketball League should be even more interesting than the first night's card. Transports won the senior division last year, after leading the parade all the way but they encountered unexpectedly stiff opposition from St. John's in the final series and the Saints came close to pulling the sporting upset of the year. The champs have lost some of last year's stars but have filled up the gaps and Beryl Dobbin, Jean Castle and company will undoubtedly prove a very powerful club, with plenty of scoring punch. St. John's looked good in their initial game, although they too are shy of some of last year's players. The senior game will be played at 8.45 o'clock. In the junior division the Normals who have a new lineup this season after winning the title a year ago have opened their 1944-45 campaign with a win over the Westclockers and tomorrow night they will clash with the Y Cadets in what should be a lively affair all the way. The junior game is carded for 7.45 o'clock.

Although definite word had not been received from Hamilton as this was being written Peterborough juniors are proceeding on the understanding that the Hamilton juniors will be here Saturday afternoon for an exhibition game with the local gang. This will undoubtedly be the last home fixture of the season and the enterprise of the Peterborough club in bringing a team all the way from Hamilton to provide a battle should be recognized by a real crowd at Riverside Park. There need be no doubt as to the calibre of the visiting team. Hamilton turns out football players like Peterborough makes canoes and there is always a fresh crop of young players on the way up to stardom. They cut their teeth on footballs in the Ambitious City and Sammy Manson will unquestionably lead a classy squad into town Saturday afternoon. It will be a real test for the Peterborough youngsters, probably the toughest they have encountered all season but the local squad has smartened up a lot, have picked up considerable finesse from the games they have played against three Toronto teams and they are confident of their ability to give the fast Hamilton juniors a real battle for the honors.

Make Sure Of It

Sport lovers should not need any encouragement to cause them to get out and work for the bylaw by which the city council is to grant $75,000 to the Memorial Health Centre fund but the fact the members of the city council at their Monday night meeting unanimously endorsed the bylaw and recommended its passing to the ratepayers should be stimulating to all friends of sport in the city. The bylaw is to be submitted to the property-owners at the municipal election on December 4 and it would be a tragedy from a sport viewpoint if it were to be defeated. It cannot be if all sport-lovers in the city will do their duty. After raising over $200,000 by voluntary subscriptions this community is surely not going to turn down a bylaw to provide by taxation the $75,000 needed to complete the program. But it will be up to the folks who willing subscribed to the fund during the canvass to see that the bylaw carries. Those who are property-owners should get out and vote for the measure and the friends of sport who are not ratepayers can do their part by boosting the whole proposition at every opportunity and by inducing property-owners to poll a favorable vote. Make sure that every ballot favoring the $75,000 grant is polled.

Peterborough C.V.S. seniors are working hard this week in preparation for their Cossa final game in Toronto Saturday morning with the Niagara Falls Collegiate, winners of the Niagara Peninsula conference. The game will be played on the back campus of the University of Toronto and the Peterborough team is confident of its ability to pull off a win and bring another Cossa title home. Not much is known of the ability of the Cataract students, except the fact that any team good enough to emerge from the strong Niagara Peninsula setup must have more than an assortment of helmets and padded sweaters. Niagara Collegiate, according to reports, have a well-balanced squad, strong in all departments so that the P.C.V.S. team realize that they have a real battle on their hands. However the team is in good shape with the injured players coming around nicely and the team hopes to confirm its good road record by a victory in this all-important game Saturday. A number of students are planning to be on hand come kickoff time on Saturday morning.

Honest Paul

"Chicago Black Hawks' outlook must be black, indeed, and Manager Paul Thompson must be an unusual fellow," says Mike Rodden in the Kingston Whig-Standard. "At any rate it is refreshing to note that Thompson has admitted that the Hawks are one of the weakest teams he has ever seen and that takes in a lot of territory. It is, however, to be doubted if President William Tobin, who was the world's worst goal-keeper, will appreciate Thompson's candid appraisal of the Chicago situation and it maybe that 'Honest Paul' will soon be seeking another managerial position. The Hawks have won one game this season and some critics who have seen them in action cannot understand how such a miracle occurred yet it must be remembered that the Toronto Maple Leafs, who are leading the parade, had their troubles nosing out the Windy City team at Maple Leaf Gardens last Saturday night. It appears that the N.H.L. governors made a mistake in not dividing the series into two sections this season but the teams are doing their best to rectify this over-sight. The Leafs, Canadiens and Detroit Red Wings are bracketed in the top flight with Boston, New York Rangers and the Hawks in the other. As the race progresses the gulf separating one section from the other may grow wider and if this occurs the financial returns may be anything but staggering."

Belleville's St. Michael's Academy team won the interscholastic championship of the Bay of Quinte city yesterday when they swamped Belleville Collegiate 26 to 0. The Irish team played smart football, sparked by Fitzpatrick, accurate-passing quarterback and were much too good for the Collegiate who had previously defeated Albert College 6 to 0. Had the St. Michael's team elected to go on into the Cossa playdowns they would undoubtedly have been strong opposition for Peterborough C.V.S. whom they were to have met in the semi-finals. The Belleville students played six-man rugby all season but their convincing win over the Belleville Collegiate in the orthodox brand yesterday showed that they have adapted themselves to the 12-man variety without much trouble. St. Mike's will play Stirling High School tomorrow for the Bay of Quinte Cossa title and then call it a season.

Toronto Horse Equals Season's Record

TORONTO, Nov. 23 — Denfield Dick, driven by Harry Fields, equalled the season's record at Dufferin Park when the postponed harness races were decided yesterday afternoon. The low-headed bay gelding won the second heat of his race in commanding style to pace in 2:13, making every post a winning one.

Guy Scott, a trotter from the P. Harvie Stable trotted to within a half second of the record when he knocked off the third heat of the same race in 2:13½ to win from Denfield Dick. Guy Scott came from a long way back to land the heat, showing gameness to overcome the lead. Lou Lee, owned and driven by D. Dowson, Port Perry, showed the best in the seventh race when he was first at the pay station in the second and third heats of the seventh. Bob Grattan and Bob Wilkes, driven by Lou James in their respective classes, sprung a surprise when they got down in front in a heat each.

Chappy Chapman lead the drivers for top money in the contest for leading teamster with 19 points. P. Harv'e has 17, L. James 15, A. Colton 12, W. L. Fraser 9, W. Harvey 8, F. Milton 7, J. Baker 7, H. Fileds 7, D. Dowson 6. These are the leading drivers to date.

Player Changes

WINNIPEG, Nov. 23.— (CP).— RCAF officials said yesterday that Walter Stanowski, formerly of Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League, and Jack Stewart, former Detroit Red Wing, will be discharged from the air force.

The officials said Stanowski is being discharged for medical reasons while Stewart is going back to his farm. No mention was made of former New York Ranger Neil Colville who has been mentioned in press reports in connection with releases under an Air Force discharge program.

Stanowski said last night that if discharged he would return to his old N.H.L. club. Air force officials to-day said discharge procedure would not likely be completed this week.

By The Canadian Press

New interest has been injected into tournament golf in the United States through the return to the fairways of Sam Snead, winner of the 1942 PGA championship at Atlantic City, following his recent discharge from the Navy. Snead will clash with Bryon Nelson of Toledo and Harold McSpaden in the opening today of the 72-hole open competition at Portland, Ore., in which 74 pros and 49 amateurs all told will go after $15,500 in war bonds.

Clark D. Shaughnessy announced yesterday at Pittsburgh he did not intend to quit as football coach at Pitt in spite of his record of only six victories against 10 defeats in two years. "I thought a great university like Pitt would attract better material," he said.

After four years in the presidency of the Niagara Falls, Stamford and Chippawa Baseball Association, Mike Barto of Niagara Falls retired from office last night and was succeeded by Orm Embleton in the annual elections.

The University of Western Ontario Alumni Association last night at London launched a campaign for further funds with which to construct a $500,000 athletic field house, for which $125,000 has already been subscribed.

St. Mike's Capture City COSSA Title

BELLEVILLE, Nov. 23. — St. Mike's "Irish" passed and ran around Belleville Collegiates to a 26 to 0 win here Wednesday to capture the city senior interscholastic football championship. In winning the "Irish" meet Stirling High School here Friday for the Bay of Quinte senior C.O.S.S.A. group title.

It was Quarterback Dick Fitzpatrick's on the button passing to Jerry Moher that gave St. Mike's two early touchdowns. Gord Donovan mounted the count by gathering in a brace of major scoring points by lugging the oval over the collegians' goal line via the ground route. Duffy scored the final Irish try by falling on a loose ball after the Irish had broken through to block a B.C.I. kick on their own nine.

College Games In Canada Being Resumed

By The Canadian Press

The first indication of the approaching resumption of intercollegiate sport in Ontario and Quebec is seen in announcement the University of Toronto will have its first senior hockey team this winter since the Intercollegiate Athletic Union called a halt in 1940 to all inter-university sports activities for the duration.

However, actual return of inter-university play probably will have to await the end of the war. The revived Varsity hockey team will play only exhibition games and Dr. J. H. Orr of Queen's University at Kingston, secretary of the Intercollegiate Athletic Union, said recently no plans have been made for the resumption of sport activities in the near future

Since the ban went into effect—it prohibits travel by University teams—sports activity has been confined to competition within the Universities themselves and in city leagues.

McGill University at Montreal has been active in city league circles there with teams entered in the Quebec Rugby Football Union, the Montreal National Defence Hockey League and the City's Senior Basketball League

Queen's won the Kingston City League football championship this season and will have entries in the city hockey and basketball leagues. Much emphasis has been laid on sport competition of almost every type within the University.

The University of Toronto has concentrated on inter-faculty and inter-class football and hockey. Its basketball team will continue playing exhibition games with outside teams coming to Toronto. University of Western Ontario at London had a strong football team this season but played only exhibition games at home.

At McMaster University, Hamilton, there has been much discussion of the possibility of exhibition games in various sport with Western and the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph but Athletic Director A. A. Burridge says there is no chance of anything being done until the Intercollegiate Union gives the go signal.

The Western Ontario Secondary Schools Association which adopted a sport ban in 1941 has decided to resume activity next spring with a track and field meet The Central Ontario Secondary Schools Association has maintained its activity all during the war and its 1944 football final is being played in Toronto Saturday between Niagara Falls and Peterborough Collegiate Institutes.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By SYD THOMAS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, Nov. 23 — CP). — Canadian football has taken a good toehold in the Maritimes— as the result of the missionary work of the Navy in Halifax — and now there are indications more interest is being shown in the game on the West Coast...Ken (Vancouver Province) McConnell says the Canadian game would win overwhelming support in British Columbia if it was given a decent chance. The big stumbling block now is the ban against Canadian football in the High Schools, which can't play it until after New Year's, since English rugby is the prescribed autumn game....As a result, the youngsters don't get a chance to acquire a good grounding in the sport, and the coast has never been able to produce a contender for the Grey Cup and Dominion honors....Now, Ken reports, High School youths are seeking outside coaching and playing the game for themselves. All they need is some encouragement, and Canadian football would go over big in Vancouver and other coast cities.

Reminiscence:

Mike Rodden of the Kingston Whig-Standard sports vehemently when he hears anyone exclaiming about 55 and 65-yard kicks by modern football players, "Pep" Leadley of Queen's University thought nothing of booting the ball 70 yards or more, Mike recalls, while Beano Wright, Huck Welch and Bert Gibb of the Hamilton Tigers of the late 20's could outdistance Leadley.

There was a punter in Montreal by the name of Jacques who could hoist the pigskin 70 and 80 yards, and Mike recalls how Harry Batstone of Toronto Argos in one game at Montreal in 1920 ran the ball out from deep behind his own goal line 13 times before the Torontonians could buck their way against those hefty boots of the Montrealer.

That, of course, was before the smaller ball was introduced along with the forward pass. It didn't have the carrying power of the old rugby ball that floated on the breeze like a barrage balloon.

Here and there:

Hockey might make a return to Moncton, N.B., if the Department of National Defence returns the Stadium to civilian use, as has been rumored. The city has no other closed rink, and the boys have been struggling along on open-air ice sheets....Tommy Moore of the Hamilton Spectator credits Lady Luck (not the one in the green cape) with giving Hamilton the O.R.F.U. title this year. The only thing the Wildcats had was defensive power, he admits....The Frood Open Pit senior hockey team, last year Eastern Canada finalists, are getting ready for another title attempt under Coach Frankie Graham. A flock of rookies round out the nucleus of veterans.

Barons Swamp Hornets 7 to 1

By The Canadian Press

Cleveland Barons swamped the Hornets 7-1 at Pittsburgh last night in the only American Hockey League game but the results brought no change in the league standing, although the Hornets' position in first place in the Western Division was weakened.

It was the third victory for Cleveland in five games with Pittsburgh and the Barons left no doubt about the outcome as they piled up four goals before Howard scored the sole Pittsburgh counter after 15 minutes of play in the second period. Shabaga and Kelly both scored twice for the Barons with Prokop, Sprout and Burlington adding the other tallies.

The league-leading Hornets looked completely lost in the final period when Burlington and Kelly scored goals when Waldriff was in the penalty box.

Betting Totals 3 Millions Over Last Year

OTTAWA, Nov. 23— (CP)— The flying thoroughbreds carried the hopes of Canadian racegoers—and $37,068,199 in wagers — as they pounded out the 1944 racing season, the Agriculture Department announced yesterday.

Bets placed at this year's meets showed an increased of $3,923,186 over the 1943 figures of $33,145,013, and represented the largest amount wagered since 1930, when 30 racing associations held 332 days of racing and wagered $38,007,146.

The Agriculture Department supervised pari-mutuel betting at the tracks of 25 racing associations which held 35 meetings this year, races being held for 298 days. In 1943, 22 associations held 32 meets, and races were held for 283 days.

Prize money paid this year amounted to $1,427,582, against $1,178,550 in 1943, an increase of $249,032. The largest amount wagered at any one meeting was at the spring meet of the Ontario Jockey Club at Toronto's Woodbine Park, when punters handed in bets of $2,157,493.

By cities, wagering declined at Montreal, but in Ottawa, Toronto, Hamilton, Fort Erie, Niagara Falls, Ont.; Winnipeg, Regina, Saskatoon, Calgary, Vancouver and Victoria it increase.

No betting comparisons were given for Moose Jaw, Sask.; Claresholm, Alta., and Edmonton, since these centres did not hold race meets in 1943. The smallest amount wagered —$1,377—was bet at the one-day meeting at Claresholm.

Statistics by cities, with last year's figures in brackets:

Montreal—Number of tracks 4 (4), racing days 55 (56), amount wagered $1,544,169 ($1,561,834), prize money $160,100 ($151,700).

Beverly Whitney, Toronto singer, is an outstanding hit in the fine Technicolor feature, "Irish Eyes Are Smiling," which she shares with Monty Woolley, June Haver, Dick Haymes and Anthony Quinn. The film is about the life of Ernest R. Ball, who wrote, "Let the Rest of the World Go By" and other great songs . . . It's a common thing for actresses to refuse to play certain parts because they think their lines are bad. Joan Fontaine walked off the set of "Affairs of Susan" because she didn't like the dialogue for the character she was to portray, Joan of Arc. Then it was revealed that the lines were historically correct.

There is constant agitation in Canada for more frequent showings of British films, with theatre men replying that they do not attract enough people to be profitable. Some do but most don't.

A quiz of British servicemen in the Mediterranean area, conducted by the service newspaper, Crusader, reveals that 95 per cent of British soldiers prefer Hollywood film to those made in the Old Country. And 90 per cent don't want to see war films.

British films, however, will soon meet popular tastes everywhere. Wesley Ruggles, a distinguished American director, has been put in charge of production by a leading British producer and he is hiring talent in Hollywood. The combined work of Britons and Americans is expected to yield films with international appeal.

Major William Halperin of the United States Marine Corps had been assigned to record the life of Jap prisoners. He proceeded to a British camp in New Zealand but the Japs wouldn't cooperate. However, he outfoxed them in everything but personal interviews. Japanese officers wouldn't talk.

He noticed one whose quarters were decorated with pictures of film stars. This officer spoke English and Halperin thawed him out with Hollywood gossip. The officer confessed that his post-war ambition was to be a Hollywood movie star. Halperin said that he might be able to help him realize his dreams by making a screen test right there and sending it to Hollywood. The officer jumped at the chance.

While the "screen test" was being made the Jap answered all questions about excellent treatment, good food, cigarettes and so on—into a hidden microphone!

Inter-County To Stay In

GALT, Ont., Nov. 23.— (CP). — The Intercounty Baseball Association decided at a meeting last night to defer action on a recommendation of its executive that it withdraw from the Ontario Baseball Association over the O.B.A. ruling in the case of Hank Biasetti of the London, Ont., team.

The executive recommendation was made Sept. 28 after the O.B.A. ruled that Biasetti was ineligible because he had played Sunday baseball in Detroit this summer. It ordered London to replay a semi-final series with Windsor. The London club ignored the order and played with Welland in an unofficial series for the Ontario baseball title.

Later the O.B.A. rescinded its decision.

Tom Long of Kitchener told last night's meeting that the O.B.A. admitted its decision was wrong by rescinding it. He said that before the Windsor club protested over Biasetti, the O.B.A. had notified it that he was eligible. The O.B.A. had put the Hamilton senior team back in competition after it had been eliminated, he added.

The decision of the meeting was to defer action on the withdrawal until after the O.B.A. annual meeting.

Habitants Face Tough Week

By The Canadian Press

It took Dick Irvin's Stanley Cup champions, Montreal Canadiens, three weeks to get into first place tie in the National Hockey League, but just how long they will be able to stand the pace is problematical.

Currently, they are in top spot with Toronto Maple Leafs, early-season leaders and to-night play their first game since acquiring the position last Tuesday, when they meet the third-place Detroit Red Wings at the border city. To round out thir week's schedule they meet the Leafs at Toronto Saturday and again at home on Sunday.

Toronto, on the other hand, clash with Art Ross' faltering Boston Bruins at Boston to-night and, while they will be without the services of their ace left-winger, Dave (Sweeney) Schriner, they are favorites to down the once-powerful Boston club.

In another mid-week game to-night, New York Rangers travel to Chicago for a game with the tail-end Black Hawks.

Detroit with one of the fastest clubs in the circuit will be shooting for a victory to strengthen their hold on third place.

Toronto will use Nick Metz, who recently was discharged from the Canadian Army, in place of Schriner on their front-running line with Gus Bodnar and Lorne Carr. Schriner suffered a severe Charley Horse last Saturday night when he crashed into his own goal post.

Unbeatable "Lincs" Advance Wins Admiration Of Nazis

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

WITH THE CANADIANS IN HOLLAND, Nov. 23 — (CP) — Across Northern France, Belgium and into Holland to the Lower Rhine, the Lincoln and Welland Regiment from the Niagara Peninsula, has been in one action after another during the past three months. It's record has been remarkable.

This infantry regiment had its first fight at the little town of La Campagne, south of Caen. It fought in the Falaise battle, was right up in the front row for the massacre of the Seventh Army in the Trun Gap, was the first Canadian outfit over the Seine. It marched on to the Somme and through the Pas De Calais; it fought along the Leopold Canal in preparatory actions to the big assault on the Schelde pocket; it was in the spearhead of the Canadian armored and infantry attack northwest of Antwerp and it shared in the capture of Esschen. The "Lincs and Wellands" with Western tanks captured Bergen Op Zoom and were in the advance on Steenbergen and the Lower Rhine.

Ace Unit

Those are the highlights. The regiment now is as battle tested a unit as any in the Canadian Army here. It has been in battl- in every type of country, bar mountains, and wound up in the soggy Dutch polders fighting over the most terrible territory of all. But the unit came through with flying colors.

On Aug. 8, when the first Canadian army struck its big blow down the Caen-Falaise highway, the Lincoln and Wellands were among units which exploited the break through the German defence line made initially by the 2nd Division.

Lincs fought through several towns on the road to Falaise and shared too in the second Canadian army attack which went in on Aug. 14 and resulted in the capture of Falaise. The regiment was with other infantry units which poured over the Laison River in the wake of the biggest tank assault of the Normandy campaign. It shattered a German gun screen and overran high ground northeast of Falaise. The Lincs had the honor to capture the important town of Olendon. On the day of this attack General Von Kluge, commander of the Seventh Army, sent this report to Berlin: "A break-through south of Caen has occurred the like of which we have never seen." The Niagara Peninsula had a full share in this job.

After Falaise the focal point of operations was Trun and it was the Lincoln and Wellands with a squadron of tanks from the South Alberta Regiment who broke through to Trun first, running German artillery fire all the way. When they got to Trun, the Germans were milling around the streets in the wildest confusion.

This was Aug. 19 and the regiment spent all day shooting up Germans trying to flee through the gap. From dawn to dusk, the Lincs fired every weapon they had. They did not suffer a single casualty themselves and inflicted tremendous casualties on the enemy. They also took 1,500 prisoners in that one day.

Cross River

Leaving Trun, the regiment turned east to the Seine and reached the river at Criquebeuf, south of Rouen. The Lincs found a skiff on the river bank and under covering fire from tanks and machine guns ferried the entire company, commanded at the time by Maj. Keith Crummer of Chatham, Ont., over the broad Seine. Other companies, including one then commanded by Maj. J. A. Baldwin of London, Ont., followed them over and a firm bridgehead was established into which the Royal Canadian Engineers built a bridge.

The Germans were holding Hill 88, on the north side of the Seine, and Lincs stormed and captured this hill. Without any rest, they kept moving forward, clearing the road to Rouen.

Then the regiment struck out for the Somme, 70 miles away. On the heels of the retreating 15th Army, the Lincs pushed east with the other Canadians and made an unopposed crossing of the Somme near Abbeville. On to St. Omer they went and into Belgium to Bruges.

Lincs crossed Bruges Canal and entered Eecloo, last big town in Belgium to be liberated. From there, they pushed along the south side of the Leopold Canal. For three days they fought through flooded land in water to their knees to take a couple of obscure but military important towns on the Dutch-Belgian border.

For three weeks, the regiment was on the Leopold Canal, feeling out the German positions across the Canal with frequent raids. This was in preparation for the full-scale attack on the Schelde which began with the crossing of the Leopold by western battalions on Oct. 6.

The regiment went from the Leopold Canal to positions northwest of Antwerp. On Oct. 20, it shared in the attack towards Esschen. Lincs had to fight through a thick forest, infested with mines and booby traps as well as Germans and then they made a spectacular night attack across country to Esschen.

Warm Reception

On Oct. 22, Esschen was captured by the Lincs and another Ontario battalion. The daring night attack had paid off.

Maj. Dandy and his company did a fine job beyond Esschen, clearing a wood and relieving pressure on another Canadian regiment.

From Esschen, the Lincs struck off to Bergen Op Zoom, with tanks supporting them. Up a trail, littered with mines and felled trees, they fought for nearly every yard of ground over a distance of five miles. Germans finally could not take any more of a beating and they fell back, leaving Bergen unoccupied. Lincs and the tanks seized this opportunity and Maj. Dandy and Maj. Swayze led the first two infantry companies into the town to receive a terrific welcome from the Dutch people.

A German prisoner captured on one push paid the Lincs a back-handed compliment when he said: "The Lincoln and Welland Regiment has no sentiment, no mercy, no discipline." The Lincs themselves liked that.

Typhoons Destroy Hun Headquarters

LONDON, Nov. 23 — (CP) — Rocket-firing R.A.F. Typhoons, diving out of low-hanging clouds, surprised enemy defences and destroyed a German Army headquarters today about 50 miles beyond Allied forward lines.

Returning airmen said the headquarters building was "just a cloud of debris and dust." All Typhoons returned to base.

Mail Mystery Puzzles Ottawa

TORONTO, Nov. 23 — (CP) — The Toronto Globe and Mail in a special dispatch from Ottawa said a "major mailing mystery" had been created by letters asking consideration for home defence troops which have been sent to members of parliament in "free" government envelopes.

The dispatch said the letters were signed "the Zombies" and mimeographed on paper similar to that used by defence branches in reporting casualties. They were contained in brown envelopes commonly used in government service which bore "O.H.M.S." and "free" on their exterior, it added.

The letters pictured the typical home defence soldier as a man of foreign-born parents who had suffered discrimination and said that if he were assured equal rights and opportunities "there will be no need of coercion nor compulsion," the dispatch said.

It added th re was no information as to how the persons responsible for the letters obtained official stationery, envelopes and the privilege of franking them.

Red Cross Ready For New Quota

HAVELOCK, Nov. 23 — (ENS) — At the meeting of the Red Cross Society on Tuesday, the Sewing Committee advised that there was still some material on hand after the request quota to use up this goods had been taken care of and the secretary was instructed to write for a further quota to utilize the 13¼ yards of material still in stock.

Mrs. C. Anderson was asked to make a choice suitable for the local workers for another quota from the garments listed in the special appeal received recently from national headquarters.

Miss M. Chambers, the knitting convener, reported that she had sent for another knitting quota, but that it had not arrived and she was given authority to have the purchaser, Mrs. A. Anderson, order the wool required. The workers were requested to have all garments returned not later than the meeting on December 12.

There were 19 members in attendance.

Boy 9, Shot

TORONTO, Nov. 23—(CP)—Earl Carberry, nine-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Carberry, died in hospital Tuesday after being shot in the head while examining his father's revolver. The boy had been left alone in the house and, on his parents' return, was found unconscious with a bullet wound in the head. Police said no inquest will be held.

Knox Class Guests Of Hastings Group

HAVELOCK, Nov. 23 — (ENS) — The girls' class of Knox Presbyterian Church at Havelock journeyed to Hastings Monday evening, where they were the guests of Rev. J. Davey and Mrs. Davey, and the Young People's Society of the Hastings Presbyterian Church, when about forty young people were in attendance, twenty of whom were from Havelock.

The Hastings Society was in charge of the devotional exercises which opened with prayer by Rev. Davey, while the Havelock class had charge of the social period which included a "get-to-gether" conducted by Mrs. G. Kennedy who also assisted Mrs. R. Sayer in conducting a ring game. Mrs. F. McKenzie was in charge of one game and the president, Miss Essie McQuigge, led the community singing. Refreshments were served at the close by the Hastings Society.

FINDS CARD

An R.C.A.F. identification card belonging to AC. 2 Harold Arthur Ashbourne, was found Wednesday afternoon near the Bank of Toronto at the corner of Hunter and George streets. The card can be picked up at the Examiner.

HOLLAND CASUALTY

A former Johnson Motors employee, Pte. William Morris, has been wounded in Holland while fighting with the Black Watch Regiment. He is now in an English hospital, and expects to be invalided home. He is the son of Mrs. V. Morris, 744 New Romaine street.

TO COME HOME

Major Archie Hamilton, formerly second-in-command of the Stormont Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders, is expecting to be invalided home. A leg wound which he received during fighting in France has not healed as rapidly as was expected and this is responsible for his home-coming.

DOING NEW WORK

CP. 1 Louise Spriggs, formerly of the Examiner Circulation Department, is now one of 42 airwomen serving in the R.C.A.F. Precision Squad. This group recently put on a display in Buffalo and a picture of she and her companions appeared in the Buffalo Courier Express. Cpl. Spriggs has been stationed at Rockcliffe, and is the daughter of Mrs. L. F. Spriggs, Charlotte street.

LITTLE BLAZE

A chimney fire at the residence of A. Roberts, 692 Stewart street, received the attention of firemen at 6.28 o'clock Wednesday evening. There was no damage.

KILLED IN ACTION

Pte. Ross Copeland, son of Mrs. Florence Copeland, 135 Durham street, Lindsay, has been killed in action while serving with a British Columbia regiment, and Rifleman Donald J. Forestell, son of Thomas O. Forestell, Madoc, has been listed as "wounded in action", while serving with an Eastern Ontario regiment.

AMBULANCE ON WAY

The ambulance in memory of Paratrooper Kenneth Nice, 581 Douglas avenue, was purchased Wednesday from General Motors and will be on its way today. Neighbours of the young soldier contributed $4,900 in Victory Bonds to purchase the machine. Son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Nice, Paratrooper Nice died of wounds August 9.

KNEE WOUND

Mrs. Harriet Timlin, Coldsprings, has received further word about her son, L.-Cpl. Fred Timlin, who was wounded October 17 while fighting with the S. D. and G. Highlanders. L.-Cpl. Timlin has a bullet wound in the knee, but hopes to be out of the hospital in a short time. Prior to enlisting, this soldier was employed as a mechanic at the J. J. Duffus garage.

Navy League Stands Ready To Help Men Of Sea Who Need Help Most

Since the outbreak of war, the Navy League of Canada with the willing support of the people of Canada, has been making a great contribution to this country's war effort. It has provided much-needed care, help, and recreation to those who go "down to the sea in ships," whether they be Canadian naval ratings, merchant seamen who arrive in Canada from all parts of the globe, or the fighting men of all the navies of the United Nations, who come to Canada in their line of duty.

Wartime has seen the great need for the Navy League's work, and also the fulfillments of its obligations to our own seamen, and those of our Allied nations.

But even in peacetime, this great organization was working steadily for sailors; in 1917, before the last war ended, it had founded the Sea Cadet movement, and has continued to sponsor this youth-training program in the years since that time.

Today, as always, the Navy League stands ready to help men of the sea who need help most; Whenever a ship goes down in the long stretches of water between Canada and Britain, the survivors upon reaching the Canadian shore, are welcomed and helped by this organization. Comforts and recreation; medical attention, hospitalization; friendship and personal accommodation, all are provided for them.

The rapid growth both in size and strength of Canada's naval and merchant shipping, has been matched by the work of the League; it has kept pace with the times, enlarging facilities when needed, and placing its work on larger scales, as the necessity is presented.

23 Clubs Operated

The Navy League operates a total of 23 clubs for merchant seamen, naval ratings, and Junior Naval officers. The doors of these clubs are open to all seamen, and also men and women of the army and air forces. In 1943, the attendance at these clubs was 1,775,263. Not including free teas, and lunches, 477,349 feals were served in the first seven months of 1944. Between January 1 to July 31, 1944, an average of 5,000 a day attended the clubs. Beds are provided for thousands of seamen.

Medical attention, one of the highlights of the League's work for merchant seamen, is ready for men coming out of action on the seas. In 1943, 7,557 merchant seamen were nursed in the Navy League's Sick Bay.

Christmas, 1943, the League distributed no less than 120,000 ditty bags, worth an average of $4 each, to naval ratings and merchant mariners wherever they were; the work will continue, this year.

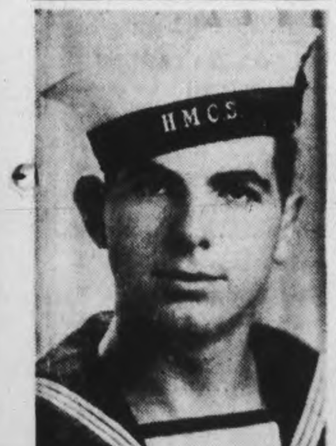
Regularly since the war began, millions of magazines, books and games are distributed by the League; fur vests, woollen goods, including socks, sweaters, scarves, helmets and mittens, are all sent out to the seamen freely.

A Benevolence Fund has been established to provide care and treatment for injured merchant seamen and their families; or for families of sailors who have given their lives while on active service. Visits to hospitals, and all necessary personal services, incliding providing graves for seamen who die far away from home, are portions of the League's work.

Sea Cadet Movement

But perhaps the biggest, and one of the most important jobs, has been the Sea Cadet movement; it has a total enrolment of 15,000 Sea Cadets and Cadet officers. Throughout Canada, 11 camps are operated, and with the cooperation of the Department of Naval Services, approximately 10,000 cadets attended this year's camps. The list of work being done with the Sea Cadets is endless; a vital part of Canada's Navy League.

This is Navy Week, all over Canada! Tributes will be paid to the young Canadian men from all walks of life, who have answered the call of their country, and gone to sea. Surely, there is no better way for the people of Canada to offer a resounding salute to these men, than by supporting the Navy League in all its projects.



AT CORNWALLIS—AB. Edward I. Stinson, RCVNR, second son of ex-Warden Percy and Mrs. Stinson, Millbrook, enlisted in the Navy last June, and is now taking a special course at Cornwallis, N.S. He was 19 last August, and an older brother, Sgt. Jack Stinson, has been in the RCAF for five years, and overseas for nearly three years. Previous to enlisting Ted was taking his senior matriculation course at the Millbrook Continuation School.

Traffic Offence Brings $10 Fine

Clarence Scott, Havelock, a former member of the RCNVR, was fined $10 and costs in police court this morning after he had entered a written plea of guilty to a charge of careless driving.

Provincial Constable Archie Grayling of Havelock, who laid the charge, told Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., that Scott's car had left the highway on a level stretch of road and had run into the ditch. The former sailor was not injured, the officer stated, and his car escaped without damage.

Mrs. Jeannette Cheney, Toronto, pleaded guilty to a charge of having been drunk on McDonnel street Wednesday night and was fined $10 and $2.50. The woman assured the court that it would not happen again.

Two Peterboro Fliers Graduated By RCAF

Four more airmen from Peterborough and the Peterborough district have graduated in Royal Canadian Air Force schools in Canada, according to an official announcement today.

Sgt. J. C. R. Sirman, 287 Prince street, has graduated at No. 9 A.O.S., St. John's, Quebec, as an air bomber, and Sgt. L. R. Althouse, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Althouse, 10 Benson avenue, graduated at F. E. S. Aylmer, as a flight engineer. Sgt. Althouse, formerly a government inspector at Johnson Motors, enlisted in the R.C.A.F. in January. He is nineteen years of age.

Sgt. C. O. Dudley, of Warkworth, and Sgt. J. F. Eakins, 202 William street N., Lindsay, also graduated at Aylmer as flight engineers.

3-Year Term Advocated For Aldermen

A provincial or county park was one of the projects recommended by A.E.K Bunnell, Toronto, consultant with the Ontario Department of Planning and Development, in a talk and discussion with the members of the Town Planning Committee and several members of the council Wednesday night.

Obviously the park idea was far from the top of the list of undertakings in community planning as outlined for Peterborough consideration, but Mr. Bunnell said it was something that would increase and grow in importance every year.

From his experience during a period of residence in this town, Mr. Bunnell recalled opinions of friends as to how fortunately he was situated at that time, almost in the centre of the Kawartha Lakes district, with water and woods in all directions.

Only Trespassers

'My reply was and still would be that I did not own a cottage or lakefront property, and that if I went out any where it would be only as a trespasser on the land of others or I would have to be cantent with some waterfront at the end of a road allowance," Mr. Bunnell stated in a nutshell summary of the sentiment and concern of many of the citizens of Peterborough city and county who have been hoping that the proposals for ample public park area in the northern part of the county would succeed in attracting a large and intelligent volume of public support, chiefly in the hope of protecting the interests of the generations to come, before lake lands now available have passed into private and exclusive hands.

That was only one of the ideas Mr. Bunnell presented to the Town Planning committee. Alderman Dutton, chairman, presided. He confirmed from the outset the need and advisability of the services of a Town Planning committee

"As to the airport I would say this industrial area of Peterborough must have an airport, because it is felt that no city can continue to attract industries unless it is supplied with the best transportation facilities. Aviation should be regarded as a 'must'' for tomorrow."

Mr. Bunnell turned to an obvious flaw in Peterborough "in the extent to which it is cut off by the steam railways. I think your committee might put that idea on its list and see whether anything can be done by study and consultation with the heads of these railways."

Local Individuality

A community should exploit and take the fullest advantage of whatever natural features tend to point up its individuality. "With your lake and river and magnificent Armor's Hill, you should lose no opportunity to develop these assets in every way you can along your lake and river."

Mr. Bunnell said he had felt disappointed 'when the Beaver Lumber Company took over the Scott Lumber Company location on George street below the wharf As I saw the picture I thought it should have been taken over for community purposes." In that opinion Mr. Bunnell endorsed the attitude of Mayor Hamilton whose efforts to obtain possession of the property for the McDonald Point scene failed to obtain the support near at hand required to carry through the project of getting the lumber company away from the beauty spot the city had begun to create.

"Find a job for each of the service clubs and for women's organizations" Mr. Bunnell suggested. "Get them into this picture and in that way gradually build up support for town planning."

Longer Terms

Here was another idea. "It seems to me that cities are held back in the progress they might make by their practice of electing aldermen for one-year terms. You do better in Peterborough with your two-year term. The four-year system in the Legislature works fairly satisfactorily, and it would be a grand step forward if the people of our communities could be educated into electing their councils on a rotary basis for at least three year terms."

Mr. Bunnell advocated a zoning system for Peterborough. "You can't set it up too soon" to conform with the National Housing Act of this year which makes zoning essential to make available for its citizens the most advantageous loans under the Act."

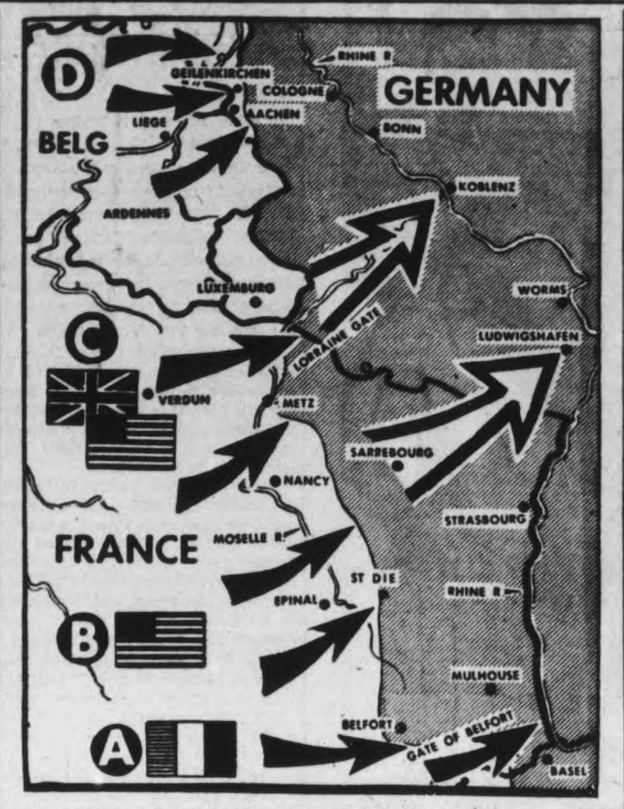
The government and lending corporations are demanding safeguard of the properties upon which houses are to be built with government loan assistance.

Gnr. Wm. Puddephatt Wounded In Holland

WARKWORTH, Nov. 23 — (ENS). — Mrs. William Puddephatt, Norham, has received word that her husband, Gnr. W. Puddephatt, was wounded November 15, while fighting in the Netherlands. The nature of his injuries was not revealed.

Enlisting in March, 1940, Gnr. Puddephatt went overseas five months later and a short time ago was transferred from an ack-ack unit to an anti-tank regiment. He has been serving on the Continent since D-Day, and brother, Bert, is fighting in Italy.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. George Puddephatt of Codrington, he was a farmer prior to enlisting and he has two children, Billy and Betty Lou.



NAZILAND INVASION TO THE WEST—Along historic routes of invasion into Germany, Allied forces along the entire Western front are carrying on the "big push" to the Rhine and beyond. Particularly spectacular (A) is the French 1st Army's Belfort gap breakthrough to the River Rhine and the road to Bavaria. To the north (B) drives ahead toward Strasbourg and large arrow indicates possible lower Saar Basin route. At Metz (C) German resistance is reported to have virtually ceased to exist, while (Upper Arrow) the General Patton forces appear bent on following the Moselle River to Koblenz. Following the fall of Geilenkirchen (D) Allied armies are beginning to bore deeper into Germany.

Douro Pioneer Passes At 89

One of the early pioneers of Douro township, and one of its most beloved citizens, John McMurray, in his 90th year, died early this morning at his residence, Lot. 14, Con. 1, Douro, R.R. 4, Lakefield. He had been in failing health for the past year.

Mr. McMurray was born December 7, 1854 before Confederation within sight of the place where he has lived since his marriage. He has watched Peterborough and district grow from a small beginning, to a now powerful industrial centre. This pioneer son lived through a series of conflicts which, though they shook the Dominion, weathered the crises, and advanced to a higher level after each one. The Northwest Rebellion, the South African War, the War 1914-1918 and now five years of the present war, presented a too-familiar bloody, kladiescopic pattern, to his kindly eyes.

Son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Garret McMurray, he was a successful farmer and during his lifetime he was a member of St. Joseph's Church, Douro. He also belonged to the Holy Name Society of St. Joseph's Church.

Mr. McMurray's wife, Nora McAuley, predeceased him 33 years ago. He leaves to mourn six daughters, Mrs. John McMahon, Douro; Mrs. Matthew McAuley, of New York; Mrs. M. J. Kane, Peterborough; Rev. Sister St. Matthew, of London, Ontario; Emma, and Mary, both at home; and four sons, Thomas, Garret, both of Douro;

JOHN McMURRAY

Jerry, Saskatchewan; John, with the Royal Canadian Engineers overseas, and one sister, Mrs. Catherine Allen, of Peterborough.

The funeral will be Saturday morning at 8.30 o'clock, from the family residence at St. Joseph's Church for Requiem Mass at nine o'clock. Burial will be in St. Joseph's Cemetery.

Clark Earls Dies In California

Older residents of Peterborough, especially ball fans of four decades ago, will be sorry to learn of the death at Aptos, California, of Clark Wallace Earls, who passed suddenly on Friday last, November 17.

Clark Earls came to Peterborough from Toronto at the beginning of the present century with the Stanley Piano Company, who opened a plant at the corner of George and Dalhousie streets. For five or six seasons he played with the Peterborough ball club and was a team mate of Dan McCabe, Chris Graham, Jack Sheridan, Wallie Parnell and all the other well-known players of that era.

Mr. Earls' first wife was a Peterborough girl, Irene Harper, Charlotte street.

He left here many years ago but is still well-remembered by many friends who recall his connection with Peterborough baseball.

Mr. Earls who was a son of the late Robert and Mrs. Earls of Woodbridge, Ont., is survived by his second wife and by a brother, W. N. Earls, Ottawa and a sister, Mrs. G. Burton, Toronto.

The funeral took place in California.

300 Farm Helpers Placed In Industry

Seasonal surplus of farm labor in the district has been returning to the city for the winter with the gradual decline of agricultural activity.

Three hundred men who have been employed as farm helpers since spring plowing and seeding time have been placed in local factories during the last two weeks, W. H. L. Mellis of Selective Service informed the Examiner today.

The trek back to the city has relieved the local scarcity of labor in manufacturing industries.

"Now we need two hundred bushmen for work in Haliburton and other parts of the north country," Mr. Mellis said.

Can Be Done

HAMILTON, Nov. 23.—(CP). — Problems confronting Canadian unity, though grave, are not insurmountable and should be approached in the spirit shown by servicemen who enlisted as Canadians rather than adherents to any particular section of the country, Dr. Sidney E. Smith, president-elect of the University of Toronto, said last night in an address to the Hamilton Academy of Medicine.

Are You Aware Of The Fact?

That while the new Civic Hospital is to cost approximately $1,400,000, the by-law only asked for $600,000 of this, the home owners in Peterborough are to provide $300,000. The County of Peterborough has already voted $150,000. Thus for every half dollar in taxes that the farmer in Chandos township, with an assessment of $3,000, is asked to pay, the home owner in Peterborough with a like assessment will be asked to pay one dollar.

This should settle once and for all the argument that Peterborough County is not doing its share. Its population is about one-half that of the city and it is assessing on its property owners an amount equal to one-half what is being asked from the home owners in Peterborough.

Drunken Driving Evidence Contradictory

Magistrate E. A. Gee reserved judgment until November 30 in the charge of drunken driving against Carman Coones, Smith township truck driver, heard in police court in an all-day session Wednesday.

W. J. Arthur Fair, defence counsel, argued that the case should be dismissed on the strength of the evidence given by one of the Crown witnesses, Dr. J. C. Smith of Lakefield.

Mr. Fair said that Dr. Smith who had an opportunity to see the accused for some time soon after the accident had not smelled liquor off his breath and had arrived at the conclusion that Coones' action referred to by other witnesses were the result of contusion caused by his being injured in the accident and not of liquor.

Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C. pointed out that another doctor, Dr. Alex Fraser, of Lakefield who had seen Coones when he was brought to the doctor's office soon after the accident had sworn that the man was drunk.

When the afternoon session opened Mr. Fair called Preston Martin as the first defence witness. Martin swore that he had been with Coones all afternoon on the day of the accident and that only a couple of drinks of beer had been consumed, one early in the afternoon.

Nelson Coones, brother of the accused, who saw him in the town hall at Lakefield after the accident said that in his opinion Carman Coones was not drunk.

The witness said that he had formerly owned the truck driven by his brother on the night of the accident and that it had a broken bolt on the axle. Coones said that when he inspected the truck after the accident he had noticed that another bolt had been broken off and as a result he believed that when the vehicle went into the ditch the driver would have no control of it and that the brakes would not work.

Carman Coones swore that he had had one drink of beer in a local beverage room before 2 o'clock that day and another drink around five o'clock. He said that they had had no effect on him and that he was perfectly sober when he started off from Peterborough that evening to drive to Lakefield.

He explained the accident by stating that just before the accident he had found that his steering gear would not work. The truck had travelled across the road on to its wrong side and eventually into the ditch but Coones said that he did not remember anything but feeling a heavy bump until he came to outside the Lakefield town hall.

In cross-examination Coones said he had not applied his brakes until the car was about to go into the ditch.

"Why didn't you apply them when you realized that the truck was going to the wrong side of the road?" asked Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C.

"I thought that the steering gear might come back all right but it fooled me," said the accused.

Another charge against Coones of reckless driving was dismissed when Crown Attorney McElderry announced that no evidence would be offered.

Military Hospital To Be Ready Feb. 1

The Military Hospital to be established in the former staff house on Monaghan road will not be ready for use until February 1, according to word received from Gordon K. Fraser, M.P.

Peterborough's Federal member states that he had an interview Tuesday with Mr. Senior, the executive assistant to Hon. Ian Mackenzie, Minister of Veterans' Affairs, in regard to the hospital, and was informed by him that the delaying in opening the institution was caused by the fact that the tenders received for alterations to the staff house had far exceeded the estimates established by the Department of Pensions and Health, and therefore that other arrangements for completing the work would have to be made.

Mr. Fraser was assured that operations would be proceeded with as soon as possible and that it was thought that everything would be ready by February.

Big Ted Reeve Hid Injury For 3 Months

By ALLAN NICKLESON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

SOMEWHERE IN SOUTHERN ENGLAND, Nov. 23.—(CP Cable.)—Big Ted Reeve of Toronto is confined to a Canadian Military General Hospital here with a fractured left elbow and is awaiting transportation home where he probably will be honorably discharged from the army.

The 42 year old gunner, member of Conny Smythe's "Sportsmen's Battery," who gave up his football coaching and writing of his sports column in the Toronto Telegram to join the Canadian army in 1940 suffered the injury late last July near Caen.

But Reeve, who probably gave up counting scars and fractures in his early football days, carried on more than three months and reported his injury only Nov. 4. He was sent immediately to hospital.

Ted claims he didn't know it was fractured, although he conceded that it bothered him "some."

Teddy has seen plenty of action since his battery went to France a few weeks after D-Day.

His elbow was smashed by what he described as a "flying rock" during a German artillery barrage. He continued his duties on an anti-aircraft gun until he gave his elbow a "wallop" while loading ammunition on a Holland gunsite.

Full medical examination revealed the fracture and also the fact that Teddy's category was not A-1.

"I didn't want to go to a doctor," Ted told the Canadian Press as he relaxed in his blue hospital uniform—on bed No. 13. "And I sure would like to wind up this show with the guys," he added, waving his arm to indicate the long line og beds containing Canadian wounded.

Reeve, whose arm is in a sling but not in a cast, still has hopes of getting back to the front, but it seems certain that he won't be in a combat role.

"I felt good all the way through the show over there," he said. "In fact, it was easier than our training, although we had some tough times."

Ted is not confined to bed and is allowed to leave hospital on a pass. His main worry right now is to get his hair cut because he wants to look his best when he meets his wife "and the gang" around Toronto's Balmy Beach.

Northumberland Girl Wins Public Speaking

Kathryn Judd representing S.S. No. 3, Haldimand township, won first place in the Belleville District public speaking contest and the right to represent the district at the final in Toronto in the spring. Lenna Locklin of Brighton was placed second.

There were eight contestants representing Peterborough, Northumberland, Durham and Frontenac counties. For Peterborough were Marilyn Bowles and Margaret Charten of S.S. No. 3, North Monaghan; Durham county, Josephine Kosowich of S.S. No. 9, Hope Township and Jean McCarthy of Port Hope Public School; Frontenac county, Lillian Howes of S.S. No. 6, Hinchinbrooke township; Northumberland county, Kathryn Judd, Lenna Locklin and Barbara Bates S.S. No. 17, Haldimand township.

Greek Freedom Celebrated With Banquet

As an expression of their happiness in the liberation of their homeland and also as an appreciation of the material aid sent from Canada, and in particular from the citizens of Peterborough to the people of Greece during the war, the management of the Churchill Restaurant gave a dinner Wednesday night to a company of guests representing the entire community of this city.

Among those attending were Mayor Hamilton and the members of the Council: Gordon S. Matthews, Fred Hills of the Utilities Commission and R. L. Dobbin, manager; Magistrate O. A. Langley, Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., F. D. Kerr, K.C., Chief Gimblett, Hon. G. N. Gordon, P. D. Scollard and others, including representatives of the Examiner.

This dinner was off the record in the sense that the Churchill closes every Wednesday around 11 a.m. until the following morning when breakfast is ready for the early arrivals around six o'clock. It was an excellent repast, generally supervised for this special occasion by Mrs. W. Couros, who also supplied her home silverware as her own gesture of goodwill and homey touch. Other guests were Mr. Yeotes, Mr. Zakos and Mr. Demos.

At the conclusion, Alderman Sands, acting as chairman at the request of Mr. N. Douros, explained for the hosts the purposes of the dinner and their feeling of gratitude to the citizens of Peterborough, who during the war years had made gifts of money, clothing and footwear to be sent to Greece. They were extending their thanks to the people through their community representatives.

Gifts Appreciated

"We are very glad you have come," Mr. Douros said. "Great Britain and her Allies, and especially Canada, have given great help to the people of Greece. The wheat that was sent from Canada I am sure saved a great many lives of people who were close to starving. I know the way the people of Peterborough feel toward Greece because when we asked for clothing and boots great piles were given, and were sent overseas. We would like to thank everybody now that the worst is over, and I hope the Greeks will never forget the Allies, and especially Canada."

"We are glad to have this invitation and opportunity to rejoice with you in a small measure in the liberation of Greece from the tyranny of the Germans," Mayor Hamilton said. "Greece has a marvellous background of history, has been one of the great civilizing countries in the world's progress. They were acting according to their long traditions when they stood in the way of the Nazis, knowing that it was a hopeless job, against such an enemy. But, their resistance had a great deal to do with the Allies being in the position we are today. The more help that is given at the beginning, the more it counts at the end. We offer a high tribute to Greece, and we hope they will be able to build up their country to take its place among the democratic nations."

Fate Unknown

Alderman Sands also called on Mr. Yeotes: "We are now hoping to hear for the first time from relatives and friends in Greece who were cut off from the world when the Germans came. We do not know whether they are alive or dead, and how they got along while the enemy held them. It seems that the only way the Christian peoples can have peace and security in the future is by clearing out the Prussian hordes."

Grace after dinner was said by Alderman Dutton, who at the suggestion of Alderman Sands extended its prayer of thanksgiving to acknowledge the defeat of the Germans in Greece and to ask the favor of God upon a people who had suffered much in the common cause of these war years.

Associated with Mr. Douros as hosts were Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Couros and John Mousmoules, and the accomplished chef, John Stamates.

Liberal Party Urged To Be More Radical

By DOUGLAS AMARON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Nov. 23 (CP)—Sir William Beveridge, father of Britain's social security scheme, is anxious that the Liberal party should become more radical.

"The times call for a new Britain," Sir William said at a reception tendered him by the Liberal social council on the occasion of his entry into parliament as a Liberal member. "Liberals must not be afraid to use the state. They must humanize it and utilize its machinery."

Sir William suggested "a Liberal party with a radical program" as a banner under which to fight to rebuild up a strong and flourishing Liberal party.

Liberalism, said Sir William, stood for the best safeguard of the liberties of the British people, not so much the liberties that were only useful but those which were essential.

Many evils remained to be eradicated, including want, squalor, ignorance and disease. The battle to eradicate them was begun 35 years ago by David Lloyd George and Sir William hoped that soon the finishing touches would be put to the great project started then.

In Wales, a new Liberal Federation has been inaugurated fusing the party's North and South Wales federations. Despite the fusion, the two federations will continue to function separately.

Aim of the new federation, according to J. E. Emlyn-Jones, its president, is to place Liberal candidates in every Welsh constituency in the next general election. A provisional constitution laid stress on the special needs and aspirations of Wales, including appointment of a secretary of state.

Election Notes

Prime Minister Churchill's speech in the Commons moving the bill to extend Parliament's life another year settled definitely any question of an immediate election and it is believed now that voting will not take place before next fall at the earliest. Parties are going ahead with their preparations just the same.

Nestleton Team Captures Seed Potato Judging

TORONTO, Nov. 23 — (CP). — Two teams from Ontario, two from British Columbia and one each from Alberta and Quebec were announced winners in the 1944 national contests for boys and girls' farm clubs held during the past two days here and in Guelph.

Twenty-nine two-man teams competed in the six classes. The Ontario teams entered in the dairy calf and seed potato projects were declared winners of their sections, while the British Columbia beef calf and poultry teams were winners of their projects finals. Seed grain project was won by the Alberta team and the swine project by a team from Quebec.

The 58 contestants, eight of whom were girls, took oral examinations in Toronto on Monday and partook in the judging competition at the Ontario Agricultural College on Tuesday afternoon.

The winning Ontario teams and individuals are:

Dairy calf—Ontario (Archie Fletcher, Maple, and Keith Wardlaw, Kleinberg). Individual, Archie Fletcher.

Seed potato — Ontario (Lloyd Ayre, Hampton, and Dalton Dorrell, Nestleton). Individual, Lloyd Ayre.

Final results showed two teams each from Ontario and Alberta as winners of the Dominion honors. Ontario teams were leaders in the dairy calf and seed potato projects. British Columbia's young farmers and farmettes led in beef calves and poultry. The winning Quebec team was in the swine division and the seed grain project was won by an Alberta team.

Aside from the experience of coming half-way across the country for the contests, concensus was "we like our homes on the farm." The girls especially told of future plans to remain on the land and set up homes as well as continue their work with crops, cattle and poultry.

Patton Duplicates Feat Of Attila

By KENNETH L. DIXON
Associated Press War Correspondent

METZ, Nov. 22—(AP)—The fortress city of Metz has fallen to United States 3rd Army troops after several weeks of an encircling siege, it was announced Wednesday.

Lt. Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., thus became the first commander to take the city, reputedly one of the strongest in the world, since Attilo the Hun did the trick in the middle of the fifth century.

The announcement of the ancient bastion's collapse came anticlimatically, after soldiers of four separate divisions were cleaning their guns. Actually the 5th and 95th divisions were credited with sezing Metz but the encirclement included operations by the 80th and 90th divisions.

Says Russia Must Fight Against Japan

TORONTO, Nov. 23 —(CP)—Sir Bernard Pares, authority on Russian history and member of the University of Toronto faculty, said last night Russia must enter the Pacific war since it was imperative that she be in the council chamber when the Pacific question is settled. Speaking to the Young Business Women's Canadian Club he said Russia's communication in the Pacific depends upon a free and independent China.

"There can't be any world peace without Russia," he said. "Last time the attempt was made it was a failure and the fact that Russia was n. a participant in the last peace treaties did a lot to cause the present war."

Students Learn About Problems Of Family Life

By KATHLEEN REX
Canadian Press Staff Writer

VANCOUVER, Nov. 23—(CP)—It doesn't matter whether Susie Q is a bride-to-be or a grandmother, whether she lives in Vancouver or in a British Columbia logging camp, she's still eligible for a university course on how to treat her new husband or how to get along with the one she has had for 40 years.

If dad has trouble with 10-year-old Jimmy, if young Tom Jones is at a loss how to handle his wife when she hits high C in a temper tantrum, the University of British Columbia extension course on marriage and family life is the answer.

At present the course is limited to British Columbia, but so many inquiries have come from the eastern provinces that before long men and women from Halifax to Hamilton, Montreal to Regina, may be taking a course on marriage and family life to learn how to deal with problem spouses and belligerent offspring.

This is a discussion course, not lecture course. George Cole of the Manitoba Mines Department, while visiting here recently remarked that if the course was to be successful it could not include as instructors, bachelors, old maids and fossilized widowers.. But for this course there are "instructors." Trained men and women provide written material and suitable books are suggested by the University for reading. From then on the student has the floor. It is his opinion on the matter that counts.

A group of not more than 10 persons is best for the course, Miss Marjorie Smith of the U.B.C. extension department, said. Larger groups tend to make the shy individual hesitate to come forward and the feeling of mutual interest and friendliness is lost.

Mixed Groups Better

Young married couples may prefer forming their own group but often it is better if the gatherings are mixed when it comes to ages and background. An older person can offer advice from his wealth of experiences whereas a younger individual can present the ideas and problems important to youth.

Several welfare groups from other provinces have inquired about the course, Miss Smith added. Watson Thomson, adult education director for Saskatchewan, has asked for copies of it.

Each of the 12 bulletins in the course is prepared by a doctor or trained social worker. A well-known Vancouver psychiatrist, Dr. Elda Lindenfeld, has written the bulletin for the second discussion class entitled "Preparing for Marriage." Dr. S. R. Laycock, of the University of Saskatchewan, Saskatoon, is author of another of the bulletins "Helping Adolescents Solve Their Problems." A third bulletin dealing with the problems which will arise with the return home of service men and women has been dealt with at length by Mrs. Dorothy Livesay McNair, of New Westminster, B.C., the Canadian poetess.

"Even just getting married is a proposition that is worth more attention than we have been in the habit of giving it," prospective students are told in the introductory bulletin to the course. "Young people feel the need of guidance in this business of marriage—the world's most popular vocation.

SAYING A PRAYER — Sister Raphael, of the Order of the Sacred Heart, stands in silent prayer at the grave of an unknown marine on bloody Tarawa, Gilbert Islands. Although a year has passed since the atoll fell to the marines, kindly nuns of the Order visit the graves and pray for the liberators. Sister Raphael, a native of Australia, was questioned by Japs several times during their occupation of Tarawa. During one interrogation a Jap soldier held a bayonet against her back as she stood facing a machine-gun. Sister Raphael's brother is an Australian commando.

136 Babies Born With V.D.

REGINA, Nov. 23 — (CP) — Venereal disease is the biggest communicable disease problem in Canada at the present time with 105 cases in every 100,000 persons, said Maj. J. A. Leroux, Ottawa, director of V.D. control for Ontario, in an address here Tuesday night.

Speaking to the third western Canada V.D. Conference, Maj. Leroux urged legislation calling for pre-marital and pre-natal blood tests for syphilis.

In Ontario this year 136 babies were born with syphilis, he said, adding the province had 175 cases for every 100,000 persons and Toronto had 308 per 100,000.

Prisoner States Germans Ready To Quit

LONDON, Nov. 23 — (CP). — A Reuter News Agency correspondent with the United States 1st Army reported that a prisoner taken in the German town of Eschweiler, about 35 miles southeast of Cologne, said seven women and a child had been hanged in Cologne, charged with shooting an S.S. trooper, and their bodies were left dangling from the gallows for a week.

The correspondent reported that the prisoner said the hanging, work of the Gestapo, was typical of growing resentment shown by Cologne civilians against German troops.

The prisoner added: "As a matter of fact, the troops themselves are far from keen to go on fighting."

COMMAND CHANGES—Major Robert Allin (Left) has been appointed officer in command of the Prince of Wales Rangers (CA), it was announced today, succeeding Lt.-Col. Robert J. Bolton (Right), who is retiring on account of low category. Major Allin has been acting second-in-command of the unit since 1943.

Major Robert Allin Is Appointed O.C. Of Prince Of Wales Rangers

Lt.-Col. R. J. Bolton, E.D., officer commanding the Prince of Wales Rangers is shortly to give up command of the unit it was announced from battalion headquarters to-day. Lt.-Col. Bolton is retiring to civilian life on account of a lowering of his medical category below employable standards laid down for the Canadian Army. His successor will be Major Robert Allin, the present second-in-command.

Col. Bolton, an oficer of the Canadian militia in Peterborough for many years has been on active service since June 1941. In March 1942 he became second-in-command of the Prince of Wales Rangers and after attending a course of instruction for senior officers at Royal Military College was appointed general staff officer of the 8th Division. In May 1943 he was posted to duty with the U.S. Army in the Aleutian campaiagn, where he remained until called to take command of the Prince of Wales Rangers following the retirement of Lt.-Col. J. A. Dewart, M.C., in September 1943. He has been continuously with the unit since that time and his retirement marks the end of more than 25 years' service. In civilian life he was principal of Central Public School.

Major Allin, a Peterborough boy, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Allin, 205 Sherbrooke street, has been active in the militia for many years. At the time the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders were mobilized he was captain in the Peterborough Rangers and he reverted in rank to lieutenant in order to go with the unit. He went overseas with the Stormonts, where he was promoted to rank of Captain. On mobilization of the Prince of Wales Rangers he was one of the officers sent back with overseas experience to help in training the unit. He joined the Rangers at Niagara. Later he took the company Commanders' course at Kingston and hoped to return overseas but his category kept him from joining the Stormonts. Since Lt.-Col. Bolton assumed command of the Rangers Major Allin has been second-in-command and in fact for a considerable time during the command of Col. Dewart he was acting second-in-command. His wife and family resides at 307 Monaghan Road.

Col. F. Jennings Warns Civilians Not To Forget Army In Italy

Although the Normandy invasion and events since then have tended to divert the spotlight away from the Italian campaign, the Canadian forces at the forefront of that war theatre have been continuing their epic fighting often under very difficult circumstances, was the point hammered home by Lieutenant-Colonel Frank X. Jennings, Army Director of Public Relations, in an address before the Charter Anniversary meeting of the Peterborough Kiwanis Club, Wednesday evening, in the Empress Hotel. It was his first public address since he returned to Canada after visiting Canadian fighting men on the various war fronts in Italy and Northwestern Europe.

Former editor-in-chief of the St. John Telegraph Journal, and The Evening Times-Globe, Col. Jennings said on every side, he heard only the highest praise of our servicemen and women. Today, the name of Canada stands higher from one end of Europe to the other, than ever it did before.

He told the Kiwanians, their wives and guests, that "the return of three-quarters of a million of our finest men and women" to resume their places in the social, economic and political life of Canada must be anticipated and visualized. They will be bitterly disappointed, he said, if they return to find that "parochial prejudices and parish-pump politics" from which they have long been removed, still exist.

Will Be Changed

He warned that "we will have no necessity to talk down to these young people when they return, but on the contrary, "we must be prepared to learn many things from men and women who have packed a lifetime of experience into a few brief years." We should be prepared, he pointed out, not only to recognize and accept as inevitable their mental, spiritual and physical growth, but to "adjust our own viewpoints" beginning now, and to acknowledge the futility and danger of "picayune prejudices, and the utter impossibility of national unity and national progress so long as narrow provincialism is allowed to survive."

"We must let them know, now and in the future, that all of us, we and they, have responsibilities as well as opportupnities,...that they must take a very large and important part in shaping the destinies of this beloved land of ours, during the next immensely important quarter of a century."

Meanwhile, he said, although the campaign in Italy was being partially overshadowed, it was going on with continuing effectiveness, pinning down a large and powerful German force and preventing it from being used to stem the tide of Allied advances across Europe.

"And in the forefront of the Italian show," Col. Jennings reported, "was our veteran First Division and our battle-wise 5th Armored Division."

Advance 500 Miles

Quoting figures recently released by General Alexander, he said that in the last 14 months from Reggio to the vicinity of Bologna, our troops advanced 500 miles, an average of one and one-quarter miles each day, over the roughest kind of terrain for a great part. This advance, he reported, exceeds the mile-a-day average of the Russians in their sweep forward across the plains of their own land.

One mile and a quarter each day may not seem great, but if you could see the country, Col. Jennings said, you would marvel that they were able to dislodge the Hun at all. ..."Sheer mountains with narrow roads spiralling through them, nothing but narrow shelves overhanging deep and virtually impassable gorges; mined and blown by the enemy at almost every turn; thousands of bridges demolished; gun emplacements, machine-gun nests, anti-tank guns spotted around every shoulder."

Again quoting figures announced by Gen. Alexander, he said that in the six months period from May 11, the Allied troops in Italy have been opposed by 30 German divisions, five of which were brought in after the Italian campaign began. From these "we have taken 56,000 prisoners; German killed total 34,000 and wounded 104,000." The total enemy casualties in that period were 194,000, the equivalent of 15, full-strength German divisions. Also, there has continued the progress of grinding down the enemy's total strength, and making ineffective for a period at least, the equivalent of one-half the divisions originally committed to the battle by the German high command.

In concluding his address, Col. Jennings said that "we should be prepared to realize that now more than ever before the course of real happiness and prosperity for all of us lies in a common appreciation of complete unity of purpose and action in all parts, and among all peoples in our great country."

"And if we accept these truths, and if we are ready and willing to carry out our share in the job of making them effective, we can say to those sons and daughters of ours as they retuprn: 'Join with us in the great task that lies before us all. Let us if need be, take all the risks. Let us brave all the impossibilities. Let us even attempt to achieve the unattainable. But at least, with warm hearts and cool heads, and with all the skillful hands we have now returned to us, let us make our way towards the great goal to which we all aspire, a happy, peaceful, prosperous, and united Canada"

Introduced by C. Browne, Principal of Peterborough Collegiate, the speaker was thanked by Kiwanian William Richardson, for his inspiring talk

A full evening of entertainment was provided for the large number of Kiwanians, some of them from Cobourg and Lindsay, who attended. It was a Ladies' Night, and a gift was presented to each lady during the program Dr. Cliff McKee entertained with a number of hilarious party "stunts." and the guest artists were Miss M. Mayneord, who whistled several selections, Albert Hircock and Mrs. J. Goldie, who entertained with vocal selections.

Gordon Miller expressed the thanks of the Club to the entertainers; Roy Smith, president of the Lindsay Kiwanis Club, thanked the Peterborough group for the privilege of being guests, and invited the Peterborough club members and their wives to visit the Ladies' Night program to be held at Lindsay. President Charles Saunders said that as many Kiwanians from the city would attend as possible. During the meeting, permission was granted the city council hospital committee to use the Kiwanis Club's endorsement in their advertising.

Jim Collins welcomed the Kiwanis Queens to the celebration, and Mrs. Charles Huffman, designated by ths girls to make the reply, did so along with tossing in a comic monologue that brought gales of laughter from the audience.

Ford Moynes, Kiwanis Lieutenant-Governor of this district, paid tribute to the women present, stating that they have made and are making a great contribution to Kiwanis.

Immediate past-president Dick Raine was the chairman.

Sgt. John H. Hill Awarded DCM In Italy Battle

In recognition of his work in helping speed an advance of soldiers during attacks on the Hitler Line, when he and seven others captured 53 Germans, Sgt. John Harker Hill, Peterborough, has been awarded the Distinguished Conduct Medal. Official citations from the Department of National Defence have been announced for him, and CSM. George E. Ponsford, Millbrook, who won the Military Medal.

Sgt. Hill, whose wife lives in Belleville, was wounded in September. His citation reads. "On May 23, 1944, during the evening assault on the Adolph Hitler Line, "C" Company, the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, was held up in its advance by withering fire from a German pill-box and dugouts. Quickly seeing the damage being done to his company and the danger of delay, to our advance, Sgt. John Harker Hill of 13 platoon personally organized and led a party of eight men on to the enemy position. Despite the fire of light mortars, machine guns and riflemen, this non-commissioned officer and his men charged the pill-box and cleared it and the dugouts of the enemy, taking 53 German prisoners."

"It was largely due to his intrepid courage, complete disregard for his personal safety and inspired leadership, over and above his normal duty, that so many enemy were captured or destroyed with but slight losses to our forces."

CSM Ponsford's citation is as follows: "On May 23, 1944, during the assault on the Adolph Hitler Line, "C" Company, the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment came under heavy machine gun fire from a strongly fortified pill-box. The extremely accurate and effective fire threatened to disorganize their attack and slow the momentum of the advance. Seeing the danger, and realizing the need for immediate action, CSM Ponsford, alternately running and crawling and at most times under heavy fire, succeeded in outflanking the pill-box and coming in on it from the rear. With grenades and a Thompson machine gun, he cleared the structure of enemy, killing or taking prisoner all of its occupants.

This initiative, great gallantry and complete disregard for his own safety prevented delay in the attack and loss in casualties to his company, and proved an inspiration to all ranks."

fore, the restoration of industry and agriculture in the liberated countries is vital. This is not only the quickest way to end the need for relief—it is also the way to achieve expanding production throughout the world." The UNRRA phase of the post-war period will therefore be brief. It will, as Mr. Lehman said, merely set the stage for recovery and reconstruction.

Grief Aplenty

GRANITE, Colo., Nov. 23—(AP).—Bill Lane, Granite mail carrier, built a fire under his pickup truck so it would start more easily, and the garage caught fire. Lane called Walt Miller to help fight the blaze and as Miller approached an oil barrel exploded, blowing the roof off the garage and onto Miller's head.

The explosion spread burning oil over the neighborhood, threatening the entire west side of Granite and bringing out the Leadville fire department to put out the blaze. And now: Lane's garage and house has burned down, Miller is in the hospital, and everybody seems to have forgotten about the pickup truck.

MAZDA LAMPS

OTTAWA, Nov. 23 — (CP). — Postmaster-General Mulock announced that effective on Thursday non-illustrated postcards will be acepted for mailing to Belgium and to the mainland and islands of Greece, except Macedonia, Western Thrace, and Crete.

The service to Belgium is restricted to the interchange of non-illustrated postcards containing messages of personal or business matters, but if a communication is of a business character it must be limited to ascertaining facts and exchanging information. No trading is permitted.

While all of Belgium is included in the new service, any postcards for areas east of Hasselt, Liege and Bastogne will be held by the Belgian Post Office until the military situation clears and delivery is possible.

The service to Greece is restricted to the exchange of non-illustrated postcards containing messages of a purely personal or family nature.

The postage rate on postcards to Belgium and Greece is three cents.

38 In Attendance At Radio Forum

GORE'S LANDING, Nov. 23 — (ENS). — The Farm Radio Forum met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Herriott, Rice Lake Drive, on Monday evening. The largest attendance this season answered the roll call with 38 present, from Harwood, Gore's Landing, and Plainville. Major R. E. Drope was chairman and Chuck Chidley the secretary, and after the broadcast the meeting divided into four groups for discussion. The topic was largely a review of previous broadcasts and consensus of opinion was that soil analysis was the most interesting, with emphasis on further development along these lines. Hydro education was also stressed as necessary for giving help to farmers.

During the recreation period, Mrs. J. Angus and Mrs. Stuart Herriott sang a duet, acompanied by Mrs. R. J. Meggs; Mrs. Thomas Cheyne read a poem, and Charles Campbell read a humorous poem composed by a prisoner in the jail on his arrest and sentence.

The hostess served refreshments and Thomas Bates moved a vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Herriott for their hospitality. The meeting next Monday will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hutchinson, Bethesda North.

Not True

TORONTO, Nov. 23.—(CP).—R. T. Mohan of Toronto, administrator of tea and coffee for the Prices Board, said last night rumors circulating in the city that rationing of tea is to be resumed are "absolutely without foundation." He said Canada's supply of both tea and coffee was ample to take care of all normal demands.

Senators Will Attend Any Secret Session

OTTAWA, Nov. 23 — (CP)—The Senate held a brief sitting Wednesday and then adojurned to Friday to enable members of the Upper House to attend sitting of the Commons yesterday and today at which the subject of reinforcements for the Canadian Army Overseas will be discussed.

The Senate sitting was scheduled for 2 p.m., EDT, but did not get underway until about 2:25 p.m. Adjournment came about 20 minutes later and the Senators left the chamber to occupy special seats in the Commons gallery.

Dr. J. H. King, Senate leader, said a decision had not been reached on whether the Commons would hold a secret session but if it did the Senators would attend.

Debate on the reinforcement question in the Senate is expected to open Friday when the members will have the background of information made available in the Commons.

There were 56 Senators in the Red Chamber—37 on the government side and 19 on the Progressive Conservative side. Speaker Vien opened the sitting by reading the motion which provided for the calling of an emergency sitting and his summons to Wednesday's meeting.

Senator King said that when Prime Minister Mackenzie King had decided to call the Commons he had asked what the feeling of the Senate would be. Dr. King said he had at first felt that there would be no necessity for the Senate meeting.

"There would be nothing on our order paper and there would be little if anything coming from the other place that would require the decision of this chamber—I say decision and not discussion," he said.

After further consideration he thought that the Senate as a body of parliament should meet to have first-hand knowledge of what happened in the Commons.

Mr. King moved that the Senate adjourn until 3 p.m.

Had To Come Far

Later Mr. King said in reply to a question of Senator C. C. Ballantyne, Progressive Conservative leader, that he did not know whether the Commons meeting to-day would be a secret session. Decision on whether a secret session would be held would be decided by the Commons. If such a sitting was held Senators would be allowed to listen to the discussions from the galleries.

Senator Ballantyne said he regretted that the Senate had not been summoned to convene at the same time as the House of Commons because some Senators lived at a great distance from Ottawa. The Commons was called Nov. 13 and decision to reassemble the Senate was not taken until Nov. 17.

"We are passing through one of the greatest crisis we have ever passed through," said Senator Ballantyne. Senators would be asked to discuss the question of reinforcements for overseas.

Many members of the Senate knew what had transpired during the First Great War and their experience would be valuable.

Marmora IODE Giving Gifts To Repatriates

MARMORA, Nov. 23—(ENS). — The Regent, Mrs. Donald Marett, opened the regular meeting of the I.O.D.E. on Tuesday with prayer, at the home of Mrs. A. M. Jones. The card party held in Deloro Hall on Monday was reported to be very successful, and the wool convener, Mrs. F. R. Wells, reported that the last shipment of knitted articles sent to the I.O.D.E. headquarters had been acknowledged. The Echoes secretary Mrs. G. Murray, read an interesting report on "Ways and Means" and Miss Miriam Savage gave an instructive reading on "The Endowment Plan." One new application was received and accepted.

It was decided that the Chapter present a gift to repatriated service men or women returning to Marmora, Deloro and vicinity. The next meeting will be held December 5, at the home of Mrs. G. Murray.

Popular Bride Entertained

Prior to her recent marriage, Mrs. C. J. Galvin, formerly Marion Whaley, was honored at several showers and entertainments by friends and associates. Girls of the Outboard Marine and Manufacturing Company office, where Mrs. Galvin is employed, entertained at a shower in her honor at the Y. W. C. A., where she was presented with a coffee table. The gift from the office staff was also presented to Mrs. Galvin, a set of Spode China, in the Buttercup pattern.

Mrs. Robert Baldwin, McDonnel street, entertained at a tea for the bride, and she received many useful gifts in kitchen-ware. Mrs. E. M. Crough was hostess for a tea at her home, Brock street, where the guest of honor was presented with a table lamp and Mrs. George Hildenbrand, Armour road, entertained at a cup and saucer shower for Mrs. Galvin. Mrs. W. Smoothie, Miss Helen Buchannan and Miss Genevieve O'Brien entertained at a dinner at the Empress Hotel, when the bride was presented with a drumhead table.

Mrs. Joseph Galvin, mother of the groom, was hostess at a tea in honor of the bride, and Mrs. W. T. Whaley entertained at a trousseau tea for her daughter.

Travelogue Given About England

A glimpse into old England, and a little of its fascinating history, was given to members of Trinit Young People's Club at their regular meeting by Rev. John Hodgson. In fancy, the group visited some of the beautiful Abbey churches and the Tower of London, with its wealth of historical treasures, as the speaker described them.

Rev. Hodgson advised everyone to avail himself of an opportunity to visit England. However, he said, that to see and know the beauty spots and the history of old England, one must get off the beaten track, and visit some of the lesser known spots.

The devotional period was in charge of Mrs. Harvey Shier's group The theme Beauty" was carried throughout the Scripture, read by Miss Bertha Boyer, the prayer, read by Miss Elinor Bird, and the reading, taken by Mrs. Shier. Mrs. Allan Parker sang Rest on the Lord," accompanied at the piano by Mrs. James. Games were under the leadership of Dick Clayton, and refreshments were served, in charge of Mrs. Shier.

Little Helpers' Auxiliary Guests

The Women's Auxiliary of St. Luke's Anglican Church were hostesses Wednesday afternoon to the Little Helpers' branch of the Auxiliary, at the rectory. Mothers and their children were welcomed by Mrs. A. Mackin, secretary-treasurer of the branch, and Mrs. A. J. Arthur.

The rooms were decorated with pink and white 'mums, and the tea table centred with a bouquet of pale pink single 'mums and white status, flanked by pink tapers in silver holders. Mrs. G. R. Langley, president of the Auxiliary, poured tea, and members of the Association were in charge of the refreshments, assisted by Mrs. J. Trennum and Mrs. Watson. Mrs. G. Bousfield was at the piano during the afternoon.

Variety Program To Be Presented

A variety program, which promises to provide excellent entertainment, will be presented to members of the Peterborough Concert Association, at their annual members' concert Friday evening in the Collegiate Auditorium. Everything from vocal and instrumental numbers, through dancing, to a bit of drama, will be featured, in an entertaining arrangement.

Vocal solosists will include Mrs. James Goldie and Mrs. R. L. Hale, while Maurice Jacques will be at the piano, and Cecil Searles will present a violin solo. Norman Lowes and Norman Hurrle will play a piano duet, and Mrs. M. Hubbell will also present a piano selection. Leone Comstock Northrop will interpret two dance numbers, one written especially for her by her husband, Stanley Northrop.

R. L. Hale, of the Collegiate teaching staff, is directing a short dramatic presentation, the murder scene from Macbeth, with students from the Collegiate taking part. Miss May Colby will give the prologue, and Paul Moore will play Macbeth, with Miss Jean MacTavish as Lady Macbeth, and John Lewis as the servant.

Galvin-Whaley Nuptials At St. Peter's

A pretty wedding of wide interest took place in St. Peter's Cathedral Tuesday, when Marion Rita Whaley, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Thomas Whaley, 335 McDonnel street, became the bride of Clement Joseph Galvin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Thomas Galvin, 461 Murray street. Rev. J. T. Finn officiated at the ceremony, and said the nuptial mass, with the church decorated with yellow and white 'mums for the occasion.

Miss Veronica Scollard, A.T.C.M., was at the organ, and the soloist was Arthur Phillips of Toronto, who sang "On This Day, O Beautiful Mother." "Panis Angelicus," and "Ave Maria."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was charming in a street-length frock of blue crepe, on draped lines, trimmed with lace. She wore a blue feather hat, and long blue gloves, and carried a Colonial bouquet of white 'mums and red roses. She also wore a strand of pearls. She was attended by her sister, Miss Madeleine Whaley, in a street-length fuchsia crepe ensemble, on draped lines, trimmed with black sequins. She wore long black gloves, fuchsia flower hat and veil, and carried a Colonial bouquet of bronze 'mums and Talisman roses.

Elmer Galvin, of Merrickville, was best man, and the ushers were D. D. Sproule, Clare Galvin, and Gnr. Harold Whaley of Kingston.

At the reception held at the Kawartha Golf and Country Club following the ceremony, the bride's mother received the guests in a Carmen red ensemble, with black hat trimmed with red and blue, and black accessories, and a corsage of Johanna Hill roses. The groom's mother, also receiving, wore black crepe, with matching hat and accessories, and a corsage of Briarcliffe roses.

For a wedding trip to Montreal the bride chose a Paddy green wool dress, a brown coat with a wolf collar, and a brown hat and accessories.

JUST FOR WOMEN

By CONNIE NICHOLSON
(Society Editor of The Examiner)

If mother has been uneasy about daughter to experiment and try her hand at baking with scarce and precious sugar, here are two recipes that will enable her to give in to her daughter's requests, and yet insure no failures The angel food cake is always successful and even beginners find their cakes turning out beautifully. Another feature which these recipes offer is the fact that the two cakes can be made with a smaller number of eggs, since one used only the whites while the other utilizes the yolks.

The angel food delight is made as follows: one cup of sifted cake flour, one and one-quarter cups of sugar, one cup of egg white, one teaspoon of cream of tartar; one half teaspoon of salt, three-quarters teaspoon of vanilla; one quarter teaspoon of almond extract. Sift the flour and one-quart cup of sugar together four times. Beat the egg whites until they have a fine, even texture and stiff enough to hold a peak, but not dry. With them, beat the salt and cream of tartar.

Watch Air Bubbles.

Add the remaining sugar in small amounts, beating after each addition, preferably with a rotary beater. After adding the flavorings, sift one-quarter cup of flour at a time over the mixture, folding it in lightly, and pour into a large ungreased tube pan. Remember to cut through the batter with a spatula to remove large air bubbles, and bake 45 to 60 minutes in a moderate oven, 350 degrees. Invert the pan when it is taken from the oven and let the cake cool.

Ingredients needed for the sponge cake are: three cups of sifted flour; three teaspoons baking powder; two teaspoon of salt, and one cup of egg yolks. Sift the flour and baking powder together four times. After adding the salt and flavoring to yolks, and beating with a rotary beater until very thick, add the sugar and hot water alternately in four portions, beating the mixture after each addition, until it is very thick. Fold in the flour mixture in the same manner, taking about one-quarter at a time.

Pour the batter into an ungreased tube pan, and bake for about an hour in a moderate oven. In the same manner as the angel food cake, invert the pan, and leave the cake in the pan until cool.

Watch Your Language.

Jammed doors and shashes are twin nuisances in this unsettled weather, when the man of the house hasn't yet reached his stride in regulating heat from the furnace which has the annoying habit of getting out of hand and threatening to bake the family out of the house. If a door hangs unevenly, loosen the proper hinge, and insert a heavy piece of cardboard to take up the slack.

The problem of unsticking windows is a little more complicated, however. If old or new paint is causing the window to stick, tap on a flat block of wood with a hammer, along the side, the strips, and sill. For a particularly stubborn sash, remove the window from the frame, and plane both upright sashes, and if the trouble still persists, paint the edges with linseed oil. or rub up and down with a candle stub. Remember, that if the sash must be forced with a hammer or chisel, to always work from the outside, so that any marks will not be visible on the room side.

For Lipstick Stains.

Girls have their lipstick stain problems too, as anyone who has hastily pulled her best Sunday frock over her head has discovered a discouraging lipstick smear on the neckline. However, it needn't cause much weeping because, with a little care, the stain can be removed and the dress will be none the worse for wear.

If the dress is washable, first rub a little vaseline or glycerine into the stain, and then launder it in warm sudsy water. For material that is not washable, or when one is reluctant to dip the whole dress just for a tiny stain, rub in a little vaseline, and then sponge the spot wtih carbon tetrachloride. If a trace of color remains, sponge with denuted alcohol. For acetate rayon and colored materials, use one part alcohol to two parts of water, one-half cup of alcohol to one cup of water.

Brighten Your Corner.

Women who are nimble with a needle can brighten their homes in countless ways with little touches here and there, and a little extra time and effort. But even those who claim that they haven't the knack for sewing can also change the aspect of their bedrooms in a surprisingly short time.

A dash of chintz and a few stitches, combined with a little imagination, will transform a gloomy closet into a bright and cheerful wardrobe. Bright pieces of floral print left over from the new drapes in the room, or the latest attempt at covering the bedroom chair will make ideal shoe bags; give an added touch to hat boxes, and will brighten the clothes hangers as well as protecting dresses and coats.

To keep these works of art fresh and clean, whisk a damp cloth over them regularly, to prevent dust particles from becoming imbedded in the material. To help the chintz keep its glaze, give all articles a semi-annual trip to the laundry. Be sure, when buying, to get the permanent finish chintz, since it's the only kind that can be laundered and still keep its glaze.

WEATHER-WISE GLOVES — Now is the season when lightweight cotton gloves no longer protect your hands ... but don't be too sorry. There are warmer gloves as easily washed, and in a delightful variety of colors, too. Made of doeskin, in the model pictured above with a glace finish, these gloves are naturals for wools.—By Prunella Wood.

Story Of Russia Told At Concert

KENE, Nov. 23 — (ENS).— The Ladies' Association of Keene United Church was hostess to the members, adherents and friends of the congregation on Tuesday when an enjoyable social evening was spent. The program was opened with community singing, after which instrumental duets were given by Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Fletcher. A short address was given by Rev. George Murray, as chairman, and a ladies' quartette, Miss M. Bryce, Mrs. A. Fletcher, Mrs. Rennie, and Mrs. G. Murray sang two numbers, with Mrs. D. Edwards at the piano. Mrs. Ross McIntyre gave two humorous readings, Delbert Coward sang two solos with Miss Bryce accompanist, and two piano solos were given by Mrs. G. Murray.

The main item of interest was an address by Miss Mary Gall on the topic "Socialistic Russia.' Having travelled in Russia a few years ago Miss Gall gave her personal observations and views of that great nation. The speaker said that before there can be a better world there must be an enlightened understanding of other nations. The Russia of to-day is not the Russia of a few years ago; she has risen to a new standing under the able leadership of Stalin.

Lunch was served, with Mrs. G. S. Taylor and Mrs. George Murray pouring tea.

Have Cookie Jar Filled For the Christmas Season

By MARY MOORE.

Making Christmas cookies brings Christmas closer than even wrapping Christmas parcels can.

To see what turns out best so I can tell you we had to make cookies early in November and while the Holly Cookies were the most attractive (albeit some were a little gray looking from all the handling of them Peter did)—the very best of flavor was in the Christmas Cherry Nubbins and dear old Shortbread.

Where chopped walnuts are called for in some of these instructions you may use the chopped peanuts some of the nut stores are offering.

Christmas Cherry Nubbins.

One-half cup shortening, ¼ cup granulated sugar, 1 egg, separated, 1 tablespoon grated orange rind, 1½ teaspoons grated lemon rind, ⅛ teaspoon vanilla, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 1 cup sifted cake flour, ¾ cup chopped walnuts, 6 to 8 cherries. Cream the shortening until light, and sift in the sugar while creaming until all is mixed and fluffy. Add the egg yolk, both rinds, vanilla and lemon juice, and mix well. Add the flour and mix well; chill for several hours or for overnight. Roll into small balls about ½-inch in diameter, then roll in slightly beaten egg whites, then in chopped walnuts meats or almonds. Place on greased cookie sheet and press a small piece of cherry on each. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 20 minutes.

Holly Cookies.

Basic Sugar Cookie Recipe: 2-3 cup shortening, 2-3 cup sugar, 2 eggs well beaten, 1 teaspoon vanilla extract, 2 cups sifted all-purpose flour, ½ teaspoon salt, 1½ teaspoons baking powder. Work the shortening with a spoon until creamy and fluffy, then add sugar gradually while continuing creaming. When light add the eggs and vanilla and mix. Add the sifted dry ingredients. Chill dough 2 hours or overnight. Roll out to ¼" thickness on lightly floured board. Cut into desired shapes—holly for Christmas, hearts for Valentine, clubs, diamonds, etc., for bridge, shamrocks for St. Patrick's. To make the Holly Cookies cut into wreaths or holly leaves, brush with mixture of 1 cup icing sugar mixed with 3 tablespoons warm water, and sprinkle with chopped pistachio nuts or chopped citron peel. Place small red cinnamon candies at stem end of some of them.

Scotch Shortbread.

One cup butter, ⅛ cup confectioners' sugar, 2 cups sifted all-purpose flour, ¼ teaspoon baking powder, ¼ teaspoon salt. Work the butter with a spoon until light and fluffy; add the sugar while continuing working with wooden spoon. Roll out to ½-inch thickness cut out in desired small shapes and bake in slow oven—not over 325 deg. Fahr.—until just barely tinged biscuit color. This is a small batch, but amateurs are advised not to double for it works more easily if in small lots.

I'm experimenting with some Vanilla Crescents — but the recipe called for powdered vanillin; I have to convert this to vanilla extract, and when it's ready I think it will be something very special, so watch for it.

"Wax up your skiis—sharpen your skates—fun is right ahead! We have a complete selection of warm togs for Winter sports—a grand idea for Christmas giving.

M. J. Kerr Group Guests At Manse

Mrs. E. W. Young, of St. Andrew's manse, was hostess Monday afternoon to the M. J. Kerr group of the W.M.S. for their regular meeting. Each member had brought a guest, and there were about 30 present.

Mrs. R. Jones arranged the following program for entertainment during the afternoon: Miss M. Flowers, a piano solo of Welsh airs; Miss Dorothy Dewdney, vocal solo, accompanied by Miss Cox; Miss Helen Dummitt, two readings; Misses Iris Whalon and Jean Jackson, two vocal duets, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. R. B. Harle, two vocal solos by Mrs. G. Bousfield, accompanied by Miss Flowers.

During the summer, members had made various articles suitable for Christmas gifts, and quite a large sum of money was realized from a sale held in the afternoon. Mrs. F. Pilling, leader of the group, presided for the devotional period. Refreshments were served by Mrs. A. Munro and Mrs. D. Hilliard, assisted by members of the group.

This Week's Best Wartime Recipe

Contributed By Mary Moore Readers

DEAR MARY MOORE — My neighbor has a war guest from the south of England who is a good cook and has taught us some of the choicer kinds of English cooking. She has actually made my family admit they like kidneys and our kidney special follows—it comes first, then beef and kidney pie is our second choice—but I won't send that for most people know how to make it.

Devilled Kidneys With Rice (Mrs. Greenway)

Two lbs. beef kidneys (approximately two kidneys), 1½ teaspoons salt, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 teaspoons prepared mustard, ½ teaspoon paprika, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, ½ teaspoon celery salt, ½ su flour, ¼ cup fat or oil, 1 cup boiling water, 4 cups hot cooked rice. Split kidneys and soak ½ hour in salt water. Trim out fat and cut each kidney into about 20 pieces. Melt the butter, add salt, mustard, paprika, lemon juice and celery salt and roll kidneys in this sauce. Then roll the kidneys in the flour. Heat the fat or oil in frying-pan, add kidneys and brown them. Add boiling water, cover, and simmer about 30 minutes or until tender. Serve in centre of rice ring on chop plate. Sent in by Mrs. Dodd.

This was a new treatment of kidney for me—since no onions are called for it will appeal to two or three of our readers I can think of. Thanks,—and thanks to Mrs. Green.

ENQUIRY COLUMN

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: I am enclosing a recipe for English Christmas Cake (Contributed by Mrs. J. Q.)

Three-quarters lb. butter, 1 lb. brown sugar, 2 lbs. currants, 2 lbs. raisins, 2 lbs dates, 1 lb. mixed peel, 10 eggs, ¼lb. almonds; ½lb. walnuts, ½ cup molasses, ¼ teaspoon cloves, ½ teaspoon allspice, 1 teaspoon mace, 1 teasoon mixed spice or pastry spice, ¾ teaspoon soda, 5 cups flour, 1 cup brandy, vanilla.

I used 6 lbs. raisins and put 2 lbs. through food chopper and used water instead of brandy.

Thanking you for your help. Mrs. J. Q.

ANSWER: Thanks Mrs. Q.,—I assume you substitute all raisins for the currants and dates since they are not available. To inexperienced cooks I might mention that the butter should be creamed, then sugar cream into. The fruit and nuts should be prepared and sprinkled with 1 cup of the flour. The flour (4 cups) should be mixed with the soda and spices and sifted. Add eggs to butter and sugar, beating very well, then molasses, and fruit. Sift in dry ingredients alternately with the brandy or water, whichever is used. Bake in greased, paper-lined, greased pans, at about 325 for about 2½ to 3 hours.

QUESTION: You helped me immensely some time ago in the matter of pastry etc, and now I am going to be of some help. In your column of November (second week) Mrs. A. B. B. wanted a recipe for Genoese Pastry. I am enclosing the one she wants I think, as I have had it since the year she mentioned, and made it and liked it. Whether you print it or send it on to her I would like the page back please. It has been in my cook book so long I would miss it. Thank you so much for your former help. Polly J.

ANSWER: Thanks immensely. I'll print the foundation recipe now and a few variations in following weeks.

Genoese Pastry (Foundation recipe)

Three large eggs, ½ cup sugar, ¾ cup flour, ½ teaspoon baking powder, 3 tablespoons melted butter, and any flavoring. First break eggs into upper part of double boiler, and beat then add sugar and place pan over bottom part of double boiled with water simmering,—not quite boiling,— then beat for 15 minutes or until eggs become so light as to reach the top of a quart sauce pan. The water in bottom must not boil. Meanwhile sift flour and baking powder together twice, melt butter, and when eggs are ready add them (the flour and butter) alternately to them. Flavor delicately with almond, vanilla, lemon or rose extract and bake in moderate oven 25 minutes. Turn cake from pan, cool on sieve, and you have foundation for a dozen varieties of little cakes. It is best 24 hours old.

F▸: Orange Slices bake cake in 2 very shallow pans. Put layers together with orange filling and cut in finger length strips. Ice sides and tops with icing made of confectioners' sugar and orange juice and rind. (More Variations Next Week)

EGYPT AND MILWAUKEE—The dear that made Milwaukee famous, as some wag wrote of Hildegarde, here models for us one of her new gowns for the current supper club season. Many another blonde of classic lines might well take a tip on costuming from this popular pianist entertainer; she looks marvelous in the spotlight, and makes the most of her honey and milk coloring.

THE TEA HOUR GOSSIP . . . .

As the season for afternoon teas is upon us, I have some very delightful recipes for out-of-the-ordinary sandwiches. They are no trouble to make, so try each recipe and you will receive many compliments from your guests.

Orange Cheese Sandwich

1 loaf whole wheat bread, 1 cake cream cheese, 1 pound toasted nuts, finely chopped lettuce, rind of one orange, grated, mayonnaise, cream, salt, paprika. Smooth the cheese to a soft paste with cream and add a dash of salt, paprika, and grated orange rind. Slice the bread and cut in rounds. Spread with mayonnaise, then with cheese. Cover with toasted nuts, chopped fine, and put a ring of shredded lettuce on top. Cover with a piece of buttered bread.

Horseradish Sandwich

2 packages cream cheese, ⅛ cup sour cream, 2 tablespoons horseradish, 1 teaspoon salt, juice of one lemon, 1 small onion. Mash the cream cheese, mix with sour cream and add horseradish. Add salt, lemon juice and finely chopped onion. Spread between slices of whole wheat bread.

Toasted Orange Sandwich

Orange marmalade, hot buttered toast slices, cream cheese.

Spread orange marmalade on hot buttered toast. Sprinkle generously with grated cheese and put under broiler until cheese melts.

Chicken and Pineappple

For a tempting chicken sandwich, heat together 2 cups of cooked chopped chicken, and 2-3 cups of crushed pineapple. Put between halves of hot or toasted baking powder biscuits or have ready hot buttered toast and between two slices of chicken place a slice of pineapple sauted in butter, then a slice of hot breast meat of chicken.

FAMILY INTEREST AFTER MATURITY

Tastes, Desires, Traits of Character Do Not Necessarily Establish Affection.

A MAN asks: "If, after brothers and sisters grow up and separate and go their ways in life, should they make an effort to keep in touch with each other?" I should say that Nature automatically solves that problem, for if the members are congenial and fond of each other, they cling together; where as if they are antagonistic, they part and flee to the ends of the earth in order that the Browns may not be Browned to death and the Smiths Smithed into the insane asylum.

For nothing is more untrue than the old saw that birds in little nests agree. Anyway, human birds don't. Most nurseries are a battleground in which the infantry slugs it out to a bloody finish. Little sister gets in little brother's hair and yanks it out by the handful, and little brother retaliates by biffing her on the nose and taking her playthings away from her. And when Mother tells them that brothers and sisters should love each other and make them kiss, they would bite chunks out of each other if they dared.

Because men and women were born of the same parents and were reared in the same house is no guarantee that they will have the same tastes, inclinations, desires, or traits of character. They may differ in every particular. They may rub each other the wrong way at every turn, and from their cradle up be in a perpetual wrangle.

When this occurs, it is folly for them to try to keep up the semblance of an affection that neither one feels. The sooner they break off all relationship the better. Nothing is more tragic than the fact that the lives of innumerable people are ruined by the myth that families should live together, no matter how much they get on each other's nerves, instead of parting and existing in peace

A Bit of Heaven, Too

But, on the contrary, if the family relationship can be a purgatory, it can also be a bit of heaven on earth if brothers and sisters really love each other, and enjoy each other, and each knows that the other gives a loyalty that nothing can shake. Theirs is the tie that binds, for they have not only the blood band that unites them, but the memories that draw us closer together as we grow older.

Big sister who held our hand because we were afraid in the dark... Sally who stayed at home so we could wear her silver slippers on our first date... Bill who risked his life to pull us out of the creek when we fell in... Tommy who slept on the floor by our bed when we were sick. And we know that we could still go to them for help in any time of trouble. Life has nothing better to give us than such brothers and sisters.

And family solidarity is a practical asset as well as an ineffable joy. The old fable of the bunch of fagots that could be snapped, one by one between finger and thumb but that were unbreakable when they were tied together is true. You can see this illustrated in those families that work together and back each other up. They are invincible.

Happy are those whose brothers and sisters are not only relatives, but friends.

The Stars Say . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Friday, November 24

A RATHER critical day is the augury based on important configurations of the ruling planets. There is a sign of commotion, upset, disintegration and devastation, coming with whirlwind force and making for unpredictable and surprising denouements. Travel, change, quarrels, and other untoward events may bring on stress and strain. Domestic, social or romantic ties may be unhappily afflicted although help and solace may be forthcoming from those in influential positions on business or financial ambitions. Beware of fraud and duplicity, and be wise with writings.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves involved in a year of sudden and unpredictable situations, with devastation, turmoil and strange uprootings. Use every precaution in travelling, change, legal agreements or other contracts; and safeguard the health and emotional balance lest excitement prove detrimental to domestic life. With sagacity and restraint of funds and forces as well as faculties there may be some growing benefits, especially from those in high places.

A child born on this day while lively, enterprising and erratic, may be able to manipulate difficulties and reversals into profitable channels. It may be easily victimized.

NOTICE

AND SYNOPSIS OF TWO SEPARATE PROPOSED MONEY BY-LAWS TO BE SUBMITTED TO VOTE OF THE RATEPAYERS AT THE NEXT ANNUAL ELECTION.

THE MUNICIPAL COUNCIL of the Corporation of the City of Peterborough proposes to pass two separate money By-laws. These By-laws are:

(1) Number 4401 entitled "A By-law to Authorize the Issue of Debentures for $75,000.00 for granting aid to the Peterborough Memorial Community Centre."

(2) Number 4403 entitled "A By-law Authorizing the Borrowing of $600,000.00 upon Debentures for the Peterborough General Civic Hospital and Nurses' Residence."

THE PURPOSE OF BY-LAW 4401 is to authorize the issuing of Debentures for Borrowing the sum of $75,000.00 for the purpose of aiding the Peterborough Memorial Community Centre. This By-law recites that:

(a) The Peterborough Memorial Community Centre is a charitable organization for the purposes of organizing activities for the promotion of the health, social welfare and recreation of the citizens.

(b) The said Peterborough Memorial Community Centre has requested the Council of the said Corporation to grant financial aid to the sum of $75,000.00 to help in constructing the first unit of the Centre.

(c) The $75,000.00 will be raised by the sale of debentures, the said debentures to be repayable on the Instalment Plan during the period of ten years and bearing interest at the rate of three per cent per annum. The amount to be raised annually for payment of the instalments and interest will be approximately $9,000.00.

(d) This By-law shall not come into force until it has received the assent of the Electors entitled to vote on money By-laws and is validated by special Act of the Legislature for Ontario.

(e) No debentures shall be issued or sold until the City Treasurer shall certify to the Council of the City Corporation that the sum of $175,000.00 has been raised by Public Subscription for the purposes of the said Peterborough Memorial Community Centre.

THE PURPOSE OF BY-LAW 4403 is to authorize the issuing of Debentures for Borrowing the sum of $600,000.00 for the purpose of the Peterborough General Civic Hospital and Nurses' Residence, said Debentures to be repayable on the Instalment Plan during the period of twenty years and bearing interest at the rate of three per cent per annum. The amount to be raised annually for the payment of the instalments and interest will be approximately $40,000.00.

TAKE NOTICE, that the foregoing is a Synopsis of the two proposed By-laws of the Corporation of the City of Peterborough to be submitted to the votes of the Electors qualified to vote thereon at the time of the Municipal Elections on the Fourth day of December, 1944, and at the same polling places and at the same hours at which voting will take place for the Candidates for Election to the Council of the City of Peterborough.

AND THAT the First day of December, 1944, at the Hour of Three o'clock in the afternoon, at the City Hall, has been fixed for the appointment of persons favouring or opposing the passing of either one of the By-laws to attend at the Polling Places. On the Fifth day of December, 1944, at the Hour of Eleven o'clock in the forenoon at the City Hall, the Clerk shall sum up the votes for and against the proposed By-laws.

AND TAKE NOTICE FURTHER that a Tenant qualified to vote under Section 283, Sub-Section 3 of the Municipal Act must deliver to the Clerk, not later than the Tenth day before the day appointed for taking the Vote the Declaration provided for by the said Sub-Section.

IF THE ASSENT OF THE ELECTORS is obtained for either or both of the said proposed By-laws this will be taken into consideration by the Municipal Council of the said Corporation at a meeting thereof to be held after the expiration of one month from the date of the first publication of this Notice, and that such first publication was made on the 9th day of November, 1944.

Dated at Peterborough, this 9th Day of November, 1944.

I certify that this is a true synopsis of the two By-laws.

NOTICE

OF QUESTION TO BE SUBMITTED TO THE VOTE OF THE MUNICIPAL ELECTORS AT THE NEXT ANNUAL ELECTION.

The Council of the City of Peterborough by By-laws passed on November 3rd, 1944, is submitting to the Vote of the Electors, qualified to vote on money By-laws, a question.

To secure an expression of the Electors' approval or disapproval the Council provides that:—

By By-law 4404 the following question shall be submitted — "Are you in favour of diverting $300,000.00 from the surplus moneys in the sinking funds of the Peterborough City Trust to assist in financing the construction of a General Civic Hospital?"

The Votes of the Electors, qualified to vote on money By-laws, will be taken on this question at the same polls and during the same hours for voting as the Voting for Election for Council on December 4th, 1944.

On the First day of December, 1944, at Three o'clock in the Afternoon, the Mayor or some member of the Council, appointed for that purpose by resolution, shall attend at the City Hall for the purpose of appointing two persons to attend at the final summing up of the votes by the Clerk, and one person to attend at each polling place on behalf of the persons interested in voting in the affirmative on the said question and a like number on behalf of the persons interested in voting in the negative on the question.

On the Fifth day of December, 1944, at the Hour of Eleven o'clock in the Forenoon at the City Hall, Peterborough, the Clerk shall attend and sum up the votes given in the affirmative and negative on the said question.

A Tenant who desires to vote must deliver to the Clerk, not later than the Tenth day before the day appointed for taking the vote the declaration provided for by Sub-Section 3 of Section 283 of the Municipal Act.

Dated at Peterborough, this 9th day of November, 1944.

I certify that this is a true statement of the question to be submitted.

E. A. OUTRAM,
City Clerk.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

ONLY A LONG THIN HAND

REPEATED passes followed by a suit bid combine to paint a picture of a long thin hand—that is, one with a long suit and hardly any high card strength. If your partner bids that way, when you have done nothing until then except listen to your opponents' bidding, you should know exactly what to expect across the table. Making a bid of your own after that should not be considered unless you are prepared to find his hand an utterly worthless dummy in case you wind up playing as declarer.

(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	Pass	1 ♦
Pass	2 ♦	Pass	3 ♦
3 ♥	Pass	4 ♣	Dbl
4 ♥	Dbl

That was pretty bad bidding all around, unless perhaps by North. Both East and West, not very strong competitors, admitted after the hand that it would have been played at 3-Hearts, not doubled, if South had not made that 4-Club bid. And that admission on their part was in the face of the fact that they could have made 3-No Trumps plus an extra trick by normal play. Either of them, if at all daring, should have tried No Trumps at some stage, most especially West, who had real stoppers of everything.

South, however, showed a gross misunderstanding of what might be called "delayed bids." North having passed originally, and then having failed to make a simple overcall of 1-Heart after West opened with 1-Diamond, could not possibly have any excuse for bidding later, especially at the height of three, unless he had a very long suit and weakness in high cards. South should have realized that and passed, as North's bidding plan must have made it clear that his hand would be a worthless dummy.

If South had passed the 3-Hearts, and West had passed, as he said he would have, North and South would have dropped only 50 points. As it was, they dropped 300, a loss of 250 due to South's making that 4-Club call.

Children's Aid Society Is Commended For Year's Work

The Peterborough Children's Aid Society has somewhat bettered its position during the past year according to the annual report of the Department of Public Welfare. The board and staff are commended that despite continued heavy pressure of work owing to war conditions, a few points have been gained in the official grading.

The Department report is as follows:

Board—The good attendance at board meetings and lively interest of board members in planning and directing the activities of the Society, the participation in the Community Fund campaign, and in other community planning for general welfare as well as for the children, indicates a group of people giving excellent service which augurs well for the continuing progressive development of your Society. The work done by the Sew-in Committee is noted with appreciation.

Staff—Field: The effort to secure qualified staff and your fortunate choice of staff from allied professions has been an important factor in meeting the needs presented. You were wise to secure assistance in dealing with war services in the city. Your present staff is almost adequate to meet your regular case load.

Clerical: In view of the pressure of clerical work brought about by war services, two full-time stenographers are needed to ensure the work being kept up in a satisfactory manner. The securing of part-time assistance was a step in the right direction.

Program—Protection: With an average of 110 family cases a month requiring constructive service, it is evident that this work cannot be given the attention necessary. Administration of Dependents' Allowances and investigation of new complaints would account for a large percentage of work, and an average of 71 family visits a month would seem to indicate that not more than three-fourths of the case load was contacted. There was evidence of an excellent standard of work being carried on for the families where intensive supervision was being given.

Unmarried Parents' Work: The legal end of the work is carried on satisfactorily and effort made to meet the needs of both mother and child. As far as pressure of other work permitted, assitance in planning for herself as well as for her child was given to the unmarried mother in a helpful, sympathetic manner.

Child Care: That a good standard of care and supervision was maintained is greatly to the credit of your staff. The care given pre-school and adolescent children, particularly those presenting any special problem, was excellent. More time for individual observation for all children would undoubtedly bring this section of your work to a very high level.

Foster Home Investigation: The success met with in the search for foster homes is encouraging and the standard of homes was found to be quite satisfactory both from observation and reading of histories.

Records— Credit is given in good measure for the real effort made in improving the recording of work done. This was most marked in the fine foster home histories compiled, these being practically all well written. Unmarried parent and child care records were also in much better condition than formerly, but the family histories, though many were quite satisfactory, had gaps, in that they were often sketchy and a number were hardly written up at all or not up to date.

Shelter — Due to the real effort made by the field staff to keep the number in care within the limit of the staff capacity, the situation has been fairly satisfactory.

Health — The medical and dental examination of practically every child in your care, with special emphasis on health supervision for pre-school children, is a fine aspect of your program. This preventive service is invaluable in protecting children from handicaps to their satisfactory development. When more doctors and dentists are available it should be possible to carry on this program with less difficulty.

Clothing — Despite pressure of work, the individualized approach to the provision of clothing for your children seems to have been well safeguarded, which is another good aspect of your child care program.

Education — The co-operation with the Society on the part of the teachers in providing adequate reports and the interest of the Society in providing opportunities for children commensurate with their ability, ensures satisfactory development along educational lines.

Finance — Your budgeting and bookkeeping set-up appears to be quite satisfactory. Plans for a careful analysis of cost of maintenance of wards in pay care should enable your Society to secure to the fullest extent recompense on a legal basis from the chargeable municipalities.

Grading — It is to the credit of both your board and staff that. despite continued heavy pressure of work due to war conditions, a few points have been gained. Your Society has somewhat bettered the position held in B category.

Rundown Man Surprised With Syntona Results

Was Unable to Work or Sleep Because of Sore, Swollen, Aching Joints and Muscles. Condition Followed Years of Stomach Gas, Acid Indigestion, Headaches and Dizzy Spells.

"Because of the grand results I got by taking a treatment of Syntona, I am glad of this opportunity to recommend it to others," said Mr. Victor Clouthier, 76 Hamilton Road, London, Ontario, in a recent statement:

"For years I had been troubled with sour stomach, cramps, gas and bloat. I was subject to headaches and dizzy spells and I always had to be taking something for constipation. Then these rheumatic pains set into my joints and muscles. The pains and stomach gas kept me from getting my proper sleep, so I had become very nervous and run-down. There was a bad taste in my mouth, my tongue was constantly coated and my skin was rough and pimply. I couldn't do any work because I felt so miserable all the time.

"I must admit I wasn't very hopeful when I began taking Syntona, for I had tried so many remedies without getting any real benefits. But right from the first it settled my stomach and I liked the way it acted on my bowels, so I thought that even that much was well worthwhile. Now, after taking Syntona for a few weeks, I am surprised with the improvement in the way I feel. For the first time in four years I can enjoy my meals without all that stomach misery. I got relief from those rheumatic pains, my nerves are relaxed and I get a good night's sleep once more. I don't have those headaches and dizzy spells like I used to and I feel better in every way than I thought was ever possible again."

MR. VICTOR CLOUTHIER

The above are often common results of disorders of the stomach, liver, Kidneys and bowels. Syntona is compounded to act on these four organs at the same time and the results that it gives are vouched for by thousands of delighted men and women who have used it. Make up your mind to begin taking this pure herbal medicine today. See how much better you, too, can be feeling in just a short time.

Syntona is sold and recommended in Peterborough at Elliott's Drug Store.—(Advt.)

Russian General Retries From Army

MOSCOW, Nov. 23 (AP)—Marshal Klementi Y. Voroshilov, once the brightest star among Russian commanders "has been released from his duties as member of the state committee of defence," a five-line item on the back page of Izvestia announced Wednesday.

Gen. Nikolai Bulganin, recently Soviet representative to the Polish Committee of National Liberation, succeeded Voroshilov. He was elevated to the rank of general of the army Sunday and appointed people's vice-commissar of defence Tuesday

Voroshilov was last mentioned as a front commander Jan. 18, 1943, when his forces captured Schluesselburg and partly lifted the long siege of Leningrad.

At the start of the war, he was one of three marshals commanding army groups which the Germans smashed back to the approaches of Moscow and into Stalingrad. The others, Budenny and Timochenko, also are in eclipse.

At Close Quarters

WITH THE U.S. 1ST ARMY IN GERMANY, Nov. 23 — (AP). — Five German soldiers were killed Monday night in houses occupied by American officers. Two were shot by Lt.-Col. Elisha Peckham when they emerged from underneath his bed. Three were shot by Capt. George Folk when he found them looking out the window of his billet in the attitude of snipers. A woman who shot and wounded an American officer was shot and killed by him.

Frost Halts Fall Plowing

Plowing was halted by frost this morning, and farmers who haven't yet got their work in hand set about other chores till the sun took charge of things again.

Wentworth farmers are hampered by the difficulty "of getting sufficient shares to complete the work," a new deficiency in essentials. Most city people wouldn't know the plow share from the mould board. Plowing in Hastings is comfortably advanced. Winter can begin its invasion any day. But, "in a number of sections farmers are still drawing water for live stock. Young cattle are being brought home from pasture lots; a few cheese factories are closed, and the milk supply is declining."

In other words, farmers are battening down the decks against the coming storms. About the usual extent of plowing has been done in Peterborough. Farmers here are uneasy about the beef cattle market. Fall wheat has an excellent top.

Prices of females held up well at the recent sale by the Prince Edward county Holstein breeders. "Animals of good type sold well." In Northumberland sales of Holsteins to American buyers are active.

Frontenac cheese production is showing a slight advance over the average for this season. Grenville farmers "with lots of feed and sufficient help are buying cattle from those in less fortunate circumstances. In Lennox-Addington practically all threshing and dressing of clover seed is finished and most of it has gone to market. Rain and snow recently have improved the water supply across the province, but farmers are still uneasy about their wells as winter comes on.

For instance, Stormont county: "Many farmers are so short of water that they are considering selling off stock, and prices for cattle have gone down considerably this fall. Water is being drawn from the St. Lawrence River several miles back into the country."

How Sure Are You?

TWO out of three Canadians who have syphilis don't know it.

TWO HUNDRED THOUSAND!

In town and countryside, in every part of Canada, two hundred thousand men and women go about their daily tasks unaware of the danger that threatens them. If it could honestly be said of them "what they don't know won't hurt them" there would be no problem. But that's not so.

For syphilis is deadly . . . and a sneak.

The germs cunningly hide their activity, usually with no outward sign for many years. Suddenly, the body's defences crumble completely . . . disastrously.

But there is a brighter side. Modern science can cure early syphilis. Even for those whose infections have reached the eleventh hour, the clock can be put back many years.

BUT syphilis must be found before it can be treated. For those who may have syphilis there is a simple first step to the road to recovery—a blood test.

This can be done very easily through the family doctor, plant physician or free government clinic.

It is wise to KNOW FOR SURE.

Hundreds Of Servicemen Arrive Back In Canada

By The Canadian Press.

Battle-tried veterans of land, sea or air fighting on many fronts, hundreds of Canadian servicemen have returned to Canada in a mass movement that included also a large group of British "war brides" and their children bound for new homes. Eager interest in development on Canada's conscription crisis appeared the paramount concern of the arriving fighting men.

Large numbers of the contingent were men who had survived three wounds, thereby qualifying automatically for home leave. Most of these were army personnel who had seen front-line action in France, Sicily or Italy.

Another large section of the arrivals was made up of RCAF fliers who had completed one or more tours of operation against the enemy and were bound home on leave. Many of them, it was expected, would be discharged under the RCAF's new thinning-out policy. Others were due for leave, followed by instructional duties in this country.

CWAC Head Back.

Col. Margaret Eaton of Toronto, officer commanding the Canadian Women's Army Corps, returned from a 2½-months trip overseas during which she inspected CWAC establishments in the United Kingdom and visited the Canadian girls in khaki working near the lines in Belgium.

Another arrival was Mrs. Clara F. McEachren of Toronto, national chairman of women's war work for the Canadian Red Cross, who had spent six weeks in Britain inspecting the organization's activities and lining up plans for assistance to the newly-liberated countries.

After four years' service overseas Pte. Jack Stuart of Wallaceburg, Ont., and he craves nothing but peace and quiet "I'm now the most peaceful man you ever saw," said this wounded veteran of the Sicily and Italy campaign. He was hit by mortar bomb shrapnel while fighting with the Royal Canadian Regiment at Motto Ridge, Italy.

6th Division May Go Over

OTTAWA, Nov. 24 — (CP). — First formation likely to feel the impact of the government's new partial conscription policy is the 6th Division of home defence draftees stationed on the Pacific Coast, military circles reported last night.

This division has some of the best-trained draftee infantrymen in the home defence army and an officer said "it seems likely they will get the first call to supply the first overseas draft."

It was officers of the 6th Division who publicly said Defence Minister McNaughton's voluntary system of recruiting wouldn't work. Their statements are being investigated.

The division is under the command of Maj.-Gen. Hardy Ganong of St. Stephen, N.B., and is part of the Pacific command under Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes.

Both these officers have been reported as having expressed doubts of the voluntary method of recruiting at a staff conference here, but before returning to Vancouver they assured Gen. McNaughton they would give it another try.

70 Bombers Fire Tokio Plants

First Major Raid Fore-Runner Of Air Campaign

SAIPAN, Nov. 24 (AP)—A mighty armada of B-29 Superfortresses blasted Tokyo today with hundreds of tons of bombs, opening what Gen. H. H. Arnold said was "an attack which will be carried on relentlessly from the air until the day of land-sea invasion" of Japan's home islands.

An undisclosed number of Superforts roared from newly-completed airbases here at dawn for the 3,000-mile flight which marked the initial attack on Japan's capital by land-based planes and its first bombing since April 18, 1942.

Brig.-Gen. Emmett (Rosie) O'Connell, 38-year-old former West Point football coach, led the historic daylight assault, believed to be the largest attack yet made on Japan's homeland.

The aerial task force was from the recently - established 21st Bomber Command of the 20th Army Air Force, operating from the Marianas.

Use New Bases

The first use of these bases south and east of Tokyo creates a two-way aerial squeeze against Japan's vital industries, with other B-29s from China to the westward.

First official announcements of today's raid merely said a "sizeable task force" of Superforts "attacked industrial targets in Tokyo." Another communique was promised when further details were available.

(Tokyo, acknowledging the assault four hours after its announcement in Washington, said 70 Superforts hit the southern and northern outskirts of the capital early this afternoon, Japanese time. The broadcast, heard by the federal communications commission, claimed the B-29s "failed to attain any tangible results" but "residential sections, including one hospital, were slightly damaged." It said three were shot down. There was no Allied confirmation.)

Tokyo's great sprawling industrial area is ringed by airfields and anti-aircraft defences, recent lone B-29 reconnaissance flights showed. Shipping and ship-building yards are located in nearby Yokohama.

Early reports gave no indication of the bomb loads carried, but the Army Air Forces revealed yesterday in Washington a Superfortress can carry at least 10 tons of bombs.

The airmen were briefed to avoid the Imperial Palace, in the capital's heart, and shrines and temples.

They departed from here well aware the raid would not be a surprise to the Japanese, long forewarned by reconnaissance flights and practice B-29 bombing missions against Truk and the Bonin Islands. The flight bore little resemblance to the first thrust of 16 medium bombers, launched from a carrier which hit Tokyo in 1942 under Lt.-Col. (now Lt.-Gen.) James Doolittle.

Its importance was underlined by

Reds Capture Saare Island Near Riga Gulf

LONDON, Nov. 24—(CP)—Premier Stalin announced tonight in a broadcast order of the day that Russian forces had cleared the Germans out of the island of Saare, which covers entrance to the Gulf of Riga.

Stalin's announcement said the clearing of the island completed the liberation of all Estonian territory.

The victory was achieved by Marshal Lavrenti Govorov's Leningrad army supported by units of the Russian Baltic fleet under Admiral Tributs.

Moscow saluted the victory with 20 salvos from 224 guns.

Meanwhile the Russian Ukrainian army was on the move again today in eastern Czechoslovakia after a four-week fighting lull.

Moscow announced last night the fresh drive by Marshal Ivan Petrov's forces already had ground out gains up to 16 miles on a 25-mile front west of Ungvar, Carpatho-Ukraine city which fell Oct. 27. The thrust, apparently aimed at the big highway and rail hub of Kassa (Kosice), has overrun 30 populated places as fell as Csap (Cop), a railway junction 15 miles south of Ungvar.

French Units Clean Out Strasbourg

British Fall Back At Hoven Hold High Ground

By WILLIAM FRYE
Associated Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Nov. 24—(AP).—Allied advance units were reported today to have crossed the flooded Rhine east of Strasbourg, which French and American troops had captured save for a small but powerfully defended bridgehead at the western end of the main bridge.

Field Marshal Gen. Von Rundstedt committed 10 or 12 divisions to the great battle of attrition on the soggy Cologne plain to the north and behind flame-throwers and a drumfire artillery barrage drove the British 2nd Army from the villages of Beeck and Hoven, three miles northeast of Geilenkirchen.

The U.S. 9th Army, fighting for Julich on the brown and turbulent Roer River 25 miles from Cologne, knocked out its 110th German tank in a seven-day battle on the right flank of the British Second Army front. In Holland, the British 2nd Army inched to within 1½ miles of Venlo, the Netherlands road centre on the great bend of the Maas (Meuse) River. Paris radio said Venlo had fallen.

Berlin asserted earlier in the day that the Allies attempted futilely to seize one of the three Rhine bridges outside Strasbourg, Alsatian city of 193,000 connected by a two-mile canal to the Rhine. The reported crossing of the wide upper Rhine did not necessarily constitute the spearhead of a major drive across the border stream.

Germany Scarred By War Battle For Cologne Fierce

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

Today's fighting on the western front is especially fierce in the Aachen sector where the battle of the Cologne Plain is getting under way. This engagement in the rolling terrain before the proudest of the Rhenish cities may be the decisive battle.

Certainly the Allies are determined to make it not only the deciding battle of this war, but of all war for a long time to come. Speaking of outlawing war, one recalls it was just 26 years ago that a "defeated" German Army marched through Cologne after the armistice, and the city's newspapers blazed the headline: "greet our unbeaten army."

Nowhere in Germany was there any sign that the greatest war of all time had just been fought. The countryside was trim. Neither city nor hamlet bore scars of conflict. We might have known then that we hadn't won the war but had only secured a breathing spell.

This time it's different. The Allied air forces have poured death and destruction over the length and breadth of Germany. And now Field Marshal Von Rundstedt seems bent on holding in the Cologne Plain west of the Rhine as long as he can with what's left of the decimated armies that marched out with Hitler to conquer the world. This means he's prepared to make a terrible sacrifice of life in an effort to delay inevitable surrender.

If they want it that way it's probably all to the good for our children. When the remnants of the German army stagger back through Cologne this time, there won't be any newspaper screaming "Deutschland Uber Alles."

The Roer River is the next major natural obstacle the Allies have to overcome in the Aachen sector. Once across that there's open country in which a battle of movement can be staged. There are, of course, canals and not far from Cologne there is the River Erft. But the Allies can hit their stride once they're across the Roer in force.

Reinforcements Are Assured Quebec Liberals Won't Rebel

Lengthy Caucus Fails To Produce Breach

OTTAWA, Nov. 24 — (CP). — A lengthy caucus of Quebec Liberal members of Parliament was held to-day and statements made by some of those attending indicated there would be no immediate mass breakaway from Government ranks over the conscription issue.

War Services Minister LaFleche, Justice Minister St. Laurent, Works Minister Fournier, and Fisheries Minister Bertrand addressed the caucus and called for support of the Government's policy.

A spokesman said he placed little credence in reports that as many as 30 of the Liberal members from anti-conscriptionist Quebec would cross the floor of the House as the result of the passage yesterday of an Order-in-Council authorizing the sending of 16,000 Home Defence troops overseas.

However, it was up to every member to decide whether he would support the Government or not, the spokesman said.

Two French-speaking members from the anti-conscriptionist province have already bolted from the Government ranks, and an announcement was made from the Quebec office of Air Minister Power that he had resigned because of his opposition to conscription for overseas service.

J. F. Pouliot (L-Temiscouta) and Charles Parent (L-Quebec West and South) crossed the floor of the Commons a few hours after Prime Minister Mackenzie King had announced the passage of the order-in-council.

Mr. Pouliot said he felt his duty was to his constituents and he could no longer support the government He said he would sit as a "backbencher" without party affiliation

Mr. Parent said he had urged a "no" vote in the national manpower plebiscite of 1942 and at that time "pledged that I would cross the floor of the House if the government enforced conscription for overseas." He said he would sit as an independent.

Several other French-speaking members from Quebec were reported as being undecided what course of action they should take. Two developments heightened their indecision.

Reports from Quebec City told of an anti-conscription parade which broke two windows in the building of the Chronicle-Telegraph, only English-speaking daily paper in the city which was the scene of riots when attempts were made to enforce conscription in 1917.

The second development was Prime Minister King's statement to the Commons that those who talked of lack of confidence in the government "should consider what alternate government they will put in if I resign in the next two weeks."

The Quebec members were said to feel that if Mr. King did resign his successor undoubtedly would be a man who would enforce conscription. Some Quebec members have repeatedly told their constituents that if Mr. King were not in power full conscription would have been imposed early in the war.

RESIGNS — Hon. C. G. Power, Minister of Defence for Air, has resigned in protest against the Government's signing of the Order-in-Council which orders draftees to go overseas.

Crisis Continues Possibility Premier May Resign

By FRANK FLAHERTY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, Nov. 24 (CP)—Rapidly unfolding developments on Parliament Hill Thursday assured the overseas army of trained reinforcements and at the same time placed the life of Prime Minister Mackenzie King's government in jeopardy.

The House of Commons meets today for the third time in its special resumed session in an air of greater crisis than prevailed at any time since the resignation Nov. 1 of Col. J. L. Ralston as Defence Minister threw the overseas conscription issue to the fore-front of Canadian political discussions.

It meets to hear Defence Minister McNaughton answer further questions from members on army reinforcements, perhaps partly in secret session.

Yesterday it heard Mr. King announce closing of the gap which from the war's outbreak has prevailed between those who favor conscription for overseas service and those who oppose it The government crossed over to conscription by passing an Order-in-Council to authorize the sending of up to 16,000 of the 60,000 effective home defence troops overseas to meet infantry reinforcement requirements.

At once there were developments which led Mr. King in the late minutes of the night session to mention the possibility of his own resignation in two weeks and his government's making way for another after defeat in the Commons.

These developments included the resignation, announced at Quebec, of Air Minister Power and the crossing of the floor into opposition independency of two other Quebec Liberal members, J. F. Pouliot of Temiscouata and Charles Parent of Quebec west and South.

With resignations of other ministers not ruled out and further floor crossing anticipated the key debate of the session on a motion of confidence in the government was put off until Monday.

Packed galleries and well-filled members' seats were the order all day yesterday as Gen. McNaughton held the spotlight, standing erect at a small table placed near the clerk's table He spoke by courtesy since he is not a member.

Says Lend-Lease To End When War Over

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24 —(AP)— President Roosevelt told Congress today that lend-lease and reverse lend-lease "should end with the war."

The statement appeared to be a pointed reply to suggestions that some sort of lend-lease assistance should be continued to Britain and possibly other United Nations after both the European and Pacific wars have ended.

Mr. Roosevelt had previously called for continuation of lend-lease so long as Japan remains in the war.

"Lend-lease and reverse lend-lease are a system of combined war supply," the president said today. "They should end with the war. But the United Nations partnership must go on and must grow stronger."

This policy declaration wound up a letter by which the president transmitted to Congress a detailed report of reverse lend-lease from Britain.

British authorities issued a similar report a few hours earlier covering about the same statistics. This showed that the United Kingdom had supplied, up to June 30 this year, munitions and other goods and services valued at $2,337,062,000 and that Australia, New Zealand and India furnished $911,065,000 — a

Draftees Given New Check-up

TORONTO, Nov. 24 — (CP). — N.R.M.A. recruits in M.D. No. 2 (Toronto) are being given complete medical examinations to determine if they are physically fit for overseas service, an Army spokesman said to-day.

The medical re-boards are being given in accordance with the policy outlined two weeks ago by Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, Minister of National Defence, that only recruits unfit for overseas service will be used in war plants and other essential industry.

Any men already employed in these industries who are found physically fit will be "pulled off the job and assigned to stiff military training," the spokesman said.

British Cross Cosina River

ROME, Nov. 24 — (AP).—British 8th Army troops have crossed the Cosina River in the hills south-east of Faenza and have established five small bridgeheads against strong German resistance along a 2½-mile front, Allied Headquarters announced to-day.

German infantry was supported by heavy artillery and mortar concentrations in this critical area for the defence of the Bologna-Rimini highway stronghold, but the British captured a bridge at the river bend and tanks crossed to aid the foot soldiers.

At another point British troops crossed the river, captured the town of Figna and proceeded to expand the bridgehead.

On the left flank Polish troops advanced half a mile north of San Biago and seized Monte Ricci overlooking the Marzeno River.

In the Adriatic coastal sector, the positions along the Montone River, between Ravenna and Highway 9, were unchanged.

American troops on the Allied 5th Army front south of Bologna repulsed enemy raids.

Tito To Unite Balkans

Macedonia Included In 6-State Group

LONDON, Nov. 24.—(CP).—Proposal by Marshal Tito to establish a new Yugoslavia Federal Democratic Government embracing six states was announced last night by the Free Yugoslavia radio.

The Partisan leader was quoted as saying in an interview with a Bulgarian newspaperman that the new government would apply all its powers "to the closest collaboration and rapprochement with its Balkan neighbors," particularly Bulgaria.

Federal units under the new government will be Serbia, Croatia-Slavonia, Macedonia, Bosnia, Hercegovania and Montenegro, the broadcast said.

It was the first official statement disclosing any particulars of the recently concluded agreement between Tito and Dr. Ivan Subasic, premier of the Yugoslav government in Cairo. Subasic saw Marshal Stalin in Moscow yesterday.

"Each Federal unit," Tito said, will have its national government. At the head of Federative Democratic Yugoslavia will be one single government. The final internal organization will be carried out—after the liberation of the country—through the constitutional assembly to which the peoples will send their representatives selected in free elections."

Editorial Comment Adds to Muddle

Diversification Of Opinion Across Canada Is Startling

By The Canadian Press

Following are excerpts from editorials in to-day's daily newspapers on the conscription order-in-council:

Ottawa Citizen— Democracy is operating in Canada. The government's decision to take the responsibility of sending trained reinforcements overseas by the national selective draft is political democracy in action. It should be a great forward step toward eliminating "conscription" as a political football . . . There should be no more reckless talk by responsible ministers in Canada about the volunteer being "a better man and better able to fight than the conscript."

Ottawa Journal— It is Layton Ralston, good Canadian, who is the hero of this hour. And that implies something . . . General McNaughton should in all honor walk out of this cabinet or take some other portfolio and Prime Minister King should invite Col. Ralston to return to his post.

Montreal Le Canada—The armed forces of a country are only an emanation of that country. They are not more important than the country. Our first duty is toward the country, not toward the military force which is only the expression of it. Country first, army second—the latter being only in the service of the other . . . Let's keep away from the china breakers, the Tory bulls in the china closet.

Saint John Telegraph-Journal

After watching events in Ottawa for two days, Canada is forced to conclude that it has taken something like a minor earthquake to put into force a very limited and still conditional application of the people's will as expressed in the conscription plebiscite.

Halifax Chronicle

What it (the government's action) does not do is explain the ground for Mr. King's sudden right-about-face . . . the government's action in invoking overseas conscription would appear to suggest with entire clarity that the basis upon which General McNaughton originally indicated his willingness to assume the portfolio of Minister of National Defence had ceased to exist.

Winnipeg Free Press

The pledges and commitments entered into in 1942 have been honored . . . there remains today only the loyal acceptance of this decision by the country as a whole . . . there are many anti-conscriptionists in Canada outside Quebec . . . but . . . it is from Quebec that the loudest voices are to be heard in denunciation of conscription or any steps leading toward it. That is why it is most important today to address to that province the appeal to a Democratic minority to accept with good will the verdict and will of the majority of the people.

Regina Leader-Post

There are those who regard the decision as a major shift in government policy. They are wrong. It is, in fact, a precise fulfillment of the pledge given by the Prime Minister in 1942 . . . the decision reached vindicates Col. Ralston on the point on which he resigned, that the voluntary system would not meet the situation. His judgment on that score was correct but the fact that it has been proven correct does not weaken the contention of Gen. McNaughton and the Prime Minister that under the circumstances then prevailing the voluntary sys-

Telephone Strike Ended

Operators In 29 Cities Bow To Labor Board

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24 —(AP)— The United States sighed with relief into its telephones today, spared of a threatened widespread strike that could have tied up its communications in wartime.

Telephone operators who had quit their jobs in 29 Ohio cities and in Washington and Detroit went back to their switchboards. Similar walkouts which had shown signs of developing in New York and elsewhere promptly faded.

It will be up to the War Labor Board now to adjust differences between the strikers, their employers and their expressed targets—operators brought in from outside and given living expense bonuses not received by residents.

Until late yesterday leaders of the union, the National Telephone Workers Federation (independent), had rebuffed the W.L.B. then, in the face of prospects for government operation of the telephone companies, they called the whole thing off.

Backing the W.L.B. also were such weapons as power to take away union security privileges.

Jap Division Wiped Out Limon Captured

GEN. MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Philippines, Nov. 24 —(AP). — Mud-slogging American infantrymen lunged southward from Limon to-day after capturing that bastion of the Japanese Yamashita line in the climax to the longest and bitterest fighting of the entire Leyte Island campaign.

The aJpanese 1st Division has been practically destroyed, Gen MacArthur said in announcing that the U.S. 32nd had smashed into and through Limon yesterday.

Gen. MacArthur said the victory at Limon may result in the rolling up of the entire Yamoshita line upon which the enemy depends in his fight to hold Leyte Island.

The communique said the Americans had advanced 1,000 yards south of Limon and had reached the nearby Leyte River, breaking the last Japanese resistance in the battle for the mountainous defile leading into the Ormoc corridor. The fight started after the Japanese had landed heavy reinforcements at Ormoc on October 25

It was the second Japanese division virtual annihilation of which has been announced by MacArthur. Earlier he had reported the destruction of the Japanese 16th, which had played a leading part in the defeat of American forces at Bataan.

American planes ranged the air and dealt other damaging blows to the Japanese.

Light naval units maintained vigilance against any enemy effort to land reinforcements or supplies.

Swedish Ship German Victim

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 24 (AP)—The 563-ton Swedish passenger ship Hansa was hours overdue at the Baltic Island of Gotland today, and Swedish military aircraft reported sighting debris, bodies and a lifeboat with apparent survivors 25 miles from Gotland.

Disappearance of the ship in good weather recalled the recent German proclamation that shipping in the Baltic and the Gulf of Bothania was liable to be sunk without warning.

The Swedish newspaper Aftontidningen speculated that the ship, carrying more than a score of passengers and 27 crew members, was sunk "either by a mine or a torpedo." Reports in Stockholm said a number of those aboard were Swedish soldiers on leave. The route was outside the area proscribed in the German proclamation.

Christian Culture Discussion Topic

HAVELOCK, Nov. 24 — (ENS) — Mrs. C. Couch of the public school staff gave an interesting talk on Christian Culture at this week's meeting of the Young People's Society of the United Church, comparing it with certain types of culture in the arts.

She pointed out that Germany is a highly cultured nation but instead of using its culture to aid Christianity and for the good of mankind, they turn to destroying other people to satisfy their own lust for power. The Allies stand for Christianity and Christian Culture which they must uphold to the utmost.

A duet entitled "In Jesus" was sung by Jean and Joan Quinn. Miss Lorraine Page, Christian Culture leader, presided for the program and the scripture lesson was read by Helen Davidson.

24 King's Counsel Named In Ontario

Status Of Men Moving Overseas

OTTAWA, Nov. 24 — (CP). — Prime Minister Mackenzie King said last night in the Commons there was apt to be confusion in the public mind on the status of men who will move overseas following authorization to conscript 16,000 draftees for service overseas.

He said he would seek to put the position simply by saying that if there were 1,000 men called under the National Resources Mobilization Act in a camp and none volunteered they still would be N.R.M.A. men a eek from now. But if some volunteered they would become General Service men.

"If those General Service men are sent overseas the public may assume that they are other than the N.R.M.A. men of to-day. But they would not be, they would be exactly the same men," Mr. King said.

Any N.R.M.A. man was free to volunteer for service up to the moment his commanding officer detailed him to go overseas under the compulsory service authorization.

tem before the compulsory step was taken, should have been given a final chance.

Vancouver News-Herald

As the first breach in the anti-conscriptionist citadel, this is to be welcomed. But it is not good enough. We looked for something better. In changing its policy the government should have gone the whole way This is no time for half measures.

Toronto Globe and Mail

The Prime Minister has chosen still another compromise . . . Mr. King has sought to shift the responsibility for using conscription from the government to the Defence Minister. There is posed immediately a question of faith in that minister.

London (Ont.) Free Press

The government must face a vote of confidence. It has already lost the support of at least one Quebec minister with the reported resignation of Hon. C. G. Power, Minister of Defence for Air. The possibility of a coalition government suggested in these columns some days ago is by no means past . . . but one thing is clear. The voluntary system has failed.

Montreal Gazette

If Mr. King ever gets around to bring in overseas conscription it will not come through any frank and responsible measures. It will come like a thief in the night and at such an hour as man knoweth not. But the penalties of these methods will destroy him. The anti-conscriptionists will lose all respect for the man who is deserting them by such stealthy steps, while the conscriptionists will feel no more than that Mr. King was gradually compelled to adopt a policy which he resisted as best he might, to the end.

Toronto Star:

There is now conscription in Canada which guarantees reinforcements for Canada's infantry overseas. That is what public opinion in Ontario has demanded. Those who still clamor against the Government as though it had done less than enough reveal their partisan motives.....The Government has done everything possible to preserve national unity.....It will, of course, lose support in Quebec.... There will have to be a re-alignment of the Government forces. But the right thing has been done ....The Government will need the help of all those whose first desire is an efficient prosecution of the war.

Kassa lies about 45 miles north, northwest of the Hungarian communications centre, Miskolc, itself threatened from the south and east by units of Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky's 2nd Ukrainian army sweeping through Hungary.

While Petrov's troops were reaching Sobrance, 10 miles northwest of Ungvar, Malinovsky's army units recaptured Tokaj at the southern end of an approximately 55-mile front between those two points.

In yesterday's fighting Soviet troops also smashed due west of Ungvar 16 miles to Budkovce. The railway station of Bacska, seven miles west of Csap, also fell.

The Russian communique reported capture of more than 3,600 German and Hungarian prisoners north and northwest of Csap, and 2,500 in two days of battle in Hungary. Moscow said the total taken since Nov. 8 in Hungary now stands at 14,470.

Crisis Continues

effort to assure the provision of 16,000 extra men, over anticipated numbers, by voluntary means, said conditions had changed since he took office three weeks ago and compulsion now was practicable and necessary.

At the same time he said he would be "the most thankful man in this room" if enough draftees—nicknamed Zombies—volunteer for general service so that it will not be necessary to use the authority now vested in him.

It was during a discussion of procedure for today that Mr. King made his references to the possibility of sweeping changes. When a member asked Gen. McNaughton to repeat a statement he had made earlier Mr King said that this was unreasonable and spoke of the strain under which members of the government had been working.

"When honorable gentlemen speak of not having any confidence in the government I hope they will consider very carefully what alternative government they will put in if I resign this post within the next two weeks," he said.

Hon. R. B. Hanson (PC-York Sunbury) said Mr. King was not indispensable and there was a growing body of opinion which wanted to be rid of both the Prime Minister and the Government.

May Cause Delay

Later Mr. King said he was not sure he would want to proceed today with the main debate since he did not wish to address the House when he was tired but added:

"I might feel very differently in the morning. I may decide it is not necessary to say more than two or three words."

For many members this brought up the prospect of either a resignation or a dissolution of parliament and the calling of a general election. Against the latter possibility there was, however, a repeated assurance from Mr. King that he would do all possible to avoid an election while men are fighting at the front, providing the term of parliament is not extended.

In another reference to the confidence debate Mr. King said: "If the resolution (of confidence) is not carried, of course, the government will immediately make way for those who are responsible for its defeat to form an administration to carry on at once."

The grave view many members take of the situation was apparent in serious faces and whispered discussions. Repeatedly the Speaker had to call for order, not so much because of interruptions but because of the murmur of conversation as members exchanged thoughts in whispers with their deskmates and the whispers added together blurred out the words of speakers.

"We are facing the greatest crisis since Confederation. This may mean the breaking up of Confederation," said A. W. Neill, veteran independent member for Comox-Alberni by way of prelude to a question directed to Gen. McNaughton.

Hot Exchange

At times hot words were exchanged when Karl Homuth (PC-Waterloo South) said a statement by Gen. McNaughton that soldiers were not shifted from other branches into infantry and put in the battle lines was untrue. He withdrew at the request of the Speaker but not before an unidentified member shouted:

"Where were you in the last war?"

"Where the hell were you?" retorted Mr. Homuth.

Gen. McNaughton said there was no over-all shortage of reinforcements but there was a shortage in the infantry. It had been met in part by remustering men from other branches of the service.

When he took office he hoped to meet further requirements by a new approach to the home defence troops to induce them to go voluntarily.

That this effort will be carried on in the future and meet with more success was indicated when he said the power to send men overseas by compulsion would be used only to the extent necessary to maintain the army.

Of the 16,000 men required, in addition to men now available for overseas service, 5,000 are to go in December, 5,000 in January and 2,000 in each of the three following months.

This, the General said, would avoid the possbile shortage of men for infantry reinforcements which now looms up for the end of January or early in February and again for spring or early summer.

Gen. McNaughton said the 16,000 to be sent overseas were in addition to the supplies of general service personnel it was planned to send in any event. The total increase planned was 16,000, eventually destined for the infantry. He could not say that these men would be entirely draftees as some might be General Service infantry changing from one place to another. But the net increase sought in the pools overseas was 16,000.

On the basis of present estimates this number, plus the other reinforcements already planned, would make the position "reasonably safe."

If the 16,000 were not obtained, the estimates would go "into the red—quite deep."

Make Up Shortage.

Howard Green (PC-Vancouver South) asked if it could be said how many of the 16,000 additional men to be sent overseas would be draftees and how many volunteers.

"It is not possible to give an answer because of this fact, that the shipping we shall have will be for 16,000," Gen. McNaughton replied.

"In the first instance those who volunteer for service will probably be selected and we shall use the powers of those 16,000 of N.R.M.A. (National Resources Mobilization Act) men just to make good a deficiency."

He would use compulsion no more than was necessary to meet the deficiency which otherwise would exist, and he planned to provide the 16,000 additional men required as far as possible by sending General Service personnel

"As long as there are suitable General Service personnel available to meet the requirements, it is our intention to use them," the minister said.

"We propose to make good whatever deficiencies there are from N.R.M.A."

Mr. Green: "N.R.M.A. men will not be sent overseas if you can possibly avoid it?"

Gen. McNaughton: "I have no intention of using compulsion except to meet a deficiency, and having regard to the purpose we have of maintaining the strength of our armies overseas"

Mr. Green said that under the proposed policy he wondered if home defence troops with full combat training would not be put into action, but boys with five or six weeks of training would be.

Gen. McNaughton said he did not think that would be the result.

A gunner remustered as infantry would be given a minimum of six weeks of training. Men must have reached a certain standard before being passed out of remustering, and careful checks were made.

Mr. Green said that if a battalion suffered severe losses and was in a desperate position seeking to hold its part of the front, men insufficiently trained might be sent into action.

Duty To Enlist.

Gen. McNaughton said that if battle conditions allowed a battalion reduced to 50 or 100 men would be withdrawn and if this could not be done, it was the duty of every man, regardless of his training, to do the best he could.

Mr. Green: "Government members are applauding. What does the General think the duty of the men who are in the home defence army fully trained in combat training should be?"

Gen. McNaughton: "The duty of the man in the home defence army is that he shall take his honorable obligation of service, and take it up at once, as other Canadians are doing."

Mr. Green: "Under this proposed plan there will be two types of Canadian soldiers, one who fights and one who does not fight."

Gen. McNaughton said he hoped men in the home defence army would come forward to take up their obligations. He was doing all he could to persuade them to do so. He would continue asking them to volunteer for general service.

Abitibi Shares Start Moving

TORONTO, Nov. 24 — (CP). — The report of the Hughes Committee on the re-organization of the Abitibi Power and Paper Company "indicate that a basis of settlement has been reached which will bring the Abitibi Company out of receivership" after more than 12 years of involved legal proceedings, Premier Drew of Ontario announced last night.

"The solution . . . has involved a tremendous amount of work and I am satisfied that the plan now produced and receiving the full agreement of all but a small group of security holders is eminently fair to all concerned." Only thing necessary now is to obtain court approval of details of the plan.

The $120,000,000 company, in receivership since 1932, is one of the largest producers of pulp and paper in Canada. It was incorporated in 1914.

grand total of $3,348,127,000.

Canada has no lend-lease agreement with the United States. Economic co-operation is under a separate agreement.

The United States has furnished to the United Kingdom for the same period, ending June 30, a total of $9,321,549,000 of lend-lease and to all the Allies a total of $28,270,351,000 worth. But Mr. Roosevelt urged that no comparisons be made on a dollar basis.

Not Loaning Money

"We are not loaning money under lend-lease," he said. "We are not receiving payment under reverse lend-lease,. . .

"Neither the monetary totals of the lend-lease aid we supply, nor the totals of the reverse lend-lease aid we receive are measures to aid we have given or received in this war. That could be measured only in terms of the total contributions toward winning victory of each of the United Nations.

"There are no statistical or monetary measurements for the value of courage, skill and sacrifice in the face of death and destruction wrought by our common enemies."

He summed up his estimate of the value of Britain's reverse lend-lease contributions by saying that without it "we would surely have been forced to delay the invasion of France for many months."

"It would have required a thousand ships to send across the Atlantic what we received for our men through reverse lend-lease from the United Kingdom. . . . "

"For the war against Japan, United States forces have also received quantities of supplies and services in the past six months as reverse lend-lease from Australia and New Zealand and in India. These were the months in which the forces under Gen. MacArthur were completing the New Guinea campaign and were preparing to launch the campaign for the liberation of the Philippines."

British Units

On the hottest corner of the Western front, however, a violent German counter-attack with six or seven divisions, half of them armored, drove the British 2nd Army back from Hoven on the muddy Cologne plain, three miles northeast of captured Geilenkirchen.

Flame-throwers were being used by both sides. The men of Lt.-Gen. Dempsey's army stood firm on the high ground overlooking the Wurm valley north of the levelled hamlet. Still farther north, British troops absorbed all German counter-attacks and moved forward, yard by bloody yard.

Flanking the British to the south, the U.S. 9th and 1st Armies' offensives in the valley of the turbulent Roer River slowed to a sticky crawl or were checked entirely while the Germans threw wave upon wave of counter-attacks at Allied lines. Fighting here centred at the approaches of Julich, highway town on the Roer 25 miles from ruined Cologne.

Take Oberluken.

The U.S. 3rd Army beyond Metz captured Oberluken and deepened its northern wedge into Germany with gains of two to four miles yesterday. The front edged slowly toward the Saar industrial and rail centre of Saarbrucken, 15 miles from forward lines.

British troops in Holland moved within easy field-gun range of the Maas River town of Venlo, 1½ miles away.

Snow, rain and fog slowed the drives in the Vosges Mountains and beyond Belfort where American and French units were striving to bag thousands of Germans of the 19th Army. London heard an unconfirmed report that Field Marshal Blaskowitz in the southern front had been removed from his 19th Army command.

Escape Route Sealed

The French 1st Army drive into Strasbourg sealed off the Rhineland escape route for remaining troops of the German 19th Army, once estimated to number 70,000 men.

At the north end of the Western Front British forces entered Blerick, two miles from the Dutch border city of Venlo on the Meuse River. The Tommies drove on to within 500 yards of the river citadel.

U.S. 9th Army troops captured Pattern, three miles southwest of Julich, only 26 miles west of Cologne. They beat off counter-attacks west of Linnich, six miles northwest of Julich.

On their right the U.S. 1st Army repulsed at least four infantry and tank counter-attacks and inched closer to Weisweiler. Other units, meeting bitter resistance, pushed ahead up to 600 yards in the Hurtgen Forest.

Operations Limited

New gains were reported from the French forces driving north of Mulhouse in the Upper Alsace, but bad weather in the Vosges and around Belfort limited 6th Army group operations in the drive to push north up the Rhine and close a trap on the Germans sealed off by the break-through to the Rhine at Strasbourg.

On the U.S. 3rd Army sector Lt.-Gen. Patton's eastern wing reached as far as Leyviller, 16 miles southwest of Saarbrucken, and Fenetrang, seven miles north of Sarrebourg.

Limited gains were achieved on the 3rd Army's left flank, where advanced elements have established a front on German soil near the Luxembourg border, but virtually no change occurred along the main portion of the Lorraine front east of Metz.

Red Cross Workers Complete 4 Quilts

NORWOOD, Nov. 24—(ENS)—Mrs. John Marks was hostess to the group of Red Cross workers under the leadership of Mrs. H. J. Ford Wednesday afternoon for sewing and knitting. During the afternoon two large quilts and two crib quilts were completed, one of the quilts being quilted for a member to augment the group funds.

The sewing and knitting included 2 nightgowns by Mrs. W. N. Hagerman, 4 pairs socks by Mrs. H. B. Peters and 3 baby bonnets by Mrs H. J. Ford for the local Red Cross and 4 pairs of socks by Mrs. W. M. Hagerman and Mrs. W. J. Scott for the I.O.D.E. and 20 large pieced blocks were handed in previously by Mrs. W. N. Hagerman.

The donations were 2 crib quilt tops by Mrs. A. B. Greenbank, 1 lining by Mrs. W. N. Hagerman, 1 baby blanket by Mrs. W. Preston and 1 large quilt top each by Mrs. H. Peters and Mrs. H. Ford.

During the social hour tea was served. Mrs. H. B. Peters will be hostess for the December meeting.

Col. Eaton declared the members of the khaki-skirted corps had proven themselves valuable adjuncts to the advancing Canadian troops

Col. Eaton said Canada's C.W A.C 's stationed in Belgium, have been under fire and have stood up well to the other hazards and inconveniences to be found in the wake of war. "As a matter of fact," she said, "they all seem to be enjoying it."

Chief tasks of the Canadian girls, their commandant said, were clerical work and "postal tracing," the complicated job of routing thousands of pieces of mail from home to reach individual soldiers advancing swiftly and often changing from unit to unit.

A "tremendous" amount of Canadian Red Cross supplies will be moved into Europe to help the Continent recover from the ravages of Nazism as soon as transport permits it, Mrs. McEachern said.

To Help Europe

"The question of what we will have to do for the liberated countries was a major part of my work overseas," she said "Their needs are great, and we must prepare to meet them. We have much material in Britain now, and we shall start moving it as soon as transport is available."

"From now on," she continued, "it is expected the great demand on our membership will be for clothing for these newly-freed peoples And, of course, comforts for our own troops."

Mrs. McEachren said she had found the Canadian Red Cross was doing a fine job overseas, and declared she had heard many expressions of gratitude from the women of Britain for the help they are receiving from Canada's women

Cattle Prices Up 15 Cents Carryover 3,100

TORONTO, Nov. 24 (CP)—Cattle prices were strong to 15 cents higher on better quality slaughter steers and heifers, in trade on the livestock market here this week. Other grades held steady. The management of the Union stockyards announced Thursday that next week's market would be open for any number of good steers and heifers but warned only a moderate supply of plain cattle or cows should be loaded. Calves, lambs and sheep traded steady during the week while hogs gained 10 cents cwt.

The cattle carryover from last week was 3,100 head. It was expected that less than 1,000 head would be unsold this week. Shipments were reduced on request from packers and stock yard management. Steers and heifers of medium quality and upward found ready sale. Cows did not move in any volume until after Tuesday. The cow supply was still too heavy for requirements. During the week's trade weighty steers sold at $10.50 to $12 with some choice loads at $12.25. Butcher steers were $9 to $11 and heifers mostly $10.75 down. Boners sold at $6 to $7. Butcher cows sold at $7 to $8.75 with canners and cutters at $5 to $6.75. Bulls were $6 to $8.25. Fed yearlings sold at $11 to $13.50. Stockers moved slowly at $7 to $9.50 cwt. The few milkers and springers offered sold at from $85 to $140 each.

Calves sold at $14 to $15 for choice vealers with a dozen tops at $15.50. Common and heavy vealers sold at $7 to $15 with grassers mostly $5 50-$6. The lamb carryover from last week of 1,300 head was reduced to a few hundred. Trading, however, closed dull with indications only moderate shipments should be made next week. Good ewes and wethers were $12.50 to $13. Bucks $11.50 to $12 and culls from $6 to $10. Sheep were unchanged at $2 to $4.50 cwt.

Hogs sold, off truck at yards and plants, at $17.25 to $17.35 for grade B1 and at $17.65 for grade A dressed. Sows were $13 dressed.

Think Before You Vote

The endowment fund at Nicholls Hospital amounts to $242,079.50, and earns yearly interest of $10,478.97 (1943) which interest helps to defray expenses at the hospital.

It is now proposed by supporters of the proposed new hospital to use the whole of the endowment fund to help build the new hospital.

This we feel is a breach of trust, for it is expressly stated in the original act of 1886, Section 13: "The present or any future endowment fund shall not be diminished FOR ANY PURPOSE WHATEVER."

In addition to this breach of trust, the hospital will lose the benefit of the earnings of this endowment fund of over $10,000.00 yearly, which loss makes the deficit so much larger.

All this deficit will have to be paid by the city taxpayer, although almost one half of it will be caused by "outside" patients.

Remember this when you vote on the proposed new hospital.

Suggest M.P.'s Spend Some Time At Counties Council Sessions

COBOURG, Nov 24 — (ENS) — Northumberland and Durham counties council wound up its final session of the year Thursday, after a session which was very quiet with only routine business to be disposed of. The entire year's deliberations have been minus the fire works which sometimes enlivened the proceedings of past counties council sessions.

Warden L. E. Kelley thanked the members at the close of the session Thursday for the cooperation which had made it much easier for the Warden to carry on his duties. It had been a good year with no particular trouble.

"For me it has been a short year. Other wardens have said the same thing—that the year in which they are warden goes only too quickly. It has been most pleasant being warden, an experience that money cannot buy," declared Warden Kelley.

Reeve Norman Green of Cartwright township gave a report on the work of the Children's Aid from January 1 to October 31. Twenty-two children had been admitted of which only eight are the responsibility of the counties. Total was 159 as of October 31. He suggested that the member from the counties council on the Children's Aid Society should be there for a two-year term instead of one year in order to get a better grasp of the work being done. In this connection Reeve Eugene Sanders of Port Hope pointed out that the government should contribute a greater portion to the cost of operation of the Society as it cost $25,000 per year and all the government contributed was $1,000. The share which should be borne by the province of 50 per cent.

Reeve C. Carveth of Newcastle had a bouquet for Premier George Drew in his resolution, seconded by Reeve W. Woodley of Hope Township, that the counties express its appreciation of the help given by Mr. Drew to education, in his capacity as minister of that department.

Suggest M.P. Visit

Reeve Green in discussing the fact that there was a "break in the link between the counties council and the government," suggested that council should request the members of parliament for the two counties to sit in for a portion of each session in order that the council could give them firsthand an idea of what was required. The lack of information in connection with the Hastings bridge, was an example of what existed when there was not sufficient contact between the council and government. His suggestion was embodied in a resolution, seconded by Reeve Robert Love of Cobourg, which passed.

In connection with the Hastings bridge, the Road Commission was instructed to look into the matter of ascertaining ownership of the bridge, with power to act.

Reeve F. Bernard of South Monaghan drew attention of council to the fact that weeds which were dragged loose at the head of the lake and allowed to drift down were killing off the rice and poluting the water with the result that many Rice Lake summer visitors were threatening to go elsewhere. Duck hunting was very poor due to the weed situation, he said. Raw sewage was also being dumped into the lake and the combined situation was so serious that the provincial and federal governments should act at once. Reeve W. Cole of Hamilton township expressed agreement with Reeve Barnard. A resolution accordingly was passed that the 1945 council take the matter under consideration with the view of bringing it before the proper authorities.

Committee Reports

Following was the report of the Reforestation Committee:

We visited both the Northumberland and Durham forests and found them to be in very good order, both Superintendents are keeping their respective forests in the best possible shape. We also inspected several pieces of land and recommend that the Solicitor be authorized buy 100 acres of land in the Township of Haldimand, from the Township Council at the price of $4 an acre, and that he also purchase 75 acres more or less in the Township of Manvers from Mrs. W. Coulter at the price of $500.

Report of the Finance Committee was as follows:

We recommend that the Members of this Council receive the regular five days' pay and mileage for attending this Session and that copies of the resolution in regard to the cost of maintaining the Children's Aid Society at Port Hope be sent to the Hon. the Minister of Public Welfare and the Provincial Members for Northumberland and Durham. We recommend that a grant of $500. be made to Campbellford Hospital and that the Clerk be instructed to make further inquiries as to cost of large scale maps of the Townships within these Counties.

We recommend that the settlement for damages in the truck collision of July 3 between a vehicle owned by the Counties' and one owned by W.H. Harvey and Son be accepted, and we further recommend that the road Commission consider the matter of collision Insurance on all County vehicles.

We recommend to the Department of Game and Fisheries that all Municipal Clerks be made responsible for payment of wolf bounty and that the Assistant to the Caretaker of County Rooms and Offices be paid the sum of $10. a week from the beginning of the Caretakers illness. A 15 per cent increase in salary to the Gaol Matron was recommended, retroactive to 1st. of July last, be sent to the Sheriff and he to forward it to the Provincial Secretary's Department, with his recommendation. We recommend that notices of admission of indigent patients to Hospitals be sent direct by the Hospital to the Municipality concerned within 24 hours of admission and the lot and Concession of such patient be clearly set forth in such notices. Alex Shearer Ex-Reeve Dies

ROSENEATH, Nov. 24.—(ENS).—The death occurred in Cobourg Wednesday of Alexander Shearer of Roseneath. Mr. Shearer was in his 87th year. He was born in Alnwick township, a son of the late Alexander Shearer and Lydia Sweet Shearer.

Mr. Shearer retired from farming forty years ago and moved to Roseneath village. His wife, formerly Miss Emma Polley of Castleton, died about forty years ago. For some years he was active in municipal affairs having served as reeve of Alnwick township for some years.

Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Charles Down of Front Road East, Cobourg and Mrs. W. Herrington, of Toronto, and a sister, Mrs. William Marks of Warkworth. L. E. Down, merchant, and Clarence Down, farmer of Roseneath, are grandsons.

The funeral was held from McMillan's funeral parlors, Roseneath, to-day at 2.30 p.m., with interment in Centenary cemetery. Rev. R. C. White, pastor of Roseneath United church, officiated.

Britain's Share War Aid Grows

By JAMES F. KING
Associated Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Nov. 24 (AP)—Britain has given her Allies $4,318,592,000 since the war began, a government report on "mutual aid" announced today.

Chief beneficiary has been the United States, which during the year from July, 1943 to June, 1944, received from Britain alone $2,418,920,000 worth of goods and services, the report said.

In addition, during that year alone British ships brought to the United Kingdom more than 865,000 uniformed Americans, including 320,000 carried on the Queen Mary and Queen Elizabeth.

Next to the United States, the most aid was given to Russia— $1,077,82',000 worth of goods during the year, including 1,042 tanks.

Aid to other countries since the war began included:—

China—$36,200,000.
France—up to June, 1943— $54,400,000.
Poland (provisional)—$480,000,000.
Greece—$49,472,000.
Czechoslovakia—$74,516,000.
Portugal—$44,532,000.
Turkey—$82,724,000.

Campbellford Club Gives $800 For Milk

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 24. — (ENS).—At the regular meeting of the Kinsmen's club, held at Woodlawn, President Forrest Dennis announced that since the inception of the club last June, they had contributed a total of $800 to the Milk for Britain fund. The treasurer, Mr. J. J. Callaghan read an acknowledgment for this sum from headquarters in Toronto.

A package of 'flat fifty' cigarettes, the gift of Fred Macoun, was raffled and the winner was Chas. Collins. This realized $6 for the fund.

Guests at the luncheon included two of the boys returned from overseas, Corporal Jack Jones and Corporal Clarence Anderson. Both guests spoke briefly and emphasized the ordeal through which the people of Britain were passing since the outbreak of hostilities.

Nominations were received for the offices of president, vice-president, treasurer, secretary and directors. These will be dealt with at the meeting on December 6.

The hockey committee, in charge of Kinsmen Claud Post and Graydon Bell, asked for and received the promise of the clubs' financial backing to provide for the equipping of a team in the Junior 'B' class of the Ontario Hockey Association. The holding of a dance was discussed and this will be in the Masonic Temple on December 7.

The Growing Pressure On Germany

General Eisenhower is increasing the pressure on Germany's Westwall as rapidly as he can, and it is clear that the Allied offensive is still far from its maximum strength. Everywhere the German line is being forced back; in their communiques the Germans describe the fighting as of 'hitherto unparalleled intensity', and excuse their inability to hold on in the face of 'the massed array of artillery, aircraft, tanks and infantry formations'. They are fighting with fanaticism and the utmost tenacity, but their counter-attacks are less frequent and less violent than they were. So far all talk of 'cracks in the enemy line' is exaggeration; there has been no real breakthrough at any point. But it looks as though a breakthrough might come at any time.

Two weeks ago the Americans under General Patton began their assault on Metz and they took it in a frontal attack—a great feat of soldiery. The Germans were driven out of Alsace and Lorraine. The French First Army broke the German defences at Belfort and Mulhouse, and now threatens the rear of the German force in the Vosges Mountains. The American Seventh Army is pressing into the Vosges from the west. These three notable victories have forced the Germans to abandon the sections of the Maginot Line which they had turned to face the Allies, and has almost driven them from French soil. They are retreating to the strongest part of the German Westwall, some of which lies west of the Rhine, and some of which lies east of it. The French advance through Belfort and Mulhouse has unhinged the German line at its southern end, and the whole German position west of the Rhine is in great danger, for the French and Americans are now in a position to drive up the Rhine valley to flank the German armies in the north.

But it is in the north that the hardest fighting is taking place, on the plains before Cologne, the city which commands the gateway to the Ruhr and the chief arsenals of the Reich. This is the critical spot, and it is here that Eisenhower has put the greatest pressure on the enemy. Progress is slow; a spokesman for Sir Bernard Montgomery says, "We are by no means through the first belt of the Siegfried line; the enemy seems determined not to give an inch of ground". It is in this northern sector that the Germans have large reserves, which will be called upon either for counter-attack or defence. It is in the north that the outcome of this big push will be decided. Desperate as the fighting is, it is better for the Allies that as many Germans as possible should be destroyed west of the Rhine; this will make it hard for the enemy to find reinforcements to prevent a breakthrough. If the Germans withdrew their forces intact east of the Rhine, the difficulty of the Allied attack would be greatly increased.

Splendid as the victories in the south have been, the most important fighting is going on in the north. That is where the Germans are strongest, but that is where they can be most decisively beaten. It may be a very long fight, or resistance might collapse suddenly. But General Eisenhower has said that he means to increase the pressure until Germany cracks, however long it may take to do it.

Rumours of another conference of the Big Three continue to be heard. And by the way, could we have gone on calling it 'the Big Three' if one of them had been Mr. Dewey? Or would it have been 'the big two-and-a-bit'?

Why Is Toronto Unpopular?

The city of Toronto has begun worrying about its unpopularity, which it has just discovered. An advertising executive made a speech in the Queen City the other day, in which he said that "Toronto is disliked even more than Montreal by other places". One city controller is so worried that he suggests the appointment of a public relations expert to 'popularize' Toronto; we hope that this suggestion will be ignored, because factitious popularity is worse than none at all.

Of course Toronto is disliked. The reason for the dislike is obvious. Toronto is bigger, richer, and more varied in its delights than any other city in Ontario, and this alone is enough to make it the envy of smaller, poorer and duller places. Toronto is dirty, but no city was ever disliked for its dirt. Toronto is ugly, but no city in Canada is so beautiful that this would inspire comparison, and anyway Canadians are all but insensible to the charms of architecture and city planning. No: almost all the strong dislike of Toronto is rooted in envy, as is Toronto's own dislike of Montreal.

Of course, Toronto has certain unamiable characteristics, and chief among these is a belief that Toronto is a very racy, cosmopolitan and cultured place. It may be so in comparison with most other Canadian cities, but Paris, London, Vienna, Prague, Rome and New York still have a few things that Toronto hasn't got. They take their culture and their sophistication very seriously in Toronto, and no place that is any place ever does.

But Toronto is not a bad spot. Frankly, we like it. It is not Babylon; indeed, it bears about the same resemblance to Babylon that the late Laura Secord (in her best-known portrait) bears to Hedy Lamarr: but it is possible to have a good time in Toronto, and one of the chief duties of large cities is to provide good times for country mice. If Toronto wants to be popular, we offer these suggestions: stop being so serious about yourself: stop calling yourself The City of Churches, and fine or imprison anyone else who does so: stop allowing a few of your citizens who have Jehovah complexes to shout at the rest of Canada in loud but empty eloquence. Then we will all love you, though we will envy you still.

Forests As Memorials

The Gallup Poll recently made one of its surveys in Canada to discover whether the people of this country favoured 'useful' war memorials such as playgrounds, schools, hospitals, health centres, and the like, or the statues and monuments which have been used as memorials in the past. Ninety per cent. of those who were questioned declared themselves for 'useful' memorials.

That being so, we suggest that a number of memorial forests would be both beautiful and useful memorials in the provinces of Ontario and Quebec. The prodigal and ignorant cutting of trees which has gone on in this country ever since it began to be settled has done great harm everywhere, and has ruined several good sections of farm land. It has been obvious for twenty years that an intelligent and consistent program of afforestation is needed to repair the damage that has been done. Why not plant forests as memorials to the men who die for Canada?

We do not suggest that immense tracts of land should be wooded. We mean, rather, that villages, townships, towns and cities might undertake to plant, or reclaim a few acres of woodland, to be maintained in perpetuity as a memorial to the dead. Such forests would eventually become beautiful, orderly, 'managed' forests like those which have added so much to the beauty of Norway and Sweden, where they often lie directly on the outskirts of large settlements.

Such memorials are self-perpetuating, they help to keep the rainfall in the district normal, and they prevent soil erosion. The United States is awake to the possibilities of memorial forests, and there are 700 of them in New York State alone. In India plans have been laid to plant out 100,000 square miles of new forest after the war, as a measure of protection for soil and a control of rainfall. There is no reason why we should not have memorial forests in Canada, where we need intelligent planting very badly.

The People's Will

(By BRUCE HUTCHISON)

PARLIAMENT meets this week in Ottawa. Physically it is a varied assortment of 245 fallible human beings. But by the powerful chemistry of the democratic system, Parliament in session becomes something far greater than the sum of its parts. For all the failings of its individual members, it is jointly the supreme political invention of mankind, on which no improvement has yet been contrived in any land, at any time.

Let those who hold Parliament in contempt observe how it functions.

In Canada today we behold a government with an overwhelming majority in Parliament, 176 Liberal members to 69 in opposition—in theory a position beyond challenge. If Parliament lived by the letter of the constitution alone, such a government could ignore the current feelings of the people. It could refuse even to call Parliament, could govern according to its own will, and no one could touch it until the next election.

But forces much stronger than the constitution are now at work, the forces of history which we have learned through centuries of experience since remote time. These forces no government dare challenge. Nor can any constitutional barrier or book of laws prevent them expressing themselves in the high decisions of the nation.

Through Parliament, through the member elected by his own people at home and responsible to them, the whole people of the nation speak. Every variety of opinion forces its way into the arena. Every pressure from the smallest hamlet to the largest city acts upon the percipient and living body of the parliamentary system. And finally, out of the conflict of these forces, a decision is made, a compromise never satisfactory to all, but demanded by a majority and finally accepted by all.

Only by such a mechanism, as complicated and sensitive as the human body, is it possible to maintain democracy in the world; and only by the principle of compromise, which is the very core of the parliamentary system, is it possible to resolve great conflicts within the state short of civil war.

WE did not build Parliament easily or rapidly. It was not one of those inventions which burst like the inventions of science, out of the mind of men. Parliamentary government, like the art of living itself, had to be learned by long and bitter experience. Parliament today is like a mature man who has discovered the secret of power, of wisdom and of peace after the turmoil and searching of his youth.

Back into the barbarous swamps of England goes the story of Parliament. Those wild and bloody invaders from Germany, the Angles and Saxons, had begun to discover the first spark of the parliamentary system with their council of chiefs. The sprightly Normans, landing on the Channel coast and slaughtering the English armies at Hastings, could not extinguish the spark. The first William, conqueror and dictator of the stubborn island, could not abolish the English Witenagemot but, instead, expanded it. The assembly of his jealous nobles began to make the laws of England and, by 1215, on a grassy island in the Thames, this council bent the king to its will.

Yet the growth of Parliament had only begun. For centuries the contest between the throne and the nobles ebbed back and forth, with one power or the other in alternate supremacy. And now a third element entered the explosive mixture of this process. The people, the common men in their expanding towns, the merchants and the craftsmen and finally the penniless toilers on the land began to send their representatives to Parliament.

The theory that the people should manage their own business had been born in England. It had appeared briefly in Athens and in early Rome, but it had perished in the violence of mob rule. No man could see in England how it could learn to control itself, to reflect the changing mind of the people without chaos in government and finally no government at all.

SLOWLY Parliament solved this riddle by the invention of representative government — a group of men who would consult the people in elections but accept itself in the interval the responsibility of making law and carrying it out through a committee of its members called the cabinet. This invention could not be perfected without constant experiment and recurring struggle, and not until King Charles' head rolled on the block at Whitehall could Parliament say that it was supreme at last.

Even that decision was challenged by the second James and was not confirmed until the foreign William, in the "glorious" but peaceful revolution, finally accepted the principle that the monarch should reign but should not rule. From then on no king could long challenge the Parliament and the last attempt, by the third George, shattered the first British Empire in the American Revolution and compelled a slothful Parliament to renew its vigour.

In our time that vigour is unimpaired. An unacceptable young king, the eighth Edward, is forced to abdicate like the second Edward centuries before him. A weak government, under Mr. Chamberlain, is hurled from office in the middle of a desperate war. Even a peerless leader like Mr. Churchill, who calls himself a child of the House of Commons, constantly secures its consent and heeds its humours.

Out of all this history and experience has grown the Parliament which meets in Ottawa today, the lineal descendant of men who have fought and died for the parliamentary system through a thousand years. This Parliament, like its ancestors, will express the people's will and if the people's will is in duobt, it will go to them and accept their decision at the polls. Fortunate and pitifully few are the nations like Canada which enjoy such a system, without which democracy cannot live.

THOSE SENSIBLE BRITISH

(Letter to London Daily Telegraph)

Sir,—The correspondence on the 24-hour clock raises the whole question of British inconsistencies in the matter of computation. I believe it is a national characteristic we should preserve at all costs.

The 12-hour clock, a movable Easter, keeping to the left, 12 pennies to the shilling and inches to the foot—let us keep them all as a bulwark against the dreary dragooning of our scientific exactitudinarians.

Then our Continental neighbours, entombed in the apotheosis of their own logicality, will continue to wonder at us, and say, "The English have many oddities, but at any rate their queerness keeps them sane!"—(Rev.) C. E. MIDDLETON, St. Barnabas Vicerage, E.16.

NAZI RESERVES —By Thomas

Sceptical About 'Decent Germans'

(OTTAWA JOURNAL)

A LONDON correspondent of the New York Times traces the changing British public opinion in the matter of the Germans. The British, he said, accepted the 1940-41 blitz and its destruction of civilians as something to be expected of modern war. The bombing of Coventry and other cathedral cities did something to alter this attitude, but even confirmed and detailed stories of German atrocities in occupied countries left many thousands of British men and women who said "there must be some good Germans."

The flying bomb, says this correspondent, changed that attitude in a week, and the British people began to realize that "there would be no peace on earth until the German nation that had employed it was rendered impotent ever to wage war again." Then came the V-2 rocket bomb, the Germans' "biggest psychological blunder to date," and the final proof even to those who had said "there must be decent Germans" that the whole German nation must be held responsible for the acts of its military leaders and its scientists.

So the British today, says the Times writer, are demanding hard, stern terms for Germany. Straw votes are a doubtful guide to public opinion, but the Times tells of a poll of 3,400 readers of the London Sunday Dispatch which produced this result: 93 per cent were in favour of Allied occupation of Germany, 79 per cent in favour of reparations and 76 per cent in favour of partition of the Reich.

Furthermore, 71 per cent thought Germany's schools should be staffed by foreigners, and 78 per cent thought German labour should rebuild Europe. Also, 92 per cent favoured the abolition of German war industries, 88 per cent favoured control of Germany's oil and essential ores and 90 per cent favoured the prohibition of any German army or navy and control of all German use of aircraft; 30 per cent favoured the deportation of at least 10,000,000 "guilty" Germans for segregation; 36 per cent favoured sterilization, and 10 per cent were for plain massacre.

These things must not happen again — the British people are determined, again to quote the Times' report, "that no Prussian militarist shall ever again have the chance to dream and scheme for another world war." That determination must not be Britain's alone. We need not be so simple as to suppose the rocket bomb has reached the peak of its range and destructive power. If the Germans ever are permitted to start another war it may well be that no city on this continent will enjoy immunity from air attack, and until the German mentality is changed we need not expect from them any considerations of humanity to induce them to hold their bloody hands. Force must be used while force is needed.

That 'Dedicated Look'

(By G.V.F.)

SOME years ago an enthusiastic lady member of the staff of the CBC made the remark that you could always tell people who were engaged in radio work. They had, she said, a sort of "dedicated look". The remark has haunted us for years.

Dedication. We looked the word up. "Service in the pursuit of a sacred purpose". "A consecration." "A setting apart". Gosh, we thought, it must be wonderful to be in radio. At that time we did not come into close daily contact with these devotees. But for some time now we have been working in a building which houses a broadcasting studio, and we have had a chance to study this matter at first hand.

The building is an interesting one. The first floor contains a newspaper business office and the offices of a lumber company. The second floor has a printing house and a broadcasting studio. The third floor houses a fur company. The fourth floor has the newspaper's editorial department. The fifth floor is taken up with printers and stereotypers. In the ground floor lobby and in the elevator, all meet. A scientific test could thus be devised. Every time we entered lobby or elevator it should then be possible to single out the dedicated from the, as it were, undedicated. Results of the test follow:

MONDAY: We got into a crowded elevator, and gazed around. A young lady with masses of dark hair and lovely dark eyes and ankles immediately attracted our attention. If she is not dedicated, we said to ourselves, nobody is. For all we now know, she may be dedicated, but not to the radio. She got out at the third floor and we discovered she works for the fur company.

TUESDAY: Having been wrong on Monday, we were extra careful next day. We avoided any confusion that might flow from sexual attraction, and finally picked out as the dedicated passenger a young man with a windsor tie and flowing hair and a somewhat wild look in his eye, for we thought perhaps that dedication and lunacy might not be, after all, far separated. But he got out at the fourth floor. We shadowed him to the sports desk, where he turned in the bowling results of the Bide-a-Wee mixed bowling club tournament the night before.

WEDNESDAY: Slightly discouraged, we hung around in the lobby before entering the elevator, finally choosing a fine varied crowd. An intense and earnest young man at once caught our attention. Boy, was he dedicated like nobody's business, we thought. But he went clean up to the fifth—a printer late for work.

THURSDAY: A harassed young woman was the day's choice, and sure enough she got out at the second floor and went straight into the studio. (Don't look now, but she was selling shoe laces.)

FRIDAY: A very crowded elevator, everyone in it chattering and gay and full of fun. It may be dedication at that, we thought, but it turned out to be the night shift at the fur plant coming on duty. All out at the third floor.

SATURDAY: The lobby was crowded with a completely new gang of people: all of them intense, all of them eager, all of them obviously following a single purpose and with a single heart. We've got 'em at last, we cried aloud to ourselves. Here they are. And there, indeed, they were, all of them debouching at the second floor and heading for the studio. They were housewives intent on attending a Saturday quiz program, and every one of them dedicated to grabbing a parcel of free groceries.

SO that's the story as it stands. We have since met some of the radio gang, and nice people they are, pleasant and polite and just as crazy in their way as newspaper people. But dedicated? Well, we've watched them for quite a while and dedication is not just quite the word we'd use.

Baked Beans

It ought to be understood that baked beans is not a subject for unanimity of opinion. Down East in Maine they favour a medium-sized onion in each pot. Vermonters snort at such heretical goings-on and use a little maple syrup instead of molasses as sweetening. Both Maine and Vermont outwardly agree that brown bread plentifully studded with raisins is the natural complement of a plate of beans. New Hampshiremen insist that the way to eat beans is: first, place a slice of well-buttered, crisp-crusted, freshly-baked home-made white bread on the plate; second, cover this slice of buttered bread with lots of juicy beans and pork; third, repeat the entire process. Rhode Islanders, loyal to their white-corn jonnycake, insist on corn bread as the absorbent mop for the bean juice.

Even within a State there are schisms. Some insist on a sprinkling of sugar on the heaped plateful; others us a few beans as a minor partner to huge amounts of chili sauce, chutney, piccalilli, sweet tomato pickle, sweet cucumber pickle, pickled pears, spiced crab apples, or pickled watermelon rind. There are men of experience and judgment who place a piece of butter in the centre of each heaping plateful. The golden rivulets wind their way among the mealy nuggets and blend with the rich juice from the baking.

As one would expect in a democracy, opinions differ about the merits of varieties. There are those who claim the finest eating is with Yellow Eyes; others prefer Red Kidneys; some are for White Peas; and a few know the tasty succulence of Jacob's Cattle beans. The countryman is broad-minded about the problem. All he asks is that the beans shall be soaked Friday night, cooked all day Saturday, that they contain molasses, mustard, salt, a good sized piece of salt pork that has both fat and lean, a small onion, and plenty of juice. There is one other essential. There must be enough left over for Sunday morning breakfast.—New York Times.

A Bible Message

Be thou instructed, O Jerusalem, lest my soul depart from thee; lest I make thee desolate, a land not inhabited. Thus saith the Lord of hosts. They shall throughly glean the remnant of Israel as a vine....

For from the least of them even unto the greatest of them every one is given to covetousness; and from the prophet even unto the priest every one dealeth falsely. And Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of sickness and all manner of disease among the people. (Matt. 4: 23.)

When he was come down from the mountain, great multitudes followed him. And, behold, there came a leper and worshipped him, saying Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean. And Jesus put forth his hand, and touched him, saying, I will; be thou clean. And immediately his leprosy was cleansed.

And Jesus saith unto him, See thou tell no man; but go thy way, shew thyself to the priest, and offer the gift that Moses commanded, for a testimony unto them. (Matt. 8: 1-4.)

NOT A FAIR DEAL

Military authorities are not fair when they refuse to allow travelling time to men in the services on their Christmas and New Year's leave.

Canada is a land of great distances and troops stationed anywhere far removed from home can't possibly spend one of the holidays with the family circle under the five-day limit.

In most cases the men had no choice in the matter of their location. In fairness to these members of the services, they should be allowed travelling time so that they could at least be home for a few days over either of the holidays.—Kitchener Record.

TRY IT FOR YOURSELF

A personable night-club entertainer named Victor Borge, who bills himself as the "Unmelancholy Dane," has invented an inflation language which seems to be very much in keeping with the times. The simple key to Borge's scheme is that Something New Must Be Added. Words containing numbers, hidden or otherwise are stepped up. Thus, "Wonderful" becomes "twoderful," "tooth" becomes "treeth," "benign" turns into "beten," and so forth—or fifth. Borge says that only a recluse now says anything like "I ate tenderloin with my fork." The man in the know declares, "I nined an elevenderloin with my fivek."

The inventor concludes his demonstration by reading a passage from "All This and Heaven Three" in the Trirpleday Doran edition: "Ah," he breathed, mopping his fivehead, "you look twoderful threenight. You are my two and only. Won't you be my better three-quarters?"...

Borge has a good act, but the night I caught it, his inflation psychology was in the ascendant. He stayed on twice too long....—Bennett Cerf in Saturday Review of Literature.

Unconsidered Trifles

A bombastic man met his somewhat henpecked friend, whose badly injured face suggested a recent motoring accident.

"Good heavens," his friend exclaimed. "How did that happen?"

"My wife....!" the injured one began.

"Your wife?" was the breezy reply. "Ah, evidently you haven't acquired the secret of married bliss. I never have a row with my wife. I have no secrets from her."

"Neither have I!" the henpecked one moaned. "I only thought I had!"

At two o'clock in the morning a woman telephoned the manager of a large department store. After much ringing, the manager answered with a sleepy and gruff "Hello!"

"This is Mrs. Soandso," said the woman. "I just couldn't help calling you personally to tell you that the hat I bought at your store last week is simply marvellous. I don't know when I've liked anything so much."

"That's all very nice," yawned the manager, "but would you mind telling me why you call me at this hour of the night about a hat you bought last week?"

"Because," she replied, sweetly, "your van has just delivered it!"

Post-War Trade At Home And Abroad

By GRANT DEXTER

THE first fact to be noted with respect to post-war reconstruction is that there is no single solution. It is both an international and national problem.

Point one is that success cannot be achieved unless there is world security—peace.

Point two is trade. A high standard of living is only possible where people specialize. No person who tried to do everything for himself, who did not specialize, could be prosperous. As with individuals, so with nations. The result of specialization is trade.

Real prosperity, therefore, demands an international setting. And this is particularly true of Canada which depends to an unusually large extent on exports which, in the long run, can only be paid for by imports.

J. R. Beattie, of the Bank of Canada, in an article in the current issue of the Canadian Journal of Economics, points out that:

"In the past, nearly one-third of Canada's total output has been sold to other countries. The export market has been an unstable one, and fluctuations in it have been a major factor in all our booms and depressions. However, the specialization made possible by foreign trade has substantially increased the productivity of our labor and has resulted in a higher average standard of living than we could otherwise have had."

BUT given a sound international setting, it is also true that domestic measures are equally essential.

It may illustrate this point to survey the present prosperity in these terms. We have had a goal—victory. To attain it we have been prepared to make great sacrifices. More than half of all our current production is going into war. The international setting has been highly favorable. This country and the rest of the United Nations, of which the United States and the United Kingdom are the most important, have been striving for the same goal. All have been following the same broad policy and every success each has achieved has made it easier for the others to succeed. As the program of one nation expanded, the need for the products of other nations has been increased.

It is true, however, that the present record of volume of foreign trade has been built, to a large extent, on war materials and weapons and that many of the markets which we enjoy today may suddenly shrink on the coming of peace. The problem here obviously is to replace with peacetime exports as much as possible the present export of war goods. This is the objective of all the United Nations as the declarations of their governments show.

Before the war no similar unity existed. The policies of some countries were thwarted by those of others. Most frequently one nation strove to gain at the expense of others.

The domestic factors, also, have been highly favorable for the last five years. There have been, and continue to be, immense outlays at home for war.

The headings of reconstruction policy, therefore, are fairly clear.

The international requirements are world security, a large and growing volume of trade, development of backward communities, and the breaking up and bringing under public supervision of cartels.

On the domestic side, the need is for increase private enterprise, the safeguarding of competitive conditions, a revision of our taxation structure, measures to stimulate consumption such as the housing scheme and state expenditures on economically justified public works to fill in the gaps and to provide support while the broader program is being developed. State action to prevent the bottom falling out of the prices of primary products during the period of transition is also desirable.

These being the broad lines, how well placed is this country to follow them?

The position is much better than is commonly believed. Because of price and wage control, wartime inflation has been largely avoided. We can face the future without fear of such drastic readjustments as occurred in 1920-21. Foresight on the part of governments has greatly reduced the problem of inter-governmental debts in contrast with the last war. Through such agencies as UNRRA the job of rehabilitation is already in hand and the money required is being given, not loaned.

The Unemployment Insurance Act, covering 2,542,000 workers, has built up a fund of $209 millions.

On Feb. 7, last, the Bank of Canada reduced the rediscount rate from 2½ to 1½ per cent. In announcing the reduction, Graham Towers, the governor of the bank, said that it was a declaration of post-war policy. It is to be an easy-money policy and both private and public enterprise, therefore, can plan for future in the certainty that interest rates will be low and stable.

Reconstruction will involve the transfer from war to peace activity of some 1,900,000 persons. It would be unrealistic to expect that this will be done without jolts. But, as stated, the conditions are favorable. The statutes dealing with demobilization have been widely publicized and will not be dealt with here.

The purpose of these articles has been to discuss reconstruction in general terms. From time to time, particular aspects of the problem will be dealt with in detail. While much has been done, it will be shown that there are important gaps in both the international and national field.

Muck Slide Kills Machine Hand

TORONTO, Nov. 23 — (CP). — An inquest has been ordered into the death of Randolph Fossbender, who was killed October 17 when caught in a landslide at Steep Rock Iron Mines near Atikokan, Ont., Deputy Attorney-General C. L. Snyder anounced to-day. Fossbender was a bulldozer operator and was using the machine when the landslide occurred.

A report by Inspector R. L. Smith of the Ontario Mines Department said Fossbender, 42-year-old father of five children, was caught in a muck slide while driving the bulldozer. Smith said he had been warned to jump if a slide occurred, but he remained in the machine.

A windbreaker and sheepskin seat cover were recovered and the bulldozer was located in 20 feet of water. It will be raised to learn whether the body is in or under the machine.

3,833 Pinnage By Empress Team Record For Year

The Empress C.G.'s swung high and wide in the Men's City League at Duffus Alleys last night when they defeated the Soldiers team with a 3833 pin bombardment. The Soldiers made it close in the first game but faded in the last two.

Jack Playford, the league's top bowler, hit 864, Fred Martin 813 and Bud Weese 808 for a real bowling spree.

The Cleanrites rolled 3650 for 4 points from Ramblers. Fashion Craft counted 3434 to sweep the card from Machine Shop while the K.G. Empress downed Freeman's 4 to 2 with their 3426.

Big scores predominated. Bob Dyer and Frank Wood hit 882 and 866 strings to head off the Empress trundlers while Buck Guerin of the Outlaws counted 829.

High single team game went to the Empress with 1370 while ten good singles were as follows:

R. Dyer 366, F. Wood 334, A. Guerin 330-307, J. Playford 328, M. Anthony 323, W. Harris 318, A. White 315, F. Martin 306, D. Abraham 301.

[illegible] will [illegible] a thing when Transports and St. John's tangle [illegible] in a [illegible] senior basketball league game as the second half of the [illegible] double-header at the Y.W.C.A. On the Transports' lineup will be [illegible], Isabel Bullock and Jean Castle, all members of the champion Westclox team while their softball teammate Mary [illegible] is one of the stars of the Saints. The game should be full of action all the way. Transports who won the senior honors last season will undoubtedly be the team to beat again this season, despite the loss of such stars as [illegible] Bestard, Ruth Hewitt and Isobel Crary. St. John's with Eva Clarke, Teresa Heslip, Marg Hawthorne, Edith Harte-Maxwell and other members of last season's squad in action will be real opposition for the champs. The senior game gets under way at 8.45 o'clock. In the junior fixture, starting at 7.45 o'clock Normal School with one win to their credit will face Y Cadets in what should be a lively affair. The two games provide a real card for cage fans and there should be a big crowd on hand for the double bill.

A couple of novelties will feature the swim meet which Coach Gord Minty of the local Y.M.C.A. has arranged for the Y pool on the night of Saturday, December 16. Toronto Central Y are sending their swim team down for the occasion and there will be a full card of races, an exhibition of diving by a Canadian champion and precision swimming by the Y.W.C.A. Finettes. First of the two unusual features will be a demonstration of the new rocker method of resuscitation which has been hailed as a long step forward in the science of restoring apparently drowned persons. The necessary apparatus is being constructed and the manner in which it is used will be shown. The other novelty will be the new crawl stroke that threatens to revolutionise swimming. This features bi-lateral breathing, a change that makes the crawl stroke smoother and machine-like and that will undoubtedly result in new records as swimmers master the new style. Coach Tinsley of the Toronto Central is the originator of this radical improvement in swimming and his method will be demonstrated by some of the Toronto swim stars as part of the program for the meet. It should add up to an interesting evening.

Another Link Snaps

The suddent death in California of Clark Earls will arouse memoirs among old-time baseball fans in Peterborough. Earls who came to this city from Toronto at the turn of the century when the Stanley Piano Company began operations here was a member of the Peterborough senior baseball club for half a dozen years and added a lot of color to that well-known organization which had as its battery, Dan McCabe, the one-armed pitcher and Chris Graham. Clark did a bit of pitching but mostly patrolled the outfield and incidentally was more or less of a comedian with a dry turn of wit who helped to keep up the morale of the team and provided a lot of entertainment for the fans. As a player possibly his outstanding achievement was in a game on the old Cricket Field diamond on Driscoll Terrace, when he threw a batter out at first on what was apparently a clean single to centre field, about the only time on record that the feat had ever been accomplished here. Earls took the drive on the first bound and when the batter looked up as he jogged down to first he was horrified to find the first baseman catching the throw from Centrefielder Earls. The play was talked over for years after.

* * * * * *

Incidentally this column which happened to see that surprising throw has only seen the feat duplicated once in a good many years of reporting baseball. It happened down in Deloro in an intermediate O.B.A.A. playoff game between the Smelters team and Point Anne and the victim was none other than the veteran Soup Goyer, the Belleville player who was a member of the Point Anne club. Half way through the game Goyer lined what looked like a sure hit to centre field but Ada the Kingston boy playing in the gardens for Deloro scooped up the ball on the first hop, rifled a throw to first and the astounded Goyer was called out. "Soup" put up a strenuous complaint at the decision but admitted afterward that the ruling had been right. "They can't do a thing like that to a fellow without him at least making a kick," said the Belleville man after the game."

All The Stars Out

According to Bill Gaynon of the Niagara Falls Review the Peterborough C.V.S. will have to face a full Niagara Falls Collegiate team, with all their stars back in action when they meet the Cataract students in Toronto tomorrow morning in the final game of the Cossa championship. Says the Niagara Falls scribe: "Gord Dorst expects Frank Sheppard, his injured star, back on duty in next Saturday's Cossa final at Toronto when the locals oppose Peterborough Collegiate. The big backfielder has been a standout in all games of the locals, and his shoulder injury in a recent exhibition game against St. Kitts Collegiate, caused the home mentor considerable worry. Capable substitutes took the squad through the crucial series with Pt. Colborne, but the management is anxious to have all key men on duty when all the hips are on the line. With Sheppard back and all other regulars in sound shape, it will be a confident club that moves into the queen city this week-end, and without any knowledge of the Petes, local supporters are counting on plenty of opposition, reasoning that any team that wins a group must possess considerable power. However, the youthful band has ascended to the occasion at important moments, and the return of Shep has instilled additional hopes in both playing and supporting ranks."

* * * * * *

Montreal Canadiens took over the leadership of the N.H.L. last night by playing a 3-3 tie with the Red Wings at Detroit while Toronto Maple Leafs were absorbing a 5 to 1 trimming at the hands of the Bruins in Boston. The Flying Frenchmen have a one-point margin over the Day men as a result. The effective work of Herb Cain and Bill Cowley was too much for the Leafs in the Boston game. Cain fired two goals and Cowley rang the bell once and set up two more markers to pick up three points and move out into the N.H.L. scoring van. Boston scored the first four goals and Toronto did not register until Carr's unassisted marker half way through the last period robbed Harvey Bennett of a shutout. Flash Hollett scored for Detroit inside the last six minutes to save the day for the Red Wings who were down 3 to two until the former Boston star came through. At Chicago the Black Hawks who had Cully Dahlstrom back had a 4-4 draw with the New York Rangers.

Sporting Chili Con Carne: Two well-known Peterborough athletes arrived home yesterday on furlough. Sergt. Mick Magee of the R.C.A.F. who obtained his wings at Hagersville the other day is back on two months leave and then probably will be placed on reserve.... Robert 'Red' Creighton is back from Camp Shiloh, Manitoba, where he has been for some time....We are afraid that Mike Rodden of the Kingston Whig-Standard is not a faithful reader of this column....We called him to account a short time ago for not giving the correct score of the massacre in 1907 when Peterborough was beaten by M.A.A.A in the Dominion football finals. But Bre'er Rodden mentioned that regrettable affair again the other day and again gave the score as 76 to 2. For theluvaMike Mike we started that game off with a converted touchdown, the only one scored against the Winged Wheelers that season and believe it or not registered nine points altogether....Joe Desson who played a lot of defence for Merritton against the Petes in the senior B finals three seasons back has been suspended by the Eastern United States League for assaulting a referee...."Horse" has been playing with Philadelphia....No definite word has been received that Hamilton juniors will be here tomorrow so that it looks as if there is nothing doing in the way of local football at Riverside.

Cataracts Beat Lachine Team

SHAWINIGAN FALLS, Que., Nov. 24—(CP)—Shawinigan Falls Cataracts last night turned back Lachine Rapids 7-2 in an interprovincial hockey league game here and pulled into a third-place tie with the Rapids in the league standings.

Two goals each by Garand and Bisson and singles by MacIntyre, Williamson and Brodeur made up the Cataracts score, while Vallieres and Chapman scored for Lachine.

Due to transportation difficulties, the Lachine club was late in arriving here and started the game with only five players on hand. There were only five Rapids' men on the ice when Vallieres scored his goal.

Lineup and summaries.

Lachine: Goal, Lemaire; defence, Bean, Slater; center, Vallieres; wings, Gabanna, Bourgie; subs, Slater, Terriault, Morrow, Chapman, Piche, Deschamps, Ninijean.

Last Night's Stars

By The Canadian Press

Herbie Cain of Boston, who scored two goals as Bruins trounced Toronto Maple Leafs 5-1.

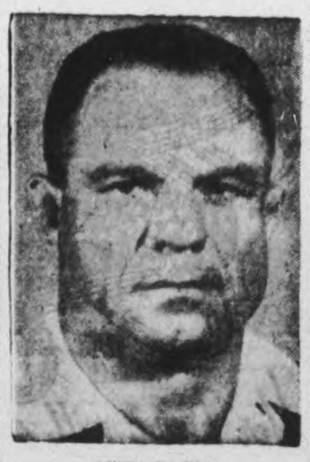
Steve Wochy of Detroit, who scored one goal and made the play for another as Red Wings held Montreal Canadiens to a 3-3 deadlock.

Clint Smith and Bill Mosienko, of Chicago, both scoring one goal and assisted in two as Black Hawks tied with New York Ragers 4-4.

Streetcar Skunk

KITCHENER, Nov. 24 (CP) — A strong, unmistabable odor pervaded a local streetcar the other day and passengers thought it couldn't be so—but it was. As one man, carrying a gun, left the car a dead skunk was seen protruding from his hunting bag.

Palermo Panther To Meet Whipper



JOHN KATAN

For weeks John Katan has been clamoring for a bout with Whipper Watson, claiming that he rather than the Whip is the logical British Empire champion. The Panther was howled down when he tried to fling a challenge from the ring in Toronto but Promoter Tunney has decided to give him his chance and he'll meet Watson in the main bout. On the supporting card Al B. Smith of Brooklyn clashes with the tough Dr. Len Hall and the rowdy Al Bunny Dunlop takes on a newcomer in Jumping Jim Wallace, a Chicago product. advt

SAINT? WELL — Disciple of Father Divine, Thomas Reed, 24-year-old Negro boxer known as Saint Thomas, is in jail in New York after accusing himself of about 50 holdups in Dayton, O., between 1936-41. Saint Thomas appeared at a police station, Bible tucked under his arm, and demanded to be put in jail, saying that "I'm a disciple of Father Divine and he told me to come here. These crimes are on my conscience." In his last bout, Saint Thomas was kayoed by Melio Bettina in two rounds.

Rankine Beaten In U.S. Event

BERWICK, Pa., Nov. 24—(AP)—Johnny Kelly, Acton, Mass., took his third consecutive Berwick Marathon title Thursday when he triumphed over Robert (Scotty) Rankine of the Royal Canadian Air Force in the nine-mile course.

Rankine, returning to Berwick after a seven-year absence, would have won his sixth Berwick title if he had been able to keep up with Kelly after the pair left the field and made it a two-man show.

All three Canadians in Thursday's event finished among the first five. Walter A. Fedorick of the Hamilton Olympic Club placed third and Ab Morton also of the RCAF, took fifth place.

Jack St. Clair, 17, of Philadelphia's Nativity Club, finished seventh to win the State prize.

Team honors went to the Sampson, N.Y. Naval Training Station's junior championship cross-country team.

Times of the first five:

Kelly, 49 mins. 20 secs.; Rankine, 40:35; Fedorick, 50:05; Simpson, 51; Morton, 51:25.

Referee Hurt In Hockey Melee

By The Canadian Press

Providence Reds edged out Indianapolis Capitals 4-2 last night in the only scheduled American Hockey League game, but the results failed to bring any change in the league standing. The game developed into a wild slug-fest and Rollie Forget suffered a lengthy scalp wound from the stick of Red Kane, Indianapolis defenceman.

In a flurry of sticks in the first period, Referee Rabbit McVeigh suffered a cut mouth and had to leave the ice for repairs. Five major penalties were handed out by the officials.

Bellemarre started the scoring for Providence but Pete Leswick evened the count two minutes later. Ron Hudson and Kemp gave the Reds a 3-1 lead before the end of the first frame. After a scoreless second period, Leswick added another for Indianapolis, before Courteau scored the final Providence goal.

Remember When—

Hamilton Cats Favorites To Take Title

HAMILTON, Nov. 24 — (CP) — When Hamilton Wildcats take the field Saturday against H.M.C.S. Donnacona of Montreal they will be gunning for their second Dominion championship and the 10th in the city's history.

When the Cats brought the Canadian title home last year it marked the first time since the old Tigers did it in 1932 that a Hamilton squad had turned the trick. Before that time, in 45 national finals since the first in 1892, seven Hamilton teams—those of '06, '07, '12, '13, '15, '28 and '29—came out on top. No Dominion title was declared in 1899, 1903-04 and from 1916-19.

Wildcats' performance, as in practically every contest in the last two years, will depend mainly on whether Joe Krol's backfield play is up to its usual superlative level. The fabulous Windsor native was far below par in his team's 6-0 defeat by Balmy Beach last week. He was just then recovering from an attack of the grippe, but expects to be in good shape for the title struggle.

Only name missing from the Cats' starting lineup will be that of Joe Soyka, good halfback who was injured last Saturday.

Coach Eddie McLean's charges will be heavy favorites to take the Montreal team, which went through its Quebec Rugby Football Union schedule unbeaten but lost to the University of Western Ontario in exhibition and went under 12-1 to Toronto Navy last week in a bid for the Canadian Navy championship.

The sailors have lost the services of inside Don Loney, who has been posted to H.M.C.S. Cornwallis at Deep Brook, N.S. Coach Glen Brown indicates he will rely on a passing attack in the attempt to wrest the Dominion crown from Hamilton.

The Sports Round-Up

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.
Associated Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK, Nov. 24 (AP) — Amateur Night . . . Latest report on the off-again-on-again manoeuvres about bringing Gunder Haegg and Arne Anderson, the Swedish speedsters, to the United States this winter is that they're both open to persuasion . . . Gunder Haegg has escaped from Sture Olsson, the Malmoe haberdasher who objected to losing his best tie salesman during the Christmas rush, into the army . . . now the Swedish Athletic Association hopes to postpone his military service for the projected tour . . . Next step is to convince Andersson, who says "not even Per Albin Hansson" (the Swedish Prime Minister) can get him to travel without his wife, that it won't be so bad after all . . . Meanwhile American track fans probably are asking "how much are those guys holding out for?"

Now that Jimmy Crowley has joined Elmer Layden in the ranks of pro football commissioners, the other two projected pro leagues should know where to look for their head men . . . and the four horsemen likely would find the club owners as stubborn as seven mules . . . Since Bryan Hextall can't leave Saskatchewan to play hockey for the Rangers this winter, don't be surprised if he turns up with some "amateur" club out there.

By The Canadian Press

Colorful Sam Snead, on the comeback trail of big-time golf after 26 months' service in the United States Navy, headed the field today as a crack contingent of pros and amateurs teed off in the second round of the 72-hole Portland Open. The Hot Springs, Va., powerhouse thrilled a gallery of more than 2,500 when he clubbed over the rain-soaked Portland Golf Club course with a two-under-par 70 yesterday.

Snead's initial effort gave him a one-stroke edge over Mike Turnesa, White Plains, N.Y., who finishd with a 71 Byron Nelson, former National Open and P.G.A. champion, biggest money winner of the year, had a first round of 73. He tied with Denny Shute, Akron, O., veteran.

Mrs. J. B. Burnstein's Okana captured yesterday's $25,000 Argonaut Handicap at Hollywood Park, Inglewood, Calif., in a field of 14 to make the California thoroughbred's record 10 wins in 16 starts this year. Marriage, the favorite, could only finish seventh.

Former manager of Battling Siki who kayoed Georges Carpentier for the world's light-heavyweight title in 1922, Robert (Papa) Levy died from a heart attack in New York yesterday. The 71-year-old veteran had spent 25 years in boxing and baseball.

Setting the pace all the way, Jimmy Rafferty of the New York Athletic Club yesterday set a new U.S. amateur recoord of 31.38 in winning the 10,000-metre road race at Baltimore, Md. The time was more than two minutes better than the old mark.

Prior to the 55th annual meeting of the Ontario Hockey Association here Saturday, the executive meeting will meet tonight, it was announced yesterday. A new schedule in the Junior "A" series will be drawn up owing to the withdrawal of the Hamilton Club and will be announced next week.

Canadiens Win Top Place Tying Detroit

By ERIC SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Montreal Canadiens, last year's Stanley Cup champions, last night took over the leadership of the National Hockey League for the first time this season by holding Detroit Red Wings to a 3-3 tie at the Border City while Toronto Maple Leafs, early-season pace-setters, were trounced 5-1 by Bruins at Boston.

In a third mid-week game, the cellar-dwelling Chicago Black Hawks held New York Rangers to a 4-4 draw.

Canadiens, who won the championship with ease last season, now hold a one-point lead over Toronto and a five-point margin over Detroit.

Canadiens had to come from behind twice last night and then after taking a 3-2 lead Bill (Flash) Hollett netted to tie the match.

Playing before a crowd of 12,588, the Wings sailed in front early in the first period on Carl Liscombe's goal which Hector (Toe) Blake matched before the session ended. Rookie Steve Wochy slipped a 15-foot backhand shot past goalie Bill Durnan for the only counter of the sandwich period. Maurice Richard squared things again in the first minute of the final period and Dutch Hiller put Canadiens on top before the half-way mark.

In two previous meetings this season Montreal took the Wings 3-2 both times.

Toronto was outplayed by a wide margin as the Bruins strengthened their hold on fourth place.

Leafs were without the services of their ace winger, Dave (Sweeney) Schriner and dressed only 11 players.

A goal by Lorne Carr after the 10-minute mark of the third period robbed Rookie Goalie Harvey Bennett of the first shutout of the league this year

Bruins were paced by their top line of Veteran Herbie Cain, who netted twice, Bill Cowley, who continued his drive for the league's top scoring honors by collecting a goal and two assists to give him 21 points, and Bill Jennings, who assisted on Cain's first goal. Other Boston marksmen were Defenceman Pat Egan and Aubrey (Dt) Clapper

Rangers seldom took advantage of their opportunities and although they took the lead twice were unable to beat the Hawks.

Chicago's top line of Smith-Mosienko-Horeck each scored once and Bill Thoms got the other.

Clint Smith got the first goal of the game but Joe Shack tied it up and Demarco gave Rangers a 2-1 lead going into the second period. Bill Mosienko and Thoms netted in the middle stanza before Fred Thurier again evened the score and Ott Heller sent New York in front for the second time. Pete Horeck whipped in the only counter of the third period.

Hockey's Big Seven

By The Canadian Press

Bill Cowley, great play-making centre for Boston Bruins, added three points last night to his leading 18 points in hockey's big seven as Boston defeated Toronto 5-1. Cowley moved three points ahead of Gus Bodnar of Toronto, who was held scoreless. Toe Blake of Canadiens moved up to second position by collecting two points, edging out to fourth place Dave (Sweeney) Schriner of Toronto, who did not play. Other scoring leaders collected one to three points.

	G.	A.	Pts.
Cowley, Boston	7	14	21
Blake, Canaiens	9	9	18
Bodnar, Toronto	4	14	18
Schriner, Toronto	11	6	17

TORONTO, Nov. 24 — (CP). — The Barber of Seville had nothing on the Barber of Vancouver. A versatile gentleman by the name of Alexander Boytzun, barber by trade and former Canadian middleweight wrestling champ, gave a violin recital on the coast the other day, throwing in a few sleight-of-hand tricks and acrobatics for good measure....We haven't been able to find out where the rest of the quartette is.

Puckish puzzle:

Everyone has been puzzling over that incident in a City League hockey game at Windsor, Ont., when a puck split—one-half going into the net and the other half sticking in the goalie's pads. Jack Adams of Detroit Red Wings, a member of the N.H.L. Rules Committee, thinks it wasn't a goal. Giving his unofficial opinion, Adams pointed out the rule says a goal is scored only when the puck enters the goal and goes "entirely" over the red line between the posts. The puck in question certainly didn't go over the line entirely—not by half.

Chatter:

Mike Rodden, sports editor of the Kingston Whig-Standard, hockey and football official, etc., isn't convinced Toronto Leafs' Bill Ezinicki is really a rough character. Mike says he refereed 18 games last year in which Ezinicki played, and almost as many the year before, but didn't see him "commit one major offence." At times he was "chippy" in his tactics....This is real community spirit: Sport fans in Peterborough, Ont., already have raised more than $205,000 for a memorial centre and community sport grounds......Horse race followers near Windsor, Ont., are interested in that Michigan track dispute. Racing has been declared a non-legitimate business by the judge, with threatened closing of tracks in the State. If that happened, racing interests might move across the border into Canada, with beneficial results for the Dominion Treasury.....Return of University of Toronto to senior puck circles restores still another famous old name to the game.

Falcon Players Lead Scorers

TORONTO, Nov. 24.—(CP). — Laurie Peterson and Douglas McMurdy of the St. Catharines Falcons Junior 'A' team share first spot in the scoring list released by the Ontario Association to-day. Both Falcons garnered five points in the opening game of the season against Galt, in which the St. Kitts squad scored a 10-4 victory.

Peterson tallied four times and picked up an assist, while his teammate was in on five goals. Denny of Oshawa Generals and Blute of St. Michael's are tied for the next position with four points apiece.

In the Senior 'A' O.H.A. series, the first game of the schedule saw the St. Catarines sextet edge out Staffords, 3-2. Scoring honors are divided between Umbro Concessi of the Saints and Doc Dafoe of the Toronto Staffords, each have nicked two markers in the contest.

In the Junior standings the Memorial Cup holders, Oshawa Generals, top the eastern group, while Falcons are atop the western group.

KITCHENER, Nov. 24 — Both winners of the Granite Club of Kitchener bonspiel last year survived the first draw as the 11th annual event entered its fourth day Thursday. Then they met in the second round.

W. E. Govenlock's Forest entry, present holders of the Mutual Life Trophy, emblematic of the bonspiel championship, was eliminated by A. C. Gardiner's rink, 1943 consolation champions.

Through his victory in the first draw, Gardiner lost an opportunity to defend his B. F. Goodrich Trophy. However, after eliminating the Govenlock foursome, he vanquished a Chatham quartet to qualify for Friday's final games.

Health Programs Require No Restrictions

MONTREAL, Nov. 24 — (CP) — Health should be regarded as "a state of well-being, affording a feeling of security and a sense of happiness" and a health program should not be restricted to means of avoiding obvious symptoms of disease, George A. S. Nairn of Toronto told the Health League of Canada today.

In an address, prepared for delivery at a luncheon gathering during the 25th annual meeting of the League, the president of Lever Brothers (Canada) said the more obvious physical hazards of the new industrial way of life now were well understood and guarded against.

"But how to maintain and develop mental and emotional balance and well-being throughout the industrial life of the community is the problem of which we are just beginning to become conscious," he said.

"Some people feel that this is a field in which the state either has taken the necessary action or should do so. It is a curious thing that the people who give voice to that argument are often the most vehement exponents of free enterprise at any rate in words.

"Surely the essence of enterprise is that industry does not wait for the state. Similarly, any given industry need not wait for all the rest of industry to get going. Each of us, whether as individual or companies, is free to proceed on our own in any direction which we deem to be right or proper."

Re-establishment of employees who have developed new talent and aptitudes while in the armed forces is one of the responsibilities of industry in promoting mental health, he said.

"My fiancee won't ride a bus in her wedding dress," the soldier lamented.

H. J. Symington Says Draft Essential

By C. B. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

CHICAGO, Nov. 24 (CP)—Canada, the United States and the United Kingdom, big three of the International Civil Aviation Conference, today resumed the private negotiations which have occupied them nearly two weeks.

They were making renewed efforts to save the conference from what many fear will be failure to achieve the prime purpose which brought delegates from 54 countries here Nov. 1.

This renewal of effort was due to the brief but eloquent appeal made at a plenary session Wednesday by Canada's H. J. Symington and ably supported by Mayor La Guardia of New York.

Both warned that failure to complete a draft convention would be a disappointment to the people of the world and a blow to international co-operation.

Their appeals, and those of other delegation members who supported them, came after Adolph A. Berle, United States delegation leader, and Viscount Swinton, head of the British group, had virtually admitted failure to agree.

That would mean leaving to a proposed interim organization the task of seeking to bring about agreement on a permanent convention.

It would evade taking any stand at the moment on the British proposal to establish strict international control over use of the international airways, the Canadian plan to define the air "freedoms" and set up international control of competition, and the American plan of open competition without delegating any authority to an international body.

Canada's role in the big-three parleys, on which the whole conference has been waiting, is to seek to bring the extreme American and British views together in a compromise that might be offered for general acceptance.

Red Cross Shipped Overseas $16,000,000 Of Suplies

A large portion of those whose homes have been destroyed or damaged in Britain by bombs are entirely dependent for new clothing from Canada because it is almost impossible to replace lost clothing in Britain itself.

It may be years ere British mills are able to turn out all the requirements of people over there. Even if the war were over now the need for Red Cross work rooms across Canada will continue to be just as great.

The need for additional women volunteers also is very great indeed at the present time.

The need for blood plasma is greater and more urgent than ever before. Upon the number of volunteers in Canada in the next few weeks may hang the lives of many young Canadians overseas. Five thousand donors a day are needed throughout Canada.

Of all the supplies sent overseas by the Canadian Red Cross from the beginning of the war the total loss by enemy action was only about one per cent. Since the spring of 1940 the approximate value of supplies sent overseas from Canada was $16,000,000.

These were some of the highlights of a report made to the Central Council of the Canadian Red Cross Society in Toronto by Premier George Drew on his recent overseas visit.

"No part of our whole war effort deserves higher praise than does the work of the Red Cross Society," said Premier Drew. "I visited the Red Cross headquarters in London and saw every part of the extremely efficient organization under the direction of Major-General Basil Price. Many Canadian women who have been working as volunteers with the Red Cross Society overseas for several years are doing one of the finest jobs of the whole war in handling the supplies and arranging distribution to the many places where they go.

In Front Line

"Those Canadians who have been working at the Canadian Red Cross headquarters in London have really been in the front line. During the heavy attacks by robot bombs last summer many fell in their neighborhood, and windows of their building were on more than one occasion blown in, but their work went on without interruption and with hardly the loss of a single working day on the part of any of the members of the staff although many of them were brought in direct contact with the effect of the bombing in other parts of London where they were living. It is sufficient to say that every one of them behaved like real soldiers.

"At the time I visited the Red Cross building in London they had on hand stores with an approximate value of two and a half million dollars."

The women of the Canadian Red Cross Corps are doing a wide variety of extremely important tasks. The overseas detachment now numbers over 40 girls in uniform. About 40 are serving at the Ontario Services Club. They were serving more than 1,200 meals a day there.

A number of members of the corps are also serving in excellent Services Club maintained by British Columbia. There are also the four fine Maple Leaf Clubs in London operated by the Canadian Red Cross.

Working Day, Night

Other members drive ambulances and at times are working steadily night and day driving the wounded back from ports of embarkation to the hospitals in England. Others work directly in the hospitals. There are about 50 members in France and Italy driving ambulances, providing casualties with necessary supplies, and generally doing all those human and personal things which mean so much to those who have suffered in battle.

Dressings for the wounded, woollen comforts of all kinds for men facing a severe winter in France, Italy and elsewhere are needed more than ever before in greater numbers; It is therefore a matter of very real concern that there has been a falling off of volunteers in the work rooms of the Red Cross throughout Canada. It would seem that this situation is the result of over-optimism about the end of the war.

In addition to the much higher casualties and more severe winter conditions than have previously been faced, there have also been enormous civilian casualties in Britain and a great loss of clothing in bombed houses which it is almost impossible to replace from Britain itself.

"I have seen men literally brought back from almost certain death by the plasma flowing into their veins from the supplies sent from Canada. Thousands of our young men are alive today only because of the supply of plasma that was immediately available. This, I think, is the most important contribution those at home can make.

"It is unthinkable that any young men whose lives will depend upon adequate and immediate supplies should lose their lives because of our failure here at home. Thousands of volunteers are needed at the Red Cross Blood Donors' Clinics and needed right away if we are to meet the demand for these vital supplies.

"I was in Paris a short time after it was freed and when I visited the civilian internment camp at St. Denis I had a chance to talk to many of those who had been interned there for more than four years and had not yet been moved. I saw some of the Canadian Red Cross parcels being used, and everyone to whom I spoke had the highest praise for what we had done and said without reservation that ours were the best boxes received from anywhere."

War—4 Years Ago

By The Canadian Press

NOV. 24, 1940—Bristol suffered severe, concentrated night bombing. R.A.F. plastered Hamburg, Boulogne, Calais, Brest and Lorient. First Canadian graduates of Empire Air Training Plan arrived in England. Slovakia followed Rumanian in signing with Axis powers. Viscount Craigavon, Prime Minister of Northern Ireland, died.

Inspector Lauds Teachers In Rural Areas

Rural school teachers of the Peterborough district were warmly commended by R. F. Downey, Inspector, for their activities and leadership in various public enterprises in his address at the first meeting here of the Teachers' Institute since 1940.

Their leadership in promoting the sale of War Savings Stamps, collecting milkweed pods, improvement of school grounds was all constructive, timely and needed doing, Mr. Downey said, and best of all they were projects well done. He recommended to them further efforts in assisting the Navy League, Junior Red Cross, and in the welfare organizations assisting crippled children.

One hundred teachers from the inspectorates Mr. Downey, and F. B. Smitheram, who has succeeded L. W. Copp, assembled Wednesday at the Normal School with E. G. Sloan, Principal of Lakefield Public School, presiding.

Miss Olga Johnston, Dean of Women at Peterborough Normal School, spoke on home economics in the rural school. She said that Home Economics is much broader than merely Cooking and Sewing and gives prominence to such related topics as Nutrition, Selection and Care of Food, Preparation of Food, Selection and Care of Clothing, Grooming, How to talk to People, Principles of Happy Home Life. Miss Johnston outlined practical ways in which teachers could practice even in poorly equipped schools those principles which are the basis of happy living. Quoting an eminent psychologist Miss Johnston said: "The child who has a happy home life never becomes a mental patient."

She advocated the practice of serving one hot dish during the school lunch hour and demonstrated simple ways of doing so.

"Above all, make rural schools happy, attractive places by adopting those basic principles of good housekeeping," she said.

Social Studies

F. B. Smitheram defined geography as the study of social functions exhibited in space and history as the study of social growth through time.

"The teaching of history and geography as sources of useful information has not prevented wars, depressions, nor social injustices. In fact, erroneous ideas arising from widespread acceptance of the static view of geography has hindered nations from making adequate preparation against national dangers.

"Two wars in a single generation have brought home the need for a more adequate form of social education. Social Studies is the school's answer. As such, Social Studies is a true science, the purpose of which is to discover those ascertainable fundamental verities which govern man's activities.

"To discover these principles which make community living possible demands teaching procedures more vital than having children retell the teacher's account, or fill their notebooks with copies of the same note, or fill in blanks in hectographed sheets.

'It is the prime function of the school to bring about an understanding and the practice of those simple principles which make successful community living possible. Only thus can be established a world order which is not depotism or a world freedom which is not license."

K. O. Birken, M.A. — Master, at Peterborough Normal School — conducted the most popular and most helpful feature of the convention: From a list of question submitted by the teachers Mr. Birken suggested ways of meeting successfully many of the perplexing situations that arise. Many problems that are associated with the "problem child" might be avoided if that child were considered as "a pupil with one or more unsolved personal problems."

"Determine the child's interests and abilities and teach him from there," he advised.

L. W. Copp, B.A. — Master, at the Normal School, defined the problem of teaching the child to read as that of teaching him how to get the idea conveyed by the printed symbols.

From his experience as a teacher, and his observations as an Inspector of Public Schools, he described practical, successful procedures whereby primary pupils may be given purposeful reading activities.

"There is little value in having him 'read over his lesson' unless, through correlation with other subjects or by providing some new problem to solve, the pupil has an attainable purpose for reading."

E. H. McKone, M.A. — Principal of Normal School, welcomed the teachers to the Normal School. "Teachers do not see each other frequently enough. They spend too much time in classrooms or elsewhere. Conventions are well worthwhile if they do nothing else than give teachers an opportunity for that mental refreshment that is gained by associating with other teachers."

Federation Guests

Miss N. Hackett, Toronto, and F. J. Wood, Lindsay, represented the Ontario Teachers' Federation. Miss Hackett outlined the provisions of the recently enacted Teaching Profession Act and the Regulations made under it. Mr. Wood discussed the responsibilities resting upon the teachers and outlined what Federation proposes to accomplish. He reminded the teachers that Federation activities had its birth in the city of Peterborough, and that, though legal status had now been attained, the real work of the Teachers' Federation was just beginning.

Q. S. McKinney, Instructor in Music at P.N.S., assisted by Lewis Bird, Principal Queen Elizabeth School, explained the facilities provided by the National Film Board now available through the film library established at the Peterborough Normal School and demonstrated the teaching values of Sound Films.

Officers elected were: Honorary Presidents: E. H. McKone, M.A., B. Paed.; Inspector R. F. Downey, B.A., B. Paed.; Inspector F. B. Smitheram, B.A.; president, George E. Munro, Peterborough; vice-presidents, Mrs. R. Pakenham, Norwood; sec.-treas., Ezra Ball, Bridgenorth; executive committee: Each local Teachers' Group is to elect one member.

ON CORVETTE PETERBOROUGH — LSBA Harry H. Hunter (Left) and L.Sig. Russel Curtis (Right) are serving on HMCS Peterborough. LSBA Hunter is the son of Mrs. Richard Hunter and the late Richard Hunter of Lakefield. He served for 2½ years in the Army at the Training Centre in Peterborough under Capt. Hewitt, and has spent 2½ years in the Navy. His brother-in-law, L.Sig. Curtis, is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Curtis, Downie street. He has been in the Navy three years and had considerable action while serving on the Chambly. LSBA Hunter's wife is residing in Lakefield with his mother, and she was formerly with the CWAC. Mrs. R. Curtis, formerly Margaret Hunter, lives at 610 Bethune street.

Civic Nominations Are Scheduled For This Evening In City Hall

Municipal nominations at the City Hall to-night between 7:30 and 8:30 are a departure from Peterborough procedure presumably from the incorporation of the town almost a century ago.

The Council this year decided to advance election day from January 1 to December 4 partly in the expectation of stimulating increased interest in the affairs of the city. Possibly that end may be substantially accomplished in the next ten days, but so far it has not been indicated in any pre-nominations gossip.

City Clerk Outram takes charge of the proceedings from 7:30 o'clock for the statutory hour, and beyond that for the public meeting to hear nominees who may wish to address the ratepayers and declare their intentions in the approaching elections.

Nominations will be received for the office of Mayor, five aldermen, four members of the Board of Education, and one seat on the Utilities Commission.

Expiring terms are those of Mayor Hamilton, the mayoralty in Peterborough is restricted to one year, although five aldermen are elected for two years. Members of the aldermanic board whose two-year terms are expiring are: Aldermen Bradburn, Sullivan, Sands, Dutton and Swanston.

The four trustees of Peterborough's Public Schools and Collegiate Institute and Vocational School who have the choice of retiring or accepting re-nomination are H. G. Walker, Dr. C. M. Scott, J. Fred Reed, and Alex Sollitt.

And for the Utilities Commission the three-year term of Fred Hills is now nearing its end.

MISS ALVERETTA GASKINS

Word has been received by Mrs. Stanley Matchett, 173 Hunter street E., of the death of her niece, Miss Alveretta (Retta) Gaskins of Yonkers, N.Y., after a short illness.

Miss Gaskins was born in Peterborough, and attended East Ward School, Peterborough Collegiate, and Peterborough Normal School. She moved with her parents to New Jersey in 1916, and for many years, taught school in New York City.

Eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Gaskins, of Yonkers, New York, she leaves to mourn her loss beside her parents, one sister, Mrs. Stewart Jacobs, of Atlantic City, N.J., and an aunt, Mrs. E. Scott, Maria street, Peterborough.

Warkworth Soldier Said Dangerously Ill

WARKWORTH, Nov. 24—(ENS). — Gnr. William Puddaphatt, who was reported wounded Thursday is now reported to be dangerously ill. his wife has been notified. He was wounded November 15 while with an anti-tank regiment.

Gnr. Puddephatt is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Puddephatt, Codrington.

2 Men Are Fined For Leaving Jobs

On a charge of having walked out on the William A. Curry Lumber Company of Eagle Lake without notice of separation terminating employment, Valmor Mansfield and Orlo Brandon, of Kinmount, were each fined $15 and costs, amounting to $19.60, by Magistrate Gee at Haliburton Thursday.

The action was directed by the Regional Enforcement Office of Selective Service, Toronto, which was represented by R. E. Slade, with L. A. Grant, of Peterborough.

A. T. Lacey, Lindsay, counsel for Selective Service, recommended a light penalty in view of the fact that these were the first instances in the Haliburton district of quitting work without permission. Magistrate Gee agreed in imposing the fine, but said he hoped it would be a warning to others, and that if any cases came before him in future he would have to consider a jail sentence.

Refreshment Booth Robbed During Night

The refreshment booth of John J. Dennie, 405 George street south, was broken into during Thursday night and cigarettes valued at $8 and $1 in cash were stolen.

Entrance to the place was obtained by ripping off a sign that had been used to close a window.

The automatic record-player in the booth was broken but no money was taken. However about a dollar in change was obtained from a pinball machine and a carton of cigarettes and some loose packets were carried off.

Milk Distributors

TORONTO, Nov. 24.—(CP).—Officer of the Ontario Milk Distributors' Association were elected yesterday at the annual meeting of the Association here. K. D. Muncrieff of Kingston, was named president. The other officers included M. Hart, Oshawa, and V. Abercrombie, Sudbury, vice-presidents.

Are You Aware Of The Fact?

That while the new Civic Hospital is to cost approximately $1,400,000 of which the ratepayers are only being asked to provide $600,000, for 50 years the residents of Peterborough have received hospitalization at practically no cost to the ratepayers, and in that period more than $1,200,000 has been given to Nicholls Hospital from the Nicholls Estate.

That in spite of this great benevolence Peterborough is desperately in need of a new hospital. The present building is out of date, inadequate and uneconomical. Patients are crowded together, babies are isolated in bathrooms for want of room, revealing a condition that should not be permitted in this day and age.

Personal Gifts Give Cheer For Christmas

There is nothing just so indicative of the spirit of the whole, when many people in one community or sphere of influence take a personal interest in any particular movement being carried on in their midst for the good of other people far away, and their doing so must naturally reflect to the credit of everybody whether they have participated or not.

It might be said that it has really been this outstanding attribute of personal interest on the part of a great many people hereabouts, that has enabled the Peterborough and District British War Victims' Fund to carry on its good work day by day, for almost four years now, and resulted in the splendid sum of £18,000 having been raised and sent over to Britain.

To show just how big a part this personal interest has played in the work that the fund carries on, today sees the 19th list of purely personal gifts that has been acknowledged since the middle of last July, the most recent one prior to this one, having appeared only just one week ago today.

Because this personal interest cannot help but be one that emanates from the hearts of those who have assisted, and for which there is no pecuniary reward, the writer feels that this might be an appropriate time to give the text verbatim of a letter received from a 12-year-old boy, who had participated in the joy that last year's Christmas donation gave to large numbers of children in Britain, passing on to them what might prove to be some joy, from the fact that others were made very happy through their kind thoughts on their behalf.

Robert Streek of the New End School, Hampstead, London NW.3, writes thus, Dear Sir: "At Christmas time we had a great surprise. Usually Christmas is a jolly time, but were not expecting to be as jolly as usual this Christmas, what with rations and one thing with another.

Imagine our surprise when we were told that there would be a tea party for us, and that it was for all of us and not only the babies. It turned out to be a Canadian Party and very nice too. But Canada is 3,000 miles from Hampstead, and so I should like to tell you to tell those kind thoughtful people "A big thank you please' if you will.

When I am grown up it may be that I shall be able to go and see Canada for myself. It must be a fine country where such good people live, and worth going a long way to see. That was a real slap up tea party, Christmas tree, toys, cake, biscuits fruit tarts, jellies and so on: a real treat."

Children have an apt way of expressing their thoughts, and this lad is typical of thousands who has had occasion to think in the highest terms possible of the good that people in these parts have done, which in itself is worthy of the sacrifice that has been made in an individual way to help them.

Led by His Honor Judge S. L. Smoke, a fine list of personal gifts appears today, all of whom can take the above letter in a personal way, since for a large part they had a share in last year's Christmas donation, besides having contributed (as may be noted) on many other previous occasions to help the blessed work the fund carries on.

Week's Remand Given To Bicycle Thief

John Foster Thompson, Western avenue, entered a plea of guilty in police court this morning to a charge of having stolen a bicycle from Harry Bothnik, and at the request of Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., was remanded for a week for sentence.

"That will give you a chance to get his record," commented Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C. "This man's face is familiar to me."

Joseph Norman Brick, 18, Donegal street, was charged with having assaulted Hum Horning early this morning on George street, occasioning actual bodily harm. The complainant appeared in court with his head swathed in a bandage.

Brick asked for an adjournment when the charge was read, but was informed that he would be remanded in custody until Monday. Bail was fixed at $500.

Auto Seized

TORONTO, Nov. 24 — (CP). — Ontario Provincial Police said last night they had seized an automobile at Thornhill, Ont., believed to be the one which Wednesday night struck and killed two suburban Doncaster boys, Henry Wolfreys and Morris Code. There have been no arrests.

AT CLINTON—A former Quaker Oats employee, LAC David Percy Drain, is now stationed at Clinton. His wife and daughter are living at 146 Hunter street East, and his mother, a native of Warsaw, lives on Park Hill road. His father, the late David Drain, died some years ago. LAC Drain has been in the RCAF for 18 months, and a brother, Ivan Drain, is also in the Air Force.

Chemong Bridge Deputation Sees Minister

As a post-war project of increasing interest and necessity to the north-western area of the county, and especially to the Township of Ennismore and beyond to Bobcaygeon and north to Kinmount, the floating bridge on Chemong Lake was introduced to the Hon. George Doucette, Minister of Highways, by a Peterborough deputation to Toronto on Thursday.

Reeves Mather and Gifford of the County Council, D. A. Maciver, county engineer, Alderman R. S. Cotton representing the City Council, and S. J. Rowe of the Allied Labor Council, Alex Sollitt of the Motor League, and J. J. Dorris of the Chamber of Commerce, made up the deputation, which was met in Toronto by Harold Scott, M.P.P., and taken under his wing.

Mr. Doucette cordially welcomed the Peterborough visitors and promised not only that consideration would be given to the project by his Department, but that soundings would be made as early as possible. He also said that 75 per cent of the cost of constructing such bridges is borne by the Department.

The Peterborough men also called on Hon. Dana Porter, Minister of Planning and Rehabilitation.

Link With Past Leaves Village Of Roseneath

ALDERVILLE, Nov. 24.—Another link with the past is being broken when Mrs. Isabelle Mason, who has sold her modern residence in Roseneath to A. J. Campbell, moves to Toronto.

Mrs. Mason and her late husband, W. J. E. Mason, who died in Jan., 1942, moved to Roseneath 37 years ago. Only four of the inhibitants at that time now reside in Roseneath. They are: Mrs. Annie Lapp, M. McMillan, E. Harvey and A. Shearer.

The Union bank stood where the present post office is but during the past war the Union Bank was taken over by the Royal Bank and removed to its present premises. The Union Bank had as its first manager James Stewart, succeeded by Mr. Theaker and Mr Moore. It was during Mr. Moore's tenure of office that the Royal Bank took over the Union Bank.

The Roseneath fair president at that time was George Dawe, C. Crown, vice-president, and C. D. Harper secretary. Mr. Mason, a director and a contractor drew plans and specifications and erected all the fine buildings on the fair grounds. The bandstand was the first to be erected. He used his influence to secure hydro in the community and was the first to have the Bell and rural telephone exchange in the village. Mrs. Mason leaves to resume her course in the Wayne School of Nursing in Toronto.

Ken S. Smylie Heads Kinsmen Club

Ken. S. Smylie was elected president of the Peterborough Kinsmen Club for the new term, at the election of officers meeting Thursday evening in the Empress Hotel. He succeeds Arthur Lewis.

Other officers elected were: Forest Warren, first vice-president; Roy Lewis, second vice-president; A. Bourne, treasurer; J. Archibald, secretary; Stuart Munro, registrar; and James King, Gordon Langhorne, Harley Weir, William Osbourne and John Nornabell, board of directors.

Alderman Sands spoke to the Club on the new civic hospital project, outlining the plans and details of the new building.

During the meeting, the club members unanimously voted to grant permission to the city council hospital committee to use the club's endorsement in their advertising. It was further resolved that the Kinsmen members would do everything in their power to see that voters exercise their franchise December 4.

Wife Testifies She Was Beaten

Lawrence Dennie, 52 Alfred street was allowed to go on suspended sentence in police court this morning after he had pleaded guilty to beating his wife, Marie Dennie.

Conditions of the sentence are that he is to go to work and support his wife and two children and that he is not to attack her again.

Mrs. Dennie, in giving evidence this morning, said that there had been an argument in their home and that her husband had pushed her down, struck her a number of times on her breast and shoulder and then had kicked her on the legs.

She said that it was the first time her husband had struck her.

In answer to a question from Crown Attorney McElderry Mrs. Dennie said that her husband had only worked three days in the last ten weeks.

Mrs. Dorothy Maguire, police matron, said that she had examined Mrs. Dennie and had found that her shoulders were bruised, her knees black and blue, and her shins and ankle bruised.

In the witness box Dennie said that he had an argument with his wife and had pushed her but denied that he had struck her.

"I hardly know what to do with this man," said Magistrate Langley. "It is his first offence and his wife says this is the first time he has has struck her. I think that if he goes on a bond to go to work and to refrain from assaulting her I'll let him go on suspended sentence."

Millbrook Couple Observe Golden Wedding

MILLBROOK, Nov. 24—(ENS)—Mr. and Mrs. George Fair, life-long residents of Cavan and Millbrook, quietly observed their golden wedding anniversary, a gathering in their honor being held at the family homestead, Second Line, Cavan, which included only immediate relatives, and for which their son and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Fair, and their daughter, Miss Anna Fair, were host and hostesses.

Since the bride and groom who have just passed their fiftieth milestone are not in robust health, the circle of guests was limited, more than twenty sitting down at 7 p.m. to dinner, the table being lace-covered and centred with a handsome wedding-cake flanked on either side with golden candles in silver holders. Among the floral decorations were large pansies, golden centred, picked that very day in the flower garden of the homestead, where Mr. Fair was born and brought up, and where he had lived his entire life until moving to Millbrook six years ago.

Married In Cavan

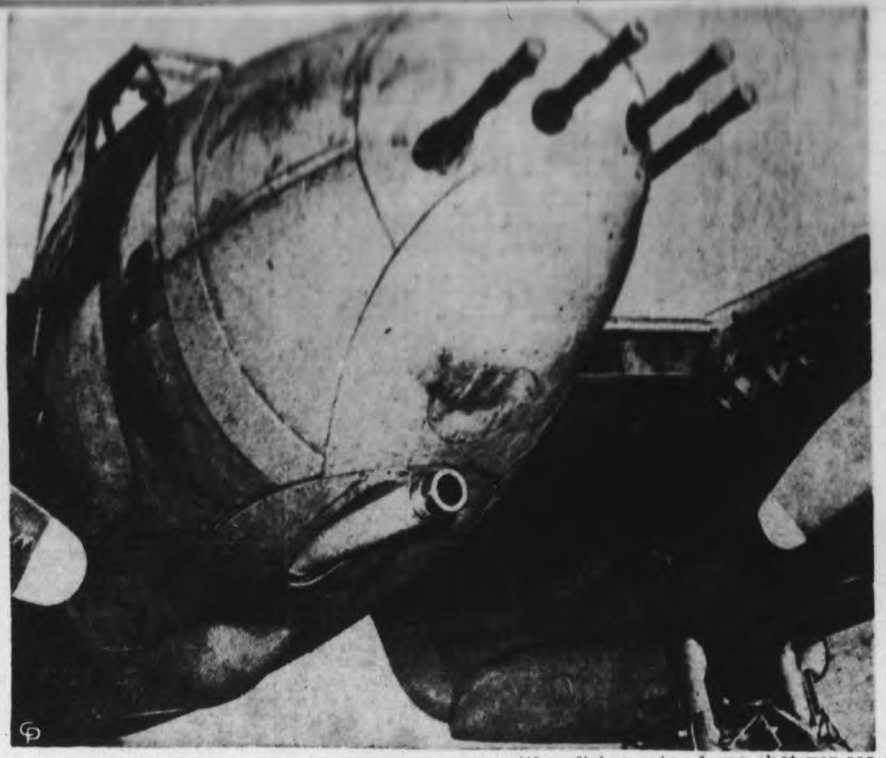
Mr. and Mrs. Fair were married at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Whyte, Second Line, Cavan, by the late Venerable Archdeacon Allen, who, following his usual custom, gave the bride, Annie Whyte, a prayer book, Mrs. Allen's gift being a china plate, still in use in the Fair home. Robert McCamus was groomsman, and the bride's sister, Miss Margaret Whyte, now living in New York state, was bridesmaid.

Following the wedding anniversary dinner, Robert McCamus acted as chairman, proposing the toast to the bride and groom of half a century, to which Mr. Fair replied. By special request of Mr. and Mrs. Fair no elaborate gifts were prepared for them, and Mrs. L. W. Smith, on behalf of those present, presented a sheaf of yellow roses. A number of the guests, who were all nieces and nephews, spoke of the fine qualities of citizenship exemplified in the lives of the guests of honor.

Six years ago, when their son, Howard Fair, married, Mr. and Mrs. Fair turned over the farm homestead to the young couple, and moved to Millbrook, continuing ever since to reside in the Whyte home, King street east, where Miss Margaret Whyte had previously been living for some years. The guests for the anniversary party were from Peterborough, Millbrook, Bailieboro, and other points in the surrounding countryside.

Can Wear Ties

LONDON, Nov. 24.—(CP Cable.)—Non-commissioned officers and men of the Canadian army overseas now are permitted to wear shirts and ties and to leave the top button of their battledress tunic undone. The regulations are applicable to men on leave, after duty hours, and office workers.



NEW BIG-GUN MOSQUITO—POWERFUL RAF WEAPON—Seen in flight in England is the new version of the RAF's famous Mosquito, the Mark XVIII, which carries a six-pounder gun slung beneath the fuselage, with a firing rate of one shot per second. The use of this new plane has been so effective against U-boats that the Nazi underseas craft now need an escort of flak ships. The Mosquito also carries four .303 machine-guns.

OUSTED BY CHIANG—Major victim of a wholesale cabinet "purge" by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, which resulted in the removal of six of China's top-ranking cabinet members, was Gen. Ho Ying Chin, above, who was ousted as Minister of War. Long criticized by China's People's Political Council as well as American quarters, Ho retained his post as chief-of-staff of the army. His successor is Gen. Chen Cheng, former commander of the first war zone.

Develop Peace Theme Of Roseneath Church W.A.

ROSENEATH, Nov. 24 (ENS) — Peace was the theme of the devotional exercises opening the regular meeting of the United church W.A. Mrs. W. A. Davey conducted the worship, assisted by Mrs. G. L. Tucker, who read "The Sea Is His," and Mrs. B. Thackeray reading "The Soul of a Nation."

The meeting was held in Mrs. L. Sherwin's home and the president, Mrs. G. L. Tucker, conducted the business session. The treasurer, Mrs. C. Grigg, reported $36.10 in the treasury, and receipts for the day included $2.50 from the quilt committee; rental of silver, $2.80; collection, $2.07, and miscellaneous 45 cents. Mrs. Charles Sandercock announced receipts from sale of refreshments at a recent farm sale, as approximately $16.

Mrs. Grigg, convener of parsonage committee, announced a chesterfield suite had been placed in the parsonage through the efforts of the W.A., the Fenella parsonage board and Centenary W.A. Mrs. B. Thackeray announced the sale of 52 packages of Christmas cards and additional packages on order. It was decided to donate $10 to the church treasury, and Mrs. C. Grigg and Mrs. Ella Brown volunteered as a program committee for the December meeting, the date and place of meeting to be arranged by the president and vice-president.

Mrs. Frank Adams, program convener, announced the numbers as follows: a vocal solo, "Pass It On," by Mrs. R. C. White; a reading, "Knitting and Reading," by Mrs. Charles Sandercock; a humorous reading, "Old Henry," by Mrs M. Davey. Community singing led by Mrs. C. Grigg, and reading "Deacon Brown," by Mrs. E. Waldie concluded it.

A vote of thanks was tendered the hostess by Mrs. Adams and refreshments were served by the hostess and a social hour followed.

Knox W.M.S. Learns Of British Guiana

HAVELOCK, Nov. 24—(ENS)—Mrs. William Martin was the hostess for the November meeting of the W.M.S. of Knox Presbyterian church.

The president, Mrs. L. Colquhoun, presided and read the Scripture lesson. Mrs. Martin gave the prayer from "The Glad Tidings" and the study on Brtiish Guiana was taken by Mrs. H. Krant. The matter of setting a date for a pot luck supper was left over for further discussion. Mrs. M. Kinnaird closed the meeting with prayer. Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess.

Student Body Demonstrates In Quebec City

QUEBEC, Nov. 24 — (CP) — Terming a group of 500 to 700 youths who staged an anti-conscription demonstration here last night as hotheads," Brig. Edmond Blais, officer commanding Military District No. 5 (Quebec) said to-day that there is no danger of any serious disorder" and that he had assumed the responsibility to see that calm is maintained in Quebec."

Brig. Blais made the statement after releasing the text of a telegram he addressed to Maj.-Gen. A. E. Walford, the Army's Adjutant General at Ottawa, stating the demonstration had been limited to singing, shouting and the display of signs protesting against overseas conscription.

Brig. Blais' telegram said that certain trivial damage such as broken windows occurred but by no means so far has any incident occurred beyond municipal authorities' control."

The group said to be made up of a majority of Laval University students pulled down bulletin boards from in front of the Quebec Chronicle Telegraph, a Conservative paper favoring conscription.

The parade of youths ranging from 16 to 22 years marched to the St. John Street army recruiting office but were prevented from forcing entry by a large detachment of the Quebec police force who had picked up their trail from the newspaper office in uppertown.

An attempt to force the entry of the Liberal Reform Club was foiled as an army officer— whose name was not made public by Brig. Blais —told them they were but a bunch of young fools."

No arrests were reported by police after the demonstrators failed to obtain an interview with Premier Maurice Duplessis at the Union Nationale Renaissance Club on Grand Allee and later at the Chateau Frontenac.

Before disbanding at Youville Square, the group was addressed by Marcellin Tremblay, President of the Students' Society of Laval University, who said we will never accept conscription for overseas service."

In his statement to-day, Brig. Blais said "the situation is in the hands of the Provincial, Municipal and Military police."

Would Quarantine All Persons With V.D.

TORONTO, Nov. 24—(CP)—The suggestion that persons suffering venereal disease be placed under quarantine similar to that imposed on those with such communicable diseases as smallpox and diphtheria was made yesterday by Judge T. H. Barton at a conference of health and police officials.

Dr. G. J. Jackson, Toronto Medical Officer of Health, and Dr. Lorne Pequenat, his deputy, said there were difficulties in a quarantine and it might lead persons to attempt to hide the disease.

Crown Attorney J. W. McFadden said that there hasn't been a single prosecution or conviction under a law passed 25 years ago making it an offence to spread venereal disease.

Plan New Task For Voroshilov

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24 — (AP) — Marshal Klementi Voroshilov, having made his exit from the Moscow scene as a soldier, may turn up again as a statesman. Experienced observers of Soviet affairs consider it possible he would be appointed Russian delegate to the prospective United Nations Peace Conference next year and serve on the World Security Council.

Moscow's announcement Wednesday that Voroshilov had been released from the state committee of defence was considered not a demotion, but a transfer for Marshal Stalin's old comrade-in-arms.

Voroshilov derived his power from his position as No. 3 man in the Politburo of the Communist party, next only to Mr. Stalin and Foreign Commissar Molotov, rather than from his specific assignment to other posts. As long as he retained his party place, it would appear, his power stayed unimpaired.

His release from the defence committee, however, freed him for other work, such as that of post-war planning and administration.

Maxim Litvinov, former Ambassador to the United States, and Ivan Maisky, former Ambassador to Great Britain, had already been assigned as vice-commissars of foreign affairs to Soviet peace planning.

With Marshal Stalin and Mr. Molotov forced to remain close to Moscow, assignment of Voroshilov to international negotiations would give the Russians a diplomat with the confidence of his leaders and sufficient authority to act.

SHOWING HOW V-2 BOMB IS HURLED FROM PLATFORM—Here for the first time is an artist's conception, based on authoritative analysis and reports, of how V-2 may be hurled from its portable platform, a tracked vehicle that is towed to the site by a powerful truck. In this drawing the launching ramp, adjustable, has been raised to a 45-degree angle which gives maximum range. Within the armored flash shield the electric firing mechanism is housed. The platform rests on hydraulic jacks which absorb the recoil. The platform has to be cooled by water jets to prevent the heat from distorting the framework. It has been suggested that V-2 could be employed from the decks of submarints to bomb cities on the east coast and for several hundred miles inland.

Sansom Ordered To Make Report

OTTAWA, Nov. 24—(CP)—Lt.-Gen. W. F. Sansom of Kingston, Ont., has been appointed by Defence Minister McNaughton to investigate and report on statements made in Vancouver Monday by high-ranking officers of the Canadian Army's 6th Division who said they did not believe overseas troops could be reinforced by encouraging home defence troops to volunteer for active service, it was learned Thursday.

Gen Sansom, former divisional commander overseas was understood to be en route to Vancouver.

Gen. McNaughton said Tuesday that until he had "full knowledge of all the facts and circumstances" he could make no comment on the officers' statements.

It was understood that the report would be prepared by Gen. Sansom, on leave from the army pending retirement.

NOTE REGARDING SPECIAL ADJUSTMENT OF TAXES IN RESPECT OF THE YEAR ENDED 30th OCTOBER, 1943

The Minister of Finance has expressed the opinion that the transfers made in 1943 to Contingent Reserve Fund from the earnings of this Bank were in excess of the reasonable requirements of the Bank.

The management and the auditors of the Bank do not agree with the Minister in this matter but having been advised of the Minister's views and of his purpose to act in accordance therewith, we have estimated that approximately $2,200,000 of such transfers must be added to income of that year for tax purposes. As a result the Bank will be called upon to pay additional taxes for the year 1943 of a like amount under the Income & Excess Profits Tax Acts. Provision has been made from Contingent Reserve Fund for this tax liability, of which twenty per cent, or $440,000, will be refundable under the provisions of the Excess Profits Tax Act.

Scouting Stands At Highest Peak

Scouting to-day in Peterborough is at its highest peak of the past 10 years, according to the annual report of District Commissioner Ernest J. Wolff. To-day there are 13 Boy Scout troops and 12 Cub packs with a membership of 517 boys. There are also 46 leaders for a grand total membership of 563. In 1934 Peterborough had seven troops, three packs, and 22 leaders for a membership of 177, and since that time there has been a steady increase in the number of Scout troops and Cub packs.

Permanent camping grounds, with buildings and equipment now available to the groups the entire year and during the past year these grounds have been made full use of by the various troops and packs.

During the year the third annual Scout Craft Show was held in the Market Hall and these displays have developed into one of the outstanding features of the Scout activities. The jamboree held in September is the big outdoor event of the year and it provides the various groups with an opportunity for competitive games and Scout skill. During the year the Scouts and Cubs entered into many community endeavors, collecting medicine bottles and salvage, ushering at public functions, church parades, and assisting at the outings held at the Scouting Grounds for the soldiers at the Training Centre.

Peterborough Scouts stood second in a group of Ontario cities in dollar receipts per capita of Scout population at the annual Apple Day when receipts totalled $1,144.

In spite of the fact that many of the former leaders are on active service and others engaged in war industry and junior leaders when they become of age joining the Armed Forces all groups are operating with leaders and this only has been accomplished by the generous support given by residents of Peterborough. These citizens realized the need and came forward to offer their services in the interest of youth.

H. C. Drury Weds Maninak Girl

Rev. F. A. Marrocco officiated at the ceremony in St. Peter's Cathedral, when Harold Clayton Drury, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Drury, 533 Elm street, took as his bride Marguerite Cecile Vaillencourt, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emile Vaillencourt, of Maninak. Miss Marion Best, ATCM, was at the organ, and Miss Phyllis Cowie was soloist.

Given in marriage by her brother, Leo Vaillencourt of Oshawa, the bride was gowned in floor-length white brocaded satin, with a fitted bodice fashioned with Sweetheart neckline, and full skirt. Her finger-tip veil of illusion net was caught to a coronet of net, and she carried red roses. She also wore a triple strand of pearls, the gift of the groom.

She was attended by her sister, Miss Simone Vaillencourt, who was frocked in floor-length sky blue sheer, with matching net shoulder-length veil, and carrying yellow roses. Alfred Cote was best man.

After a reception at the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Drury left for a wedding trip to Toronto and Windsor, the bride travelling in a powder blue suit, matching coat, and wine accessories. On their return, they will live at 508 Chamberlain street.

Winnipeg Flier Marries Nurse

WARKWORTH, Nov. 24.—(ENS.)—At the home of the bride's parents, Codrington, the marriage took place of Dorothy Jean, Reg. N., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Goodfellow to LAC. Roderick C. Cameron, R.C.A.F., son of Mr. and Mrs. Chester E. Cameron, Winnipeg, Man.

Rev. W. L. R. Delve, Wooler, officiated and the wedding music was played by Miss Myrtle Hardy, A.T.C.M., L.C.C.M., Morganston.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, looked lovely in a floor-length gown of white slipper satin. Her finger-tip veil was held in place by a coronet and her bouquet was of American Beauty roses. Her sister, Miss Doreen Goodfellow, was bridesmaid. Her dress was of turquoise blue taffeta trimmed with gold sequins, and her matching veil was shoulder length and her bouquet was of Talisman roses. LAC. Douglas Fielding, R.C.A.F., of Nanaimo, B.C., was best man.

Following the ceremony about thirty-five guests were served a dainty buffet luncheon. The waitresses being graduate nurses, former classmates of the bride.

The bride's mother received in a gown of royal blue crepe with tan accessories and a corsage of bronze and yellow mums. The groom's mother, who assisted, wore a dress of olive green wool crepe with black accessories and a corsage of bonze and yellow 'mums.

Those from a distance attending the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Chester E. Cameron, Shirley and Malcolm, Winnipeg; Lieut. Audrey Dudgeon, N.S., Kingston Military Hospital, Mr. Beverly Beals, Wellington and Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Haugh, Peterborough.

For travelling the bride wore a rose wool dress, black coat with silver fox trimmings and a hat to match.

Following their wedding trip they will reside in Belleville.

Doctor Wants Youth Taught To Combat VD Disease

"It is the responsibility of every citizen to get behind this drive to stamp out the menace which is attacking our greatest natural resource, our youth," said Dr. R. A. Kelly, addressing a meeting of the Local Council of Women Thursday afternoon on "Venereal Disease." Dr. Kelly explained that three out of four cases occurred between the ages of 15 and 30.

Dr. Kelly explained that of syphilis and gonorrhoea, the latter was the easier to cure, but that the introduction of penicillin had opened a new field for cure. He stressed, however, that prevention was the best weapon at hand to stamp out the diseases, and spoke of the help that pre-natal clinics could give. Dr. Kelly also spoke of a campaign for educating the public and said that education must be continued until the threat was defeated.

Outlining the plans of a VD campaign organized in Hamilton, the speaker told the Council that the drive to stamp out the diseases would be aimed primarily at youth, and felt that a youth organization should sponsor it. He asked, however, that the Council continue their support, since it would be of invaluable aid.

Want To Beat It.

"People are anxious to learn about VD, and how to beat it," Dr. Kelly continued, explaining that the campaign would include posters, billboard advertisements, talks, sidewalk advertisements and many others. Again mentioning the Hamilton campaign, sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce, he said that they spent six months studying the question and learning about the diseases and their cure and prevention, and then set up a speaker's panel, so that any group who wished to have a speaker on that subject could call on the panel, and one would be available.

Mrs. G. K. Fraser, moving the vote of thanks to Dr. Kelly, echoed his words, and said that knowledge was the greatest weapon that could be used. Mrs. W. T. Fanjoy introduced Dr. Kelly.

Alderman Adam Sands briefly outlined to the meeting the three questions to be put before the voters on December 4. The by-law dealing with the hospital would entail the added cost of one cent per week for the next 20 years for every $10 taxes paid, he explained, and also asked for an affirmative vote on the question of diverting $300,000 from the City Trust toward the project. On the Memorial Community Centre by-law, Alderman Sands said that he was on "the outside looking in," but that he felt that the Centre was a necessity, to provide adequate recreational facilities for Peterborough. "I don't know of a memorial more fitting," he continued, "since it will serve not only this, but coming generations." The cost per week for each $10 in taxes would be approximately one-fifth of a cent, he went on, concluding that it would cost taxpayers one decimal two cents a week for the establishment of these two needed improvements.

In conclusion, the speaker stressed that the outcome of the questions depended on each voter, urging those who could not vote to "talk hospital." In connection with the new hospital campaign, the Council voted to endorse the plan, and authorized the president to sign a letter from the hospital committee, stating that the Council was in favor of it.

Help Children.

Mrs. W. Addyman briefly addressed the meeting on the "Save the Children" fund. She explained that the fund was used to get roving bands of children together in the countries of Europe, and give them homes, food and clothing. Since she is in charge of the fund for this district, she asked for suggestions to collect good children's clothing and infants' wear, and plans for getting a display in a store window were discussed.

Mrs. H. T. Rehill was named as convener, and Mrs. W. Addyman and Mrs. M. Drysdale as members, for the nominating committee, to bring in a new slate of officers at the annual meeting on January 18. Mrs. Morton was asked to act for the Council on the new V-Day committee, and Mrs. McCullough was named as the Council's representative to the Health League of Canada, with Mrs. A. Leach as alternate. Mrs. B. F. McNeely and her committee are in charge of gathering suitable children's books for the library at Dixon House.

It was decided that the December meeting would be opened to the public at 3.30, so that all could hear Lieut. Muriel Robertson, CWAC, who will be guest speaker at that time. Mrs. W. R. Moore, guest soloist, played a piano solo, Chopin's "Waltz in A Flat." Mrs. E. Wand and Mrs. A. Stanger are the committee for the choosing of life members for the Council, and members decided that a letter would be sent to Mrs. J. Dutton, expressing the Council's regrets that, through illness, she could no longer hold office or take an active part in Council work.

layer of potatoes, a layer of beans and a layer of peanuts. Continue making layers until all the ingredients are used. Blend the milk with the well-beaten egg and seasoning and pour over the top. Bake in a moderate oven until brown. Serve with tomato sauce.

Tomato Sauce.

1 quart canned tomatoes, 1 slice onion, 8 cloves, 3 tablespoons fat, 3 tablespoons flour, salt and pepper.

Set the tomatoes, onions and cloves in the fire and cook for 20 minutes. Brown the fat in the frying pan, add flour and cook until smooth and brown, stirring constantly. Add tomatoes cook for three minutes, season with salt and pepper and pass through a strainer, fine enough to hold back the seeds. This makes a very thin sauce. Use more flour if you prefer a thicker sauce.

Canada In Spotlight At Air Talks

By C. R. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

CHICAGO, Nov. 24 — (CP). — Canada has been in the spotlight in the United States to an unusual degree this month and not only because of the prominence given here to news of the events leading up to this week's special session of parliament.

The Canadian delegation to the International Civil Aviation Conference which opened Nov. 1 has been engaged in a strenuous effort to bring together from widely separated points of determination the United Kingdom and United States delegations.

In that role the Canadians apparently have won the respect and admiration of all delegations of the 54 countries represented here and if the conference is a complete success much of the credit will go to the delegation from Canada.

The struggle has been between the extreme international control of commercial air operations between countries, advocated by the British delegates, and the freedom to engage in open competition through bilateral agreements, proposed by the United States.

H. J. Symington, hard-headed legal and business executive and head of the Trans-Canada Air Lines, accustomed to the quick, incisive methods of big business, wore himself weary attempting to bring together the suave, diplomatic Adolph Berle, United States delegation head, and the experienced, politico-diplomat, Viscount Swinton, British group leader.

The applause which greeted Mr. Symington's brief rejection of the Berle-Swinton proposal to end the conference without settling the outstanding issues, coming from delegates and spectators alike in a close-packed open plenary session, and speeches which followed, indicated that Canada's determination to put international aviation under adequately controlled competition, and to do it now so that small nations hopes of participating may be preserved, had the popular support.

Roofed City.

Close to 1,000 delegates, staff and observers of the air conference here work and live in the Stevens Hotel, largest in the world—and are almost lost in it. Another 1,000 delegates to the annual C.I.O. meeting are working and many of them living here. Probably there are 6,000 people in the hotel every day and Walter Thompson, Canadian National publicity director, aptly described the hotel as "Times Square with a roof over it."

The "Little Flower," Mayor La Guardia of New York, twitting his own delegation leader, Adolph Berle, and supporting Mr. Symington's demand or a complete job to protect future of world air commerce, said all that had been agreed on so far was technical detail about flying services. Nobody disagrees about those things, he said.... "Everybody is in favor of better weather and safer flying conditions."

The question has been raised recently whether Germany might be able to launch some of her new V-2 robot bombs against this continent. It has been suggested that the Nazis might try launching a few of the huge projectiles from U-boats lying off the coast, but the map above illustrates some of the difficulties that such an attack would encounter from Allied defences.

Discard Rules

TORONTO, Nov. 24 — (CP). — The Ontario Government is prepared to discard "antiquated" cream grading regulations to raise the quality of Ontario butter to the high standard now held by cheese, C. E. Lackner, director of the government dairy branch, told the Ontario Creamery Association which opened a two-day convention here yesterday.

DOROTHY DIX . . . .

A REGRETTABLE CONSIDERATION

Wife Would Destroy Happiness To Satisfy Her Own Selfish Desires.

DEAR MISS DIX—I have been married for ten years and have two little girls. My husband is a very fine man and a good provider. Never objects to any place I go, or how much money I spend. We have gotten along together very amiably, have never had a fight. But I have found out that I do not love him and I have been going out with another man who is married and who has two children.

My husband does not suspect that anything is wrong and I am wondering if I should tell him and leave him, as I am not happy?

WORRIED WIFE.

Get Away by Yourself and Reason!

ANSWER — Do you think you would be happy if you would give up your kind and generous husband, your soft and easy life, your nice home and, above all, your two little girls for a liaison with a married man? For apparently the man you say you have fallen in love with has given no indications that he intends to divorce his wife and break up his home and orphan his children.

I never heard of a woman contemplating making a more losing bargain, and if you do, you will spend the balance of your life regretting it. Before you do this foolish and fatal thing sit down quietly and try to figure out the cost. Not only the loss of a good husband and your children but the respect of all who know you, your place in society and probably your lover. For a married man's ardor over an affair is very apt to cool when he finds he has to support his Lady Love instead of sending her an orchid now and then.

Before you tell your husband anything about this affair with the married man, I earnestly advise you to go away and take a nice long trip by yourself. Plenty of times a wife thinks that she has fallen out of love with her husband when she is just fed up with ordering meals and getting the children off to school and needs a change and rest from domesticity.

Try this and the chances are that when you come back a secure home will look better to you than a love nest, and you will see your husband the way you did on your wedding day.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—I am a married woman with three very small children and for the past six months I have made my home with my parents. My sister, who has two children, also makes her home with our parents. We do not get along together and my children are blamed for everything that goes wrong, so I have decided to move out, but my mother wants me to stay.

Should I stay and be bossed around just as thought I were a child, or should I move out?

ANSWER—Get a place of your own to live where your children won't annoy anyone but you. Any two young mothers with kids, who are bound to fight and scrap, cannot possibly live in peace together, for every mother is firmly convinced that her own youngsters are pin-feathered angels who could not do any wrong, and that anybody is a crank who doesn't enjoy listening to their yells and letting them destroy their furniture.

Anyway, married daughters can never fit again into the old home. Once they leave it their place in the family circle closes up and they are outsiders.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—I am a war wife with a baby 16 months old and am living with my parents for the duration. My husband has been writing me that if I don't come out to the camp where he is taking his training that he will leave me, and that I had better hurry up and come if I want to hang on to him. I love him very much and want to be with him, but I have my baby to think of and I know that the living conditions at this particular camp are very bad, and that it is no place for a baby.

What shall I do?

UNHAPPY.

ANSWER — Can't you get your mother to take care of the child while you go out and stay with your husband? It probably won't be long before he will be sent overseas. But certainly it is riskng a baby's life to take it to a place where the living conditions are so difficult.

Evidently your husband is young and knows little about the care that a baby requires, or he would not be willing to jeopardize its life for the pleasure of having you with him.

Claims $10,000 From 2 Doctors

WELLAND, Nov. 24 — Dr. W. W. Snelling and D. J. E. Bedard, Welland medical practitioners now captains in the Canadian Army, are the defendants in a $10,000 damage claim suit in the present sittings of Supreme Court here before Mr. Justice Arthur M. Lebel. The suit claims negligence on the part of the doctors as the result of the death of Laura Luella Walker, 23, the mother of three children, who died on the operating table after being administered a spinal anaesthetic at the Welland County General Hospital on Sept. 15, 1943. The charge are laid and claim filed by George C. Walker, husband of the dead woman.

Dr. Lorne Whittaker of St. Catharines, associate coroner's pathologist who performed the autopsy, said death was due to shock, associated with the collapse of the lungs. It was possible that the patient suffered from nervous shock, although there was no definite evidence of this. It could have been due to the emotional upset associated with the giving of the anaesthetic.

The plaintiff testified that after his wife's death, Dr. Bedard told him: "Well, I'm not going to take the rap for that. Walter (Dr. Snelling) did it, not me." Dr. Bedard had stated, Mr. Walker said, that after he had found it impossible to insert the needle in the woman's spinal canal, Dr. Snelling had injected it.

The defense of the case is expected to be presented tomorrow. D. L. McCarthy and W. R. West of Toronto are conducting the defense.

CANADIANS AT SAIPAN

When United States forces landed on Saipan in the Marianas Islands in July, 10 Canadian Army officers went in with them.

THE STARS SAY . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Saturday, November 25

A PROPITIOUS day for advancing cherished ambitions by the employment of initiative, originality and talents. Concentrate all the ingenuity and brilliant ideas, supported by novel and enterprising tactics. There might be a discriminating use of the fine arts and creative vision, with charm and beauty figuring in constructive development. Boldness and originality may be prolific of real progress or unusual expression. Maintain peace and happiness in all affairs, social and affectional.

Those whose birthday it is have a promise of reaching important objectives by the use of originality, unique skills or creative forms in out of the orthodox or accustomed channels. Beauty, charm, romance and novelty in ideas are under dramatic stimuli, but this may not reach into domestic life, where emotions and erratic impulses may bring defeat. Swift and decisive grasp of openings should be profitable, but be alert to duplicity, intrigue and fraud. Hew to the straight and narrow pathway.

A child born on this day may have novel and original talents and skills with keen ideas and judgment, although these may not pervade the domestic or affectional realm.

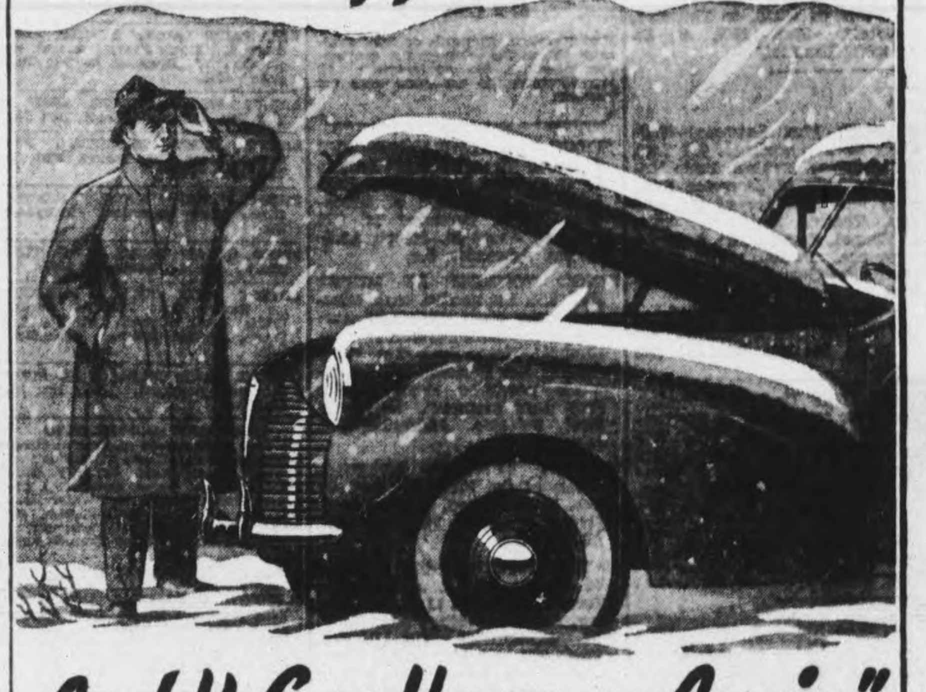
"It has Happened Before



And It Can Happen Again"

No one wants a starting failure and yet there are thousands in a normal year.

This year because of rationed driving—which is hard on a battery —it is more than ever important for you to have your battery tested regularly and recharged when necessary if you are to steer clear of starting trouble.

Exide Dealers are equipped and ready to give you reliable battery service. If a new battery is necessary, they can supply you with a long-lasting, dependable Exide. Into every Exide goes 56 years of battery-building experience.

Look for the Exide Dealer sign—symbol of honest service.

IN MEMORIAM

BROOK—In loving memory of my dear son, Jimmy Brook, who was killed one year ago today, November 24th, 1943.

It's hard to face the world with a smile,
And pretend my heart's not broken.
It's hard to believe you're gone, but you're gone
Dear son but not forgotten.
Never will your memory fade of your sweet little smiling face
For you are all that I had,
But one day our Lord will say my days are over,
And I'll close my eyes, and wake and find you there.
—Ever remembered by his mother.

BROOK—In loving memory of Jimmie.

Fondly loved and deeply mourned,
Heart of my heart I miss you so
Often my darling, my tears will flow,
Dimming your picture before my eyes
But never the one in my heart that lies
The stars seem dim as I whisper low
My own darling boy, I miss you so.
—Fondly remembered by Dad.

BROOK—In loving memory of Jimmie Brook who was accidentally killed on November 24th, 1943.

He has solved it, life's wonderful problem,
The deepest, the strangest, the last,
And into the school of the angels
With the answer forever has passed.
How strange he should sleep so profoundly,
So young, so unworn by the strife,
While beside him brimful of hope's nectar
Untouched stood the Goblet of life.
God knew all about it, how noble,
How gentle he was and how brave
How bright his possible future
Yet put him to sleep in his grave.
God knew all about those who love Him,
How bitter the trial must be
And right through it all God is loving
And knows so much better than we.
—Ever remembered by Lillian, Walter, June and Phyllis.

IN MEMORIAM

MOORE, Charles R.—In loving memory of our beloved son, Charlie, who passed away 7 years ago to-day.

It's lonesome here without you
There is such a vacant space
For we never hear your footstep
Or see your smiling face
As Angels keep their watch up there
Please, God, just let him know
That we down here do not forget.
We love and miss him so.
—Sadly missed by his mother and father.

MOORE—In loving memory of our beloved brother, Charlie, who passed away 7 years ago to-day.

We think of him in silence
His name we oft recall,
There is nothing left to answer
But his picture on the wall.
—Always remembered by his brother Fred and sisters Elsie, May, Margaret and Myrtle.

TUCKER—In loving memory of Thomas Tucker, who passed away November 24th, 1942.

We think of him in silence,
His name we oft recall,
There is nothing left to answer,
But his picture on the wall.
—Sadly missed by his wife.

CARD OF THANKS

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kendal of Lakefield, wish to express their thanks to the many friends and neighbours for their kind expressions of sympathy during their sad bereavement in the loss of their daughter Verna (Mrs. Ingol Grant of Toronto).

Miss Elizabeth Deannard, 479 Donegal street, wishes to express her deep gratitude to the nurses and sisters of St. Joseph's Hospital and to the many neighbours for their sympathy and condolence received at the time of her sister's death, Miss Mary Deannard, who died November 16th.

Peterboro Presbytery To Meet Thursday

The Peterborough Presbytery of the United Church of Canada will meet in George St. Church on Thursday, November 30th at 9 a.m. The day will be largely devoted to a spiritual conference on "The Church, Nation and Social Order," a pamphlet which was sent down to the presbyteries from the recent general council of the church, and was prepared by a commission consisting of men and women from Vancouver, Edmonton, Regina, Winnipeg, Ottawa, St. John, N.B., Sackville, N.B., Halifax, St. Johns and Toronto.

The afternoon session will be led by Rev. G. P. MacLeod, M.A., of Toronto, assistant secretary of the commission. At the morning session an hour's program will be in the hands of the laymen of the presbytery; at a later time Miss Rachel Young will speak on "The Home the Bulwark of the Nation."

Ministers are asked to bring interested men and women of their congregation in addition to the lay representatives.

Shark Repellant

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—(AP). —A new shark repellant which has proved "very satisfactory" in experimental tests has been reported by the United States Navy. The chemical is being incorporated into a packet which can be attached to life jackets. It diffuses in the water as an inky fluid offensive to sharks.

It May Repeat

SAN DIEGO, Calif., Nov. 24—(AP).—Here's as good an omen as any when the war in Europe will end. Harold Nathan, Federal Bureau of Investigation chief, related that two months after he took charge of the FBI office in Richmond, Va., in 1918, the armistice of the First Great War was signed. One week from today Nathan leaves San Diego, again to take over the Richmond office. "If history repeats itself Hitler should fold two months after I reach Richmond," said Nathan.

Christmas Toys Are Scarce

—ELECTRIC TRAINS

—MECCANNO SETS

—TRICYCLES

—WIND-UP TRAINS

—METAL FIRE ENGINES

—METAL TRUCKS, etc., etc.

. . . in fact almost all the favorite metal toys, spring toys and electric toys are off the market owing to wartime restrictions. The toy makers have done well in producing other non-metallic toys but the children love those old favorites.

If you have such articles in your home and no longer need them you can sell them quickly and easily.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

INCREASE PERCENTAGE

HOLDING THE A-J-10 of a suit in either declarer's hand or the dummy, you will get two tricks if you lead toward the combination twice and find either the king or queen held by the defender who has to play first. But if both those missing honors are in the hand which plays after your combination, together with a guarding card, that method of play will lose two tricks. You can increase the percentage for two tricks by your side to a sure thing by playing so that one defender or the other will have to lead up to the combination.

North: ♠ Q J 7 5 2 ♥ A J 10 8 ♦ J 10 ♣ K 8

West: ♠ None ♥ 7 5 3 ♦ Q 8 7 4 ♣ Q J 10 6 5 2

East: ♠ 10 6 4 ♥ K Q 9 ♦ A K 9 6 2 ♣ 9 3

South: ♠ A K 9 8 3 ♥ 6 4 2 ♦ 5 3 ♣ A 7 4

(Dealer: South. Both sides vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East

West made the obvious lead of the club Q, won by the dummy's K, and the next three tricks were the spade Q, J and A, which disposed of the defenders' trumps. Seeing two sure diamond losers, South decided to try to limit heart losers to one by finessing twice. The J finesse lost to the Q, whereupon East cashed the diamond K and A and returned the club 3 to the A. South then tried his next heart finesse, the 10, and the K took it for the setting trick.

That contract should have been a cinch. After the fourth trick disposed of hostile trumps, South should have eliminated clubs with the A and a ruff, and then should have led the diamond J. Unless West could win both high diamonds and so make two heart leads, South would be home. For East, winning a heart, would then have had to return either that suit into the remaining tenace or else a minor suit card, which could be ruffed in the North while South discarded a diamond. That method of play would have worked regardless of who held what in hearts.

Tomorrow's Problem

North: ♠ Q 4 ♥ A K 5 4 2 ♦ J 9 4 3 ♣ J 8

West: ♠ K 7 ♥ J 10 6 ♦ 10 8 2 ♣ A K 10 4 2

South: ♠ A J 5 3 2 ♥ 8 ♦ A K Q 7 ♣ Q 5 3

(Dealer: East. Neither side vulnerable.)

What is South's best chance to limit trump suit losses to one trick with that combination, playing for 4-Spades?

3,500 Japs Drown From Convoy

Americans Gain Steadily Across Leyte Isle

GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Philippines, Nov. — (AP). — A four-ship convoy carrying reinforcements for the embattled Japanese on Leyte Island has been destroyed by American fighter planes and an estimated 3,500 of the enemy were killed or drowned, a communique announced today.

The Leyte-based planes, strafing at mast height and acting as dive-bombers, sank three transports and a destroyer escort, bringing to about 15,000 the number of Japanese perishing in attempts to reach the island fighting scene.

In a bombing attack on the Celebes and Borneo, an enemy destroyer and a transport were sunk, and a gunboat and 11 freighters damaged, Gen. MacArthur reported. Twenty-six Japanese fighters and bombers were destroyed on the ground.

Improved weather conditions quickened the battle tempo, and encouraged the Japanese to increased air activity, with the result that 42 enemy planes were shot down, 35 by American planes and seven by anti-aircraft batteries.

"Our own losses were very light," Gen. MacArthur said.

On the ground the Americans were doing well. A headquarters communique said the 32nd Infantry Division had crossed the Leyte River south of Limon, which fell Wednesday, and was shoving southward. A counter-attack by the Japanese 26th Division "which has now been fully committed southwest of Limon" was repulsed, the communique reported.

1,000 Bombers Hit Refinery

LONDON, Nov. 25 (AP)—More than 1,000 R.A.F. and American heavy bombers hit the Leuna Synthetic oil refinery at Merseburg today—the second time in less than a week—with more than 3,000 tons of explosive.

They also hit marshalling yards at Bingen, east of Mainz, the Air Ministry announced.

More than 1,000 fighters guarded the big battle armada from German interceptors.

Heavy bombers of the strategic air force in Italy attacked targets in the Linz and Munich areas in Austria last night.

A small number of planes from Italy also bombed near Innsbruck in Austria.

Tuberculosis Kills 30,000 In 5 Years

OTTAWA, Nov. 25 (CP) — The Governor - General and Princess Alice, in a letter received today by the Canadian Tuberculosis Association, appealed to Canadians to purchase Christmas seals being sold by the association as part of its annual campaign for funds.

The letter said money derived from the sale of Christmas seals was spent wholly to provide men and equipment for the campaign against tuberculosis, which during the last five years has killed 30,000 Canadians, "a far heavier casualty list than has been caused by the war against the Axis."

Four By-elections in Quebec

OTTAWA, Nov. 25—(CP).—Prime Minister Mackenzie King has called by-elections for April 23 in the Federal ridings of Montreal St. James, Kenora-Rainy River, Sherbrooke and Weyburn, Jules Castonguay, chief electoral officer, said today. In view of Mr. King's statement in the Commons this week that the life of parliament would end April 17 and his indication it would not be extended, political circles here regard the calling of these by-elections for April 23 to be a mere formality to comply with the Election Act.

The Act requires that writs for a by-election in any constituency must be issued within six months after the Speaker of the House of Commons has notified the chief electoral officer that the seat is vacant. In the present case the six months were up for Montreal St. James and would be up next week for Weyburn.

The government probably decided that when the writs were being issued they should cover four of the 11 vacancies in which the six-month limit would soon expire.

This is not a new procedure. Prime Minister R. B. Bennett in 1935 had writs issued calling by-elections at dates that were later than the dissolution and accordingly were never held. Under such circumstances the vacancies are filled through the general election.

Indefinite.

The present state of flux makes any party standing in the Commons indefinite, but the latest standing, conforming with the Parliamentary Guide, is: Liberals 161, Progressive Conservatives 39, C.C.F. 10, Social Credit 10, others 14, and vacancies 11.

This does not include the four Liberal members who crossed the floor of the Commons to take seats on the Opposition side this week following the government's action in bringing down an order-in-council giving authority for overseas conscription.

In addition to the four seats for which by-elections now have been called the vacancies are: Terrebone, (St. Hyacinthe), Bagot, Beauce, Kamouraska, Regina City and Bonaventure.

In the two Quebec constituencies — Montreal St. James and Sherbrooke — nominations will be held April 16, while in the western constituencies — Kenora-Rainy River and Weyburn — nominations will precede the elections by two weeks, being held April 9.

The Sherbrooke seat became vacant June 20 with the resignation of Maurice Gingues, a Liberal, when he became a candidate in the Quebec provincial election.

The Montreal St. James seat was held by Eugene Durocher, a Liberal member, who died May 10. The Kenora-Rainy River seat became vacant April 10 with the death of Hugh B. McKinnon, Liberal.

English Speaking Draftees Stage Demonstration Over Conscription

VERNON, B.C., Nov. 26—(CP)—Soldiers from Vernon military camp in the rugged British Columbia interior staged last night the first anti-conscription demonstration in Canada by uniformed men since the Dominion government was authorized Thursday to send drafted home defence, or "zombie" troops to the fighting fronts of Europe and the Mediterranean.

For an hour—the men—estimated variously to number from 300 to 900—paraded four abreast through the streets of Vernon, 200 miles northeast of Vancouver, shouting "Down with conscription," and "Conscript wealth and industry as well as manpower."

At one point of the parade, some of the marchers shouted to civilians standing by silently on the curb that "This is only the beginning." The soldiers threatened to "tear down" the new Canadian Legion hall here.

The demonstration was marked by one incident of violence before the marchers were dispersed by military and city police and ordered back to their camp at the end of a "meeting of protest" in a Vernon park. There were no arrests.

The incident occurred at a main street intersection. An unidentified captain and lieutenant stepped into the middle of the road and confronted the leaders of the parade. The two officers strode into the front ranks, urging the men to "break it up." The captain was struck down by one of the soldiers and the lieutenant was pushed roughly aside. The captain suffered minor facial injuries.

Ninety per cent of the soldiers stationed here are home defence personnel called up under National Resources Mobilization Act Regulations. The majority are English-speaking with a sprinkling of French-speaking troops. No French-speaking units are stationed at the camp.

Military and city police controlled the streets for hours after the outbreak on lookout for signs of

30 Divisions Trapped By Russians

Red Armies Aim To Wipe Out Huns In Latvia

LONDON, Nov. 25—(AP)—Russian troops broke into Hatvan, transport centre 28 miles northeast of Budapest, but were thrown back again by German counter-attack, a Berlin broadcast said today.

"The defenders of Hatvan answered every attack with a counter-attack" in the bitter battle in Hungary, the broadcast said.

Berlin also declared that eight Russian divisions had made penetrations in a wave of assaults in the Courtland region of Latvia.

Soviet amphibious forces virtually had blocked any sea escape for 30 German divisions being squeezed against the Baltic by capture of the fortified Estonian island of Saare (Osel).

Saare, only 17 miles across the mouth of the gulf from Latvia, fell yesterday and Red Airmen sank four enemy warships offshore and damaged four others, including a heavy cruiser, Moscow announced.

Berlin declared the Russians had begun a huge new offensive against the German troops pocketed in Latvia, making gains of undisclosed depth along a 50-mile front between Lielauce, 70 miles east of the Baltic port of Liepaja, and Priekule, 20 miles from Liepaja.

Armored Units

Berlin said the Russians were using heavily-reinforced tank, plane and artillery forces in an effort to crush the Latvia pocket and release hundreds of thousands of troops for a drive on East Prussia.

The Moscow bulletin said new gains were made by Red army units in Eastern Czechoslovakia and Hungary. The Berlin radio acknowledged a German retreat in Slovakia, west of Ungvar.

Gen. Ivan Petrov's 4th Ukraine army troops yesterday seized nine localities on the 25-mile front west of Ungvar, Moscow said, and with the capture of Monca, nine miles southwest of Ungvar, were within

Jap Factories Left In Flames

SAIPAN, Nov. 25 — (AP). — Mighty Superfortresses bombers left industrial sections of central Tokyo in flames as American commanders today proclaimed the historic bombing the opening below of a relentless campaign to knock out Japan's war plants.

Flying 3,000 miles round-trip from Saipan bases captured only five months ago, the armada flew high above the capital at more than 400 miles an hour yesterday noon and placed their bombs with deadly skill.

Reconnaissance photographs showed fires still burning several hours later with smoke rising to great heights.

Two of the Superforts were acknowledged lost in this first land-based raid on Tokyo, a city of nearly 7,000,000.

(Tokyo radio last night broadcast an Imperial communique claiming five of the raiders were shot down and nine others damaged, and dismissed the attack as ineffective.)

Hit Plane Plant

The bombers funnelled a substantial portion of their bombloads on the Masashina Aircraft Plant, a principal supplier of Japan's army and navy planes. Other choice targets were ripped and razed.

Lt.-Gen. Millard S. Harmon, interviewed at Saipan, said "we have the whole of Japan under our bombsights now."

Harmon, deputy commander of the 20th Air Force, added:

"The time is not far now when Japan will be subjected to the combined efforts of air units based from Alaska through the Philippines and over China — a ring of air effort focussed on the Imperial Empire."

In Washington, Gen. H. H. Arnold, commander of the Twentieth Air Force, said "Tokyo's war industries have been badly hurt by a blow made possible by the Americans who fought and died for the Marianas." He said Japan would be hit from two sides by American bombers based in China and on Saipan.

Savage Resistance at Aachen Pins Down 3 Allied Armies

By WILLIAM FRYE — Associated Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Nov. 25—(AP).—The Paris radio said today that French forces were moving toward a junction between virtually liberated Strasbourg and Colmar to the south, swinging shut a trap on German troops in the Vosges Mountains. While the Germans were using every means to pull back across the Rhine to the homeland in the south, the savage resistance of 10 or 12 Nazi divisions in the Aachen sector held the advance of three Allied armies to a slow crawl, but the British 2nd and U.S. 9th and 1st Armies fought on foot-by-foot on the flooded flatlands of the Cologne plain.

There an Allied staff officer described every creek crossing as "almost an amphibious operation." The furious resistance was resulting in the greatest battle of the Western front.

British 2nd Army troops, after losing Hoven and yielding some ground south of Beeck, north and east of Geilenkirchen, held firmly against waves of counter-attacking enemy troops and a hail of artillery fire, and clung firmly to the high ground overlooking Wurm.

U.S. 1st Army troops fought their way house-by-house into the outskirts of Weisweiler, 6½ miles southwest of Julich, the Roer river stronghold barring the advance to Cologne, 25 miles away.

Bourheim, two miles southwest of Julich, was cleared completely by the U.S. 9th Army late yesterday, a front dispatch said.

Use Heavy Tanks

The German radio said the Allied attack flared with new intensity today between Geilenkirchen and Julich, with the Americans throwing in heavy new tank formations at Gereonsweiler.

In Strasbourg French armred forces were battling at close quarters to smash the Germans from their last dockfront stand guarding a big Rhine bridge to Germany.

The Paris radio said other French armored units ranging along the west bank of the Rhine from Strasbourg were within eight miles of a meeting with advance units of the French 1st Army surging down the Rhine from Colmar, 38 miles south of Strasbourg. The broadcast said the French and Germans were fighting in the streets of Colmar.

A front dispatch yesterday said Allied patrols were reported to have thrust across the Rhine from Strasbourg, but there was no official confirmation and no further report.

Two divisions of American infantry broadened the Alsatian corridor and beat off a German counter-attack northwest of the Saverne Gap north of Strasbourg.

The Allied supreme headquarters communique reported steady progress toward clearing the enemy from the Saales Pass in the Vosges north of Colmar, and off the slopes of the commanding, round-topped mountain called the Ballon d'Alsace north of Belfort.

An admission that German lines in the central Vosges were "taken back at several points" came from the Berlin radio.

In the Mulhouse region between Colmar and Belfort the enemy was resisting desperately, with isolated battles raging around a number of towns. The Germans clung to strongpoints and the French advance surged around and past them.

In southeastern Holland British troops closing in on the Meuse River citadel of Venlo advanced up to 3,000 yards through heavily-mined mud flats.

British infantry captured Maashees, on the Meuse 15 miles north of Venlo, and seized the villages of Wanssum and Tienraij south of Maashees. The Tommies advanced to within 2,000 yards of Grubbenvorst, 3½ miles north of Venlo.

Lt.-Gen. Dempsey's troops were fighting their way into the enemy's major perimeter of defences before Venlo, and only a thin finger of Germans remained on the western bank of the Meuse.

Tremendous Development In Tourist Trade May Be Boon To Soldiers Seeking New Jobs

TORONTO, Nov. 25—(CP).—A tremendous development of tourist business can be expected in Ontario after the war and many men of the armed services will be happy to establish private set-ups to take care of this expanded venture, Hon. Dana Porter, Provincial Minister of Planning and Development, said in an address here last night.

He described the work of his Department and said plans were being made for the rehabilitation of returned men and war industries workers.

Canadian Units Selected To Supply 16,000 Recruits

By JAMES McCOOK—Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, Nov. 24—(CP).—Members of parliament today looked back on three days of political excitement with the uneasy feeling that the tensity of discussions in the Commons next week will be just as great. On Monday, Prime Minister Mackenzie King will ask what amounts to a vote of confidence when he moves that the House declare it "will aid the Government in its policy of maintaining a vigorous war effort."

An amendment to this motion may be moved by the Progressive Conservative Opposition, asking the House declare itself in favor of total conscription which would make all the 60,000 effectives in the home defence army available for overseas service.

By an order-in-council announced on Thursday, authorization was given the sending overseas of 16,000 men in the home defence army.

Yesterday, Defence Minister McNaughton, a guest in the House where he has as yet no seat, continued his explanation of policies he plans to follow.

Misinterpreted.

He said that remarks he had made on Thursday had been interpreted in some quarters as meaning that he intended to use general service men overseas even if they were not as well trained as home defence army troops. That impression was wrong.

Statement Coming On RCAF Personnel

OTTAWA, Nov. 25.—(CP).—Labor Minister Mitchell said yesterday in the Commons he hoped to make an announcement next week on the status of men released from the R.C.A.F. in respect to compulsory service.

Hon. R. B. Hanson (PC-York-Sunbury) said that young men released with the end of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan were discouraged by the fact they were not to be allowed to serve in the services for which they had volunteered.

British 8th Reaches Faenza

ROME, oNv. 25.—(AP).—Armored British 8th Army patrols have reached a suburb of Faeza and have forced the Germans to withdraw from their positions along the Cosina river four miles southeast of the Bologna-Rimini highway town, Allied Headquarters announced today.

Fanning out from the Cosina river bridgehead, one British force cut to the northeast, put a block on Highway 9 and pressed on, reaching Corletto.

A second thrust moved northwest along Highway 9 and advance units reached a suburb of Faenza and have Durbecco.

A military spokesman said that this autumn had been the wettest on record in Italy, with most of the fighting fronts veritable quagmires.

To the left of the British thrust, Polish troops cleared all enemy resistance east of the River Samogia and gained the heights of Monte Chiesuola. Other 8th Army troops took a hull at Castellaccio.

Enemy attempts at infiltration along the Allied 5th Army front were repulsed.

Nazis Build Underground Organization

Fanatical Youths Being Trained To Perpetuate National Socialism

By DEWITT MacKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

A vast underground organization, to perpetuate Nazism and sabotage the Allied occupation of Germany, is reported to be in process of formation under supervision of Gestapo chief Himmler—Hitler's bloody-minded hangman.

"If Himmler puts his idea into practice," comments the Stockholm Tidningen, "one will have to reckon with a caveman's war right in the heart of Europe which, in sheer frightfulness, will exceed anything seen so far during the darkest and most chaotic period of history."

This column earlier in the week commented on the operations of a Nazi underground on the Rhineland fighting front. Now a British authoritative source—Veritas, the military expert—discloses a far more extensive plot than has heretofore been made public. His account, gleaned from various sources, in substance is this:

More than six months ago it was reliably reported from Germany that youth leaders were being trained for emergency work when Nazism no longer should rule. Young men, and even boys from 13 to 17, were being schooled in various types of murder, to be employed in liquidating opponents of Hitlerism, and were being formed into a nation-wide underground organization.

Now, however, Himmler is expanding this body and enlarging its scope so as to deal with the Allied invasion. The revised purpose of the underground is to organize terrorism, by sniping and sabotage, against Allied lines of communication inside Germany, and ultimately against the United Nations armies of occupation.

These assassins and saboteurs are hand-picked fanatics. They swear fidelity to the Fuehrer unto death. Himmler provides them with false identification papers and some of these men actually are posted in concentration camps where they pose as anti-Nazis.

There are, of course, hundreds of thousands of Nazi fanatics who are desperate. Most of them couldn't live under another regime because they are criminals who must answer for their deeds either to the Allies or to their own people. When Nazidom disappears they'll be men with-

6 Die In R.C.A.F. Plane Crash

Group Captain Williams One Of Victims

CALGARY, Nov. 25 (CP)—One of the six R.C.A.F. personnel killed in the crash of an aircraft on the northern outskirts of the city at midnight Thursday was identified here last night at No. 4 Air Training Command Headquarters as Group Captain D. G. Williams, of Edmonton, former commanding officer of No. 2 Wireless School and now a command staff officer.

Next-of-kin of the other five victims, four men and a woman, has been notified and names will be issued shortly.

The plane was completing a routine communications flight between Regina and Calgary when it crashed. The cause of the accident is obscure and an official inquiry has been launched, air force officials said.

At 33, Group Captain Williams was one of the youngest men of this rank in the R.C.A.F. He was born in England. A graduate of the University of Alberta, he joined the R.C.A.F. in 1936. Before coming to Calgary he had served in the directorate of signals, Ottawa, and had been commanding officer of No. 4 Wireless School, Guelph, Ont.

Expect U.S. Financial Aid

Believe Loans May Be Made After War

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25—(AP)—President Roosevelt's call for post-war strengthening of the United Nations partnership was regarded in Congress today as pointing toward possible U.S. financial help in righting the world's war-damaged economic system.

While Mr. Roosevelt said in a report that lend-lease must end when hostilities cease, his observation that the "United Nations partnership must go on and must grow stronger" set legislators to speculating about the president's plans for his country's job in world rehabilitation.

Chairman Tom Connally (Dem.-Tex.) of the Senate foreign relations committee predicted that much pressure will be exerted on Congress, as soon as fighting stops, to repeal or revise the Johnson Act.

This law, passed in 1934, bans loans by American individuals to foreign governments or individuals. Senator Hiram W. Johnson (Rep.-Calif.) said he had no doubt efforts will be made to change it.

Cobourg K. of C. Observes 25th Birthday

COBOURG, Nov. 25 — (ENS) — Marking the occasion of the 25th anniversary of the founding of Council No. 1970 of the Knights of Columbus, Cobourg, a happy gathering of 150 sat down to a banquet at the Baltimore Hotel Friday night.

J. H. Lafay, recording secretary of the Cobourg Council since its inception 25 years ago, was chairman. Dan McGillis of Port Hope, local Grand Knight, gave the address of welcome and Rex Fleming was song leader with Jack Kewin at the piano. Clergy present included Very Rev. J. V. McAuley of Lindsay, Rev. Peter Butler and Rev. Charles Begley of Grafton; Rev. P. J. Kelly, L.L.D. and Rev. G. J. Maher of Cobourg.

Past Grand Knights of the local K. of C. were Arnold Plunkett of Toronto, Arthur Cauley of Peterborough, W. J. Maher, J. W. O'Sullivan, Dennis Larkin, Maurice McEntee, Edward Hogan, Joseph Delanty and Edward Burns. Short addresses were given by Vincent Cote of Lindsay, District Deputy; Joseph Murphy, Grand Knight of Lindsay; Frank Hickey of Peterborough; W. H. McGuire, J. J. Trecey and Maurice Daigneault of Cobourg.

Messages of regret over inability to be present were read from Rev. G. A. Wolff, P.P., Powassan; Senator J. J. Duffus, Peterborough, State Deputy; Dr. G. J. Lunz of Hamilton, State Treasurer; B. J. Costello of Kitchener and A. B. Collins of Belleville. Soloists during the banquet were Mrs. Vincent Cote of Lindsay; Mrs. Dan Donoghue, Rex Feming and Frances O'Connor. Guest speaker of the evening was Rev. Father Hugh McGettigan, S.F.N. of St. Francis Xavier Seminary, Toronto, who has recently returned from nine years spent in China and India. Father McGettigan spent seven years in Lishui Province, China, until driven into the interior by the Japanese advance. After many ordeals he made his way to Bombay, India, where he was appointed by the Bishop of Bombay to the post of naval chaplain to the allied forces in that port.

A vote of thanks to the speaker was moved by John Delanty and Charles Romano. During the evening, J. H. Lafay read a summary of the history of the local Council covering the past 25 years. Armand Clement led in the singing of "Alouette." The banquet committee was made up of Armand Clement, Eugene Bolster, M. McEntee, J. Tracey and Dennis Larkin.

Abitibi Company May Get Clear

TORONTO, Nov. 25 — (CP) — Losses were registered in all four index groups in the early hours on Toronto market today, the industrials showing the main weakness with a drop of .30. Volume was again small at 234,000 shares for the first three hours.

Abitibi 6 per cent preferred encountered active selling on the announcement of the re-organization plan and the price fell back 2½ to 49½. The common dropped ¼. Other papers were steady. The utility issues weakened and the foods and steels were steady. Hiram Walker weakened ⅛ to 76.

McIntyre, Dome, Pioneer, Beattie, Upper Canada and Central Patricia were among the weak golds. Teck Hughes gained 5 cents, Preston 6 and Transcontinental resource 3.

Steep Rock fell back 10 cents to 2.75 and Nickel lost ½. In the western oils Home had a gain of 5 cents.

that I hoped National Resources Mobilization Act men would volunteer for general service soon enough and large enough numbers so that it would not be necessary to send them overseas by compulsion," he said.

Authority had been given for the dispatch overseas of 16,000 N.R.M.A. men and this power would be used to the extent that adequately trained men, whether now in the N.R.M.A. or not, do not come forward as volunteers sufficiently rapidly to meet the numbers required.

The units to comprise the first 10,000 of the N.R.M.A. for dispatch had been selected and would shortly be moving to concentration areas in Eastern Canada.

"The men who wish to volunteer will be given every opportunity to do so," he continued. "The others, the whole units, including those men, will be dispatched on the dates which at the present time are being arranged.

"The 16,000 that are to go in December, January and the succeeding three months are to be taken out of the N.R.M.A.?" asked J. R. MacNicol (P.C.—Toronto Davenport).

House Noisy

Gen. McNaughton: "That is right, sir. There will be included a few other personnel, naturally, because the officers are not in that category. There are officers and N.C.O.'s who are general service and must go with them."

The House yesterday still was restless and noisy.

The voices of members rose high when Wilfrid LaCroix, member for Quebec Montmorency rose at the opening of the sitting, said he opposed the conscription policy and crossed the floor.

He was the third to leave the Liberal ranks since the overseas conscription order was announced. Others are J. F. Pouliot (Temiscouata) and Charles Parent (Quebec West).

Mr. King announced he had received the resignation of Air Minister Power, a Quebec cabinet member, but he did not wish to recommend its acceptance to the Governor-General until he had considered the matter further.

Gen. McNaughton said in answering questions that the movement overseas of N.R.M.A. troops was in essence based on the sending of the best trained personnel in infantry that could be dispatched up to the numbers for which transportation could be obtained.

"Therefore I do not think there is any invidious discrimination in the choice of individuals," he added.

The 16,000 being discussed by the House were in addition to previous planned movements and were initiated only yesterday afternoon.

Hon. R. B. Hanson (PC-York Sunbury) said he had heard that officers commanding were telling draftees that if they did not volunteer they would not receive rehabilitation grants.

Veterans Minister Mackenzie said that legislation provided that all rehabilitation benefits applied to draftees as well as volunteers with the exception that they would not be entitled to war service gratuity if they remained in Canada. There would be no discrimination against draftees going overseas with respect to any benefit.

Mr. King said he didn't see why the draftee should not be informed of advantages he would get if he became a volunteer.

Gen. McNaughton said that instructions had been issued that the question of volunteering was to be a matter of considerate explanation to draftees.

N. J. M. Lockhart (L-Lincoln) said he had been told a draftee was asked roughly why he had not joined up before and whether he was afraid of the dark or was he yellow.

Gen. McNaughton said he would like to hear specific instances of such actions and if there was justice in such complaints the men indured would receive every justice and rectification.

A reserve list of N.R.M.A. men was being established. They might be posted and placed on leave in industrial, farm or other activities. Their cases would be reviewed individually.

The case of an individual needed on his own or some other farm would be dealt with on its merits subject to the condition the man could be spared from military duties.

Employment companies of N.R.M.A. men would not be used for work of national importance if other workers were available. They should not be allowed to compete with workmen who might obtain jobs at prevailing rates.

Ontario To Pay Half Gross Education Cost

TORONTO, Nov. 25 — (CP). — The Ontario Government in 1945 will assume 50 per cent of the gross cost of education in Ontario. Premier Drew told the annual dinner of the Public School Trustees' and and Ratepayers' Association last night that on December 15 the Government is ending notices to School Boards explaining the system under which the Province takes over half the cost.

Premier Drew did not discuss details, except to say that "the amount to be paid to each School Board will asure as far as possible equality of educational opportunity throughout the whole of Ontario."

"There are those who seem to think that this has been a very simple problem," said the Premier. "I need not tell you how difficult it actually is. Quite apart from the solution of this particular problem, however, it is important that the people of Ontario know some of the reasons for this difficulty."

The Premier then reviewed the educational set-up in Ontario, and stressing that there are 5,827 School Boards, "hardly any two of which have exactly the same local problems." He also mentioned an "enormous variation" on the assessment in the various localities.

"It is doubtful if any similar number of people in the world have anything approaching that number of administrative units of education," he said. "In England and Wales there were up to this year 461 administrative units carrying out the educational system for more than 40,000,000 people."

Premier Drew remarked on the large number of township areas formed this year, 1,419 school sections having been combined to form 61 township areas. "I hope the advantage of these larger administrative units will become apparent and that next year a very much larger number will be formed," he added.

He also made brief reference to introduction of religious education in the schools and said there was no thought of having anything in the nature of denominational teaching. "The whole-hearted support we have received throughout the province has been most encouraging," he said.

Brit'sh Artillery Fight In Yugoslavia

LONDON, Nov. 25—(CP-Reuter)—Three British batteries are helping Marshal Joseph Tito's troops fighting in Montenegro and Hercegovina, the Yugoslav press agency announced here today.

The agency said the British gunners were there at the request of the Allies. There had been no major Allied troop landings on the Yugoslav coast.

Last Sunday's communique from Allied advance headquarters, Mediterranean, reported that British troops of land forces in the Adriatic were co-operating with units of the Yugoslav Army of National Liberation in Montenegro and Hercegovina and were in contact with the Germans.

All this presents a grim picture, and Himmler the hangman means it to be grim. However, Veritas—who is widely regarded as a sound observer—declares he believes the movement is doomed to failure. He maintains the Germans are by nature and training disposed to obey authority, and says it's significan that Eisenhower's authority already is being obeyed in Allied-occupied territory. The refusal of the Germans to believe in the brutality of the Allies is giving concern to the Nazi authorities.

"If the Germans in frontier districts passively accept Allied occupation," Veritas adds, "it is hardly likely that those in the interior will be willing to prolong their own misery by supporting the terrorists who will not scruple to terrorize them. In mountainous districts—as in Bavaria—one may perhaps expect to see the last stand of Nazi fanatics, and the more of them that are eliminated in the process the better for the future peace of the world.

"Greater danger (because it is more subtle) lies in the underground 'cells,' ready when the fighting is over to exploit every discontent during the post-war years on behalf of the national socialist revival."

Nursing Service Best Of Canadians Get

By JEAN STENTON

The RCAMC which has been advancing along with the fighting troops, now has nursing sisters serving in Field Dressing stations, according to Lt.-Col. Agnes Neill, overseas matroan-in-chief of the Nursing Service, who has returned after 4½ years overseas. She is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Neill of Peterborough.

"It is comparatively recent that the sisters have been allowed up that far," she declared. "There are the base hospitals, back the farthest, the Casualty Clearing Stations, then Field Dressing Stations and of course Regimental Aid Posts where no nurses are allowed are practically on the front line."

It has become the custom in some sections to have a surgical unit attached to the Field Dressing stations and that is when the nursing sisters get closer to action. They work along with two surgeons operating on badly wounded men she said. The patients are kept for two or three weeks until they are well enough to be sent further down the line and the nurses remain with them.

Make Best of Things

"Usually, the surgical unit will have been ordered on ahead with the advance before the nurses can leave, but as soon as their wounded are evacuated, the nurses are ordered up front to rejoin their outfits. It is marvellous experience for them and they love it. I am constantly amazed at what the girls manage in the way of improvisation with the little that comes their way."

Col. Neill explained that when the fighting was raging in France casualties were being evacuated to England in a matter of hours, but that since they had gone into the Lowland countries, the distance was too great to send them back and so more forward hospitals have been established.

One of the greatest difficulties for the girls at the front is the accommodation or lack of it, she explained. When they are serving immediately behind the lines they have to take what they can get and it's not always too good. But they are good sports and make the best of it and have a lot of fun doing it. Sometimes they come up so hurriedly that the men haven't been able to do much cleaning. They take over an old chateau or any building, some of them are badly damaged too, and set up housekeeping. They carry their own bed rolls and provisions, and in an amazingly short time they manage to fix up attractive quarters. If a town has been demolished, they have to resort to tent quarters, but this is changed as soon as possible.

Equipment sent to the Field Dressing stations is prepared with a great deal of forethought. The trucks taking up supplies are packed so that the things the doctors and nurses will need first, will be put on last and can be gotten in a hurry. An inventory list is attached to the outside of each package, so it takes only a matter of minutes to locate materials.

Wear Slacks

The closer the girls go up forward, the less elaborate their uniforms become, their chief declared. The trim blue uniforms which are worn in England are discarded in the hospitals on the Continent. Here they wear khaki battle blouses and khaki skirts. Further up in the forward areas, they wear battle blouses and slacks. Since there has been so much rain and mud, the ground is messy and they have long rubber boots they pull on and plow through with.

"The Sisters say they are compensated for any inconveniences occasioned at the front, by the humble gratitude of their badly wounded patients. Men who have been fighting in the muck for days can scarcely realize their good fortune when they have beds with sheets on them. The officers and orderlies are excellent, but the women's touch means a great deal to the casualties."

Placed With Friends

Few civilians realize the care that is taken in placing the nursing personnel in hospitals, she emphasized. Once the originals were over, the reinforcing nursing units were all interviewed individually by the Matron-in-chief. She discussed their preference, qualifications and what was more important, their friends. She said that nearly all of them knew other nurses already over, and wherever possible they were put on the staff of a hospital where a friend was stationed. If a staff had been badly depleted, of course they could not use this system, but wherever possible, it is followed, because they realize the importance of giving the girls pleasant surroundings. They do much better work.

"We were singularly fortunate during the blitz and other heavy bombardments, that none of our hospitals was hit. It was just luck. Our locations did not happen to get the heaviest attacks."

Lt.-Col. Neill arrived back in Peterborough Friday morning, and Friday afternoon was the guest of honor at a tea given by Mrs. Vincent Eastwood, 493 Hunter street west. The tall, broad shouldered woman in her laughingly that three weeks ago she had been making a tour of hospitals in France and Belgium and that as soon as she arrived in England, she was sent to the coast to embark for Canada.

Col. Neill, who is here on "a routine liaison visit" is a graduate of the Toronto General Hospital and was surgical instructress there before joining the Medical Corps.

Flier Killed

LONDON, Nov. 25 —(CP)—Wing Cmdr. Charles Sandford Wynne Eyton, 56 who crashed at St. John's, Nfld., in 1930 in an attempt to fly the Atlantic, has been killed in France it was announced today. He was in the R.A.F.

U.S. BUZZ-BOMB IS READY FOR USE —IF NEEDED — America's version of the German V-1 robot bomb is ready for use—if needed. Above is one of the first pictures taken of the launching at an undisclosed proving ground of the air technical service command. The bomb was reconstructed in 30 days using fragments of German bombs found in England, as models. Its launching ramp is an improvement over the Germans, the ATSC said. It can be built in four days whereas the Nazis required two weeks.

County Agricultural Committee To Be Set Up For Peterborough

Speaking before the annual meeting of the Peterborough County Federation of Agriculture in the Co-op Hall on Friday evening, R. A. Stewart, president of the Lanark County F.O.A., gave a comprehensive review of the work that has been done in the past there, and what is hoped to be accomplished in the future.

Introduced by W. A. Davidson, manager of the United Farmers Co-op, Mr. Stewart told the meeting that the Federation has an important purpose in the consideration of problems which are of common interest to farmers as members of a rural community, and not necessarily as hog breeders, cream producers, or other commodity groups.

These questions, he said, have to do with health, labor, education, soil conservation, rural recreation, feed problems, and assorted other problems which are of interest to all farmers and farm people.

In Lark County, Mr. Stewart said, in a broad outline of how some of these questions are being dealt with in that section of the province, the health program is set up in township units, and through school sections. Information is spread much better when individual contact is made on a community basis, he said.

Speaking on the various commodity groups within the Federation, he said these are essential for the purpose of giving information. But, he added, commodity groups are the less important sides of the Federation, because for one reason they tend to divide the community instead of organizing it. Also a large proportion of farm producers are not organized, and are therefore left out.

"It is not the intention of the Federation to divide communities, but rather to organize them," he pointed out.

Problems Overcome.

A matter of great interest to Peterborough farmers, Mr. Stewart outlined some of the problems faced and overcome, and others still to be overcome, that have been posed by the formation of a county agricultural committee, whose function would be in many cases similar to that of the Federation. As yet, there is no county agricultural committee formed in Peterborough County, although there is, of course, the County Council Agricultural Committee. Lanark County's Federation has had the experience of working with this type of committee, and Peterborough members were interested in learning of how it is working out.

Mr. Stewart stressed the importance of publicity and advertising in the Federation's work. He told the meeting that throughout Lanark County, here are five newspapers carrying the Federation News, a column devoted to carrying up-to-the-minute news of Federation actions both locally and throughout Ontario and Canada.

He explained some of the aspects of the new Municipal Health Services, and detailed soil conservation problems.

In concluding his review of Lanark County Federation affairs, Mr. Stewart called for a free and informal discussion among those present which would air out any questions, and give him a picture of some of the ideas held by Peterborough County Federation. He told the meeting that both himself and members present might learn some things not known before, during a discussion.

F. C. Paterson, Peterborough Conuty representative of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, explained to the members of the county agricultural committee of the Department of Agriculture, which will be formed. He said he had received the necessary letters from various groups to go ahead with the project.

He added the committee will consist of 15 members, although in his opinion the number could be cut in half and attain the same results. However, as it stands now, the committee will consist of a representative of each farm organization; the first choice would fall on the president, probably 13 members, appointed by the organizations, one County Council member, and one member of the Legislature.

Will Not Clash.

During the discussion period, Mr. Paterson, in reference to several queries from interested members, stressed the fact that he doesn't think the county committee and Federation will clash in any way, despite the similarity.

Mr. Paterson also described the "extension lectures" proposed for the United Farm Young People's Federation, which would consist of short courses arranged for by the backing of the agricultural organizations of the county, to be held in the Co-op Hall. As the plans are now, there will be seven meetings, and each meeting will consist of two afternoon gatherings each month. The Federation unanimously approved of both Mr. Paterson's announcements, giving an idea of how the Federation members are disposed toward the plans.

During the discussion periods, the question was raised by Mr. Stewart on why so few women attended the meeting, especially in view of the fact that it was the annual meeting.

One Woman Attends.

Mrs. E. Birdsall, the only woman in attendance for the greater part of the program, was asked to give her ideas on the subject, and she said the husbands should make some effort to persuade the women to "come along to the meetings." Many women, she suggested, might hestitate to come out to the meeting because of a fear they would be the only feminine member present. Women, Mrs. Birdsall said, take a much greater interest in the health and education portions of Federation than in livestock and other sections, which appeal more to the men.

In answer to a question from E. Birdsall, Elmer Milburn summed up briefly the beef situation as it stands to-day, after a series of meetings and discussions with the various officials. Actually, he said, there is an increase in killings of beef cattle at present over other times in the past. Poorer grades of cattle, he said, killed the market.

Expressing his own personal opinion, he said: "The packers and labor took advantage of the situation to clear up some of their own difficulties, and the farmers lost out in some respects."

Several rounds of applause and a hearty vote of thanks by Lorne Reynolds was extended to Mr. Stewart for coming to Peterborough and presenting such an informative review.

Milton Clark conducted the election of two delegates to the forthcoming hog convention, and O. Stanley-Jones and Milton Clark were chosen.

Mr. Clark expressed the view he might be unable to go himself, and he was given permission to choose another delegate if this was the case.

The election of seven directors took place at this annual meeting of the Peterborough County Federation of Agriculture. They are: Milton Clark, Elmer Milburn, W. W. Dawson, Allan Mann, Alex Huston, Willard Waterman, and Mrs. C. Mann.

Henry Batten entertained with a vocal solo.

any further demonstration but all was quiet.

Officer Pushed Around

Military officials here declined to comment and all that a spokesman at Pacific command headquarters in Vancouver would say for the moment was that, "I believe a captain did get pushed about a bit, but there was no further trouble."

It was the second anti-conscription demonstration in the country since the conscripts-for-overseas order was announced. In a civilian demonstration Thursday night at Quebec, a few hours after the announcement at Ottawa, about 700 youths and university students paraded through the streets of French Canada's ancient capital shouting "down with conscription," and tearing down bulletin boards in front of the city's English daily paper, the Quebec Chronicle-Telegraph.

Last night's parade here started in the camp, in the absence of their commanding officers, all attending a military investigation into statements by officers at a press conference in Vancouver last Monday, the men gathered in the camp and marched off to town.

Brig. G. R. McCarter, the commanding officer of a brigade of English-speaking draftees stationed here, and Lt.-Col. John MacGregor, V.C., officer commanding Vernon Camp, are attending an inquiry in Vancouver under Lt.-Gen. E. W. Sansom.

Lasted An Hour

The hour-long demonstration was the first indication of the sentiments of the Canadian 6th Division largely composed of draftees and stationed entirely in British Columbia, and which Ottawa spokesmen have indicated will be among the first groups of home defence troops to be sent overseas under the new partial conscription policy of the government.

The parade had only a small beginning, but it swelled in numbers as it wound its way among huts and administration buildings of the camp and converged on the town. The draftees marched through the main streets while groups of civilians, curious but silent, and a scattering of non-participating soldiers lined the curbs.

The marchers stopped briefly in front of the Legion Hall. Threatened to tear it down, and, after the short episode involving the officers, continued to the park to hold their protest meeting. On the way, some soldiers shouted to the crowds gathered along the streets, "this is only the beginning," and others yelled, "blame the government."

The parade started after the soldiers had listened in camp to news broadcasts reporting the government's probable intention to use men of the 6th Division as reinforcements for Canada's overseas army.

A high-ranking officer-spokesman at the press conference now being investigated by Gen. Samson said men of the 6th Division were highly trained troops who would need only a short refresher course in Britain before being ready for front-line duty.

Academy Burns

NEW WESTINSTER, B.C., Nov. 256 — (CP). — Fire of undetermined source swept through St. Ann's Academy here yesterday and caused damage estimated unofficially at $100,000. At least 60 pupils and 13 nuns escaped injury in the blaze.

Ontario Ready To Compete In Bacon Market

"Denmark has 65 per cent of its normal bacon hog capacity still intact, and Sweden 60 per cent of its normal output ready to go to the British market as soon as war in Europe ceases," said Hon. T. L. Kennedy, Ontario Minister of Agriculture, in a tour of agricultural meetings in the Ottawa district this week.

The Minister said he was quoting these estimates on information "from the very best authority."

"These countries are already making their plans to get back into the British market, and their representatives have been making overtures in that direction. That means we have to be ready, too, to put a continuous supply of the highest quality bacon into Britain, and have to bring down our costs of production so that we can compete with these countries. The hog feeding project has been a step in the right direction, and the young farmers have done a fine piece of work in undertaking it."

Colonel Kennedy was discussing agricultural projects in which Ontario farmers had taken the lead this year, especially in hog feeding to determine the best rations for production of bacon hogs at the lowest possible production costs. This project, he said, was of great importance in view of the stiff competition which Ontario would have to meet in the British market after the war.

Col. Kennedy stressed the necessity for farmers taking a larger part in the discussing of their own problems and trying to work out their own solutions. Referring to the great contribution made by British agriculture to the war contribution of their country, and their amazing record of wartime productino, Col. Kennedy said this had been accomplished because the British government had placed control of agriculture in the hands of farmers, through the County War Agrictultural Committees. He foresaw a great future for activity by county agricultural committees in every county and district in Ontario, through which the farmers could do their own planning, and work out the solutions for their own problems and come to the Government for assistance in making their plans effective. Six county committees are now organized and in operation, and within the next few weeks organization of five more will be completed, said Col. Kennedy, and these committees would be in charge of the agricultural planning for their own counties.

Obituary

MRS. L. KENNEDY

An employee of the Peterborough-Brinton Carpet Company, Mrs. Lawrence Kennedy, formerly Annie McGarrity, died suddenly Thursday evening, at her residence, 614 Lock street. She was in her 32nd year.

Born in Woodstock, the daughter of Thomas McGarrity and Mary Logan, Mrs. Kennedy came to Peterborough when she was eight months of age, and has lived here ever since. Educated at Peterborough Separate schools, she was a member of Sacred Heart Church. Mrs. Kennedy was beloved by a large circle of friends. She belonged to the Altar Society, and also the Catholic Women's League.

Mrs. Kennedy leaves to mourn her loss her husband, her parents, a son, Vincent Leonard, five brothers, Emmet, Leo, Bernard, Francis and Lawrence, and two sisters, Mrs. Stanley Seabrook, and Marguerite, all of Peterborough.

The funeral will be Monday morning at 8:40 o'clock, from the family residence to the Church of the Sacred Heart, for Requiem Mass at nine o'clock. Burial will be in St. Peter's Cemetery.

Think, Before You Vote
How large will the deficit be on the new hospital? No person knows. But if the deficit on a $330,000.00 plant, with an endowment fund of over $242,000.00 to help carry it, is at the rate of over $3,000.00 per month, how much will it be on a $1,400,000 plant without any endowment?
Figure it out for yourself, and keep this fact in mind: No matter how large it is, it MUST be paid by city taxpayers entirely, although almost one half of the deficit will be caused by patients from outside the city. Yes, there may be a doubt about the size of the deficit, but there is not the slightest doubt as to who will pay it.
Remember this when you vote on the proposed new hospital.

Reinforcements Are Assured

It is now clear that ample reinforcements will be available to our infantry troops overseas; that is the point upon which the whole country demanded reassurance, and the Government has given it. As far as possible, these reinforcements will be volunteers — men who have chosen to go abroad to fight for their country; when there are not enough volunteers to make up the required numbers, men of the home defence troops will be sent. The army will be adequately reinforced, and therefore those who felt that our men abroad were being unjustly treated, and were being needlessly endangered, may set their minds at rest. The problem of reinforcing the army no longer exists.

It is for the good of Canada and our war effort that all citizens should realize that the reinforcement problem is settled, and accept the means which have been used to achieve that end. Demonstrations of disaffection in Quebec will gain nothing; many young French-Canadians have already given their lives in this war, and surely no element in Quebec would like to see more lives lost for lack of reinforcements? Quebec spokesmen have frequently and eloquently asserted that their province desires Canadian unity and is ready to make sacrifices to gain it. Here is a chance for Quebec to prove the truth of those words. Conscription—their bogey for thirty years—has been made effective to save Canadian lives; if they accept that fact with good grace they will invalidate forever three-quarters of the bitter charges which are made against them by English-Canadian agitators and divisionists. As for the out-and-out conscriptionists, they have gained half a loaf, and they had better realize that it is better than no bread. If their concern about reinforcements was genuine, they should be satisfied now; if it was nothing but a cloak for an attempt to discredit the Government they will reveal it in their discontent and their protests.

During the period of the reinforcement crisis many bitter, false and malignant charges have been made against the Prime Minister, and the chief of these has been that he has put politics before military necessity. It would be true to say that Mr. King has been torn between military necessity and a principle which is very dear to him, and which is the foundation of the party which he leads—the principle of liberalism. Nothing is so directly contrary to liberalism as the use of compulsion in any matter of conscience, and a man's decision to fight for his country is first and foremost a matter of conscience. Such liberalism is not a matter of party; it is part of a philosophy of life, and a philosophy of life cannot be lightly violated. But the voluntary system of enlistment broke down, and compulsion had to be used to back up our forces. Nevertheless, under the system which has now been created the young man who comes of military age may still volunteer, and go to war as a matter of free choice, and not as a conscript. The Examiner, which has always maintained that one volunteer is worth three pressed men, is glad that this freedom of choice has been maintained.

A Successor To Mackenzie King

The Progressive Conservative members of the Opposition made a good deal of noise in the Commons on Thursday and also (as is the privilege of Oppositions) said a number of silly things which they could not possibly be expected to translate into facts. The silliest, perhaps, was their suggestion that they could form an alternative government if the Prime Minister were to resign. They even appeared to think that their leader, Mr. John Bracken, could lead such a government. Surely these gentlemen know the temper of the Canadian people better than that? What earthly use would Mr. Bracken be, utterly inexperienced as he is in Dominion and international affairs, if he were pitched into the Prime Minister's office at this time? It would be like a football coach, who wanted to replace his captain during the last quarter, sending a man on the field whom he had picked at random from the spectators' benches. If a new government were to be formed, Mr. Coldwell, who has had Parliamentary experience, would be a more promising leader than Mr. Bracken.

Mr. R. B. Hanson reminded the Prime Minister that he is not indispensable. It is only a fortnight since the Republicans in the United States were warning Mr. Roosevelt that he is not indispensable, and Mr. Roosevelt admitted it with the greatest good nature. But when the election came the people of the U.S. chose Mr. Roosevelt instead of Mr. Dewey, whose experience and qualifications for leading a great nation at war were not impressive. We do not think that the people of Canada would show any less political acumen if an election were called at this time. The present Government, under Mr. King, has shaped and guided Canada's splendid war effort with some mistakes and many notable achievements; we do not think that Canadians want any other leader until the war in Europe is ended.

Mr. King has said that he will not call an election until Parliament has run the full span of its life. That will be next March. Then the people of Canada will be able to choose a successor to Mr. King, or return him to power once again. Meanwhile the taunts which the Conservative Opposition have directed at Mr. King and General McNaughton—a man who was a hero to them until he accepted office in the King Ministry, which automatically converted him into a shady character — show an alarming contempt for the seriousness of the matter in hand, and an obvious concern for immediate political advantage.

A Prophet Honoured—Too Late

A good deal of stir was caused in the book world last month when the manuscript of Edgar Allen Poe's story Murders In The Rue Morgue was sold for $34,000; a letter which he wrote when he was 20 was sold at the same time for $2,500. Thus, in one afternoon, two Poe manuscripts brought the sum of $36,500. It would be safe to say that Poe never earned any such sum during the whole course of his life. He rarely had enough money for the most modest sort of comfort, and often he was desperately poor.

Several newspapers have moralized on this subject, reflecting on what a few hundred dollars would have meant to Poe at any period of his life. Poverty and hard luck dogged him unrelentingly; the death of his young wife was preventable, but he lacked the money to prevent it. He wrote of many a palace and stately mansion, but his own best dwelling was a pokey little cottage. He has often been represented as a drunkard, but this is unjust; he was peculiarly susceptible to liquor, and a couple of drinks robbed him of his self-control. His battles to overcome the desire for even a small quantity of drink were pitiable, for in the end he always lost. Few men of letters have known such misery and humiliation as Poe.

He knew himself to be a genius, and like all such people he was treated with scorn and cruel contempt by most of his contemporaries. He received little recognition at home, and it was in France that his greatest fame was established during his lifetime; to the French Poe's name still ranks with Byron's as a great romantic writer. Poe did much to put the United States on the map, so far as literature went, and the States was blandly insensible to his good offices.

Now his manuscripts fetch great sums. They are beautiful manuscripts, for one of Poe's vanities was his unusually perfect handwriting. Like the composer Schubert, he has left a rich mine for the speculators of a latter day. The question we may ask ourselves, and which is uncommonly difficult to answer, is this: Is it better to be poor and be Poe, or to be nobody and sell Poe's manuscripts for thousands of dollars?

Diary Of Christmas Preparation

By
SAMUEL MARCHBANKS

SUNDAY: Was talking to a deeply learned fellow this evening who declared that we are all inveterate imitators, and that we form our characters upon the books we read, the comic strips we follow, and the movies we see. He said that it was nonsense to accuse any man of being a poseur, because we are all poseurs, and the commonest pose of all is that of the plain-spoken, hard-headed fellow with no nonsense about him. ....If this is so, some of the people I meet must read very peculiar books; they could not get the way they are through any course of reading which is available to the general public. But it is a plain fact that no man has a fixed and immutable character; he exists as his wife sees him, and as his children see him, and as everyone he knows sees him, but all the images are different; he also exists as he sees himself, which differs markedly from any other image of him; and doubtless God sees him as he really is, in a synthesis of all the images, which must give God many a laugh and many a twinge of pain. But most of what a man thinks of as his character is sham and shell.

MONDAY: Hailed a man I know this morning with the usual question, 'How are you?' To my amazement and delight he replied, 'First-rate: I never felt better in my life.'....Usually the reply is 'Oh, not too bad' or something depressing of the kind....Waiting for a bus today I listened to the conversation of two women who were waiting also; they were exchanging symptoms. Such tales of nervous breakdown, bad dreams, uncontrollable crying, pains in the legs, bladder weakness and general debility I have never heard; although they stood side by side they shouted as though they were conversing in a hurricane, and as their symptons grew worse and worse, their voice grew louder and shriller. They talked so loudly that I had no need of my formidable powers of eavesdropping. To my unskilled eye they looked healthy, though unwholesome and glum....Most people like to be ill, and ask nothing more than a chance to rehearse their ailments. In some dark corner of their minds (I use the word loosely) there lurks the notion that if they ever admit that they feel quite well the gods will at once punish them with some direful malady.

TUESDAY: My favourite newspaper informs me that Fala, President Roosevelt's Scottie is to have what it coyly calls 'a bride' and that what it also inaccurately calls 'the lucky dog' is Rubev, a child of Telek, the Scottie which Winston Churchill gave to General Eisenhower! What an event in international society! But the paper does not say whether Rubev has decided upon a church wedding, or a civil affair, with Mayor La Guardia officiating....This business of choosing 'brides' for dogs appeals to me strongly; all the dogs in my neighbourhood are painfully lax in this respect, and although I am assured by their owners that they are of human intelligence, or better, the notions of monogamy and privacy have not yet occured to them. The example of Fala and Rubev should clean up canine morals, as did that of Queen Victoria and Prince Albert....The idea of aristocracy among human beings has now fallen into disrepute, but it is rising sharply in the animal world, where a mesalliance is regarded with horror. To mix a metaphor, mankind is now on all fours, while the dog is mounting his high horse.

WEDNESDAY: Virtuously determined that I would do my Christmas shopping early this year, and looked over some toys, none of which seemed as good as those which I had when I was a child; the war must be blamed, I suppose. Buying presents for children is easy; they want so many things and there are so many things to give them; but adults present a problem which increases every year. I have always dreamed of being rich and doing my Christmas shopping on a grand scale—an exquisitely carved sapphire for this one, a splendid miscroscope for that one, a dozen gold service plates for another, and mink coats for all my distant relatives; I would send baskets of luxurious foods and wines to all the people whom I now fob off with a five-cent Christmas card; I would give whole libraries to deserving scholars and blocks of brewery stock to the struggling clergy. I would drain the pleasure of giving to the very dregs. I would be a voluptuary of philanthropy....But alas, I run from shop to shop, pricing bedsocks and penwipers and wondering if I could not quarrel with a few relatives, thereby obviating the need to give them anything

THURSDAY: Gave assistance in making some Christmas cakes; I have unusual persistance and muscle as a stirrer, and unless Christmas cake is well-stirred it is wasted time to put it in the oven. Christmas cake contains everything which is needed to sustain life in a highly concentrated form; it would be possible to eat nothing but Christmas cake for twenty years, and maintain perfect health; I can't imagine why more people don't do it....Baking the cake demands greater artistry than stirring. After three hours in the oven, the cakes have to be tested. I favour a straw out of a well-used broom (the cellar broom is best) for this, but I find that fussy modern cooks prefer a toothpick. You jab the cake suspiciously with the toothpick and if it shrieks, or blows up in your face, you put it back in the oven for ten or fifteen minutes before testing again. If the toothpick brings out a raisin, or a piece of candied peel, you eat it, nodding your head and smacking your lips professionally, to show that you are working, and not merely pampering your inner man. When the cakes are cooked, you wrap them in the daily paper and put them away; by the time the cakes are ripe the papers are valuable historical documents.

FRIDAY: A mother who is having a spot of bother with her firstborn asked me today which period of a child's life I thought most difficult? "That between birth and death" I replied and staggered from the room, convulsed by my own wit....Later in the day I was chatting with an Australian who complained that the Americans had made a toy of the Koala bear, which they call Kola; apparently 'Koala' is an Australian aboriginal word meaning 'furry-little-nibbler-of-succulent-gum-leaves' whereas Kola suggests a soft drink flavoured with paregoric... My Christmas shopping is now well advanced, and I advise anyone who is thinking of giving me a present to get it now, before everything is picked over.

SATURDAY: I always seem to be a few weeks ahead of the calendar at this time of year; the peak of my Christmas enthusiasm is reached during the first ten days of December. After that I suffer a slow decline and sometimes reach December 26 without a spark of gusto left. Today I was a one-man Santa Claus Parade; a month from now I shall be dreaming of the Spring.... My furnace is on one of its periodic sit-down strikes, so I must spend the evening in the cellar, reasoning with it. With an armchair and a book and a jug of raspberry vinegar I can inject a certain amount of pleasure into these cellar vigils.

"RECOMMENDED FOR THE ASIATIC PLAGUE—"

Thomas Campbell – Poet of Scotland

(By J. H. B. PEEL)

THOMAS CAMPBELL, the Scots poet, who died just one hundred years ago—on June 15th, 1844 — traced his ancestry, through the knight of Lochawe, to Sir Neil Campbell, who fought alongside Robert Bruce in the struggle for Scotland's independence, in the early part of the fourteenth century.

When Campbell was born in Glasgow, on July 27th, 1777, his father was already sixty years old, and his mother forty-six; he was the youngest of a family of eleven. He was educated at Glasgow Grammar School and later at Glasgow University, where he studied, and in turn rejected, the professions of doctor, lawyer, pastor, and accountant. His father's flourishing commercial dealings with Virginia suffered a drastic reverse during the war with America, and Thomas Campbell was forced to earn his livelihood as a tutor.

THE first of these posts took him to the wild shores of the Isle of Mull. It was here, amid grandeur and repose, that his genius was nurtured, and in one of his best ballads "Lord Ullin's Daughter", he echoes the Highland legends and customs. The ballad tells how the young chief of Ulva elopes with Lord Ullin's daughter, and begs a boatman to ferry them across the water:

> And fast before her father's man > three days we've fled together, > for should he find us in the glen,
> my blood would stain the heather.

Although a storm was raging, the ferryman agrees:

> Outspoke the hardy Highland wight,
> "I'll go my chief, I'm ready:
> It is not for your silver bright,
> But for your winsome lady".

Lord Ullin arrives on the shore in time to see the frail boat smashed by the waves. He cries out his forgiveness, imploring them to put back:

> 'Twas vain: the loud waves lashed the shore, > return or aid preventing > —the waters wild went o'er his child, > and he was left lamenting.

In 1799, when he was still a boy of twenty Campbell published his long poem, 'The Pleasures of Hope," in which he shows the part played by Hope as the mother watches her cradled child, as lovers inspect their new home, as slaves look for liberty, and as the poor man gazes on the cottager's snug garden.

This poem—which is not his best—won him immediate fame, but only little money, for he sold it outright at £60. Three years later he received a second offer (when it was too late)—an annunity of £200 for life.

CAMPBELL now toured Europe, finding that his fame had preceded him and that he enjoyed the entree into every English colony there. He visited Hohenlinden, which was later the scene of a savage battle against Napoleon's invading army, and his poem, of that name, gives a vivid description of the incident:

> On Linden when the sun was low,
> and bloodless lay the untrodden snow;
> and dark as winter was the flow > of Iser rolling rapidly.

But the snow was red:

> By torch and trumpet fast arrayed
> each horseman drew his battle-blade, > and furious every charger neighed
> to join the dreadful revelry.

Campbell married his cousin, Matilda, with whom he set up home at Sydenham—in those days a pretty village about ten miles (16 kilometres) from the centre of London. He had a hard task to earn a living, and the strain of hackwriting told upon his health; but he had powerful friends, and in 1805 he wrote to Walter Scott, his fellow countryman and poet, "His Majesty has been pleased to grant me a pension of £200 a year. God save the King."

He continued to write poetry and general literature and to enjoy successes and endure sorrows. His eldest son became insane and was put into an asylum, and his young boy died early in life.

Materially he flourished. He was thrice elected Rector of Glasgow University—his old University—and in 1832 he founded the British-Polish Association, to foster good relations with that country and to aid its fight for independence. He was also responsible for the original plans to found a University in London—efforts which later were eminently fruitful.

BUT, much as he loved other countries, his best poems praise the British Isles; as, for example, his famous tribute to "The Mariners of England":

> Ye mariners of England,
> that guard our native seas:
> whose flag has braved, a thousand years,
> the battle and the breeze.
> Britannia needs no bulwark,
> no towers along the steep;
> her march is on the mountain waves,
> her home is on the deep.

On the death of his wife, Campbell took a house at Pimlico, near the Thames below Chelsea, where his niece kept home for him; but the death of many of his friends and relatives plunged him into a gloom, from which he tried to escape by residence in France. Here he was more lonely than ever and he fell into a decline, and died at Boulogne, on June 15th in 1844 at the age of sixty-seven.

He lies buried in Westminster Abbey, near to Addison, Sheridan, and Goldsmith. By way of tribute to his work on behalf of Poland, a Polish nobleman scattered over his tomb a handful of ashes from the grave of another great writer, the Polish patriot Kosciusko.

Thomas Campbell was not a supreme poet, but what he wrote, he wrote with integrity and verve and a handful of his ballads enjoy assured fame, and will long be included in anthologies of British poetry. "Ye Mariner of England" and "The Battle of the Baltic" are among the most boisterous patriotic poems in the English language and his "Lord Ullin's Daughter" is a flawless example of a concise ballad with a universal appeal.

Unconsidered Trifles

The attractive blonde took off her clothes and climbed on to a wheel-table. The nurse covered her up with a sheet, trundled the table into the hall, and left her while she went back to get instructions.

Presently down the hall came a man clothed in white. He paused as he came to the girl, lifted the sheet, dropped it, and proceeded on his way. Behind him came another white-clad figure, who followed the same routine. A third figure appeared. Lifting the sheet he stared intently.

"For heaven's sake," cried the nervous patient, "when are you going to operate on me?"

The white-clad figure carefully replaced the sheet. "Darned if I know, lady," he said. "We're just the painters here."

A Bible Message

And as some spake of the temple, how it was adorned with goodly stones, and gifts, he said, As for these things which ye behold, the days will come, in the which there shall not be left one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down.

And they asked him, saying, Master, but when shall these things be? and what sign will there be when these things shall come to pass? And he said, Take heed that ye be not deceived: for many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; and the time draweth near: go ye not therefore after them.... And when ye shall see Jerusalem compassed with armies, then know that the desolation thereof is nigh.

Then let them which are in Judaea flee to the mountains; and let them which are in the midst of it depart out; and let not them that are in the countries enter thereinto. For these be the days of venegance, that all things which are written may be fulfilled....

And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the room, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring. Men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth: for the powers of heaven shall be shaken. And then shall they see the Son of man coming in a cloud with power and great glory.

And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads: for your redemption draweth nigh. (Luke 21: 5-8, 20-22, 25-28.)

Letter To The Editor

PROPERTY OWNERS REPLY

Sir,—As secretary of the Peterborough Property Owners' Association, I have pleasure in accepting your offer to give Mr. Sills and others who may be interested, some information about our Association.

First of all, let me assure Mr. Sills that we are a legally organized body, the first meeting of which was held on October 20th, 1941, and was presided over by Mr. Claude Rogers. There is nothing secret or hidden about us. Everything is open and above board. The present officers are: President, William Langford, who was alderman for the North Ward for many years; Secretary, William Tinker, who has lived in Peterborough for 32 years, and Treasurer, Fred Holmes, who has been a resident of the city for 35 years or more. So you see we are quite respectable.

Our membership consists of the majority of the larger property owners of Peterborough. We have some members who own their own homes only, but not many. We do not pretend to have a very large membership, but feel that what we lack in quantity, we may make up in quality. We welcome home owners, but feel that one reason why more home owners do not join, is due to the fact that an increase in taxes for the man who owns his own home only, is not so serious as it is for a person who owns several. Hence the apathy on the part of the average home owner.

Our meetings are advertised in the press when desirable. One such meeting was advertised a few weeks ago, and was duly reported in the "Examiner". All property owners were invited, and while I did not notice Mr. Sills among those present, we would have been glad to have had him with us, and his views upon the hospital and other matters upon the agenda, would have been listened to with respect, and with as much respect as if he had owned 50 houses. Could anything be more open or democratic? I don't think it could.

The assessment upon which our members pay taxes is quite high. More than one of the members paying taxes upon a city assessment of over $125,000, in addition to county taxes.

Our members are folk who have the utmost faith in our city, have built homes for themselves and for others and are just as proud of their chosen calling, as Mr. Sills is of his, and whose ideals of service are just as high as any in the city. One might gather from the "atmosphere" of Mr. Sills' letter that owning property for others to live in, was something to be hidden, something to be ashamed of, and I would like to ask "Where would Peterborough be if there were no houses built for rent?" Property owners are the life blood of any community, and the rich and powerful organization with which Mr. Sills is associated, has in the past, not disdained to receive financial asssitance by way of greatly reduced taxation from these same property owners for many, many years.

As far as an adequate hospital is concerned, the members of this Association take 2nd place to none, not even Mr. Sills, in recognizing this fact, and agree with that gentleman that an adequate hospital is an essential part of any community. The only apparent difference between us is, that members of the Peterborough Property Owners' Association feel that the burden of providing and maintaining a hospital for 60,000 persons should not be placed upon about 3,200 taxpayers, or about 5 per cent. of the prospective hospital patients.

Mr. Sills apparently thinks otherwise, and just as he maintains his right to hold and voice that opinion, so I am sure he will grant the members of the Peterborough Property Owners' Association the same right to hold and voice their opinion.

I hope I have answered Mr. Sills to his satisfaction. If I have not, I shall be glad to meet him upon any public platform at any time or place he may desire, at which time and place he can voice his thought regarding the proposed new hospital, and I shall be proud to voice the opinion of the Peterborough Property Owners' Association upon the same subject.

With many thanks to you, sir, for your kindness in this matter.—Yours truly,

WILLIAM TINKER, Secretary
Peterborough Property Owners' Association.

"y JEAN STENTON

LIEUT. RUBY ROGERS

Nurses serving overseas write with a deep sense of thankfulness about the blood plasma which the Red Cross has been sending overseas to aid in the fight of the wounded for life. One of these is Lieut. Ruby Rogers of Havelock, who is stationed in Belgium.

"For a while we were using a case of plasma a day — that is about 12 bottles. We use a fair amount of blood too. I really don't know what we would do without the field transfusion unit. We get all our blood plasma and penicillin from them. We give all the patients with wounds into the brain tissue, penicillin and sulfadiazine.

"Many patients are admitted to our hospital, but we send them on quickly by air to England. The greater percentage of our patients are either entirely unconscious or have suffered brain injuries. They have to be fed mostly fluids. We get a number paralyzed on one side, whichever side they were hit on. Then too, the hospital gets men with back injuries and we have had a fair number paralyzed from wherever the lesion is down.

So Helpless

"We have a few most of the time in the ward who are not conscious enough to keep the mucus cleared from their throats — they have airways down and sometimes a tube like an anaesthetic patients, and we feed some by tube if they cannot swallow. One of the biggest problems is preventing bed sores, especially on deeply unconscious or paralyzed patients."

Lieut. Rogers is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Rogers, Havelock. She enlisted in December 1939, going overseas in June 1940 and has seen service in England, Africa, Italy, France and is now in Belgium. Her brother, Flying Officer W. R. Rogers, is an instructor in Scotland. For a time, he was an observer in coastal command and has seen service in Africa.

Barns Popular

The people back home may not think of a barn as a very desirable placed to bed down, but to many of the soldiers who have been fighting in Belgium, it is the height of luxury writes, Gnr. Ralph Rogow, Survey Regiment, to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. Rogow, 440½ George street.

"Right now we are quartered in a barn, and bad as it may sound, I can't remember ever being more comfortable. My mattress is three feet thick, all soft straw, and it's very warm and comfortable. Of course the chickens like it too, and who are we to blame them. But they don't bother us and we don't bother them.

"Belgium is a low-lying, flat country, rich soil and good farming. There is no shortage of food in the country, but the cities are in rather a hungry state. In the small towns you can get all you want of anything — we've even bought maple sugar candy and flashlights. There is no shortage of cognac or beer or any of the luxury articles, such as exists in England. What's more important, the prices are reasonable too. I have a shave and a haircut for 20 cents; 1 lb. grapes, 38 cents; ice cream, 12½ cents; steak dinner, 75 cents.

"Holland is just like a billiard table, I'm told and the country is easily flooded. The Germans have done their best to flood it. Can you imagine a little rise about a foot above the water, and 400 yards away another little rise, Jerry holding one and our boys the other. In between is flooded ground, about one foot of water and one foot of mud. Well that's the ground our Infantry has to take from the Germans, absolutely bare, no cover at all. You folks at home can rightly be proud of the Canadian Infantry, because they are doing the hardest and best fighting in the whole war, and that's saying a lot. They've really made a name for themselves.

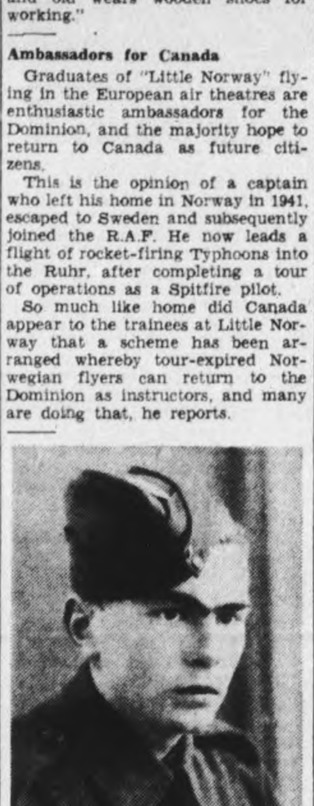
"I'm trying my best to learn Flemish and German. The other day I met a chap who spoke French and Flemish, and using French as the common language, I picked up a little. Of course, my French is horrible too, but I can make myself understood. Everybody here, young and old wears wooden shoes for working."

Ambassadors for Canada

Graduates of "Little Norway" flying in the European air theatres are enthusiastic ambassadors for the Dominion, and the majority hope to return to Canada as future citizens.

This is the opinion of a captain who left his home in Norway in 1941, escaped to Sweden and subsequently joined the R.A.F. He now leads a flight of rocket-firing Typhoons into the Ruhr, after completing a tour of operations as a Spitfire pilot.

So much like home did Canada appear to the trainees at Little Norway that a scheme has been arranged whereby tour-expired Norwegian flyers can return to the Dominion as instructors, and many are doing that, he reports.



SPR. ROBERT LOCHEAD

When his truck hit a mine in Belgium, Spr. Robert Lochead of the Royal Canadian Engineers, had a narrow escape, he wrote his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Lochead, of Norwood.

The corporal of the section and Spr. Lochead set out on a job and they were driving along when the truck hit a mine. The Norwood soldier was knocked out for about half a minute and when he regained consciousness, he found he had face and forehead cuts. The truck was badly smashed with the front half on the side opposite where he had been sitting, blown to pieces. The corporal was nearly killed, but the last word Spr. Lochead had, he was still alive.

While waiting for a new truck, the young soldier told his family that he was patched up and sent back to the troops. A few nights prior to his letter written late in October, he told of making a trip within 300 yards of the German lines for lumber. It was so dark that neither side could see anything.

The 21-year-old soldier enlisted three years ago last January and was overseas three years in June. He landed in France a week after D-Day and fought through Caen. A brother, is with an infantry unit in Western Canada.

Canadian Navy Eats Well

Napoleon once said that "an army marches on its stomach"—to give it modern paraphrasing to fit Canada's fast-expanding navy it would read, "the navy fights on its stomach." And that is not meant as the punster would have you take it.

For today, with Canadian naval units doing duty in all theatres of amphibious warfare, the food served on board ship plays an important part in keeping up the fighting calibre of the ship's company. For a man with a sick stomach or poorly-filled one is useless to a captain when in an emergency.

Contrary to the predominating civilian belief, the Royal Canadian Navy's foodstuffs are rationed. Each ship is allotted a certain amount of each meat, vegetable, dessert and tea and coffee for every man on board. While the men do get the best there is available, they are also allowed only their portion—they realize this and adhere to the rules.

Wholesome But Simple

Food on board ship is wholesome but simple. There is no fancy dress-up of a roast or a decoration of a dessert with whipped cream. The cooks have a heavy enough job preparing for the men—as is the case on H.M.C.S. Peterborough—to have to bother with anything fancy during the rushing meal hours.

Like at other armed service establishments the meal hours are set, and anyone showing up for his "chow" after the eating hour is out of luck until the next meal. The cafeteria system is used with each man serving himself. He can take what he wants, but he must eat everything he takes. Second helpings are allowed until the amount prepared for the meal is finished. The cooks after cooking the allowed ration for each man, make no repeat orders.

Galley Kept Open

The only ratings on board ship who are allowed to deviate from the regular meal hours are those who stand watch on the "four hours on, four hours off" schedule. Some of these are standing watch while the regular meal is being served. For them the cooks make a special concession by keeping the galley open.

During the late evenings and small hours of the morning the

The Shining Big Sea Water Of Hiawatha

By B. T. R.

PORT ARTHUR, Ont.—To cruise up the Great Lakes and back again is to traverse an historic route whose importance to a past generation can be recalled only by imagining, as one embarks at Sarnia or Windsor or Detroit or Buffalo, or any other lower lake port, that there is no other way to get to the Prairies than by boat. In the day or gasoline rationing, what better holiday experience than to travel over the course which the first white settlers followed to the West? It was the only course they could follow, and they travelled it in schooners before the days of the steamboat.

You travel overnight up Lake Huron and, after breakfast, watch the ship pass through the Soo Locks, where six or eight long freighters almost nudge each other in line waiting to go through, and just as many are disappearing down the river. Most vital waterway in North America, comparable to the Panama Canal in shaping the economic structure of a continent, the Soo Locks are beginning to emerge from the tight military control of earlier years in the war. The anti-aircraft balloons and the ack-ack batteries are no longer obvious.

Another morning brings you to the Canadian Lakehead cities of Port Arthur and Fort William, now containing almost 100,000 of population. Sailing in the evening, the next morning brings Duluth, named after Du Luth, the king of the coureurs de bois, One of the silly rule of Canada's wartime bureaucracy requires a Canadian to take only $10 ashore with him at Duluth, though if he stays on board he can have his pockets bulging with dollar bills as far as the foreign exchange control board cares,

To-day the tourists sit in deck chairs, watch the freighters going by on the lakes, waving to passengers on other steamboats admiring the scenery, and breathing the cool air of Lake Superior. Temperature of the lakewas 43degrees the other day, and it is a pity it cannot be piped down to the hot cities of the East in July and August. Lake Superior is the Shining Big-Sea-Water of the Hiawatha poem. When Manitou, the Indian god, sent the beaver diving into Lake Superior to bring up some earth from the bottom, the beaver came up gasping and said he could not find bottom. So Manitou sent the otter down, which also failed. Then the little muskrat volunteered, and down he dived. Next day they found his body floating in the lake, but he had a grain of sand grasped in his claws. He had reached bottom, but died in the attempt. The Chippewa Indians knew Lake Superior was deep. So did Hiawatha, son of a chieftain. But not until the white man came along were the depths measured at 1,300 feet. There is enough water in the five Great Lakes to cover all Canada 15 feet deep, and they contain half the fresh water in the world.

In the years of the Rebellion in Upper Canada, when there was still plenty of wilderness in what is now southern Ontario, settlers were beginning to sail up Lake Huron and through the straits of Michilimackinac to Lake Michigan. In 1837 there were 5,000 people in Chicago. Even then there was the first grain trade on Lake Erie, with Ontario and Ohio shipping wheat through lake port and canal. Soon the prairies came within the horizon of immigrants—Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota, then Manitoba, the Dakotas finally Saskatchewan and Alberta. A century passed, and in 1936 the last homestead was filed in western Canada, and there was no more free land even in the Peace River country. In that hundred years you have an epoch of history in which our era was created.

Strange how the years have dimmed the memory of the part played by the Great Lakes as a highway into the heart of a continent! Fast railways ended the days when a thousand or more ships carried settlers westward. Now the Great Lakes traffic is carried on a fleet of some 300 carriers, long ships with roomy holds, some as big as 14,000 tons.

The repercussions of world events were felt along the ports of the Great Lakes. The Irish potato famine of 1845 impelled a wave of immigrants to the midwest, travelling in ships on which the settlers' wagons were lashed to the masts. The revolution of 1848 in Europe generated another wave of migration, and the Germans arrived in Milwaukee in such numbers that in 1851 that city more than doubled its population, reaching 46,000. Wheat went to $2 a bushel after the Crimea War, and the prairie farmers had their first great boom. So did the lakes' shipping lines.

The great flow of immigration went into Lake Michigan, not Lake Superior, simply because the Soo Rapids long barred the way into the greatest lake of them all. If there had been easy access into Lake Superior, before the first Soo Lock was built in 1855, history might have been different in the opening of the West. Before 1855 the only way around the Soo Rapids was by portage on a Red River cart. Still the first settlers into Manitoba and the Canadian prairies travelled over the lakes, before the railway was built into the West, and many an immigrant journeyed over the Big-Sea-Water of Hiawatha.

Northern Finches Erratic In Seasonal Movements

Many of the northern finches are erratic in their seasonal movements. The Purple Finch is not as irregular as some of these and so is generally to be found in small numbers at this season. The male of this bird is, as its name implies, a winey-red color, the beak being tinged with it also. The females and immatures are grey-brown above with dark streaks and below white with heavy streaking on the throat and breast. The heaviness of bill and broad light band over and back of the eye will distinguish them from other birds of the game size (about that of the common House Sparrow).

Their notes when learned are a good field mark, for while having a certain clear quality so common in finches, they are fuller and are richer and readily identified.

Purple Finches nest over most of the wooded area of Canada, coming south in October, many remaining to winter in the very southern parts of the country.

Specimens of male Purple Finches seldom look very bright when seen in the hand, sunlight and distance being responsible for the impression of brilliance you get at seeing them out of doors. This is true also of such birds as Cardinals, Tanagers and Goldfinches.

Some of the shore-birds, while starting southward as early as July, continue their migration into October. The Pectoral, Semipalmated and Least Sandpipers, and Killdeer and Semipalmated Plover are among these and so is the Wilson's Snipe. The Snipe, well known to sportsmen, is righly colored in browns, which camouflage the motionless bird well against a background of mud and dead weeds and grass.

When, some years ago, all the other shore birds were put on the protected list, the Woodcock and Snipe alone were still in such numbers as to warrant continued shooting. The Woodcock is rather local in distribution, and plentiful in some places; but the Snipe seems to be more evenly numbered over its range, and is one of our commonest shore-birds.

The Snipe is notoriously tricky to shoot when it first rises, for it twists and turns for a few minutes before settling down to a straight flight. E. H. Forbush in "The Birds of Massachusetts and Other New England States," tells yarn of the wag, who said he never could "bag" Snipe, for when he shot "zig" they flew "zag."

As they are flushed, they make a harsh note like "wick." This is usually a rather startling interruption to one's quiet meditations when strolling through their haunts.

Most of the small insectivorous birds are gone now, and most that remain are specialized to eat some available form of this life.

The Phoebe is the last flycatcher to leave us, remaining until the early morning pools are covered with ice. The Phoebe is about sparrow size, a dull bird with the puffy head of the flycatchers. It is soft brown above and yellowish below, with one light wing bar and light edges on the secondaries. As it perches looking about for passing insects, it wags its tail with nervous twitches.

Nazi Guns Blazing Across Dieppe Beach Pins Down Wounded Peterboro Soldier

By DON McGIBBON.

(Editor's Note: Here is the unusual story of a former Peterborough boy, Pte. Grenville Juniper, who tells in his own words of the attack on Dieppe; and of the thoughts and emotions that passed through his mind as he lay torn by several bullets on the beach, before being made a prisoner-of-war. He has since been repatriated, and is visiting friends in Peterborough.)

5:45 a.m., August 19, 1942:

"I am going into action for the first time, and I don't think I am afraid. Perhaps a little nervous, but all of us are that way. We left the big transport that brought us over when we got to within five miles of the coast of Dieppe. Now we are huddled in small landing barges; it is quite dark. I am not thinking of anything in particular, except what's going to come in a very few minutes. We should accomplish everything we have come to do; we have practiced many times on the coast of the Isle of Wight back in England.

"I can hear ack-ack now: Germans firing at a few R.A.F. planes above the town. I can make out the beach now; we are getting closer. I saw a flare go into the sky; the Germans are warning each other we are coming. Dawn is breaking; the boats are close inshore and we are getting ready to land. The Germans have already opened fire on us. 'This is it,' I remember thinking.

6:15 a.m., August 19:

"Fifteen minutes have gone by since I landed on this section of the Dieppe coast, about a mile down the beach from the town. I have been wounded; I don't know how seriously yet. My side is bleeding, but I am not in too great pain. The Royals were the first to land here, storming ashore in the middle of a hail of German bullets, and making their way quickly to the cover of a wall about 10 feet high, at the end of the beach. I ran toward the wall.

"By this time the battle was raging on the beaches; noise was terrific, but I only remember seeing one or two wounded while I made my way to the cover. Ours was the first wave; the second landing really got it. There are pill-boxes on the wall; some Germans are firing from them. I got to the wall without being hit; I remember telling the soldiers lying up against it to spread out, but they ignored me. Afterwards, I wondered why I said it, being only a private. I started to shoot mortars at a pill-box. I fired two, but I don't know whether they hit it or not. I knew that I had been hit several minutes after the force of the bullets striking my side twirled me around and around. Someone took over the mortar; I felt tired and wanted to go to sleep. I had difficulty breathing. I got back up against the wall.

"For a few brief minutes I had hopes of being rescued, when I saw a tank landing craft close by. I started to crawl toward it, but a superior oficer shouted 'Get back against the wall, Juniper; you're attracting fire.' I realized he was right, and returned to the wall. Looking back now, I see that if he hadn't warned me back I would have been killed. I saw other guys smoking, but I felt sick, and could not light one. I knew now that the battle was going against us. Dead Canadians were lying around me. My head was swirling. I thought I was in a rather bad condition. The worst was yet to come. One hour and a half later, German bullets cut through my ankle. Still, I was not unconscious all the time.

8:00 a.m., August 19:

"Two hours have passed since I landed here; they seem like minutes. Wounded twice in that time, I can remember saying when the bullet got me, 'Sorry, fellows, I've been put out of action.' Things are swimming around in my head; in a daze. Sometimes I'm conscious, and other times I'm unconscious. I could see that the battle was almost over. The first platoon hadn't captured their objective, and our platoon couldn't take theirs because of that. They had the second one. Later, a German prison guard told me they had known four days ahead of time that the Canadians would attack Dieppe. My ankle was paining now; I have not yet had any medical attention.

"Another boat has come to the edge of the water, firing and setting up a smoke screen. I was disgusted at my ankle; without that wound, I believe I would have been able to get to that boat. I saw it go out again. The first boat I wanted to take sailed out only a short distance in the Channel, and was sunk. I had escaped death many times now.

9:00 a.m., August 19:

"I was still lying in the same position. Bullets were landing around me, but I didn't get hit again. Machine-gun nests and gunners were all around, on the walls, and in the cliffs. The Germans from their position could sweep beach with fire. I had, since landing, still not seen a German soldier. One Canadian near me suffered the blast of a mortar right in his face; he went kind of crazy then, swinging a water bottle around and shouting. The Germans shot him dead, through both cheeks. I saw many dead soldiers around me; many were my friends. I hope to return to Dieppe some time to see their graves....

"It's late afternoon, and I am still here. Hundreds of impressions are in my mind; I can't be sure which are real and which are imaginary. Two boys just came out of the water and started to walk through a mined section of the beach; we all shouted and moaned to them to get back and walk around. Later, I heard of soldiers shooting their buddies to put them out of their misery. I didn't think of that, and I am glad I didn't now. I would have consented to be blown up by a mortar bomb, because I was sure I would be executed by the Nazis when captured. Up until now, no thought of being captured had crossed my mind.... One of our soldiers has just run back and forward across the beach waving a white flag. The battle is over, and he was not a coward. It as an act of bravery. Most of the firing has stopped, and my wounds are beginning to hurt more now.

"Sudenly, I heard the sharp, staccato commands of German soldiers. 'Raus, raus,' they barked. 'Get up' it means in English. Those who could get up did it; I couldn't. The first German I saw during the entire raid was coming toward me. Three more were with him; middle-aged Nazis. Other Germans were standing on top of the wall with tommy guns. The Germans who came to get me treated me excellently. 'For you the war is over,' one of them said, jestingly.

"A Gestapo man gave me a cigarette, and lighted it for me; other Germans gave me water. They had to get us up the big wall, and they put a ladder up it. I was moaning when they moved me; so was everyone else. A German officer at the top kept shouting to the Germans to 'take it easy with us.' I though he was very decent. They all were not, though. The first Canadian up the ladder had been cutting off packs from the dead and wounded soldiers. They had incendiary bombs in them, and had started blazing. He still had the knife in his hand; the Germans saw it and asked no questions. They riddled him with bullets before he had a chance to throw it away. I was loaded into a truck and driven away.

August 20, a.m.:

"I am in Rouen, in a hospital. Allied bombers have come over, and I shake when I hear them. Guns on top of the hospital fire, but no bombs have been dropped near us. I am to remain here for several months, after which I will go to a regular camp for the duration of the war."

Pte. Juniper was born and lived twelve years in Peterborough, attending Confederation School. He is now visiting Mrs. A. Barnes, 28 St. James Street, while on leave from Christie Street Hospital. He was brought back to Canada in a prisoner-of-war exchange only a few short months ago.

Enlisting with the Royal Regiment of Canada in 1929, soon after war broke out, he served for a time in Iceland, before going to Britain. He has seen many things in Germany during the past two years, and made many friends, both of prisoners and a few Germans who defied commanding officers time after time to show respect and human decency to Allied soldiers. Some permanent injuries have been done to his ankle as a result of the ordeal at Dieppe.

First Hillbilly Song Heard In Lobby Of 56th Congress

By H. P. H.

In spite of all due care, the radio at home will blare forth hillbilly music every once in a while. Some member of the family will always switch to another program, for none of us likes that sort of music, but that never happens that I am not reminded of the time I heard my first hillbilly song, in the dying hours of the 56th Congress on March 4, 1901, in the Capitol at Washington, D.C.

I was there because the Morenci Observer, the weekly run in my home town by Dad and Uncle Vern, was being paid a political debt owed to the latter by our Congressman, Henry C. Smith of Adrian, Michigan. He made a page in the House of Representatives, and I served throughout the session.

In the old days, the snort, or "lame duck" sessions of Congress expired at noon of March 4 every odd-numbered year, and in 1901 that day was the time for President William McKinley to take office for his second term, with Theodore Roosevelt as vice-president. We in the House had been pretty much in a dither for several days passing laws in a hurry and all the work was done except for a couple of appropriation bills for which it was customary for the House to remain in session all night in order that they might be passed.

Not Much Work

There was not a great deal of work for the Members to do on these. House of Representatives and Senate had each passed bills to suit and what fighting there was to settle the differences was left to a Conference Committe, on which men like Uncle Joe Cannon of Illinois, later noted for his iron rule as Speaker of the House, would do the squabbling with an equal representation from the Senate. They would hole up in a committee room somewhere, with plenty of cigars and coffee, and all the House had to do was to wait it out and maintain a quorum to validate the bills when the conference report was ready.

Up to midnight, this was not so bad. Several members had oratory in their systems, and, it being the last gasp of the Congress, with quite a few of the Members due to go back to law practices and other occupations, the lame duck speakers could have an audience of parts, with even the galleries filled. They took due advaitage of this for swan songs.

Speaker Calls Recess

A little after midnight the Speaker said that the House would recess for an hour. Everybody knew what that meant. For a little while the Speaker would forget his dignity. Republicans and Democrats their politics, and everybody, including the pages, would have some fun in the Speakers' lobby just behind the dias in Hall of the House of Representatives. Even Mr. Kennedy chief doorkeeper of the House, who always acted as though he had the entire responsibility of governing the United States on his shoulders, might be expected to smile. As I remember it, he did, very broadly.

I suppose the Speaker's Lobby had been devised for a waiting place for distinguished guests who might be afforded the privileges of the floor of the House. It was all gilt furbelows and red plush chairs. There were mirrors and oil portraits of former Speakers, lize Czar Tom Reid of Maine, who ruled the House despotically for so many years.

The Smiling Speaker

However much of a despot he may have bene, the Speaker of that date, David Henderson of Iowa, had an easy, smiling way about him. His was a ruddy face with laughing eyes, and he affected a white mustache. His snow white hair completed a picture of benevolence. He has served on the Union side in the Civil War and among us pages it was rumored that he had a wooden leg, although nothing in his bearing ever betrayed that he had lost a limb on some Southern battlefield.

After some preliminary banter the Speaker said he was going to call on the Gentleman from Mississippi for a song. The Gentlemen from Mississippi, whose name I have forgotten, although he was one of the more belligerent Democrats at the session, was a typical Johnny Reb of the Civil War, and, like the Speaker, a veteran of tha tconflict. Possbily they had been shooting at each other nearly 40 years back, I thought, as I saw them facing one another, with members, pages, clerks and others grouped around.

Beloved Major League Ball Chief Judge Landis Dies At Age 78

CHICAGO, Nov. 25—(AP)—Kenesaw Mountain Landis, 78, Commissioner of organized baseball since 1921, died at St. Luke's Hospital at 6:35 a.m. E.D.T. today.

Landis' death followed an illness of about seven weeks. He entered the hospital Oct. 2, suffering from a severe cold and went to the hospital for a rest and physical check-up.

Last night his physician reported his condition as "low" but there was no indication later during the night and early morning hours that death was imminent.

Members of his family were at his bedside when he died.

The death of the white-haired, colorful baseball chief ended the career of one of the country's outstanding sports leaders.

His enforced stay in hospital prevented him for the first time in his almost 24 years as commissioner from attending a world series, his physician advising that he not go to St. Louis for the annual Fall classic.

Was Re-elected

His death came just one week and a day after a major league baseball committee had recommended that at the expiration of his current term, Jan. 12, 1946, he be re-elected for a seven-year term. He observed his 78th birthday last Monday.

Mrs. Landis, who also had been confined to the hospital having recently suffered a fractured wrist, and Leslie M. O'Connor, his secretary, were at his bedside when the end came.

Mr. O'Connor announced that in compliance with Landis' wishes, no funeral services will be held.

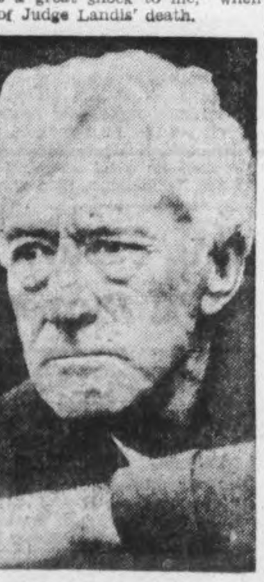
Idol of Fans

During his tenure as Commissioner of Baseball, he ruled the national sport with an iron hand, calling into play his years of experience as a jurist, including a term that gained him national prominence on the Federal court bench. Into his rulings went years of intimate relationships with baseball, as an ardent fan, as an intimate of players, managers and club owners, and as an idol of the fans who wanted fair play in dealings between clubs.

Physicians explained his physical set-back as the result of hours of hard labor in a victory garden, and in the grounds, at a new home he purchased for his family last summer

But even in hospital, he could not miss the 1944 World Series and a radio was by his bedside as the Browns and Cardinals fought for the world title.

In New York, Ford Frick, president of the National League, said: "It is a great shock to me," when told of Judge Landis' death.



JUDGE K. M. LANDIS

William Harridge, president of the American League and associated with the league for more than 35 years, when advised of Judge Landis' death, said:

"His death comes as a terrible shock to me. The baseball world will miss him for it owes him a great debt of gratitude for his guidance."

Survivors include his widow, a son Reed G. Landis, who ranked as the U.S.'s second aviation ace in the First Great War, and a daughter, Mrs. Richard W. Phillips.

Villains Parade At Tunney Show

BUNNY DUNLOP

Promoter Frank Tunney is staging a parade of badmen on his Tuesday night card at the Brock St. Arena. He has the rowdy John Katan battling the popular choice, Whipper Watson in the main bout and that should be a riot. Dr. Len Hall who has been smearing all and sundry meets husky Al Smith of Brooklyn in the semi-final and if that were not enough the far-from gentle Bunny Dunlop clashes with a newcomer, Jumping Jim Wallace of Chicago in the opening argument. There shouldn't be many quiet periods on that bill.

Mike Turnesa Heads Golfers

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 25—(AP)—The forgotten man of the tournament, Mike Turnesa of White Plains, N.Y., was leading the Portland open today as a crack field of professionals and amateurs teed off in the third round of the 72-hole open, $15,500 war bonds event.

Less spectacular than many of his fellow-pros, Mike put together the two most consistent rounds for a 36-hole total of 142 and No. 1 position in the parade.

Heavy footing underneath and greens made more tricky by water failed to affect Turnesa's game. He racked up a 36-35—71 first round to take second place. Identical nine-hole scores yesterday enabled him to pass the opening day's leader, Sam Snead of Hot Springs, Va.

Snead trailed Turnesa by two shots as he went into third round. After a two-under-par 70 for the first day, Slammin' Sam lost his putting touch yesterday to take a 74 for a 36-hole total of 144.

Only Turnesa had shaded par figures (35-37—72) at the half-way mark and Snead had equaled par.

The field was trimmed to the low scoring 51 pros and 28 amateurs for the last two rounds, the final 18 to be played Sunday.

St. John's Take Top Spot Beat Transports

St. John's took over undisputed possession of first place in the senior section of the Ladies' Basketball League at the Y.W.C.A. Friday night when they defeated Transports, last year's champions, 17 to 15 in a rugged, exciting and close-checking battle. It was the second win in succession for the Saints. In the junior game Y Grads made an auspicious debut when they swamped Normal School, last week's winners, 48 to 10.

St. John's led the senior tilt from the start and were never headed but Transports made it very close at the finish. Several times the winners opened up a five-point lead and although the champs came within one point of sewing up the game they never succeeded in drawing up on even terms.

Joan Patterson opened the scoring for the Saints with a field basket off a rebound, R. Fleming potted a free throw for Transports to make it 2 to 1 but St. John's came back with two baskets to lead 6 to 1 at the close of the first quarter. It was very even in the second session, with Transports outscoring the winners 4 to 2 to leave the half time score 8 to 5 for the Saints.

Transports scored a basket right off the reel in the third quarter and were down by only one point, 8 to 7, but the church team got rolling again and hit the hoops for three straight baskets to increase their margin to 14 to 7 at the end of the period.

The losers made a determined battle in the final session to pull the game out of the fire and nearly succeeded. They came through with three baskets in a row and once again were right on the heels of the Saints, 14 to 13. Eva Clarke sank a free throw to increase the lead to 15 to 13 and Joan Patterson fired the winning basket soon after, sending St. John's in front 17 to 13. Transports kept battling and when Beryl Dobbin registered on two free throws to cut the St. John's margin in two the champs had a chance but the winners battled it out to the end and finished in front 17 to 15.

Joan Patterson was again top scorer for the Saints, tossing in five baskets for a total of 10 points, while R. Fleming topped the Transports with five. All the players on both teams battled valiantly and it was a hard tussle all the way.

The teams:

St. John's, 17—Marg. Batley, Edith McIlhagga 2, Joan Patterson 10, Teresa Heslip, Marg. Hawthorne, Eva Clarke 3, M. Keeler, Edith Harte-Maxwell 2.

Transports, 15—Isobel Crary 2, Jean Castle 4, Beryl Dobbin 2, Isobel Bullock, Fran. Bestard 2, R. Fleming 5, Irene Stewart.

Referee, Steve Csumrik; Umpire, Howie Macdonald.

Y Grads Win

Y Grads with a couple of new players in K. McCaig and B. Boutette showed far too much scoring punch and ball-handling ability for the Normal School in the junior game. The Grads were on top all the way and were never seriously threatened. The Normal girls tried hard but the accurate shooting and better passing of the Y aggregation did not give them much of a chance.

Grads set up a lead of 22 to 7 in the first half and after the rest period continued to pile up the points, outscoring the school team 26 to 3 in the second half.

Betty Lou Braund and E. McCaig were leading scorers for the winners with 12 points each and Shirley Curtis and B. Boutette each contributed 10 points to the Grads' big total.

B. Wilson with five points was the top scorer for the losers

The teams:

Y Grads, 48—H. Duncan, B. Stewart 4, Betty Lou Braund 12, Shirley Curtis 10, M. Wharry, K. McCaig 12, B. Boutette 10, N. Metheral, M. Braund.

Normal School, 10—E. Meiklejohn, Gloria Lowney, B. Wilson 5, Eva Morrison, Helen McMillen 2, Dorothy Thrower, Jean Leach, Isobel McGee 2, Mary Lannigan, M. Brealey 1.

Referee, H. Smith; Umpire, Mary McPherson.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25 — (AP). — A sure way to dry a football coach's tears is to mention the kind of material he expects to get after the war, with the government footing the bills under the "G.I. Bill of Rights." . . For instance, how about this trio of 18-year-olds who are performing for service teams this fall? . . . Johnny Donaldson of Jessup, Ga., rated the most sensational runner uncovered this season at the Jacksonville, Fla., naval air station; Orville Baker, 212-pound fullback at the Marine Officers' School, New Orleans, (on a weak team he has stood out in every game); Charley Justice, high scoring scatback of the Bainbridge, Md., naval training centre (a standout against the toughest kind of competition).

Conflicting Opinions

Greasy Neale, watching the Redskins taking a licking from his Philadelphia Eagles: "They're running their biggest asset — Sammy Baugh. He's the second best football player in the league — Luckman's the best — and they're misusing him with the T formation."

Dud De Groot, Redskin coach (before that game): "Baugh has to be back in Texas every week. He has done a magnificent job under favorable conditions. He is the most valuable to Washington of any man, including George Preston Marshall."

The Y.M.C.A. House League, marking the opening of basketball for the season will get under way tonight when there will be a double-header starting at 7:30 o'clock and two lively games should get the cage loop away to a good start. The accent will be strongly on youth for the roster of the various clubs reveals very few veterans and many of the players will be making their debut in the House League tonight. The card calls for Ray Routley's team to meet Bill Kemp's outfit in the first game and for the teams skippered by Gord and Roy Johnston to meet in the second half of the bill. Just how the various squads will line up tonight is uncertain for some of the players on the list are members of the P.C.V.S. football squad which met Niagara Falls Collegiate in the Cossa finals in Toronto this morning and they may not be back in time to get into the basketball wars. The roster shows among the players of the Routley squad Ed Nicholls, Bill Brown and Jim Collins while Bill Kemp has Shadgett and Rooke among his athletes. Lieutenant to Roy Johnston will be Steve Csumrik and the Matthews brothers Jack and Spike are listed among the Gord Johnston talent.

. Transports and St. John's really started in last night where they left off last spring and their first clash of the season in the senior section of the Ladies' Basketball League was reminiscent of the exciting battles they fought in deciding the championship. The Saints won 17 to 15 but the game was in doubt until the final whistle, despite the fact that the winners were always in front from the moment they scored the first basket early in the struggle. It was rugged basketball, with the checking close and often not too clean and the exciting finish had the crowd on its toes. Both teams have lost some of last season's players but they are still strong squads and the manner in which last night's game was fought out indicated that there is going to be a lot of strenuous battles before the 1944-45 senior title is decided. In the junior game the Y Grads, formerly the Cadets surprised all and sundry by coming up with a couple of classy new players and shellacking the Normals 48 to 10. The future school teachers had looked very good in winning over Westclox the week before but they were outplayed by a wide margin last night. The Grads handled the ball well and their sniping was high-class, as the score sheet shows.

Colored Players

Says Mike Rodden in the Kingston Whig-Standard: "There are a lot of youngsters in this country who would give much to receive the same opportunity as that afforded to the Chins. There are undoubtedly many players of vastly greater ability who have never attracted the semblance of national attention. But it pays to be different, you know, and those Chinese brothers have 'It' because they are, indeed, unique members of their race. The records also show that very few colored players progress far in hockey. Years ago one of them was a brilliant performer for the Stratford seniors and another was stand-out for Peterborough. More recently the three Carnegie brothers of Toronto have been much to the fore and they are players of real ability. They started their careers in the Toronto School League, graduated into the O.H.A. junior series and then made good in senior company in Timmins. In a test of ability the Carnegie clan would make the Chins look like the juveniles they really are yet not scout, past or present, ever offered a contract to any of the Carnegies, boys who were good enough to play for Northern Vocational School in the O.H.A. junior series."

* * * * * *

Bre'er Rodden's reference to the colored Petreborough player is of course concerned with Fred Kelly, the Ingersoll boy who played left wing for the Petes for a number of seasons before the last war and was a prime favorite with his fellow players and also with the fans. Kelly, a fast skater, fine stick-handler and the possessor of a bullet-like shot from the left boards was one of the most effective players who ever wore a Peterborough uniform. He was game as a pebble and yet as clean as a whip. Old-time fans will remember the habit he had of extending a helping hand to an opposing player who happened to be spilled. They will also recall how that shot of his seemed to sizzle as the puck sped toward the net. On one occasion when Picton were playing here "Kel" let go a drive that saw the rubber crash into the body of the visiting goalie and although he wore a pad the net guardian was knocked out cold by the shot which hit him over the heart. If you can remember the Stratford colored player that Mister Rodden mentioned you have been watching hockey for a long time, chum. He was Lightfoot who played for the Stratford juniors at the turn of the century and was seen in action against the Peterborough Colts. Still another negro player who played against Peterborough was Prebbles who was rover for Parry Sound in the intermediate semi-finals in 1906 and incidentally took quite a beating in the game here—although he never stopped trying.

Plenty of Hockey

"The latest hockey gossip along the main steam includes a Frankford-Batawa junior team in the offing," says Ken Colling in the Belleville Ontario-Intelligencer. "If the local district junior O.H.A. rumors are anywhere near correct they'll be more junior squads in No. 2 loop than in any other hockey collection in the business.. Looking over the list of reported starters there is Campbellford and Hastings already with entry fees paid. A Stirling-Madoc combination, Tweed, Trenton and Belleville. And along comes a Frankford-Batawa report bringing the number up to seven. Looks like a pretty heavy grouping for junior "B" hockey, notwithstanding the old saying 'the more the merrier.' If an eighth club should be procured a better idea would be to split the octette into two quartettes, with no time out for singing."

The death of Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, high commissioner of baseball for 23 years removes a colorful figure from the sport scene. The 78-year-old jurist who has been the czar of professional baseball since 1921 and earned every cent of the large salary he received during that period. Undoubtedly the money the commissioner's position cost baseball was the best investment the game ever made for the picturesque Judge Landis inspired general confidence in the probity of baseball and his ironing out of difficult situations and his handling of problems generally got clubs and leagues out of many a jam. The Judge took his responsibilities very seriously and he had the confidence not only of baseball leaders but of the vast army of fans. It will be a tough job replacing him with a commissioner able to live up to the Landis traditions.

Hamilton Whips Staffords 9-5

(By The Canadian Press)

Hamilton Majors copped their opening Senior O.H.A. fixture of the season 9-5 at Hamilton last night by taking Toronto Staffords into camp with a roaring five-goal final-period rally to overcome a 5-4 lead held by the visitors in the second session. By their victory, majors went into a first-place tie with St. Catharines Saints with one win apiece.

Dillon Brady proved to be his old scoring self for Hamilton with a total of five goals and a couple of assists while D. Runions accounted for a brace, Johnny Conick and Robertson notching one each. For Staffords, Dafoe beat Goalie Childs on two occasions and other visiting net-bulgers were Carr, Moorehouse and Drummond.

In the Junior "A" series, St. Catharines Falcons captured their second straight game to lead the western group by winning out 5-3 at Port Colborne after the neighborly rivals had been deadlocked 3-3 going into the last period. The teams were tied 1-all at the finish of the initial frame. White was the scoring star for the Falcons, shooting their first counter early in the fray and winding up with both tallies in the closing round for a total of three. Falcons' other scorers were Hookings and Davis. Bowen, Savicky and Zeppa counted for the losers.

At St. Catharines, the senior Saints overwhelmed Toronto Army 11-3 in an exhibition affair.

City Carpetball

Only one result received this week showing that the Wardens were certainly on their toes as they showed the south-end Wanderers that that A.R.P. may not be needed these days but are still fully prepared for any assaults of the enemy.

The Wanderers were just able to gather in 10 counters again 33 for the Wardens giving the east city gang a lead in the league standings.

We are sorry to note that there is some trouble in getting the Legion teams under way. The fighting Scots being the only team of the three entries to have played to date. The other two teams may pool as one team and we will ask St. George's to put in the other team to keep the league on even numbers.

Scores this week:

Wardens 11-22, St. George's 5-5.

Schedule for next week:

B.E.S.L. No. 6 vs. B.E.S.L. No. 8.

St. George's, No. 4 vs. B.E.S.L. No. 7.

L.O.L. No. 2 vs. All Saints No. 3.

P.F.D. No. 1 vs. Wardens No. 5.

Please note: all fees must be paid by this time next week.

Ray Robinsons Wins

DETROIT, Nov. 25 —(AP)— Ray (Sugar) Robinson, New York welterweight, won a unanimous decision last night over Vic Dellicurti, another New Yorker, in a 10-round bout before 7,833 spectators at Olympia.

Robinson, who weighed 149 pounds, spotted his opponent nine pounds, but he balanced that disadvantage with fast footwork and rapid punches, battering the outclassed Dellicurti with hooks and jabs, right crosses and every other type of blow until his rival was groggy and crimson.

In a preliminary bout, Al Ell[illegible] 118, Detroit, knocked out Chuck Ackworth, 120, Toronto, in the last round of a six-rounder.

Omemee And Lindsay Enter Hockey Teams

TORONTO, Nov. 25.—(CP).—The executive of the Ontario Hockey Association at its final meeting here last night before the annual conference to-day accepted three Junior "B" and four intermediate clubs into membership.

F. W. Moore of Port Colborne, president, presided.

Junior "B" clubs accepted were: Port Credit, Etobicoke Athletic Club and Victory Aircraft.

Intermediate clubs were: Lindsay, Oakwood, Arsenal and Omemee.

It was decided to give the Oshawa Junior "B" club, which plays in the South Ontario League, a bye into the play-offs.

Jack Fulton, of Timmins, Ont., newly-elected president of the Northern Ontario Hockey Association, and secretary Bob Crosby of Schumacher, Ont., attended the meeting and discussed revision of the juvenile affiliation with the O. H.A. and President A. A. Morrison of the Ontario Minor Hockey Association. The two organizations agreed to "thresh out" their differences at a meeting here during the week-end.

With Hamilton, Ont., out of the Junior "A" competition, it was decided that the remaining seven clubs would play a double schedule with the six top teams to enter the play-offs. The first and second teams will play a best-of-five series and the third and fourth and fifth and sixth a best of three series with the winner of the last two meeting in a best of three series for the right to play the victor of the other series in a best-

The executive approved a number of transfers within O.H.A. territory. All were confined to Junior "A" clubs.

They were: To Toronto St. Michael's—Leo Gravelle from Port Colborne.

To St. Catharines—George Edwards, from Brantford.

To Oshawa Generals—James Davis from Stratford; Barry Sullivan from Kingston; Phil Metcalf, Ronnie Matthews, from Toronto Marlboros; Sam McNabney, Sid Smith, from Toronto De La Salle; Bruce Gallagher, from Kirkland Lake.

To Galt—Alec Bariiko from St. Catharines; Thomas Pollock, Robert Lickie, George Potter, from Timmins; Edward Small from South Porcupine; William Adamo, Martin Pavelick and J. Krmpotick, from Sault Ste. Marie.

The executive made a satisfactory settlement with the St Catharines Saints and the Hamilton senior club regarding their trips to Kingston last year. Details were not made public.

It was announced the O.H.A. referees meeting will be held here Saturday, Dec. 2 and the O.M.H.A. which holds its annual meeting here the same day, have been invited to attend.

Bisons Blank St. Louis Flyers

(By The Canadian Press)

Buffalo Bisons strengthened their hold on the top rung of the American Hockey League with a 3-0 victory over St. Louis Flyers last night. The Fliers had no chance with the Bisons setting the pace from the start.

After a scoreless first period, Halderson and Kenny Kilrea set up a play for Davidson who beat Jimmy Franks with a blistering 15-foot drive. In the third period, George Boothman picked up a rebound from a play originated by Mundrick and Aubuchon and Leger completed the scoring with Halderson and Jones earning assists.

More than 5,900 fans saw the Flyers lose on home ice.

Winding up his exhibition tour while on leave from the U.S. Army, Sgt. Joe Louis, world heavyweight champion, last night drew almost 9,000 fight fans to Chicago Stadium to watch him pummel Dan Merritt, 209-pound negro of Cleveland, in a three-round display during which the titleholder sank his opponent four times.

After having his Canadian Army draft status reportedly clarified at Victoria, B.C., Alex Ritson, a forward player, is expected to report to the New York Rangers of the N.H.L. in time for the scheduled game with Detroit Red Wings Dec. 7, it was announced at New York last night. Ritson formerly played for Indianapolis.

Two features, the $25,000 Waldron Handicap for two-year-olds and the $25,000 Pimlico Cup race at 2½ miles, are on the closing program today of the 22-day joint meeting at Pimlico under the auspices of Maryland's combined race tracks.

Canadiens, Leafs Play Twice Over Week-end

By The Canadian Press

Toronto Maple Leafs, who each year are noted for their burst of speed in early-season games in the National Hockey League, to-night face a real test and a chance to regain top spot in the six-team circuit when they meet Montreal Canadiens at Maple Leaf Gardens.

The prospects, however, are not bright as the Leafs will be without the services of their ace winger, Dave (Sweeney) Schriner, injured a week ago when he crashed into his own goal post, and Bill Ezinicki, rookie acquired from Oshawa Generals, last year's Canadian junior champions, who has joined the Canadian army.

Coach Hap Day's charges, who won their first six games in the 1944-45 campaign before going down to defeat at the hands of Detroit Red wings in two successive games and then dropped a 5-1 decision to Boston Bruins last Thursday, clash with last year's Stanley Cup champions twice this week-end in a home-and-home series.

Canadiens, who currently lead the league with a one-point margin over Toronto have dropped two games to Toronto—the only contests they have lost in 10 starts They played to a 3-3 tie with Detroit last Thursday.

In the only other game to-night, the cellar-dwelling Chicago Black Hawks play Red Wings at the border city.

Hawks, with only one win and a tie game in nine starts, have their work cut out to take the Red Wings, who will be gunning for a double victory to give them a better hold on third place.

Chose Wildcats To Beat Sailors

HAMILTON, Nov. 25 — (CP). — Hamilton Wildcats, favorites to win their second successive Dominion football championship and the 10th in the city's history, take the field here today against H.M.C.S. Donnacona of Montreal.

Only one of the season's regulars, Joe Soyka, who was injured last Saturday in the Ontario final against Toronto Balmy Beaches at Toronto, will be missing from the line-up. Otherwise, the Cats, will field a strong aggregation against the Sailors, winners of the Quebec Rugby Football Union title, who dropped a 12-1 decision to Toronto's H.M.C.S. York for the Canadian Navy championship at Toronto last Saturday.

Win or lose, the Cats will bid farewell after the match to one of the team's oldest and best ball handlers. He is Jimmy Simpson, 38-year-old veteran and only active survivor of the Hamilton Tigers Club which lost out in the Canadian finals to Winnipeg Blue Bombers in 1935.

Simpson, who retired after his team won four successive Ontario Rugby Football Union titles and two Canadian championships, returned to the field when his teammate, Brian Timmis, took over the Wildcats in 1943.

After this game, however, he has stated he will retire for good.

O.H.A. Retains 1944 Officers

TORONTO, Nov. 23—(CP)—Re-election of the officers of the Ontario Hockey Association was announced today by President F. W. Moore of Port Colborne in his address to the association's annual meeting.

"It has been decided that due to the uncertainty of the present times, no change in your officers be made this year," he said. "Present indications again point to a season of unusual conditions."

There were many difficulties and uncertainties last season. The senior series was disrupted three times by the withdrawal of service teams and there was a scarcity of entries for the intermediate and junior series. However, the Junior A clubs enjoyed a highly successful season.

The report of Treasurer George Dudley showed that receipts last year amounted to $11,347.51 and a bank balance of $2,350.24 Oct. 1, 1943, brought the total to $13,697.75. Expenditures totalled $9,779.26 and the bank balance last Sept. 30 was $3,918.49. The receipts included $8,891.25 in revenue from play-offs, the Junior A series accounting for $5,367.71. The balance sheet showed assets of $13,918.49 with liabilities of $30 of payable current accounts.

The report of the executive committee, over the signature of Secretary W. A. Hewitt, described the seventh consecutive championship for Oshawa Generals in the Junior A series as the feature of the Association's fifth wartime hockey season. The generals, who also won the Memorial Cup and the Dominion title, established an all-time record for major competition with their seventh title. Hamilton won the senior title, St. Catharines the Intermediate A title and De La Salle Oaklands the Junior B title.

TORONTO, Nov. 25 — (CP). — This year's Grey Cup final, so-called, is being played to-day, but elsewhere in this broad domain there are discontented people who refuse to believe the winner will be the real champion. Hamilton Wildcats and Montreal Navy are playing because their leagues filed entries and posted the necessary bond with the Canadian Rugby Union, but supporters of Toronto Navy and Winnipeg R.C.A.F. Bombers are not satisfied their favorites are less worthy than those officially blessed.

Rumors are rife that Toronto may challenge Wildcats, assuming they win, in a war charity game. The Tars are reported practicing and would like a crack at the winners of the series, since they already have trimmed Montreal Navy very decisively.

Winnipeg Airmen also have a strong team, and fans there are lamenting the fact service restrictions on athletics prevent them challenging for the Cup.

Much the same situation arose last year when Halifax Navy had a strong squad that many thought would have given Wildcats a run for their money, but no entry had been posted, so the Cats left the field with the honors.

Here and there:

The fisticuff boys in Vancouver have settled their differences without bloodshed. Promoter Jack Whelan has been given the green light to hold Saturday night wrestling shows, although the Vancouver Boxing and Wrestling Commission had refused him permission. Whelan just went ahead and held his shows anyway, so the Commission had to give in after a few vague threats.....Navy Lt. Bobby Pearce, Canada's ace sculler, has been transferred to Hamilton, Ont., and his place as sports officer at H.M.C.S. Donnacona, Montreal, has been taken by Lt. Ian Barclay, outstanding athlete of Montreal and Ottawa. Barclay was a member of the schoolboy cricket team that went to England in 1939......The fans around North Bay, Ont., will be blinded when the Olympics hockey squad takes the ice. Their colors are maroon and gold, and the arms are being adorned with magnificent checks of the same colors ....Former Detroit Red Wing star, Sid Abel, has been transferred to Montreal, and is playing hockey with Lachine R.C.A.F.

MAYOR HAMILTON GIVEN AN ACCLAMATION

Contests Are Definitely Assured For Utilities Commissioner, Five Seats On Aldermanic Board

James Hamilton was re-elected Mayor of Peterborough for 1945 by acclamation at the municipal nominations last night.

Contests were definitely taking shape for the five vacancies in the City Council; for the Utilities Commission and probably, also, for the Boar dof Education ,although the outline in that sector was not clearly indicated in the pronouncements during the period devoted to hearing candidates after the hour for presenting nominations ended.

Aldermen Bradburn, Dutton, Sands, Sullivan and Swanston announced that they would be in the field, and with them Hurrell Dodds, Albert E. Thompson and possibly Walter E. Wright as a Monaghan Ward resident if W. J. Grady, who was also proposed, does not accept his nomination.

E. R. Shirley has entered the lists for the Utilities Commission against Fred Hills, commissioner for the last three years.

Attendance of citizens last night was the largest in many years, and gratefully mentioned by most of those who spoke, especially by the present members of the council who in turn expressed their delight at the magnificent interest of so many of the electors. The gallery of the council chamber was crowded to standing room, possibly a promise of greatly increased polling on December 4.

City Clerk Outram, presiding, said that during the last two years he had been observing the trend of numbers in the municipal elections here and elsewhere, and enquiry had shown that Peterborough was one of only two cities in Ontario that had not advanced their election day from January 1 to the forepart of December. The council had brought Peterborough into line with the provincial majority of cities, and Mr. Outram said he hoped that the desired effect of the change would be displayed at the polls. He also said that probably the large attendance last night was partly explained by the fact that citizens were not absorbed in the Yuletide as in years of nominations almost on the eve of Christmas.

Those nominees who were not present during the post-nominations period were: For Board of Education; H. G. Walker, Dr. C. M. Scott, C. A. Sollitt, J. Fred Reed, S. O. Shields, Russell Philp and Frank Jobbit

For Alderman—J. A. Gibbs, Wm. Tinker, W. J. Grady, Colonel J. A. Dewart, Melville Morrow, W. K. Sloane. Whether any of these two groups intend to enter the campaign could not be learned last night.

The list of nominees was as follows:

For Aldermen.

Herbert I. Bradburn, secretary-treasurer—By A. R. Bennett and Norman H. Hamley.

James Dutton, manager—By Max J. Swanston and Adam B. Sands.

John E. Sullivan, assistant controller—By R. M. Glover and J. D. Fitzpatrick.

Adam B. Sands, methods — By George A. Macdonald and H. I. Bradburn.

Max J. Swanston, secretary-treasurer—By G. A. Macdonald and Hurrell Dodds.

Hurrell Dodds, customs appraiser —By G. A. Macdonald and E. G. Abraham.

J. A. Gibbs,, realtor—By G. N. Gordon and T. Cavanagh.

Wm. Tinker, gentleman—By G. N. Gordon and T. Cavanagh.

W. K. Sloane, manager—By J. D. Fitzpatrick and G. A. Macdonald.

Melville Morrow, welfare officer —By C. Fred Browne and F. R. J. MacPherson.

Albert E. Thompson, realtor—By R. M. Glover ad W. G. Ovens.

Wm. J. Grady, grocer—By T. C. Naish and John Freeman.

Walter E. Wright, salesman—By E. G. Johnston and L. Bristow

Mrs. E. Addyman, housewife — By Wm. Tinker and Joseph Henderson.

Colonel John A. Dewart, M.C., manager—By Dr. C. M. Scott and T. J. Carley.

Utilities Commission

Fred Hills, insurance broker—By W. C. Hughes and W. G. Ovens.

Ernest R. Shirley, electrical engineer—By G. R. Langley and F. M. Somerville.

Board of Education

H. G. Walker, gentleman, by Fred Hills and T. J. Carley. Charles M. Scott, physician, by James Dutton and Fred Hills. C. Alex Sollitt, insurance agent, by Fred Hills and T. J. Carley. J. Fred Reed, superintendent, by D. V. Canning and R. S. Cotton. John R. Sinclair, realtor, by T. J. Carley and H. I. Bradburn. Fred J. Gandy, Jr., civil servant, by G. N. Gordon and R. M. Glover. Walter E. Bannon, foreman, by Fred G. White and John Freeman. Stanley O. Shields, production manager, by W. G. Ovens and D. V. Canning. Frank J. Jobbitt, secretary-treasurer, by M. J. Swanston and W. G. Ovens. W. Russell Philp, barrister, by Floyd Curtis and M. J. Swanston.

Mayor Hamiltin

Mayor Hamilton was the first speaker called upon by Mr. Outram, who had been appointed chairman of the customary period of address.

Mayor Hamilton expressed his deep appreciation of the honor again conferred on him, "and I also appreciate to the fullest extent what you expect of me as your Mayor for another year. I promise you that I will do everything I can to further the interests of Peterborough throughout the year of 1945.

Those of us who are here night after night often alone planning to keep the municipal services going efficiently sometimes think that the citizens do not appreciate what we are doing and the time that we have to give to the city's work, and do not attend the meetings of the council as much as they might. But, when we see so many of you here tonight your presence is an inspiration to all of us to endeavor to put forth even greater efforts for you as citizens and for the city as a whole.

It is hard to tell what next year will bring forth. We would all like to see the war end as soon as possible. Nothing would make us happier. The end of the war would enable us to make a start in building up Canada and our own city of Peterborough as we would like to have them."

Train Problem

His Worship said that one of the salient problems facing Peterborough was the need of adequate transportation facilities. Both the freight and passenger services were not what a city of this size should have. "I consider that this question is one of the first things we have to look to in the postwar period. I don't know what we can expect from the two railway companies, but we can investigate the possibilities of getting good highway transportation with Toronto and Montreal. If we can't get more through trains to both those cities we will have to try to get better bus service with Port Hope for connections there with the lake front trains. At least it would improve matters for us.

The council has been trying to get a location for a landing field for airplanes. We have made investigations all around us, and we now feel that we are working on a location that will give us a good airport.

It is altogether likely that 1945 will be another year of planning rather than of beginning to accomplish things. But, the more planning we do at this stage the better position we should be in when the time comes for action. The members of the council have been convinced of the inadequate facilities of our hospital. We have given that question a lot of thought. We obtained expert advice, and we assure you that the proposition we are putting before you is the best and cheapest solution of Peterborough's hospital problem. I know you want us to build a hospital you will feel proud of, and that will provide for you the accommodation and the service a city of 33,000 people should have."

John R. Sinclair

Proposed for the Board of Education, J. R. Sinclair said he was a member of the School Board of No 2 School Section, North Monaghan, comprising May's and Confederation Schools, for the last two years. "That experience has greatly helped to inform me of school matters, and generally to break me in to this work. It has been very interesting, and I assure you that if I was a member of your Board of Education I would put my whole heart into that responsibility."

Hurrell Dodds

Mr. Dodds congratulated Mayor Hamilton on his re-election by acclamation. "I think the people of Peterborough can congratulate themselves on having such a man as Mayor Hamilton to devote another year of his life to the administration of our city. On being nominated again I feel it would be remiss if I did not offer my service to the citizens. If I am elected I will support anything for the benefit of the citizens as a whole and to create a better feeling. I am especially interested in our Peterborough men who will be returning from their war service. I am also greatly interested in our youth as shown in the work of the Lions Club, especially at the wading and swimming place we made for the children at Riverside Park. If I am elected to the council I will carry on that interest in our youth."

Max J. Swanston

Alderman Swanston said he hoped the large attendance for nominations was a sign of the interest the citizens were going to display in the elections. He said everybody should make use of their franchise and go to the polls on Monday, December 4.

"The council this year made a major change affecting every householder in the city. The collection of garbage had been done by contract for thirty years or more. The contract was let by tender, and I consider that our contractors gave good service. But, with the annexation of part of North Monaghan approaching, the council felt that no contractor could take on the increased work because we were restricted to letting the contract for only one year. So, we decided to assume the work as a public undertaking, and I feel that we have done a fair job. The council for 1945 is in a position to look after the new area of North Monaghan when those residents come into the city after January 1. I feel that I will be a candidate again. I am not making any promises, but I assure you I will work for the interest of the city and the citizens as I have done in these last four years."

Adam B. Sands

"This is the healthiest nominations meeting I ever attended," Alderman Sands said. "During the past four years I have been mixed up in two major programs, One was the bus franchise which we gave last year. Up to January 1 of this year, the city gave the use of its streets to the bus company and we rented the car barns on King street for $325 a year. That did not seem fair, as the city was keeping the streets in good shape, and the buses were using them. By the new agreement with the company will be paying us around $6,000 this year as against the $325 we were getting. That has saved us about one-fifth of a mill.

Hospital Problem

The other problem was our hospital, and that has been a real one. As Mayor Hamilton said it has been my baby, and as a baby it has squealed loud and long. It is the feeling of the council that we have gone a long way to pacify it. As an individual citizen I am asking you to approve the by-law for $600,000 for a new hospital, to be paid for over the next twenty years.

As to the question of cost, I would like to point out that for every ten dollars of taxes you pay the hospital will cost you one cent a week. If you pay $50 taxes it will cost you five cents a week; and for $100 in taxes 10 cents a week. If you become sick or meet with an accident, or it is some member of your family, you want to feel that you have a place you can go to where you will get immediate service. People have died because they couldn't get into the hospital; some stayed a month when it should have been only a week if they could have been admitted at once.

I feel strongly about the hospital. It is close to my heart. Our present hospital situation is bad. Our two hospitals give us about 210 beds, and we serve an area that takes in 60,000 people. We are told we should have six beds for every 1,000 of population. That would require 360 beds, but we have only 210. Would you stand at the hospital door and say to a woman from Lakefield, a maternity case, 'you can't come into this hospital because you live in the country? We are paying for this place and you're not.' That is not what our boys are fighting for. As far as I am concerned we are going to have that hospital. I believe it is going to come into being; that it will be a great credit to our city, and that it will be efficiently operated on a business-like basis. I know two hospitals that have no deficits, and one is paying $10,000 a year on its capital account. They get their bills paid, and they have no favorites.

Peterborough is at the crossroads and we must go ahead. As an alderman I don't think I would ever be in favor of saying we are going to give you a better city for less money. I'd rather say we are going to give you better value for every dollar of your taxes. I have tried to do that in the last four years. Maybe in the eyes of some people we have been away out.

I am for the hospital and the Community Memorial Centre, and I think every candidate should declare where he stands on these projects. I'll probably be a candidate, and if elected to the Council I'll try to do in the next two years as well as I may have done in the last four. I stand for a progressive Peterborough, and the most value for every dollar of your taxes. I want to congratulate Mayor Hamilton on his re-election by acclamation. He has weathered the storm of these last four years. I was as green as grass when I came into the Council, but I found the Mayor most helpful. To any new members of the Council I would say the Mayor is a hard taskmaster, but he will whip you into shape in short time.

Herbert I. Bradburn.

Alderman Bradburn announced that he would be a candidate in the aldermanic field.

"I'd like to say how pleased I am that there is such a large gathering of the citizens here this evening. It shows an interest in the city's affairs, and I'd like to see attendances like this at our Council meetings instead ogf no one at all when municipal matters are discussed.

"I have been an alderman for the last seven years, and I have tried to the best of my ability to serve the interests of the citizens generally. I am chairman of the manufacturers' ccommittee, but we have not succeeded in securing any large industry. That is very difficult in these war times, but we have tried to keep the goodwill of the industries we have.

"As chairman of the Airport Committee I have spent a great deal of time in trying to get a suitable site. Until October it seemed that our efforts would be of no avail. Now we have in view a site that meets the requirements of the Department of Transport, and we are making a survey of properties that seem to be what we are looking for.

"If you see fit to elect me I assure you I will serve the city and all classes to the best of my ability. I am not tied up to any group or organization.

James Dutton.

"I am now completing my eighth year as alderman, and I wish to express at this time the confidence of the citizens in electing me to the Council in the past," Alderman Dutton said. "It is an honor that cannot be regarded lightly. I have been chairman of several committees, for the last two years as the chairman of the Board of Works, and more recently of the Town Planning Committee.

"The Board of Works is the Council's largest spending body. It has to do with your roads and sidewalks and sewers, keeping the roads in repair, clear of snow, and sanded in winter. We have not been able to do the work planned because of the shortage of manpower. At one time we had 120 men working for the Board, but now we have 38, including the truck drivers."

As chairman of the Board of Health, Alderman Dutton said it was gratifying to receive the fine monthly reports from the Provincial Laboratory in the city showing the high quality of the city's milk supply that is going into every home. By the co-operation of the sanitary inspector the Board had won the goodwill of the dairy farmers of this district, and many of them thanked the Board for the guidance and co-operation they had received from the visiting inspectors.

"We were all gratified this year by the results of the tuberculosis survey that was made among our factory employees. It revealed that there was not much tuberculosis in Peterborough. More than 8,000 of the people in our factories were X-rayed. It was all confidential, but we do know that the factory personnel indicated a high level of health. We were greatly pleased with the response of the men and women to this survey."

Alderman Dutton briefly outlined the efforts of the Town Planning Committee of which he is the chairman, and expressed his appreciation of the voluntary co-operation by its members, including engineers, achitect, land surveyor, and others giving their time in the desire to contribute something worth while to the Peterborough of the future. Alderman Dutton added his commendation to the citizens for their numerous attendance, "It is one of the most heartening things you could do for those of us who are in the Council. It has always been a regret to me that so few of the citizens attend our Council meetings."

Alderman Dutton recalled that a year or so ago only 28 per cent of the qualified municipal electors "turned out to register their votes." Surely our citizenship means more than that. I would feel a great deal better if I were elected by 80 per cent of the people than by only 28 per cent. If your Council feels that the citizens are behind them you can depend on it they will work very much better. I hope there will be a large turnout on election day, and that you will choose the best men to serve you."

Fred Hills.

"I'm sorry there are no ladies here," said Fred Hills. "We did have some at the nominations last year. I am now finishing my third year with the Utilities Commission. We were able to reduce the electrical rate this year and hope to make a further reduction next year. We started on a second water main, but we could not finish it for the present because the men were not available.

Your Utilities Commission has a big program of postwar work. As you know the North Monaghan section is coming into the city. That will involve a lot of work, but I cannot say when we will be able to get started on it. I feel like Alderman Dutton, that the citizens should exercise their franchise by getting out and voting on election day."

A. E. Thompson.

Proposed for the aldermanic body, A. E. Thompson, realty agent, said he intended to stand for election, "and if I am elected to do my very best in the interests of Peterborough because all my interests are here. I stand behind the hospital by-law."

Ernest R. Shirley.

Mr. Shirley said it was his intention to be a candidate for the Utilities Commission. "The problems of the Commission are largely of an engineering nature, and such that the technically trained engineer is peculiarly fitted to grasp and handle them with ease. At least one of the three commissioners should be a trained engineer. This is particularly important at the present when it will be necessary to re-adjust following the curtailments imposed by the war."

Mr. Shirley recalled that he was an electrical engineer, graduate of two universities, with B.A. degree from the University of New Brunswick and Science degree from Queen's, with first-class honors in each case. He was for a time assistant superintendent of the British Canadian Power Co. at Cobalt; electrical superintendent for the Canadian Power Co., a large mining concern in the Sudbury district; superintendent of the Laurentian Power Co., now part of the Shawinigan Power Co., and since then a member of the engineer staff of the Canadian General Electric Company.

"For fifteen consecutive years I was a member of your Public Utilities Commission. It is a well known fact that during this period the Public Utilities had been brought to a high state of perfection which has made it possible to carry on this far, through the war period.

"This makes it of the greatest importance that you elect the man best fitted by training and experience to handle this important work."

John E. Sullivan.

In his congratulation to Mayor Hamilton, Alderman Sullivan said His Worship had done an excellent job for Peterborough, and was in close touch with projects in preparation for the postwar period.

"I have had the privilege of serving you for the last four years. I believe it is the duty of every citizen to serve the best he can in the undertakings of the community. I believe this experience and my experience in business over a long period should stand me in good stead if I am re-elected to the council.

"I have been chairman of the Fire and Light Committee for the last three years. I'd like to pay tribute to the Peterborough Fire Department, but I should like it to be understood that I claim no credit. The Chief Fire Marshal of Ontario has declared that our fire department is one of the most efficient in Ontario. He rates it among the first ten. And, it is not manned at the strength of other cities of corresponding size, and the taxpayers are not paying to the same extent as those other cities.

"We have in Peterborough the lowest possible insurance rates, a direct result of the efficiency of our fire department over a period of years."

Alderman Sullivan said he was also chairman of the social salary committee with Aldermen Bradburn and Sands. "We did a job in what we believe to have been a systematic way, and we think we got some place. It was something that had long been talked of. I am prepared to serve you again to the best ability I have, and I hope the electors will see fit to re-elect me."

Walter E. Wright.

Proposed for the council as a resident of the new Monaghan Ward, Walter Wright said that in the absence of W. J. Grady he did not wish to declare himself. Both are Monaghan residents, and Mr. Wright intimated that his decision would depend upon the intentions of Mr. Grady.

Walter Bannon.

Walter Bannon has been a member of the Trustee Board of May's and Confederation Schools, four years as chairman. "If I decide to qualify and I am elected, I will try to do the duties of that office to the best of my power." Mr. Bannon is the present chairman of the Suburban School Board.

OUT FOR COUNCIL—Hurrel Dodds, veteran of the last war and customs appraiser, who announced on Friday night that he would be a candidate for council.

ALD. JAMES DUTTON

ALD. MAX SWANSTON

ALD. ADAM SANDS

ALD. JOHN E. SULLIVAN

ALD. HERB. BRADBURN

The five retiring members of the 1944 council who all announced at the nomination meeting on Friday night that they would be candidates for re-election.

GIVEN ACCLAMATION—The election of Mayor James Hamilton by acclamation for an eighth consecutive year established a record in Peterborough's municipal history. Other men have served the citizens as chief magistrate just as long but never by acclamation.

Mayor James Hamilton Sets Civic Record With Seven Times Returned By Acclamation

The election of Mayor James Hamilton for an eighth consecutive term as mayor, makes a record in local municipal history since incorporation in 1850. True, James Stevenson served for 10 years, but they were not consecutive. He was first elected in 1854, then in 1856-57-58, and finally 1886-1891, and Roland Denne served for eight consecutive years, but not by acclamation. His years of office were 1928-1935. In the early history of the city long mayoral terms were frequent, but until R. Denne and Jas. Hamilton served their marathons, shorter terms of office were the order of the day.

At incorporation in 1850, Thomas Benson was elected as first mayor of Peterborough. In 1853 Chas. Perry was elected and he eventually served six terms, being in office for five consecutive years, 1861-65. He was succeeded by another longtermer, W. H. Scott for six consecultive terms, 1866-71.

Two other well known citizens of early days also served for five years, George A. Cox, 1872-1874-1875, 1883 and 1885, and James Kendry, 1892-1895 and 1900.

James Stevenson had another wonderful record in civic service. For 40 years he was a member of the Board of Education and preceding governing educational bodies and chairman for 18 consecutive years. He was also Conservative member in the Dominion Parliaments of 1887 and 1891.

NOMINATED FOR UTILITIES—Fred Hills (Left), the member of the Utilities Commission whose three-year term expires this year, was re-nominated at the citizens' meeting on Friday night. Opposing Mr. Hills will be E. R. Shirley (Right), a former member of the Utilities Commission for a number of years.

CANDIDATE—Melville Morrow, welfare officer at the Canadian Legion, was nominated to stand for alderman and qualified this morning.

Friday Night Club Shown RCAF Bombing

Movies depicting how the R.C.A.F. smashes enemy communication lines and the work of Mustang and Mosquito planes blasting Nazi supply trains in Germany were shown by Barney Scarlett, to a large gathering of the Friday Night Club, at the Y.M.C.A., Friday evening.

Rod Blackwell outlined to the club members and guests what the coming weeks hold in store in connection with speakers, and also briefly reviewed the topics which will be heard in the future.

Art Northcott introduced the guests of the evening, the majority of whom are members of the armed forces, either navy, army, or air force.

They were: A. Paszt, Sgt. Gordon Diplock, Sgt. Lloyd Williamson, Sgt. Bob Scott, P.O. Roger Barrie, AB. Reg. Seabrook, Don Smedmor, Clayton Selkirk, Ernest Lee, Ray Sutcliffe and George Bouck.

Entertainment in music was provided by Dave Graham and Lloyd Williamson. Rod Blackwell was the winner of the lucky draw. Jack Sackville, president of the Friday Night Club, thanked the speaker.

Mayor Voices Thanks For Voters' Confidence

The acclamation given Mayor Hamilton Friday night will induct him into his eighth year as Peterborough's chief magistrate. This morning he said he was feeling quite happy and grateful for this latest expression of the confidence of the people. He realized that the readjustment to peace times, which he hoped could not be far off, would present unusual problems, but they would simply have to be faced here as elsewhere.

"The news this morning indicated that there were quite a few acclamations around the province," His Worship said. "Men I know in the Association of Mayors, who in most instances have quite a lot of municipal experience."

LINDSAY BOY WOUNDED

Serving with the Royal Canadian Artillery overseas, Gnr. Peter W. Hart, son of Mrs. Minnie Hart, 109 Adelaide street, Lindsay, has been reported wounded.

GASOLINE STOLEN

Thirty gallons of gasoline have been stolen from a shed on the property of the Ontario Marble Company, the police department has been informed. The theft took place some time during the early part of this week.

WRONG REPORT

Ottawa has notified Mrs. James Morley, 281-A Rubidge street, that the report she received a week ago advising her that her husband, Major James Morley, had been wounded a second time, is incorrect. The telegram indicated that he was still in England and had not returned to the fighting lines.

COUNCIL MEETINGS

Unless there is some final business developing prior to the municipal elections, the city council will likely coast on its oars at the last meeting for November Monday night. The next meeting will be on Tuesday, December 5, and may be partly "lame duck" if any of the present members fail to finish within the first give in the aldermanic polling.

PLOWMEN'S ANNUAL

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Plowmen's Association will be held in the office of the Department of Agriculture Wednesday evening, November 29. Walter Thorne is president, and will be in the position of reporting to this meeting the most successful match of the war years in the western Otonabee competitions in October.

LABOR MEETINGS

Reminiscent of the old Trades and Labor Council of other days was the attendance of twenty-nine delegates at the Allied Labour Council meeting. The meetings are the first and third Friday of each month, except at the turn of the year. For December the sessions are the first and second Fridays and January the second and third, thereby skirting the holiday season.

WAR ACE COMING

One of Canada's outstanding ace pilots, Don Morrison, D.S.O., D.F.C. and Bar, who was a war prisoner for some time, will be the speaker at Monday's luncheon of the Peterborough Rotary Club.

SPRING OR AUTUMN?

Another instance of plants blooming in this late November weather is brought to light in some dandelions, bright yellow in color, that were picked as mementos by E. W. Sargent of Westwood. Mr. Sargent found the dandelions bravely facing the elements on the farm of Frank Crowley, south of Norwood.

Lt.-Col. Neill Speaks Sunday

A series of four broadcasts over CHEX have been planned in support of the Civic Hospital bylaw which is being presented to the ratepayers of Peterborough on December 4.

Lt.-Col. Agnes Neill of the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps and overseas matron-in-chief of the nursing service who has recently returned to Canada and is spending the week-end in Peterborough will be heard on Sunday at 4:45 p.m.

On Tuesday evening at 6:45 representatives of property owners, labor, industry and the women of the city will be heard. Alderman Herb Bradburn is to speak as a representative property owner. A. E. Borland, secretary of the Allied Labor Council will speak for labor, Ian McRae, works manager of the Canadian General Electric Company will speak as a representative of labor and Mrs. E. V. Morphet will be the representative of the women in the city.

On Friday evening at 7:45 representatives of retail merchants, the Canadian Legion, the medical profession and women will be heard. W. C. Boys 15, Charged In Juvenile Court

Two fifteen-year-old boys, both son of widowed mothers appeared in juvenile court this morning charged with having broken and entered the booth of J. J. Dennie, 405 George street south, in the early morning of November 24 and stolen a quantity of cigarettes and about a dollar in cash.

One of these boys was on suspended sentence for a similar offence here a short time ago.

Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., said that he would remand the two to jail until Tuesday for trial, remarking that they were too big to be sent to the Shelter. Instructions were given to segregate the juveniles from older prisoners.

Man Pleads Not Guilty To Assault Charge

Thornton Brick, 28, Donegal street, entered a plea of not guilty when he was charged in police court this morning with having assaulted Hum Horning early Friday morning, occasioning actual bodily harm.

Brick whose 18-year-old brother Joseph Norman Brick was similarly charged Friday, was remanded in custody until Monday for trial.

Florence McGrath, Louis street, was charged with having been drunk, with vagrancy and with being mentally ill and on this latter charge will be examined by Drs. H. G. Carleton and Herb. Young who were apppointed by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., this morning.

Committee Ends Investigation Wants Storage Tanks Removed

Removal of the storage tanks of the British-American Oil Company and the Canadian Oil Company from their present locations "to points outside the city" was recommended to the council this week by a special committee of which Alderman Sullivan is chairman. The other members, appointed by the council, were Fire Chief Gimblett, Police Chief Thompson and City Engineer Parsons.

The purpose of the committee was to investigate the gasoline and oil storage tanks in the city and report back. The investigation was made on November 15.

The report follows:

Canadian Oil Company, Hunter Street, East—This company has six tanks, three 11,000 gallon tanks and two 7,195 gallon tanks for gasoline, and one 11,000 gallon tank for coal oil. The conditions as found were very bad. In the first place, the fence around these tanks is of wooden construction and in a dilapidated condition. Piled up against the fence on the south side of the tanks was a lot of trimmings from trees and this was all dried out and looked as though it might burn readily.

The roof on the oil station is in bad condition, the shingles being nearly worn out. There are no "danger" signs erected around these tanks.

Your committee were unanimous in their opinion that the condition of these tanks and the lack of protection proves a very serious hazard to the residents of the immediate vicinity.

British American has five tanks of 12,030 gallons capacity, two of these, I understand, being used for gasoline, one for coal oil, one for fuel oil and one unmarked.

The general appearance of the property and the oil tanks looked fairly good, but here again there were no "danger" signs. There is no watchman on this property nor on the property of the Canadian Oil company after business hours.

There is a wire fence around this property but not one that is insurmountable. Your committee cannot emphasize too strongly the great hazard to lives and property of those residents in the immediate vicinity of these tanks. The most serious thing is the possible danger to lives but there must also be taken into consideration in analyzing the situation, the danger to property and the fact that the property of those people living in this immediate vicinity has undoubtedly depreciated in value due to the location of the tanks of these two companies above referred to.

There is located near by in addition to the many residents, two churches and a hospital, and in the event of a serious explosion of these tanks, it is the opinion of your committee that the loss of life might be quite high.

Should Take Action

We feel that the members of the Council have a moral obligation in connection with this situation and that everything humanly possible should be done to have the tanks of the British American Oil and the Canadian Oil moved to some point possibly outside of the city limits.

I shall not quote from a report made by Mr. Caskey, Deputy Fire Marshal of Ontario, on a recent inspection made of this British American distributing plant.

"There is no decking or bank around the tanks to prevent the gasoline spreading in case of the gasoline leaking. In the adjacent area are residents, 2 churches and one hospital, and the location is not one in which large amounts of gasoline should be stored.

"There is a coal business to the south which increases the hazard, while the whole pumping mechanism is obsolete and dangerous and should be ordered replaced.

"The pipe lines to the pump do not slope towards the tank, nor do they pump to the top of the tank, and are constantly working against pressure, which is very undesirable. The pump room should be considerably farther away from the building, and is too small and too low. Furthermore the pump and the power to drive it are in the same room and should be separated by a fire proof partition.

"The floor in the oil storage room is oil soaked, and is in a dangerous condition.

"There are no safety appliances at all, nor is there any way to keep the trucks from damaging the buildings and piping. The whole installation is out of date. The Fire Marshal Department would never consent to such installation being made today."

Other Companies

McColl-Frontenac, Hazlett street: This firm has one 15,000 gallon gasoline tank, two 12,000 gallon gasoline tanks and one 12,000 gallon coal oil tank. Apparently every precaution is taken by these people for the protection of the public. There is a high fence around these tanks and everything is apparently in good order.

Here again, however, there are no "Danger" signs nor is there a watchman on duty after business hours.

Sunoco, corner Charlotte and Bethune: There are only two 500 gallon tanks in use at this point and these are under ground. There are two tanks, one of 10,000 gallons capacity and the other of 8,000 under ground not in use at the present time.

Imperial Oil, controlled by Peterborough Fuel & Transfer: Seven 1,000 gallon tanks on the corner of Romaine and Park streets under ground. The hazard to the public in an instance such as this is not so pronounced as in other cases. Nevertheless your committee feels

County Council Gives Lead In A Good Work

From a community standpoint, there is no finer thing to record than that all its people coming within its sphere of influence are united in one common bond for a work that aims at assisting a suffering humanity. When this also embraces something that is of National import, it takes on a much greater significance which should commend it all the more heartily to all of the people on whose behalf it is being done.

When the work to give assistance to the victims of enemy air raid attacks was first commenced in this part of Central Ontario, the first thoughts of those responsible for its promotion was that it should afford every facility to not only the residents of this city, but also to those of the whole of the county, and those of other centres and district, who would care to become associated with us in this great humanitarian work.

Taking a leadership in this matter that commends itself to all of the peoples they represent, besides placing themselves on record as supporters of this humanitarian assist to the war effort as a whole, the members of each successive County Council have given both their moral and practical support in a manner that has been unmistakable as to purpose.

For the fourth successive special effort towards raising the special Christmas donation to assist those who largely are even without homes of their own in Britain, this body of public spirited men have assisted with a grant of $500, which today is recorded to the credit of the County of Peterborough, on behalf of those who they serve in this public way, and in so doing they give an official approval in their name to this effort, from which every cent donated goes for the purpose for which it has been given.

This is a type of leadership of which all well thinking citizens must surely approve, for deeds like this on their behalf, also places them on record as being supporters of a worthwhile object in a community sense.

Lakefield Churchill Club

There is magic in the name of "Churchill" and wherever it has appeared in these latter years, it has meant good for the peoples of the British Commonwealth of Nations.

In the earlier days of the fund's operations, the Peterborough Churchill Club was formed in admiration for this great man, as an aid to the people of the British Isles, and in this it has been a notable help to the cause through those who became members. Another instance of this is to be found today in $5 credited to the Lakefield Division, through J. McKerchar who represents the fund there.

This was made possible through the presentation of memberships and pins by various organizations to Mrs. N. Belanger, Mrs. C. Galvin, Mrs. S. Trude, Mrs. U. Bullock and Mrs. E. Rosborough, which naturally makes them also participants in a good work to help other people in distress.

L/CDR. RALPH PARNELL

Prince Rupert Sailor Home On Leave

Leading Coder Ralph Parnell, in charge of the coding staff of H.M.C.S. Prince Rupert, which sank a German submarine in the Atlantic, has arrived home on 28-day leave. His wife, formerly Dorothy Wells, lives at 277 Prince street.

The young sailor, who enlisted in July, 1941, said there is nothing much to tell about the U-Boat his ship is credited with sinking. Forced up by depth-charges, the sub was sent to the bottom by gun-fire in a short time. Some survivors were picked up and taken back to port, and according to Ldg. Coder Parnell, "they seemed glad to get out of the war".

He went to sea in Januard, 1942 first serving aboard the H.M.C.S. Chedabucto, a mine-sweeper. It sank in the St. Lawrence river after being rammed by another ship, but luckily, the Peterborough sailor was home on leave at the time. After his leave, he joined the crew of the Prince Rupert.

Beat Off Attacks

Since, then, he has crossed the ocean many times, doing convoy work much of the time. Several times, he took part in beating off German submarine attacks on convoys, although the ships were never attacked from the air. A burning ammunition ship in port was sunk by the Prince Rupert in April 1942.

Ldg. Coder Parnell has spent some time in England and Ireland, as well as Newfoundland. In London on a leave once, he said he was hoping to see an air raid, but during the time he was there, nothing happened.

The former Examiner carrier-boy said Canadian sailors are well looked after by the Navy League and various other organizations, such as the I.O.D.E. Cigarettes and other comforts are provided when at sea, and ditty bags always are appreciated, he reported. The only other Peterborough boy serving aboard the Prince Rupert, is Glen Harrison.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Parnell, 176 Rubidge street, Ldg. Coder Parnell attended Peterborough Collegiate, and was manager of the Jay's Tobacco Store before enlisting. His brother, Coder Ray Parnell, recently returned to duty aboard H.M.C.S. St. Catharines, which also took part in sinking a sub.

Are You Aware Of The Fact?

That while the new Civic Hospital is to cost approximately $1,400,000, the ratepayers of Peterborough are only being asked to provide $600,000, and half of this will be paid for by industry and business as their assessment is half of the total assessment of the city. This leaves only $300,000 or less than one-quarter the cost to come from the home owners, or a cost to the average property owner of approximately 6 cents a week or the price of a chocolate bar.

That the $600,000 needed to complete the financing of this project will be in the form of three per cent. 20-year debentures and this means less than one cent a day to the average home owner.

Members Provide Program For Concert Association

The Peterborough Concert Association gave its second Members' Concert for this year on Friday night in the P.C.V.S. Auditorium; the hall was not filled, as it is for the concerts given by professional artists, but the audience was large and it gave warm and sympathetic support to all the performers. At the close of the concert applause continued for several minutes, a tribute which should give the greatest satisfaction to the members who appeared on the platform and to the unseen, but no less important, Members' Concert Committee.

The general standard of achievement was high and the program was pleasantly varied. Piano duets are too rarely heard on the concert platform, and it is not often that the pleasant tunes which comprise the overture to "Zampa" are played with so much artistic discretion. Considerable interest was given to the concert by the fact that the two singers who appeared performed well-known operatic arias which demand a high degree of technical and interpertative ability. The violin selections were played with sure authority, and the three solo pianists, on their different levels of achievement were impressive and satisfying. The inclusion of two exhibitions of ballet dancing was a novelty which pleased the audience, and the passage from "Macbeth" was played with an engaging energy and enthusiasm.

The program was as follows:

Ballet from Rosamunde (Schubert); Overture, Zampa (Herald), Norman Lowes, Norman Hurrle.

"My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice," from Samson and Delilah (C. Saint-Saens); "Temple Bells," Amy Woodforde-Finden (from the Cycle of Indian Love Lyrics); "For You Alone" (Henry E. Geehl), Mary Hale, contralto.

Ballerina (music by Stanley Northrop, choreography by Leone Northrop), Leone Northrop.

Troika (Tschaikowsky); The Rising Sun (Trygve Torjusen, from The Norwegian Mountain Idylls), Jean Hills, pianist.

Andante Cantabile (Beethoven), Serenade (Drdla), Cecil Searles violinist.

Rhapsody in G minor, Opus 79 (Brahms), Mildred Hubbell, pianist.

The Murder Scene (Shakespeare, from "Macbeth")— Prologue, May Colby; Macbeth, Paul Moore; Lady Macbeth, Jean MacTavish; Servant, John Lewis (members of the P.C.V.S. Dramatic Club); Director, R. L. Hale.

"Elsas Dream" (Wagner, from Lohengrin); "Message in Song" (Mallinson); "I My Songs Were Only Winged" (Hahn), Dorothy Goldie, soprano.

"An Hour with the Maestro."

Claire de Lune (Debussy), Novellette (Schumann), Maurice St. Jacques, pianist.

Accompanists, Gwen Craw, Olive Searles, A.T.C.M., Harry Northrop, A.T.C.M.

The Members' Concert Committee under the chairmanship of Mrs. Ford Turner, is made up of Mrs. G. A. Richmond, Mrs. G. W. Craw and Miss Alicia Langley. The success of the two concerts which have been held will undoubtedly make the Members' Concert an annual event.

Helen Glover Takes Vows In Double Ring Ceremony

A double ring ceremony of wide interest took place in Trinity United Church, Hastings, this afternoon when Rev. J. E. Glover officiating at the wedding of his daughter, Helen Elizabeth Glover, to Clifford Arthur Mutton. The bride is the daughter of Rev. Glover and Mrs. Glover, of Hastings, and the groom is the son of Rev. H. H. Mutton and the late Mrs. Mutton, of Bridgenorth The groom's father assisted during the ceremony.

Miss C. Doxsee played the wedding music, and Miss Cora Charlton of Lakefield, sang "The Lord's Prayer" before the bride entered the church, and "My World" during the signing of the register. The church was decorated with bronze chrysanthemums and ferns for the occasion.

As her bridal ensemble, the bride chose a floor-length gown of ivory slipper satin, with full skirt, falling into a train. The fitted bodice was fashioned with a sweetheart neckline and long bishop sleeves, coming to a point over either hand. Her long veil of illusion net fell in soft folds from a Queen Anne headdres, and she carried an arm bouquet of Briarcliffe roses.

Mrs. Vaughan Glover of Peterborough was matron of honor, and Miss Dorothy Clark of Toronto and Miss Jean Love of Peterborough were bridesmaids. The matron of honor was gowned in floor-length dusty rose crepe, fashioned with fitted bodice with sweetheart neckline, and full skirt. The bridesmaids were frocked alike in floor-length gold crepe, on similar lines to the matron of honor's gown. Each attendant wore a shoulder-length veil of bronze silk net, caught with tiny bronze 'mums, and carried an arm bouquet of bronze 'mums and ferns

D. Smith of Toronto was best man; and the ushers were John Jackson of Toronto, and James Andrews of Peterborough.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church parlors, where the bride's mother received the guests in a floor-length gown of moss green, with matching hat, and a corsage of bronze 'mums The groom's aunt, Miss E. Fusee, also received and wore a floor-length raspberry red ensemble, with matching hat, and a corsage of bronze 'mums. During the reception, Miss Charlton sang "Through The Years"

For a wedding trip to Limberlost Lodge, the bride chose an Alice blue dress, royal blue coat with white fox colar, and black accessories.

An enjoyable social evening was spent Thursday in the hall of the United Electrical Radio and Machine Workers of America, sponsored by the two locals, 524 and 527. Progressive euchre was played, with Mrs. B. W. Buott winning the women's first prize, and Mrs. Frank Polwell the consolation, and F. Wallwork winning the men's first prize and Mr. Rutherford the consolation.

Refreshments were served by the Women's Auxiliary, and a singsong was enjoyed.

Platt—Gurney

The marriage took place in All Saints' Church, of Catherine Eileen Gurney daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. J Gurney, to Robert John Platt, son of Mrs. Platt, and the late James Platt Rev. Wm. A. Filer officiatec, and Mrs. W. Logan played the wedding music.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, and she wore a street length frock of white wool with a blue velvet hat and a corsage of red roses. Miss Erminie Gurney was her sister's bridesmaid, and she wore a frock of rose wool with brown accessories and a corsage of pink roses. Les Craig was the best man.

Following the reception held at the home of the bride's parents for the immediate families, the bride and groom left for a wedding trip to Kingston. The couple will reside in Peterborough.

Bailieboro Pair Wed 50 Years

BAILIEBORO, Nov. 25—(ENS).—Mr. and Mrs. George Fair celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary at the home of their son, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Fair. Twenty guests sat down to a 7 o'clock wedding dinner, when the lace covered table was centred with a wedding cake marked with a golden '50' and flanked on either side with tall white tapers in silver holders. During the evening the bride of fifty years was presented with a dozen red roses.

Among those present were the groomsman of fifty years ago, Mr. Robert McCamus. Other guests included Mr. and Mrs. Leonard McNeill, Mr. and Mrs. James Fair, Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Armstrong, Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Perrin, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Smith, Mr. Johnston Fair, Mr. William McCamus, Mrs. Harry Armstrong, Mrs. Harry Ball, Mrs. Robert McCamus, Miss Margaret Smith and their daughter, Miss Anna Fair.

THE TEA HOUR GOSSIP . . . .

Today we have some more recipes for cookies and, as it is getting near the Christmas season, when we like to have several different kinds of small cakes on hand, I thought I would give you a few more recipes to chose from.

Fruit Cookies

2 eggs, 2 cups granulated sugar, 1 cup butter, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 cup chopped raisins, 1 cup currants, ½ cup peel, 1 cup sour cream, 1 teaspoon soda dissolved in hot water, 5 cups flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder sifted together. Flour the fruit well. Mix at night and put in the ice box or any cool place until morning. Roll out and cut in fancy shapes and bake on cookie sheet. These cookies keep well, and are delightfully crisp.

Cheese Straws

1 cup flour, ¾ cup grated cheese, 2 tablespoons butter, ½ teaspoon salt, pinch of cayenne, 1 egg. Put all the dry material in pan, mix well, moisten with egg. Roll out and cut into strips and bake.

Nut Macaroons

White of one egg, 1 cup chopped nuts, 1 cup brown sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt. Beat white of egg stiffly, add sugar gradually, still beating. Fold in nut meats sprinkled with salt. Drop from a spoon one inch apart on buttered sheet. Bake in moderate oven.

Five O'Clock Tea Cake

1 cup white sugar, ½ cup butter, 2 level cups of flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, ¾ cup citron peel, salt. Break 2 eggs in a cup and fill with milk. Mix, beat cake five minutes and put in pan. Bake in a moderate oven 45 minutes.

Australian Flier Weds Peterboro Girl

An Australian airman and his bride, Flying Officer Frank E. Sorensen, R.A.A.F., took their marriage vows at George Street Church this afternoon, solemnized by Rev. Dr James Semple. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Sorensen, Australia, and the bride, the former Iris Marion Kerr, is the daughter of Mrs. Flora H. Kerr, Benson avenue, and the late D. A. Kerr.

For the occasion, the church was decorated with pink and white 'mums. Miss Lenore Skitch was at the organ, and played "Ave Maria" during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her uncle W. J. Kerr, the bride was charming in a floor-length gown of ivory embossed satin, on princess lines. Her finger-tip veil of embroidered net was caught to a coronet of orange blossoms, and she carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses and bouvardia.

Mrs. Stuart Whittington was her cousin's matron of honor, in floor-length white taffeta, also cut on princess lines. She wore a matching Queen Anne halo, and carried a bouquet of red roses. FO. J. R. McSherry, R.C.A.F., was best man, and the usher was Stuart Whittington

At the reception, held in the Green Room of the Y.W.C.A., following the ceremony, the bride's mother received the guests in an orchid wool crepe ensemble, with deep orchid hat, and a corsage of green orchids.

For a wedding trip to the Seignory Club, the bride chose a Chartreuse bunny-wool dress, with brown accessories.

On their return, FO. Sorensen and Mrs. Sorensen will live in Westmount, Quebec.

THE STARS SAY . . . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, November 26

SUNDAY'S HOROSCOPE is a conflicting one, with obstacles and frustrations, with difficulty in overcoming such, except by some novel or unique sort of change radical and far reaching. This might be more successfully put over by strategem and intuitive leads rather than force or strenuous attack. Go slow along lines of least resistance Domestic and romantic affairs may be adversely aspected. Safeguard funds, personal confidences or intrigues, against loss or sorrow.

Those whose birthday it is may have a modicum of success by meeting obstacles with shrewdness and sagacity, rather than force or aggression. In personal affairs, domestic, sentimental or business, make few changes and work along lines of least resistance. Shun domestic or affectional squabbles.

A child born on this day should be talented, skillful and ambitious, with favors from those in important positions. But its affectional affiliations are not happily aspected. Use intuition, amiability and cleverness and not aggression.

For Monday, November 27

Monday's astrological forecast is for a particularly lively and eventful state of affairs, in which the aims and interests of youth may be uppermost. It is likely there may be gay travel, change, communications and celebrations, with more enjoyment than profit However, all pertaining to writings, publicity, promotion and public affiliations should prosper. Refrain from show and bravado.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a very lively and enjoyable year, with all pertaining to youth and its highest objectives moving along at gay tempo. This might be in relation to festive occasions. Literary or artistic agreements should be under happy auspices. Travel, change, contracts Shun extravagance and show.

A child born on this day may be exceptionally versatile and talented, and could carve a successful career with its pen or brush. It would have fine ideals and intuition, reaching advanced channels in drama, fiction or romantic art.

EPIDEMIC OF HEARTACHES RAGING

Every Girl Her Own Magician in Art of Managing Boys; Basic Rules Best.

WHETHER Cupid is working overtime these days, or whether lovesickness is catching like polio, or whether the adolescent girls feel that they have to have a sweetie because Sally and Mamie have one, I don't know.

But I do know that an epidemic of heartaches is raging in the breasts of our teen-agers, and that I am deluged with tear-sodden letters asking what to do about it. For, you see, these little girl children who still have one foot in the nursery, while the other is aching to tread the paths of romance, don't know how to handle the situation, and they can't ask Mama what bait she used to catch her first beau because Mama would just look shocked and say that when she was 16 years old she never even thought of such things as boys.

Which isn't helpful to the poor kids who want to know: How do you go about attracting a boy you are in love with who doesn't seem to notice that you are even alive? If you are in love with a boy, should you tell him so? Does a boy admire a girl for beating him in games and standing higher in the classes at school than he does? How do you start a conversation with a new boy?

Is it safe to introduce your boy friend to a girl who is prettier than you are? Should you write the first letter when a boy goes away? If a boy doesn't answer your letters, should you write and ask him why? Should you show a boy that you are flattered pink when he takes you out on a date? Should you let a boy kiss you when he takes you to the movies? And so on, and so on. Ad infinitum.

Of course, generally speaking, every girl has to make her own magic and develop her own technique in handling boys, but there are a few basic rules for the man chase that even the dumbest Dora can learn. The first, and this works on anything in pants between the cradle and the grave, is for a girl to be easy, but not mushy. To show herself pleased with boys' attentions, but not grateful for them. Her motto should be: I can take 'em or leave 'em. And the next rule is like unto the first: Not to be possessive. Nothing on earth scares a boy off so quickly is for a girl to show that she considers that she has put her brand upon him and owns him, body and soul.

Be Smart—Treat Them Nice!

As to the other matters in which Sweet Sixteen wishes to be wised up, here are a few tips: To attract a boy who has never noticed you, step on his foot, or nearly run him down with an automobile, or tole him into your house with good

A BAG OF BEAUTY—There are certain American designers whose name is synonymous with highly original design and magnificent craftsmanship. One of these topnotchers is Koret whose bags are prized as accessory gems. One of his newest designs, impressive for a gift, is his Vanity Basket, fashioned of Koretolope, with gleaming gold kid leaves appliqued all over the surface. It has a facile-hinged, mirror-topped double door opening, and boxed off compartments to keep your accessories neat, making for the practical as well as for the pretty. It is shown here with Sophie's black afternoon frock which has velvet leaves appliqued onto the net yoke, carrying out the theme of the bag.

Urgent Appeal for Workers Sent Out By Red Cross

An appeal for workers of all kinds urgently needed to fill quotas of comforts for the service men and women and bomb victims in Britain, has been sent out by the Red Cross Society, in view of an alarming decrease in the number of articles being shipped to headquarters.

In addition to the needs of the new Canadian Army in the field, the coming of winter has complicated the conditions of bomb victims in England and homeless people in liberated Europe, and they will be looking to the Red Cross for aid and supplies. Progress reports which have reached National Headquarters have caused grave concern, since, in addition to the sharp decrease in quantity, many workers still insist on making articles they like to make, rather than making those which are urgently needed.

The Ontario Committee of the Red Cross accepted quotas during January and February on this year, believing that in turn, they would be accepted by the various branches, made and shipped to headquarters by the end of October. However, the totals have been away below the expected mark, in civilian clothing, as well as knitted comforts for servicemen and women, and the Society has broadcast an appeal for women of Ontario to waken to the need and pledge themselves to being work immediately.

In Peterborough, the need for workers is just as urgent, and women are being asked to volunteer their aid for this vital cause. In every instance, as shown in a report from the acting-chairman of the National Women's War Work Committee, Mrs. D. G. Mackenzie, articles received are not nearly equal to quotas set, and the quotas themselves have not been accepted by branches. In civilian clothing, to cite one instance, no women's coats skirts or blouses have been received, and infants' wear, girls' articles and boys' wear are sadly below par.

The armed forces quotas have not been reached, but the totals are more encouraging. However, in the women's division, knickers, gloves, pullovers, long stockings, and bed sox are needed in greater quantity, and larger supplies in men's goods are also required. The situation has taken on an emergency aspect. The challenge has been expressed in the concluding sentences of Mrs. Mackenzie's report. "The women of Ontario know how to answer this appeal. Contact your Red Cross Branch". Mrs. R. Turner, 515 Water street, is the president of the local Red Cross branch.

Reeve W. R. Linn Returned For Ninth Year

MARMORA, Nov. 25—(ENS).—Thomas Bateman, township clerk, presided at the nominations meeting of Marmora and Lake township at the Town Hall, Marmora, Friday.

J. A. Bell, reeve for the past eight years, was again nominated for that office and in addition, two of this year's councillors, William Pack and Charles Kelly, were also nominated. All members of the present council, namely, W. Pack, C. Kelly, A. Tompkins and G. Davidson were nominated as well as John Wilkes, who is new in the field. For the office of school trustee for two years for which three are to qualify, four names were nominated: John McCann, Wilbert Jones and Percy Carman (retiring trustees) and Burness Johnson. Speeches were made by the nominees, those of aspirants to the office of councillors dealing chiefly with road maintenance.

Returned to Office.

Reeve W. R. Linn, reeve of Marmora for the past eight years, was given a ninth term of office at the nomination meeting presided over by Clerk E. C. Prentice on Friday evening.

Other nominations were: For council, four seats, R. E. Neal, V. Lynch, G. L. Phillips, W. A. Sanderson, G. H. Rennie, L. R. Rundle and M. R. Lavender. The first four are members of the present council.

For three public school trustees, J. W. Hickey, W. Bishop and G. Jarvis (retiring members), C. Holland and D. B. Sanderson.

For hydro commissioner, George Forestell re-elected.

Reeve Linn touched upon lowering of taxes in the years since he took office and emphasized that when existing debentures were paid off, the tax rate would be down to where it should be.

Vincent Lynch, chairman of finance and committee gave an explanatory talk on the treasurer's report and intimated he would qualify for candidature again.

R. E. Neal spoke of the work of the fire department for the past year, mentioning difficulties which had to be faced and said that if there was an election he would be in the field.

G. Lewis Phillips reported for the streets committee and said he was ready to resign if any of the new nominees would stand. W. A. Sanderson spoke as a member of the by-laws committee. Hydro commissioner F. R. Wells answered some questions with relation to lighting. L. R. Rundle and M. R. Lavender, nominees for council, said they would give consideration to their nominations and decide one way or the other by the time set for qualiification.

Gordon Jarvis, retiring school trustee, touched upon school matters of the year and declined to accept re-election, while Cecil Holland and Dougald Sanderson, nominated for the first time for school trustees, would think the matter over before making a decision.

fellows who have the ill-luck to be on duty at those times have the liberty to make use of the galley and make themselves coffee and egg or jam sandwiches—the sandwiches being rationed only by the quantity of eggs and jam on board.

All of the men on board ship eat the same food—there is no special menu for the officers. The daily menu is cooked up in the main galley and the stewards from the officers' mess get their rations and take them back to the officers' galley—where the food is kept warm in an electric heating closet until mealtime.

Ice Cream

Such delicacies as ice cream and fresh fruit are only available to the crew for the first few days out of port. Then the cooks revert to canned fruit and cakes to fill in the "duff"—navy slang for dessert—part of the menu. Dessert and soup are only served at the noon meal.

The following are some sample meals taken at random from the week's list of menus supplied by the cooks:

Breakfast: Cereal; one egg and bacon; toast and coffee; jam or honey; one orange

Dinner: Soup; roast beef; boiled potatoes; carrots and peas; bread and butter; coffee; dessert.

Supper: Chops or cold meat; boiled potatoes; cabbage; bread and butter; tea; jam or honey.

Build him up and don't worry about vitamins and minerals.

Authorities say the difference between husky children and those who are poor eaters, underweight, and nervous is often simply a matter of proper nourishment, especially an adequate supply of vitamins and minerals.

But don't worry about vitamins and minerals! Children who eat 3 average-good meals including fruit juice, and drink 2 glasses of Ovaltine each day, are getting all the extra vitamins and minerals they need. In addition to its well-balanced food values, Ovaltine adds significant amounts of Vitamins A, B_1 and D and the minerals Calcium, Phosphorus and Iron. So, if your child is not developing normally, remember this rule:

3 good meals plus 2 glasses of Ovaltine every day.

First Hillbilly

seemed delighted at the Speaker's invitation. Throwing back his head, he roared forth verse after verse of a song which I think must have been the ancestor of that favorite with the hillbilly singers of today, "Comin' Round the Mountain." The tune was very near the same.

Down the Mountain

The song began, "The big red bull came down the mountain," and the lusty refrain was "Sing O Yonny, Sing Yo Ho." It wasn't a nice song. It deal with fecundity and the process of nature, bovine amours and the rejoicing when "eight bull calves we had that season." They made good use of those calves in the song, for they all became oxen, and, in about the twenty-fourth verse, barbecue meat.

I was born in the Victorian era. Mother was stricts at home and saw to it that I had never been to a worse place than an Indian medicine show or a performance of Uncle Tom's Cabin in the Morenci Opera House before I went to Washington. So I was immensely shocked, and I must say, enjoyed the performance very much. There was a great deal of vigor in the song, and it proved that Democrats and Republicans could be human beings and bury the hatchet for a while.

As I look back at it now, that farewell to the 56th Congress that night in the Speaker's Lobby of the House was really a farewell to an era. Later that same day, Theodore Roosevelt took his oath as vice-president of the United States. In September, he became president when kindly William McKinley died of a mad killer's bulelt. Congress was never to meet again under the old auspices of a ruling obligarchy, and the great work of reform, which Theodore Roosevelt began with an unwilling Congress, was to go on.

Battle Ahead

The battle for the rights of man was only a little way ahead, had we only known it that night. The pent-up energy for carrying out this program was underneath, but up to the time Theodore Roosevelt gave it direction, the "malefactors of great wealth" as old Teddy called them, were the bosses of Congress. The 56th Congress passed out in the complacency of that rule, but the 57th was to know the urgings of the first Roosevelt and his great humanitarian program.

And, had he known it, there were other factors at work. Even then, a man named Henry Ford was monkeying around in Detroit trying to put over his idea of automobiles for the workingman, which we could laugh at then when a few crude autos were only expensive toys for a very few rich men. Also, other men like Henry Ford were fooling around trying to fly. No one could do that, and any one of us in the House that night could have proved it in three minutes by geometry.

The movies were shortly to come, electric power was to ease men's burdens, and radio broadcasting was only a score of years away then. Wonders were to come, and many new problems. There would be many who would like to go back to the "good old days." But this world does not work that way.

As for the rough old song by the Gentleman from Mississippi, it, too, had its place in the picture. Whatever might be said of the song, it was full of crude vigor. Its rawness could not conceal that it symbolized the driving energy of a people who would go on and on, striving ever, failing at times, but always driving ahead, living democracy and proving its worth.

Mrs. W. Varty Gives 5th Donation Only Son Serving In Belgium

Mrs. Walter Varty of Havelock, whose only son, Cfn. Norman Varty, is with the R.C.E.M.E. of the Algonquin Regiment in Belgium, made her fifth donation at the Bloor Donors Clinic this week.

Rejected for service in the army because of her age, Mrs. Varty is working in the Canadian Pacific Railway yards in Havelock with the women's gang. A war bride of the last war, she met her husband at Folkestone and six months later they were married shortly after the Armistice was signed. For a while in the 1914-1918 struggle, Mrs. Varty worked in a T.N.T. shell factory, but was forced to leave because of poisoning, and then she served for two years in the W.A.A.C.

The campaign which began this week to raise 1,500 new donors in Peterborough and district, got a good start when 100 people attended the Clinic on Wednesday, the first time the hundred mark has been reached in many months. Donors are also being reminded to observe the diet rules prior to giving blood. No fats must be eaten within 12 hours of giving blood, otherwise the fat gets into the blood stream and the plasma will not dry properly. Bacon, eggs, milk, cream, butter and cheese, must be crossed off the menu until after the donation.

Donors on Monday were:

Canadian General Electric and Genelco—Edward L. Ryan, 3; Calvin Nicholls, 4; Howard Woodcox, 5; Thos. H. Busby, 8; George Houghton, 8; Miss Stella Robinson, 4; Albert Buott, 4; Howard Bell, 1; Edw. Wesleyan Methodist Cemetery Bought By City For Park Purposes

The old Wesleyan Methodist Cemetery in the north end is being bought by the council for $300 from the trustee board of George Street Methodist Church for park purposes. The athorizing bylaw, introduced by Alderman Swanston, was passed Monday night.

There are four acres in the property, which is described as lying east of the Communication Road. It is understood that the old graves gave up their dead for removal to Little Lake Cemetery in years gone by, last episode of a forgotten controversy almost one hundred years ago when the town of Peterborough was incorporated and severed from North Monaghan township.

As related in the writings of the late Frank H. Dobbin, Peterborough's first cemetery was the present site of Confederation Square.

"Whether by rule or agreement the bodies of those of the Protestant denominations were interred within the area of one-half of the block, that fronting on George street. Those of the Catholic faith were buried in the western half, save and except the frontage on Aylmer street west from a lane crossing the land from Murray to McDonnel street. This frontage was a part of the lands granted to the Anglican Church, which also received the whole of the block bounded by Water, Brock, Sheridan and Hunter streets. In the centre of this block St. John's Church was subsequently erected.

No Cemeteries

As years rolled on the number of interments increased. There was no burial place set apart in any of the townships surrounding the town plot for several years; so many interments were made at Peterborough, as the locality had been named. Facilities of the ground became more and more limited, and during the years 1840 to 1848 the matter was a source of serious discussion."

Peterborough was incorporated as town in 1850. Its first council on March 25 adopted the following resolution:

"Moved by Mr. Ridley, seconded by Edwin Chamberlen, that Messrs. John Hall, James Hall, William Eastland and Patrick Ryan (members of the council) be a special committee to prepare a bylaw for regulating interments in all burial grounds within the town of Peterborough, and to report to this council by such bylaw at the next meeting."

At a public meeting of ratepayers shortly afterward it was suggested that a place of burial more suitable than Central Park should be considered, and out of the proposal developed the idea of acquiring the property long established now as Little Lake Cemetery.

Controversy broke out as to whether the land should be acquired by the municipality to be owned and managed by the community or by a private company. Then when it was finally decided to name trustees of the property which was to be obtained, the Wesleyan Methodist Church decided to go their own way for the reason, as they protested, that although a numerous body in the community, they had been entirely overlooked in the appointment of trustees. Hence, they bought a small area of land in the north end, and used it as a cemetery for many years.

Early Streets

The late Mr. Dobbin made an interesting comment on the condition of the lower section of the town at that time, 1850-52 .."George street had not been graded and so made useful for communication farther south than Dalhousie street..." Spaulding's Bay at Townsend street was a mash, into which the creek found an outlet.."When making the grade of George street from Hunter street to McDonnel street, considerable material was removed and this was deposited in the marsh, and in the course of years, with additional filling, the permanent roadway was completed. In the meantime access to the cemetery was made by way of Aylmer street."

The town council denied that it had been actuated by any motive of excluding representatives of the Methodist Church from the proposed trustee board for the cemetery, but the dispute flared through the town from spring to summer and then gradually subsided in the press and throughout the community.

That is an outline of the circumstances in which the Wesleyan Methodist Cemetery was set apart, and continued in use for several generations.

Early Residents

The following figures of denominational population are quoted from the town's first assessment roll: Roman Catholics 456; B.C. and Methodists 441; Church of England 416; Free Church 403; Baptists 49; United Presbyterians 12; Other Methodists 10; Episcopal Methodists 8; Lutherans 3; other Presbyterians 1; other denominations 1; no denominations 12. Total 1,812.

Amount of ratable property—£20,296.

Taxpayers 294; householders 327; merchants' shops 25; horses 129; dogs 110.

The population of the time at the time of incorporation was stated, officially, as being 1,800.

Patton Decorated

ADVANCED ALLIED SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, November 25—(AP).—Gen. Eisenhower pinned a bronze star on Lt.-Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., today in recognition of the U.S. 3rd Army commander's part in the capture of the fortress city of Metz.

FARM JUDGING TROPHY WINNERS—Dalton Dorrell of Nestleton, Ont., and Lloyd Ayre of Hampton, Ont., winners of the potato judging in the junior farmers' competition.

Murder Appeal Gets Thrown Out

TORONTO, Nov. 25—(CP)—The Ontario Court of Appeal today dismissed the appeal of William Schmidt against his conviction at Fort Frances recently in the "hot stove" murder of Mrs. Violet Jamieson at Flanders, Ont. Schmidt and three other men—Eino Tillonen and George and Anthony Skrypnyk—were sentenced to be handed Dec. 14.

E. A. Yoerger, counsel for Schmidt had argued that his client should have had a separate trial because statements made by the other three would prejudice the jury against him.

Th quartet was convicted and sentenced to death in Mrs. Jamieson's death from burns received when she was placed on a hot stove to make her reveal where she kept her money.

Mayor Conboy Denies Employees' Charge

TORONTO, Nov. 25—(CP)—Mayor Fred Conboy last night described as a "slanderous falsehood" a reported statement of a former civic employee before Board of Control Wednesday.

R. G. Pell, the employee, is reported to have told the mayor: "You ought to be in jail, not sitting there. There can't be any gasoline shortage when the streets commissioner sends two husky men like myself and a five-ton truck to deliver two brass taps to your house."

Dr. Conboy said that "at no time have I received taps from any one. Any fixing of taps in my home is done by a recognized plumber."

Street Cleaning Commissioner Harold Bailey said the "allegations made by Mr. Pell are false, unjust and malicious." He said Mr. Pell was dismissed from the department Dec. 18, 1943, for "misconduct."

To Those Convalescing After Severe Illness

After many severe illnesses or serious operations the patient is very often left in an extremely weak, nervous, run-down condition.

To all those convalescents who need some kind of a tonic to stimulate and build up the weakened system, we would recommend Milburn's Health and Nerve Pills to assist them back to health—happiness again.

These pills help supply elements necessary to assist the convalescent in bringing back bodily strength and vigour.

Price 50c a box, 65 pills, at all drug counters.

Look for our registered trade mark a "Red Heart" on the package.

NOTICE

IN THE MATTER OF THE ESTATE OF GEORGE CRAFT, Late of the Village of Hall's Bridge, in the County of Peterborough, Farmer, Deceased.

All Persons having CLAIMS against the Estate of the said GEORGE CRAFT, who died on or about the 13th Day of August, 1944, at the said Village of Hall's Bridge, and who at the time of his death had his fixed place of abode at the said Village of Hall's Bridge, are hereby notified to send to the undersigned the Executors of all and singular the Property of the said Deceased on or before the 8th Day of December, 1944, full particulars of their Claims duly verified by Affidavit or Statutory Declaration.

Immediately after the last mentioned date the Assets of the Estate of the said Deceased will be distributed among the parties entitled thereto, having regard only to Claims of which the Executors then shall have had notice.

DATED at Peterborough, this 11th Day of November, A.D. 1944.

ALFRED HIGGINS,
STANLEY HIGGINS,
Executors,

By their Solicitor, JOHN A. BRADSHAW, 360 Water Street, Peterborough, Ontario.

Committee Ends

there should be a fence of a substantial type built around this property and "Danger" signs posted.

Shell Oil, Townsend street: There are four tanks at this point, two 15,000 gallon gasoline and one 500 gallon gasoline under ground, one 15,000 gallon used for coal oil.

City Service, Townsend street: This company operates four tanks, two 15,000 gallon for gasoline, one 10,000 gallon for gasoline and one 15,000 gallon coal oil.

The principal fault found by your committee of these two locations was that here again no "Danger" signs appeared and there is no watchman on duty after business hours. There is a coal shed immediately west of the Shell Oil property owned by the Canadian Pacific Railway and rented by the Peterborough Fuel & Transfer. It is the opinion of your committee that the location of this shed so close to the gasoline tanks is a serious situation.

I have a complete list of all gasoline tanks in use in the city by the retail distributors and privately owned if any member of the Council requires information in this connection. You will understand that all these tanks are under ground.

To summarize:

It is the unanimous recommendation of your committee that those tanks of the British American Oil Company and the Canadian Oil Company be removed from their present location to a point outside the city and that this be done as expeditiously as possible in the interests of the lives of the people in the immediate vicinity and for the protection of their property.

All wholesale distributors in our opinion should be compelled to construct good wire fences and place "Danger" signs on these fences or on their property and wherever it is practical have a watchman on night duty.

eats. The ice box is many a girl's best come-on. Never tell a boy that you are in love with him. No man chases a bus after he has caught it.

Never beat a man at games or win an argument with one. Be smart enough never to let a boy find out how smart you are. Talk to a boy about himself and you will keep him spellbound. Go easy on a boy's pocketbook and he will be a steady date. Never write the first letter or give the first kiss. Let the boy have the illusion that he is chasing you, no matter how hot you are on his trail.

Try out these few suggestions, daughter. They have always worked. And they still do.

Christmas Toys Are Scarce

—ELECTRIC TRAINS
—MECCANNO SETS
—TRICYCLES
—WIND-UP TRAINS
—METAL FIRE ENGINES
—METAL TRUCKS, etc., etc.

... in fact almost all the favorite metal toys, spring toys and electric toys are off the market owing to wartime restrictions. The toy makers have done well in producing other non-metallic toys but the children love those old favorites.

If you have such articles in your home and no longer need them you can sell them quickly and easily.

SALLY'S SALLIES

"I'm not going to say 'friend' to you, Willie Winkle, after the way you stood me up on that date last night!"

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

MISPLAYED COMBINATION

ONE CARD combination which is nearly always misplayed by pretty fair players is that in which you have the ace, queen and jack of a suit, with one of those secondary honors guarded once or twice opposite the other two, and a total of only seven cards of the suit held by your side. You usually see the average player lead the single honor toward the others, for a finesse, or else lead a small card to the tenace for a finesse. Frequently that results in the loss of two tricks. The best chance to limit losses to one, when you lack the 10 or 9, is to lead a small card from the two honors on the first round toward the single honor.

North: ♠ Q 4; ♥ A K 5 4 2; ♦ J 9 4 3; ♣ J 8

West: ♠ K 7; ♥ J 10 6; ♦ 10 8 2; ♣ A K 10 4 2

East: ♠ 10 9 8 6; ♥ Q 9 7 3; ♦ 6 5; ♣ 9 7 6

South: ♠ A J 5 3 2; ♥ 8; ♦ A K Q 7; ♣ Q 5 3

(Dealer: East. Neither side vulnerable.)

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♠	2 ♣	2 ♥
Pass	3 ♦	Pass	4 ♦
Pass	4 ♠

After taking the club K and A, West shifted to the heart J, which was, of course, won by the dummy with the A. South saw that his contract depended on only one factor—avoiding the loss of two tricks in trumps. Trying what he considered the best method of limiting his loss in the trump suit to a single trick, he led the spade Q, playing low from his hand. West won with the K and returned the heart 10 to the K, South discarding the club Q.

Now South's only chance was to find that the hostile trumps were divided 3-3. Seeking that break, he scored the spade A and J, but luck was against him—as it figured to be when six trumps were out—so he had to lose a trick to the spade 10.

The right way to play that trump combination, to limit it to loss of one trick, is to lead a small one from South on the first round, prepared to come up with the Q if West plays low. Playing that way, your chances are greatly enhanced. The 3-3 chance will work for you, and so will the combination that actually prevailed. Trying it the other way, you are licked unless the outstanders are divided evenly, no matter which has the K.

Your Week-End Question

In playing as declarer, you will ordinarily place high honors in the hand of a defender who had doubled or taken other strong action. Why then should you treat his partner as more likely to hold any missing low honors?

Sergeant-Major E. S. Wood returns to his home town, Toronto, meets his family and prepares to return to civilian life. Son Billy, niece Dolores greet him. Army and other service counsellors discuss future with returned men, advising them as to career! government-subsidized trade, professional courses and job finding facilities. Outside door other discharged servicemen await interview.

First concern of rehabilitation is helping returned men regain health. Man (Left) with neck injury does exercises calculated to speed convalescence period. In Centre picture, Norman Bowles (Left) and Bruce Gould learn to service business machines, get paid while training. Photo (Right) shows method used to teach Pte. Ed. Gerris to write with artificial hand. He also lost an eye.

Change From Khaki To Mufti Made Easier By Government Rehabilitation Plans

When Sailor Jones comes back from the sea or Airman Smith comes out of the sky and Soldier or CWAC Brown return to civil life, a large number of courses are open to them. They may return to their old jobs or learn a new trade; they may complete their education or get assistance in starting their own business; they may want to own a farm or their own home. Whatever method they choose for integrating themselves in civilian life again, the means of doing so are at their disposal.

In caring for her returning veterans Canada understands that clothing allowances, gratuities, hospitalization, plastic surgery and pensions are not enough, although the Dominion has one of the most advanced schemes in the world for such aid to the veteran.

Most important of all is the problem of finding jobs for the men who are stepping out of uniform every day, skilled and unskilled, but all entitled to work at living wages. Immediate assistance is given by the Veterans' Settlement Bureaus across Canada, placing discharged veterans in positions for which they have been trained or in industry which will train these discharged men in a trade which will guarantee a decent wage.

A number of acts — Post Discharge Re-Establishment Order Vocational Training Co-Ordination Act, Reinstatement in Civil Employment Act, Veterans' Land Act — comprise the effort. Additional helping legislation may be enacted as general demobilization gets under way.

On discharge, a soldier or sailor or airman will be permitted to keep his uniforms and personal necessities. Clothing grants will be paid the discharged man as well as a rehabilitation grant and a war service gratuity. Transportation home is another service the Department of Pensions and National Health extends to the discharged man or woman.

Bring Home Wives

Wives or children of the Canadian Forces overseas will be brought to Canada where such servicemen have been returned to Canada for discharge. The same service is available to widows and children of Canadians who have died overseas.

District Rehabilitation Boards, Veterans' Welfare Officers and Citizens' Volunteer Committees have been set up for vocational guidance and job-finding, and a specialized service is provided by the Personal Services Welfare Officers who work in the hospitals of the Department of Pensions and National Health.

Private industry is co-operating, as in the case of Norman Bowles and Bruce Gould, who were given jobs with Marchand Calculators, learning to service business machines. Bowles was overseas with the Third Division, serving in Britain with the Queen's Own Rifles for two years. In civil life Bowles had been a clerk in a delicatessen store and had no desire to return to it. As a married man he wanted some assurance of a better income. With Bruce Gould, who left school to join the R.C.A.F. and was discharged within a year, Bowles accepted the training job in the service department of Marchand Calculators. The men start at $15 a week, apprenticeship pay, and after their four-year course are earning $40 a week, their wages rising to this figure over the four years.

"I love the work," Gould says, "and it'll be steady. Bad times or good, business machines need servicing. But let's hope there will be no bad times."

An unusual case of vocational training is Gunner P. S. Burd, who did theatrical advertising before he joined up. He was a veteran of the last war, joining the artillery at 14 and being invalided home before he was 16. Now out of uniform again, his ambition was to become a chef, to open his own restaurant. At the Toronto Central Technical School, which trains navy chefs, Burd was enrolled for a few weeks' course. When the course is completed he will get government help in opening his restaurant to the extent of $3,600.

Private Ed Gerris, 10th Infantry Brigade, R.C.A.S.C., went through the blitz in Britain and was injured when a bomb burst on the other side of a tank on which he was doing some welding. He lost his right arm from the elbow and his right eye. Five other men working with him were killed. Gerris' life hung in the balance, but tiptop hospital care saved his life and he was shipped to Canada.

Shows Soldier's Grit

Today he is a student at the central college of Shaw's Business Schools, Toronto, learning penmanship and taking a course in primary accounting. Using a glove-covered wooden hand, this gallant amputation case is studying writing with all the grit that made him a good soldier. Principal Eccles has taken a special interest in Gerris and has helped him make progress. Together they designed a rubber-pad "muscle" to take the place of forearm mobility. Together they worked out a metal feeler to fit between the fourth and third fingers of Ed's wooden right hand. A spring in the tube gives Ed a sense of feel when his hand touches the paper or blackboard, so that he can control the pen pressure. Right now, his penmanship is better than most people's handwriting.

Gratuities in addition to the $100 clothing allowance discharged men receive include $7.50 for each 30 days of service in the western hemisphere (except Greenland, Iceland and the Aleutians), and $15 for each 30 days of service overseas, including Greenland, Iceland and the Aleutian Islands. Supplementary gratuities consist of 7 days pay and allowances for every six months spent overseas, plus a rehabilitation grant of 30 days' pay and allowances immediately on discharge.

A Canadian private, married, with two children, who spends one year as a volunteer in Canada and two years overseas, will be entitled to a rehabilitation grant of $108.12, clothing allowance of $100, basic gratuity of $450 (payable in monthly installments), supplementary gratuity of $135.90 and re-establishment credit of $450; a total of $1,244.02.

In cases of out-of-work and temporary incapacitation allowances the grants expire after 18 months following discharge. Grants provide for the payment of $60 a month to single men or women, $80 a month to a man and his wife when the ex-service man or woman is taking training or completing education. When out of work, temporarily incapacitated, or awaiting financial returns from a financial endeavour the grant is $50 a month to single persons and $70 a month to a man and his wife.

Additional monthly allowances are made for dependents: for one child, $12; second child, $12; third child, $10; for each additional child, $8. An additional monthly allowance of $15 is made for dependent parents.

Where a married person or an ex-serviceman with dependents has to leave his community for a training course an additional living allowance of $5 a week is paid. Where the cost for commuting exceeds regular carfare an additional allowance not exceeding $5 may be arranged.

Fully 47 per cent of service personnel in this war have high school or technical school training as compared with 13 per cent who had such training in World War I. All who qualified for university training when they enlisted or any other serviceman who can quality within 15 months after discharge, may receive maintenance grants and free university education. No one may repeat a year's work for which benefits have been paid.

After 15 weeks of insured employment following discharge service personnel are then entitled to the same unemployment insurance benefits as though they had spent the whole period of their service in insured employment.

Shown Preference

Preference in employing civil servants will be given ex-servicemen and provision has been made that in all cases of government war contracts preference shall be given ex-service personnel.

Hospitalization and pension benefits for those disabled were in effect before the war broke out and have been extended.

Truly, Canada's provisions for her discharged soldiers show the nation's desire to see them well etablished. It is the same pirit in civil life which has made the Canadian forces overseas such an admirable force.

WELCOME IN BELGIAN HOME—For the past few days Rfmn. R. Wolfe, Liverpool, N.S., had been billeted with these Belgian people, as he went about his duties in regard to the recent investiture in Ghent. Here he thanks them for their hospitality. The investiture was made by the Burgomaster of the city to Canadian officers instrumental in the liberation of the area; awards were in silver and bronze medals.

Macfarlane Quits Post In Army

WINNIPEG, Nov. 25 (CP)—Brig. R. A Macfarlane, officer commanding M.D. 10, last night announced his resignation. In a statement issued to the press he said his resignation of the command was in protest against the voluntary recruiting plans of Minister of National Defence, Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, and had been filed Nov. 21 and accepted Wednesday.

Since Brig. Macfarlane submitted his resignation the government through order-in-council has introduced partial conscription of draftees for overseas service.

Brig Macfarlane said his resignation arose out of a conference of district commanding officers called by Gen. McNaughton in Ottawa Nov 24. He said Gen. McNaughton asked his senior officers throughout Canada to undertake a redoubled voluntary recruiting campaign among draftees. In the light of his own experience with draftees, Brig. Macfarlane said he declared at the conference that he did not believe the new campaign would succeed but on his return to Winnipeg pressed the campaign with vigor.

Brig. Macfarlane declared he decided to hand his resignation to Lt.-Gen. J. C. Murchie, chief of general staff, upon reading a press report htat Gen. McNaughton had said that "information given me at the conference (of officers in Ottawa) confirmed my belief more than ever that the continuation of a voluntary policy would provide the reinforcements."

"This statement would leave the impression that I, as one of the D.O.C.'s present, concurred in the belief," Brig. Macfarlane quoted from his letter of resignation.

Must Hang On

LONDON, Nov. 25—(CP-Reuter) — Fritz Luecke, German war correspondent, reported today that Field Marshal Von Rundstedt, commander in the west, had warned troops in the Aachen area to "stand fast" because if they were overcome the way into Germany would be open.

"Never before has a battle been so costly to us," the correspondent added.

"NO SURRENDER"—Today the U.S. Marine Corps revealed the story of the marine who wouldn't 'surrender. He is Reid C. Chamberlain, 25, of El Cajon, Calif., shown here. When Corregidor gave up, he refused to surrender, and managed to make his escape by boat. After 28 days of hungry and thirsty drifting in the China Sea, he returned to the Philippines, landing behind the Jap lines. He served with guerilla units for two years, and is back battling the Japs.

Claim Big 3 Signed Occupation Pact

LONDON, Nov. 25—(CP)—A reliable report today said Russia, Britain and the United States last week signed an agreement on the occupation of Germany. Details of the aggreement were not immediately known.

The agreement was understood to have been signed by William Strang for Britain, Feodor Gusev, Soviet Ambassador to Britain, for Russia, and Philip Mosely, deputy to Ambassador John G. Winant on the European Advisory Commission, for the United States

Under the agreement, it was understood, machinery would be set up for the control of Germany during the period in which she would be filling the Allied terms of unconditional surrender.

A reliable source said the most important provision of the agreement was a unanimity rule, which means that all major decisions of the big three on supreme Allied control of Germany would have to be reached unanimously.

It was understood that France did not sign the agreement because Rene Massigli, French Ambassador to Britain, has not taken his seat on the European Advisory Commission. One source said, however, that it might be deduced that France would not be excluded from participating in the arrangement for the occupation of Germany

Under the new pact reported last week providing for the establishment of control machinery, the European Advisory Commission would be in a position to draw up proclamations for laying down the law to Germany. These decrees apparently would deal with German industry, economy, education and disarmament.

Aircraft Shell Contract Cancelled

GALT, Nov. 25 — (CP) — Officials of the Babcock-Wilcox and Goldie-McCulloch Co., Ltd., here announced to-day they have received instructions to discontinue production of anti-aircraft shells next month. They said the order came from the United Kingdom.

The firm has been making shells for the Bofors anti-aircraft gun for the past four and one-half years and produced more than 2,500,000. The discontinuation order said the need for this type of shell had been satisfied.

Company officials said 180 employees will be affected by the shutdown. Production wil be completed by the end of the year

HOME ON FURLOUGH — Able Seaman E. A. Reid, RCNVR, son of Mrs. M. Reid, 524 Douglas Avenue, and the late Archie Reid, is spending his leave at home after serving overseas with HMCS Prescott. AB. Reid has a brother, Lance-Bomb. W. J. Reid, serving with the Canadian Artillery at Petawawa.

New Offensive Gains In Burma

KANDY, Ceylon, Nov. 25—(CP-Reuter)—A new British attack, already meeting with success, has been launched in North Burma against the railway town of Pinwe, to-day's southeast Asia command communique reported. Troops of the 36th British Division had already taken their first objective.

Earlier it had been reported that Welsh troops were engaged against the Japanese in the jungle country around Pinwe.

Chinese forces to-day forced two spearheads into Bhamo, the big Irrawaddy port and largest town between Myitkyina and Mandway, the link of the Japanese line barring an Allied sweep into the heart of Central Burma.

Lindsay Native Dies

TORONTO, Nov. 25—(CP)—Mrs. J. G. Workman, a native of Lindsay, Ont., died yesterday at her home at suburban Scarboro. She lived for a time in Wingham before coming to Toronto. Her husband retired recently from the staff of the University of Toronto schools. A brother, Fred, lives in Kitchener.

Cavan Institute Discusses V. Diseases

CAVAN, Nov. 25—(ENS). — Cavan Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. Melville Carr, with 16 members present. The roll call was "Suggest an idea you would like to put in practice for social welfare in your own community." It was moved that Mrs. Norman Braithwaite's group carry on with the dances every two or three weeks to raise funds for Red Cross work as dances had been successful in the past

Letters were read from George Foster, Neil Braithwaite, and Manson Cathcart, thanking the Institute for parcels received. Papers on Farm Forum and its work and benefits to the community were read and passed around by the secretary, Mrs. A. Miller. A paper was given by Mrs. Adams on Public Health and the danger of V.D in the Province, also the advantage of early care and vaccination of children was stressed. Papers also dealt with contagious and infectious diseases of children.

It was moved by Mrs. Snider that $10 be given to Mr. Kerr of Millbrook for Red Cros work. A report was given by the delegate, Mrs. Roy Ferrin, who had been to Toronto to the convention of Women's Institutes. She suggested ways of improving the Institute, and Mrs. Robert Howden gave another paper on Child Welfare.

Lunch was served by Mrs. Melville Carr's group and a social time spent. The women sewed many quilt blocks during the afternoon in preparation for another quilting. Mrs. Keegan and Mrs. Kennedy displayed quilts made by their groups. The next meeting will be on December 21.

Nash Yellowknife Gold Mines Ltd.

(YELLOWKNIFE AREA CONTAINS WEALTH UNLIMITED)

No greater opportunity has existed in the annals of Canadian mining history than that which exists today. The Dominion is on the threshold of presenting to the public what will be the major producing gold camp on the North American continent. That area is YELLOWKNIFE. Its possibilities at this time appear to be even greater than those presented by the fabulously rich Porcupine and Kirkland Lake camps in their early stages of exploration. What these two major camps have accomplished is indelibly written in the records and has brought fortune to the courageous and far-sighted investors who had faith in Canada's finest heritage, her natural resources.

The production and dividend record of the principal mines in these two great areas to Dec. 31, 1943, is approximately as follows:

	Production	Dividends Paid
Porcupine	$732,952,561	$218,779,483
Kirkland Lake	$441,673,943	$192,050,480

Located on the Same Zone of Favorable Geology as a Number of the Outstanding Properties in Yellowknife

Nash To Diamond Drill

Nash Yellowknife officials announce that plans are now in the making for the launching as soon as possible of a diamond drilling campaign on the company's property in the Smelter's-Giant section. A faulted zone trending in a southeasterly direction passes through the property and engineering opinion is that it may be a major fault of a main break and as it may exert considerable influence on mineralization, it is planned to centre the new phase of exploration work and diamond drilling on this zone. A large amount of surface work already completed has disclosed mineralized showings and these also will be drilled and a magnetometer survey made of the Nash holdings.

5 Developments— 5 Producers

It is interesting to note that prior to the present activitity in Yellowknife, all development programs resulted in producing mines. Negus, Con, Rycon, Ptarmigan and Thompson-Lundmark were the first to mine and profitably mill the yellow metal. Even Giant was a small high-grade shipper some years ago from a zone still north of present probing.

It is conservatively estimated that at least 20 new mines will emerge when the current new crop of operating companies shift into high gear. This is the beginning of Canada's great era of gold mining expansion. Profits to the investors will run into millions.

"GO" SIGNAL EAGERLY AWAITED

Early development in the Yellowknife area has given every reason to believe that the achievements of Porcupine and Kirkland Lake areas will be equalled and probably excelled. When restrictions on gold mining are lifted, Giant Yellowknife will be prepared for production with a mill of 1,500-2,000 tons daily capacity, and only half of its property has as yet been explored. Negus Mines, Thompson-Lundmark and the Consolidated Mining and Smelting controlled properties of Con, Rycon and Ptarmigan Mines will again demonstrate the great productive capabilities of the Yellowknife field. THE PROPERTY OF NASH YELLOWKNIFE GOLD MINES IS LOCATED IN THE IMMEDIATE VICINITY OF ALL THESE PROVEN PROPERTIES AND IS AFFORDED AN EXCELLENT CHANCE OF DUPLICATING THEIR ASTONISHING RESULTS.

BUY NASH YELLOWKNIFE NOW BEFORE THE PLANNED PROGRAM OF DIAMOND DRILLING GETS GOING AND THE PRICE GOES UP IN RESPONSE TO THE RESULTS OBTAINED. THE PROPERTY HAS MORE THAN ORDINARY POSSIBILITIES AT PRESENT LOW PRICES.

Banking Institutions Show Confidence

Prior to the present mining boom in Yellowknife, the area was serviced only by the Canadian Bank of Commerce. Early in 1944 the Dominion Bank and Imperial Bank of Canada opened branches and it is expected that two more of the chartered banks will be operating in the area next Spring, to bring the total to five. This represents concrete evidence that a great future is the destiny of Yellowknife.

Owen Sound Officer Awarded V.C.

Major David Currie Heads Mixed Force Capturing St. Lambert

OTTAWA, Nov. 27 — (CP). — A young Canadian Army officer, whose small mixed force of tanks, self-propelled anti-tank guns and infantry captured the Normandy village of St. Lambert Sur Dives, thus denying the Chambois-Trun escape route to the remnants of two German armies cut off in the Falaise pocket, has been awarded the Victoria Cross for gallantry.

He is Maj. David Vivian Currie, 32, of Moose Jaw, Sask., and Owen Sound, Ont., an officer of the South Alberta Reconnaissance Regiment. In three days and nights of fierce fighting his force destroyed seven enemy tanks, 12 8-millimeter guns, and 40 vehicles, killed 300 Germans, wounded 500, and captured 2,100.

All officers under Currie's command were either killed or wounded during the action, and he had only one hour's sleep in the entire period, yet when his wife, learning from press accounts that he'd been in a "terrific action of some sort," wrote and asked him for more particulars, he replied:

Modest Fellow.

"What is all this nonsense you were talking about the Falaise Gap? I've been busy ever since coming to France trying hard to win a medal for keeping my head down. Somebody else, no doubt."

But the citation covering the award of the Empire's highest decoration for gallantry to Currie told a different story. It said he defied heavy enemy fire to enter St Lambert Sur Dives alone and afoot when his force was held up by a strong enemy resistance, reconnoitred the German defences and extricated the crews of two tanks which had been knocked out by 88-millimeter guns.

The action began August 18 last. The next morning Currie, without any previous artillery bombardment personally led an attack on the village despite fierce opposition from enemy guns and infantry, and by noon had succeeded in seizing and consolidating a position half-way inside the village.

Tokyo Raided 2nd Time In Four Days

Jap War Industries Battered Anew Attack From Saipan

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—(AP)—B29 Superfortresses went on the warpath again to-day, hitting Tokyo for the second time in four days, and striking at Japanese installations in Thailand (Siam).

The big bombers struck the enemy capital from Saipan in one blow and then in another come across simultaneously from India bases to hit Thailand.

The War Department in telling of a mission from Saipan in the Marianas Islands under leadership of Brig.-Gen. Haywood S. Hansell, hitting Tokyo from the same spot the B29's used Friday, said:

"Gen. Hansell's 21st bomber command returned to Tokyo again today, Nov. 27 for another daylight bombing attack upon strategic industrial targets. Further details will be released as soon as the information becomes available."

Then, about an hour later, it told of this attack under Maj.-Gen. Curtis Lemay, from bases in India:

"A substantial force of B-29 aircraft from Gen. Lemay's 20th Bomber Command to-day (Nov. 27, Tokyo time) conducted a daylight bombing mission against strategic targets in the Bankok area of Japanese-occupied Thailand."

B-29's can carry as much as 10 tons of explosives. In the original announcement, there was no estimate of the number of Superfortresses returning to Tokyo to-day. Last Friday's contingent was described as a "large task force."

Two of the bombers were lost in the Friday raid. Yesterday came word from Saipan that the entire crew of one of these two B-29's had been rescued from two rafts by an American destroyer.

The Japanese, as is thier habit, reported that to-day's visit by the B-29's resulted only in "slight damage to non-military facilities."

Returns To Quebec?

TERRACE, B.C., Nov. 27—(CP). — French - speaking home defence troops in this area have requested National Defence Headquarters that they be returned to Quebec, it was reported here last night. The reports said the men were performing only essential camp services pending a reply.

(There was no immediate comment at Ottawa on the Terrace report.)

Canadian Guards Win Respect Of Hun Armies

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

WITH THE 1ST CANADIAN ARMY, Nov. 27 — (CP). — The Germans have always had a healthy respect for British Guards regiments and in this campaign they have learned that the same should apply to the Guards in the Canadian Army.

The Canadian Grenadier Guards from Montreal is one unit which made this quite clear to the troops of Germany's Seventh and 15th armies which it fought.

These Grenadiers met many of the elite formations in the German Army as they rolled their Sherman tanks through France, Belgium and into Holland and they have a long string of victories to mark their contribution to the Canadian Army's triumph on the Western Front.

The three fighting squadrons now are commanded by Maj. Ned Amy of Kentville, N.S., who fought with his tanks all the way from Caen where the unit went into the line first, Maj. "Curt" Greenleaf and Maj. George Hale, both of Montreal. A Winnipeg lieutenant-colonel commands the regiment and second-in-command is Maj. H. A. (Snuffy) Smith of Dauphin, Man., who like Amy fought in tanks in Sicily and Italy.

The Regiment landed in France in mid-July and Aug. 6 went into action.

6 Allied Armies Push Ahead Fierce Air Battle Over Reich

German Air Force Enters Battle In Large Numbers

LONDON, Nov. 27—(AP)—At least 94 German fighters were shot down today, the second consecutive day of big air battles over Germany, as Americans planes swept almost to Berlin and heavy bombers got in licks in the front line battle after a heavy pre-dawn R.A.F. raid on Munich.

In that raid, the R.A.F. planes scattered six-ton earthquake bombs on that German industrial city for the first time.

Five hundred American fighters, part of a 1,300-plane force which bombed and strafed Nazi rail, road and air targets, met an almost equal number of German Focke-Wulfs and Messerschmitts on a sweep within 70 miles of Berlin.

Furious air battle developed in the Magdeburg, Munster and Brunswick areas as the low-flying raiders swooped on targets all over northwestern Germany. The 94 enemy planes brought down raised the total in two days to 226.

An 8th Air Force spokesman said it was the first time the German air force had been ordered into the air to do battle in such strength against a purely fighter force.

"They must have mistaken the fighters for a bomber escort," he said.

Five hundred heavy bombers, meanwhile, were smashing at rail targets at Offenburg, 10 miles southeast of Strasbourg, and Bingen, 15 miles west of Mainz, without meeting opposition.

They followed the raid on Munich, made by 270 Lancasters.

Both Rhine Valley rail centres are vital to German forces battling the Allied armies on the southern sector of the western front.

More than 250 fighters escorted the bombers, and 500 other fighters ranged over the Ruhr with machine-guns blazing.

132 Planes Downed

The American attacks followed a pre-dawn assault by R.A.F. Lancasters on Munich, and a big air battle yesterday in which approximately 450 German fighters rose to fight off 1,800 American bombers and fighters assaulting the Nazi natural oil refinery at Misburg in a campaign which has showered nearly 7,000 tons of bombs on German oil facilities in 48 hours.

Latest reports today said 132 of the enemy planes were shot down including 16 by bomber gunners. Thirty-six bombers and six American fighters were lost in the Sunday fight. First reports said 50 were lost, but one bomber and seven fighters later turned up safe at friendly bases.

The air ministry said the 15-minute attack on Munich this morning resulted in fires over a wide area. One of the British bombers was lost.

More than 6,000 Allied fighters and bombers roved Germany during the week-end, 2,000 fighters working exclusively on frontline targets yesterday.

At least 139 German planes were destroyed during a gigantic battle over Germany's largest natural oil refinery at Misburg yesterday from which 37 U.S. bombers and 13 fighters did not return.

Seven German planes were destroyed on the ground in strafing attacks and 122 enemy fighters were downed in air combat. The Germans sent up a force of approximately 300 planes to protect the refinery, while the American sky fleet consisted of 1,100 heavy bombers and 700 fighters.

Doesn't Want Cigars

MONTROSE, Colo., Nov. 27—(AP).—The "have a cigar" school of political campaigning seems to have lost its aroma. H. O. Galloway, the only Montrose county candidate to pass out stogies in the recent campaign—$2.50 worth of them, his expense account showed—was defeated.

Russian Tanks Outflank Budapest City

MOSCOW, Nov. 27—(AP)—Russian armored units lashed out from captured Hatvan toward the Danube north of Budapest today while directly downstream from the Hungarian capital another Red formation was reported to have seized a foothold on narrow Csepel island.

Hatvan, 25 miles northeast of Budapest, fell yesterday after a 10-day struggle. With its capture Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky was able to manoeuvre his 2nd Ukrainian Army for double attacks to outflank Budapest.

(Berlin said Red Army units fought their way into the northern tip of Csepel island in the Danube River five miles south of the capital's municipal boundary had been repulsed in an attempt to cross into western Hungary "to take Budapest from the rear.")

Meanwhile, troops of Gen. Ivan Petrov's 4th Ukrainian Army shattered a main 60-mile defence line across eastern Slovakia by capturing the key rail, and road hub of Michalovce and Humenne, in a 12-mile advance northwest of Ungvar. This thrust brought the Russians within 28 miles of the two Slovakian strongholds of Koss (Kosice) and Presov.

A key to Northern Hungary communications, Hatvan sits astride a north and south railway leaing to Central Slovakia and the vital Budapest-Miskolc Line.

Moves to drive across the Danube downstream from Budapest, with the island that splits the river for 30 miles south of the capital as a supporting span, admittedly were causing the Germans grave concern.

The Soviet communique did not confirm German announcements that Soviet troops had broken into the important communications towns of Eger and Miskolc, 60 and 85 miles northeast of Budapest. Both guard Matra mountain passes.

Pravda reported the Russians had sealed off along the Baltic one-fifth of all German divisions on the eastern front.

Munitions Blast Kills 20 People

BURTON-ON-TRENT, England, Nov. 27 — (CP). — An explosion at a munitions dump near this Staffordshire town killed at least 20 persons today.

Several were injured, and 40 others were still unaccounted for several hours after the blast.

Buildings as far away as Coventry, 30 miles from the scene, were shaken by the explosion.

American Troops Storm Into Langerwehe Town

By WILLIAM FRYE
Associated Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Nov. 27 (AP)—In hard and bloody fighting, American 1st Army troop stormed today into the centre of Langerwehe, 24½ miles from Cologne and last major German road centre west of the flooded Roer River. At dusk, the infantry was slugging it out with the Nazis there, house to house.

British 2nd Army troops to the north scored a 500-yard gain northeast of Geilenkirchen and other American forces cut slowly deeper into Germany.

The British 2nd Army ironed out a bow in their line near Tripsrath while other troops of Lt.-Gen. Dempcey's force probed the thick defences of Venlo on the Maas River in Holland.

To the south, United States 3rd Army infantry drove through the French Lorraine road centre of St. Avold. Their advance two miles east of St. Avold placed them within 17 miles of sprawling Saarbrucken, one of Germany's great coal, steel and rail centres. The Germans had fought stubbornly for the important communications town 18 miles west of Sarreguemines, but withdrew Sunday night allowing the foot sloggers to enter unopposed.

Widens Front

The 3rd Army widened its front inside the German Saar basin to 18 miles.

The 1st Army burst finally into the forest battlefield town of Hurtgen also and captured Frenz, 28 miles from Cologne. Langerwehe is 18 miles east of the German frontier.

Frenz is 14 miles inside Germany and north of the highway leading through threatened Duren to the great Rhineland city. Troops stood within four miles of Duren.

Further north, 2nd Army Tommies probed into the defences of the enemy bastion of Venlo after cutting the once-dangerous Maas River

Interest High In Parliament

OTTAWA, Nov. 27—(CP).—Parliament Hill today awaited with intense interest Prime Minister Mackenzie King's report this afternoon in the Commons when he will move a confidence motion on the Government's policy of authorizing dispatch overseas of 16,000 home defence troops.

Col. J. L. Ralston, who resigned November 1 as Defence Minister after the Cabinet declined to accept recommendations that the home defence army of 60,000 effectives be made available for overseas reinforcements, so far has declined to make known whether he intends to support the Government in the confidence vote.

Some of his Liberal associates, however, say he will support the Ministry if he is satisfied Cabinet intends to pursue an aggressive policy in reinforcing troops on the fighting fronts by sending the draftees overseas without unnecessary delay.

They added, however, that how he will vote probably will depend on what Mr. King says when he moves the confidence motion.

Meanwhile, the Progressive Conservative Party held a caucus today to put the final touches to an amendment they plan to move to the main motion.

Appeal Made To Soldiers To Cease Demonstrations

VANCOUVER, Nov. 27—(CP).—An appeal went out to all troops in Pacific command today to refrain from "unsoldierly" acts following a wave of week-end anti-conscription demonstrations by home defence troops in five British Columbia towns. Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes, general officer commanding-in-chief, Pacific command, made the appeal, according to an officially prepared statement which said the troops were "merely blowing off steam," and that the troops were not confined to any one nationality "but comprised a cross-section of all Canadian provinces."

A French-speaking soldier is in military custody in Prince George, after a Provincial police charge that he tore a Union Jack from a flag pole and attempted to mutilate it. Two Provost Corps NCO's were injured in attempting to stop a parade at Chilliwack.

Parade At Terrace.

But parades at Terrace, Courtenay and Nanaimo were orderly as the soldiers paraded in protest against the Dominion Government's order last week authorizing the sending of 16,000 home defence men overseas.

Vernon was normal during the week-end after draftees there Friday night staged the first anti-conscription demonstration in British Columbia.

With shouts or printed signs, the parading soldiers in the six towns said "Down with conscription," "No conscription," "Down with the Legion," "The Zombie strikes back," and "Let them conscript wealth too."

Want Change In Government

By C. E. A. JEFFERY
Canadian Press Correspondent

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Nov. 27—(CP Cable)—An inarticulate people of 300,000, the Newfoundlanders wait in silence the destiny that is being shaped for their country in Britain's councils.

The Newfoundlander may be on the brink of emergence from the 10 years of colonial status that has been his penance for his country's economic since as a dominion, but it is pretty hard to determine what he thinks of the prospect. About all that can be safely said is that he doesn't like his present form of government.

Recent suggestions that Dominion's Secretary Lord Cranborne will soon issue a statement on the prospects for increased independence have stirred up no particular new reaction.

One reason for this, perhaps, is that means of public expression in this colony are limited. Since it traded its Dominion right in 1934 for support from Britain in the face of a desperate financial plight, Newfoundland has had no legislature.

It has been governed by an appointed commission—three British and three Newfoundland commissioners and a governor—and the commission has never found it necessary to feel the public pulse.

From articles and letters in the newspapers a segment of the population appears to look for one of three future prospects:

WANT CHANGE

17,900 Draftees On West Coast

OTTAWA, Nov. 25.—(CP)—The Sept. 30 disposition of 26,000 operational home defence infantry from which most of the 16,000 men likely will be drawn for the overseas reinforcement stream under the government's partial conscription policy showed that Pacific Command had the most—17,900 — and Quebec the least—200.

Figures released to-day by Wartime Information Board's publication, "Canada at War" showed there was a total of 22,200 draftees of this category in Canada and 3,800 in "adjacent territories" — in operational units.

Besides the total mentioned as being in the Pacific Command and Quebec there were 4,700 in the Maritimes, 2,300 in the prairies and 1,500 in Ontario.

A comprehensive W. I. B. table broke down the effective draftee strength of 60,000 and showed the various stages of training of the total infantry potential of 42,000 men.

The table showed the districts where the men were serving Sept. 30 and not where they were enrolled. The figures were not adjusted for Quebec and Ontario military districts that overlapped in each province.

September Casualties 9,008

OTTAWA, Nov. 27 — (CP). — Canada's armed forces suffered 9,008 casualties in September compared to the August total of 10,257, according to figures released today by Wartime Information Board publication "Canada at War."

Casualties since war started to September 30 totalled 70,007, an increase of 8,712 over the August 31 figure of 61,295. Thus there was a discrepancy of 296 when the difference between the two monthly war totals was compared with the casualty increase.

This discrepancy resulted, it was explained, by a reclassification of men formerly listed in the missing, prisoner, and interned column. There was no breakdown to show how these men were reclassified, but presumably they were safe.

Figures for the army—which had about 16 times more casualties than the other services combined—were released Nov. 6, but were repeated in the W.I.B. breakdown to give the three-service picture. The army suffered 8,446 casualties in September for the second highest monthly total of the war and covering stiff engagements in northwest Europe. Casualties in August were 9,338, highest monthly total.

In the 4½ years of the First Great War 628,462 Canadians served and casualties totalled 190,092, including 62,817 dead.

After five years of war the present strength of the armed forces is given as more than 757,000. The casualty total up to Sept. 30 of 70,007 does not take into account merchant navy casualties which were 1,200 up to Feb. 22.

The W.I.B. publication gives a recapitulation of the strength of the armed forces showing the navy has remained at 90,000 since the last figures were given in October, the army shows a decrease from 470,000 to 465,000 and the air force a decrease from 204,000 to 202,000.

Latest casualty table for the three armed forces:—

	RCN	Army	RCAF	Total
Dead	1,338	14,216	10,658	26,212
Missing, prisoners and interned	312	5,964	5,362	11,638
Wounded	350	30,842	965	32,157
Total	2,000	51,022	16,985	70,007

Bitter Conflict Rages On Cologne Plain

Eisenhower Awaits Propitious Hour To Hurl New Force Into Action

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

Allied and German troops at the entrance to the Cologne Plain continue to struggle fiercely at close grips, with the enemy front sagging and giving ground in spots under terrific pressure—but still not breaking.

The fighting which is raging in this Aachen sector opposite the great Rhenish city of Cologne is some of the toughest that western Europe has seen since D-Day. For instance, take the case of Weisweiler which was captured by the U.S. 1st Arm yesterday. The Americans fought for 24 hours through the streets before they took this strategic town which sits astride Hitler's great six-lane motor highway to Cologne.

This bitter conflict was in the cards, for the German defences in this zone are the key to the rolling terrain a bit further eastward—across the river Roer—towards Cologne. That open plain bids fair to be the amphitheatre for the showdown.

We are, of course, still witnessing the preliminaries to this battle of the Cologne plain. The Allied offensive hasn't yet reached its full intensity. Field Marshal von Rundstedt is holding for all he's worth along the natural defences of the Roer in an effort to delay fighting in the open countryside which will call for far more reserves than he is likely to be able to muster.

Lacks Reserves.

Many vital elements will enter into the decision of this battle, but among the most important certainly is man-power—the good old infantry again. Von Rundstedt probably already is employing about as many reserves as he can rake up. In short he's in a tight spot, for, whereas he is short of man-power, Gen. Eisenhower still has great forces upon which to call.

For this reason one would expect the Allied commander to strike a fresh blow or blows at almost any moment now in order to take advantage of his enemy's predicament. Where will he hit? There's the ever-present possibility of an attempt to turn the German right flank to the north of Aachen. Or it might be probable to exploit a point showing weakness in the Aachen area. Then of course we always have in mind that big Allied airborne army which one of these days presumably will be dropped behind the German front.

Godbout Opposes Premier

Leader Of Quebec Liberals Takes Stand

QUEBEC, Nov. 27 (CP)—Adelard Godbout, former Liberal premier of Quebec and leader of the Liberal Opposition in the Provincal Legislature, said in a statement today that "as long as the Ottawa government persists in its sudden, unexpected and unexplainable attitude, I will have to count on the opposition of the Liberals of Quebec of which I am the head."

Mr. Godbout said he took his stand against the Federal government's policy on conscription "with regret, but definitely."

"I have always been against conscription for overseas service," he said, and I think that the voluntary system is in the best interests of the country at large. I still think that, and I think also that this encroachment on the Liberal principles is a mistake for which the people of Canada will ask a severe accounting.

"For the past five years, the voluntary system has given the best results. If the necessary measures had been taken, I think it would have continued to be the best until the end of the war.

"I have only one attitude, and I will maintain it."

Carrying Gifts To Santa

Munro Parts With Precious Smokes

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

BRUSSELS, Nov. 27—(CP Cable).—There are few places in tobacco-famished Belgium where the locals don't ask for smokes and children yell: "Cigaret pour papa," but this cuff-note from the Brussels toyland front beats them all.

Big, jovial Charlie Lynch of Halifax, Reuter war correspondent, and I were Christmas shopping in the toyland of a Brussels department store—the most tremendous and ornate toyland imaginable. Everything any child could want for Christmas could be had and on a gilded throne holding court before goggle-eyed Belgian children was the most distinguished Santa Claus we had ever seen.

Brussels already has a Christmas atmosphere as in this country the day is celebrated on December 6.

We couldn't resist the urge to walk through the tinselled splendor to the throne where Old Saint Nick greeted us with the solemn dignity with which he greets children. "Do you speak English?" we asked him for want of something better to say.

"Sure I speak English," he replied through his barricade of whiskers. "I was once married to a girl from Cincinnati." And he talked about Cincinnati like an American soldier.

We shook hands to leave as more children toddled up, and as I turned away he pulled my tunic. Leaning over, he whispered: "You haven't a pack of smokes to spare, you chum?"

I slipped him a pack and fled.

Jap Resistance Decreasing On Leyte Island

GEN. MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Philippines, Nov. 27—(AP) — Infantrymen of the U.S. 32nd Division continued their southward push on Leyte Island today, as a communique noted that Japanese resistance is "steadily decreasing" in the vital Ormoc corridor.

Alert American pilots sank three small troop-laden freighter-transports off Cebu Saturday night in smashing another Japanese attempt to reinforce their hammered Leyte forces.

The 32nd threw back a light counter-attack and continued to press siuthward from Limon, captured northern anchor of the Yamashita line. The communique did not mention the extent of the gain.

In the Japanese attempt to get much-needed reinforcements ashore, at least 17,000 enemy troops have been lost at sea and 19 convoy vessels and 14 escorting warships sent to the bottom.

Although steady American pressure in the Ormoc corridor has caused decreased Japanese resistance, Associated Press War Correspondent Fred Hampson reported from the field that 32nd Division officers were expecting the Japanese to make another stand in the hills three miles south of Limon.

Bombers hit the Tacloban area under a bright moon causing some damage and casualties. Anti-aircraft fire brought down four planes.

Heavy Cruiser Lost.

PEARL HARBOR, Nov. 27—(AP) —A Japanese heavy cruiser, a destroyer, 14 other ships and 72 planes were wiped out as American carrier aircraft hit the Manila area and its vicinity Friday.

Admiral Nimitz yesterday announced the results of this fifth raid of the Monthon Luzon Island.

Nimitz said that in addition to the ships and planes destroyed around Manila, two luggers were sunk and four cargo ships and one oiler damaged.

The attack increased to more than 250 the number of enemy ships immobilized around Luzon Island alone in the 11 raids since September 20 carried out by carrier planes of the U.S. Third Fleet. This does not include the 59 warships sunk or damaged in the recent Philippines sea battle.

Twenty-nine enemy aircraft were shot down by the attacking force, eight were knocked out of the sky by anti-aircraft guns of the surface ships and 35 were destroyed on the ground.

Ships sunk included a heavy cruiser of the Kumano class which previously had been reported damaked, one destroyer, nine cargo ships, four transports, and a small oiler.

British Reach Marzena River

By LYNN HEINZERLING
Associated Press War Correspondent

ROME, Nov. 27 —(AP)—British troops of the 8th Army, pushing out their bridgehead over the Marzena River about three miles southwest of Faenza, and with other 8th Army forces now are pressing against the new main German delaying position on this front.

British forces captured the village of Belvedere in this push and farther southwest Polish troops gained a foothold on a ridge between the Marzeno and Lamone rivers.

At Faenza there was little change in the situation, with British troops still holding their positions on the eastern outskirts of the town, and the Germans preparing to fight another of their house-to-house battles.

Northeast of Faenza other British troops, moving northwestward from Eda, occupied Scaldino, and between the Montone and Lamone rivers reached Albereto where they were in close contact with German infantry.

Cross Montone

A brideghead over Montone was established southeast of Albereto despite many demolitions.

On the Allied 5th Army front it was again a story of patrol clashes, with the Germans probing constantly at the line with forces of varying size throwing in few counter-attacks on a small scale.

"During the next 36 hours the Germans hurled one counter-attack after another against the Canadian force, but so skilfully had Major Currie organized his defensive position that these attacks were repulsed with severe casualties to the enemy, after heavy fighting," his citation said.

"At dusk on August 20 the Germans attempted to mount a final assault on the Canadian positions, but the attacking force was routed before it could even be deployed.. ..Major Currie then promptly ordered an attack and completed the capture of the village....Throughout three days and nights of fierce fighting, Maj. Currie's gallant conduct and contempt for danger set a magnificent example to all ranks of the force under his command."

SKIN BLEMISHES RESPOND TO VITAMINS

Science shows that many skin troubles due to lack of vitamins

Lemon and lime juice were once used on long sea voyages to offset the dread scourge of scurvy. Today we know the merit lay in the vitamins these citrus fruits contain. Now, for many skin and complexion faults, science says—take vitamins daily. "ALL-in-ONE" Vitamin Tablets give not one vitamin alone, but 5 vital vitamins. Each helps the other to function. Fortify your daily diet with "ALL-in-ONE" Vitamin Tablets. The cost is only $2.15 for a month's supply. At most drug stores.

"ALL IN BRAND ONE" VITAMIN TABLETS

Think Before You Vote

As we pointed out in our previous message, the proposed contributions from the City Trust and Utilities Commission should be added to the $600,000.00 and interest, it is proposed to obtain from the city taxpayer. If this were done, the figures would read as follows:

City Trust	$300,000.00
Utilities Commission	50,000.00
New by-law	600,000.00
Interest on $600,000.00	200,000.00
Grand total	$1,150,000.00

And almost one half of this is for the benefit of "outside" patients.

Don't forget this when you vote on the new hospital by-law.

Ralston Holds Key To Liberals' Fate

By R. K. CARNEGIE

OTTAWA, Nov. 27 (CP) — A thoughtful and experienced member of Parliament today told the Canadian Press he was confident the fate of the Liberal Government would hinge on how Hon. J. L. Ralston, former Defense Minister, votes on Prime Minister Mackenzie King's confidence motion in the Commons this week.

"If Col. Ralston votes confidence in the Government," he said, "then I think the Government will stand, but if he votes 'no' then it seems to me enough members will follow his lead that even if the Ministry is not defeated the margin would be so small that Mr. King would seriously consider resigning."

The debate will open today in the House when Mr. King will move his confidence motion in a speech in which he is expected to state the Cabinet's policy now that authority has been taken under Order-in-Council to send 16,000 draftees overseas.

If all those so far dissatisfied with the Government united against the motion, the anti-conscriptionists because they oppose this step by the Ministry and the others because the step has not gone far enough, they could only muster 98 of the 245 seats in Commons, 11 are vacant.

So the Canadian Press informant has it figured out that it all depends on how Mr. Ralston votes. If he votes "yes" to Mr. King's motion then the Government would have a majority which, taking cognizance that the Opposition would be completely divided, would encourage it to carry on. In fact, if Mr. Ralston supports the motion the C.C.F. members are likely to follow him on the ground that if the policy is good enough for him it is good enough for them.

But if Mr. Ralston decides the Government's proposal is not good enough and votes against it, then it is believed, other English speaking Liberals would follow his lead and that is where the possibility arises of the Government losing out.

Never since the defeat of the Government of Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen in 1926 has the vote of one private member meant so much.

bulge to three or four isolated pockets of Germans and the troops manning the pill-boxes and other fortifications around Venlo itself.

Take 2 Generals

In Alsace, American troops spread out on the Rhine plain through the Saales Pass, cleared yesterday in a swift advance between the Vosges mountains, while in Strasbourg the French captured two enemy generals and held all the city except a pocket of resistance at the end of the bridge across the Rhine.

Despite enemy counter attacks, units of the U.S. 3rd Army cut through the Maginot Line defences northeast of Metz, extended their lines inside Germany southwest of Merzig, and scored gains up to three miles on their right flank north of Saarebourg.

The 1st Army's gains east of Aachen, where the Americans were almost clear of the Hurtgen forest and had cut the Weisweiler-Duren highway six miles west of Duren, were crowding the enemy back on the Roer River in a slow but steady advance. Weisweiler fell to the Americans yesterday after days of savage street-fighting.

On the 1st Army's left, troops of the 9th Army crowded into Koslar in a house-to-house battle. The Germans fired delayed-action artillery shells into the American lines, and made a feeble, four-plane strafing and bombing attack, but their major counter-effort, a tank-supported thrust, was smashed yesterday with the aid of fighter-bombers.

Little Change

Except for the 500-yard advance toward Wurm, there was little change in the 2nd Army's position north of Geilenkirchen. In southeastern Holland, however, the Tommies had cut the enemy remnants on the west bank of the Maas north of Venlo to isolated pockets with two drives to the river north of Grubbenvorts and north of Broekhuizen. The town of Blitterswijk was captured.

The defences of Venlo lie behind a huge anti-tank ditch in an arc about 1¼ miles west of the city, and British units have not yet launched a major attack on the fortifications.

As the 6th Army group's multiple attacks in Alsace spread through the mountains and over the Rhine plain, French armor and American infantry captured 12 forts near Strasbourg and made prisoners of Gen. Maj. Frans Vaterot, military commander of the city, and Gen. Maj. Wilhelm Uttersperen, engineer commander.

American forces fought through the Saales Pass northeast of St. Die and placed another force on the Rhine Plain. Northeast of Belfort French forces reached St. Germain and La Chapelle, threatening the last escape route for the enemy still resisting in Belfort itself.

The Germans have abandoned all the forest area of Belfort, and smashed a counter-attack. An enemy garrison was fighting stubbornly against a tightening French ring at Annemarie, and the German force which tried to cut the Belfort-Sappois Highway was crushed.

The German radio admitted that "strong American tank forces" scored new gains toward the Saar Basin on the left wing of the 3rd Army front, where the Allied communique reported American troops had reached the town of Obereschm.

Christian Worship Has Personal Touch

The Peterborough Christian Businessmen's Committee had as their guest speaker Sunday evening, Frank Guthrie, a prominent businessman of Guelph. The special soloist was Mr. McConnell of Peterborough.

Mr. Guthrie took as his text the words that Christ spoke to the thief on the Cross, "Verily I say unto thee today shalt thou be with Me in Paradise". Three things from these words, he said. First it is for the present "Today", second it is personal "With Me", and third it is perfect "Paradise". Salvation is not for some future time, it is to be accepted now, "Now is the accepted time now is the day of Salvation."

The speaker referred to an incident related by Bishop Taylor Smith, chaplain general in the First World War, when asked by a young clergyman to be sent as chaplain to minister to the soldiers in France. He said to him I am a soldier with only three minutes to live what would you say to him? The young minister fumbled in his pocket for his prayer book. No said the bishop, that is not enough at a time like this, this man needs salvation now, you must present to him the Christ that can save even to the uttermost that is the only Gospel that can save a man who has only three minutes to live. The second thought was that it is personal, Jesus to the dying thief was a person. It is the person of Jesus Christ that saves not by works but by faith, when Christ met Zacheus, a man who claimed righteousness because he gave half of his income to the poor, Jesus told him that salvation had entered his house that day when he entered. We must accept the Person of Jesus Christ if we would be saved that is the meaning of the Gospel.

The third point was "Perfection", the dying thief found Perfect Peace and satisfaction in the promise of Christ that he would be with Him in Paradise. There was never a person who accepted Christ, who did not find in Christ all that he expected. He is the perfect Son of God.

Next Sunday Rev. Mr. McRoberts of Oshawa, will be the speaker and Mrs. McRoberts will sing.

tion when the Canadian Army struck down the Caen-Falaise highway.

By rushing up masses of guns, the Germans blocked the Army's thrust at Falaise and Aug. 14 the second major attack was launched. The Grenadiers were right to the fore in this huge tank and infantry advance over the Laison River Valley northeast of Falaise. Three hundred tanks, among them the tanks of the guards, charged like a modern light brigade through the valley and into the German guns lined on the far side.

A Furious Battle

One entire German company surrendered to the Guards in their tanks in the wild confusion of battle raging in the blazing heat of that August afternoon.

"I have never seen anything like that tank charge over the Laison," said Maj. Smith. And he has seen just about everything in tank warfare.

Grenadiers followed up this sensational success by rolling on to the German massacre at the Trun Gap. Their Shermans fired hundreds of rounds at point blank range into German convoys and columns of troops which tried to break through the Gap to the roads to the Seine.

The Grenadiers thus had their full share in the destruction of the Seventh Army.

More recently they have fought in the battle of southwest Holland. Advancing north from Antwerp, the Grenadiers shared in the Oct. 20 attack by the Canadians which resulted in the capture of Esschen.

After that the Grenadiers pushed north to cut the Bergen Op Zoom-Roosendaal highway and then they continued on to take part in the battle for Steenbergen.

Stocks Lower Volume Normal

TORONTO, Nov. 27—(CP)—Industrials held small gains this afternoon on Toronto Exchange. Other groups were lower. Volume was normal at 303,000 shares.

Noranda in base metals and Abitibi Pfd, in industrials, sold in volume at losses of 1 to 2 points. Smelters, on smaller volume, was down 1¼ and other soft base metals were nickel, Lake Dufault, and Waite-Amuet. Steep Rock firmed 5.

Wasa Lake was a heavy trader on an advance of 10 to 1.20 and minor gains were held by Sladen, Bear and Louvicourt. Bralorne weakened ¼ and losses of 5 to 8 cents were posted by East Malartic, Beattie, Pioneer, Sullivan, MacLeod-Cockshutt, McKenzie and some other golds.

Aside from the weakness of the Abitibi issues, industrials were firm. Dominion Woollens gained ¼ to a new high, C.P.R. firmed ¼ and Canada Malting added ¼.

home defence soldiers under its jurisdiction, said the "demonstrators were protesting what they termed a 'phoney conscription' and expressing their disapproval of a form of compulsion which they considered discriminatory."

There was no indication from Pacific command of any tightening of regulations in any camps where home defence men are stationed although it was announced in Ottawa Saturday that discipline would be made more strict until the present situation becomes less tense.

Tore Down Flag.

Pte. Rene Gouin, a member of a French regiment stationed at Prince George, was turned over to military authorities by Provincial Police, who said Gouin was arrested as he was about to mutilate a Union Jack after tearing the flag from atop the Prince George Citizen, a weekly newspaper.

Sgt. Charles Marvis, head of the Chilliwack Army Provost Corps detachment, suffered a fractured knee cap, allegedly when kicked by a parader, and Cpl. A. Smith was hit over the head with a bottle when they attempted to stop a demonstration of about 150 soldiers at Chilliwack. Both were sent to hospital.

Military police arrested a soldier accused of kicking Marvis.

The Chilliwack parade although possibly the smallest of any so far with estimates of participants ranging from 100 to 150 produced the most disorder.

Four members of the Provost Corps were given first aid at a drug store for minor injuries suffered in clashes with marchers. John Davidson, a veteran of this war, was pushed but not injured, and the marchers failed in an attempt to upset a military patrol truck.

The largest demonstration was staged at Terrace, where an estimated 1,500 men marched in an orderly fashion and in regular formation from their camp to the village where they tramped back and forth.

Some of the Terrace demonstrators carried rifles but there were no incidents caused by the marchers. Some soldiers not in the parade tore a sign from the Canadian Legion Hall.

A window was broken in the Canadian Legion Hall at Courtenay where an estimated 300 home defence men marched for an hour despite a rain.

At Nanaimo where about 150 men, including at least one general service soldiers and a corporal marched, military police confiscated two cameras with which the demonstrators attempted to take pictures of the parade.

Build 5 Homes On Bethune St.

With three other houses in course of construction, two of them already roofed, Harold Hamilton is excavating the cellars for five others on Bethune street south of Aberdeen avenue. To expedite this preliminary work in the labor shortage, Mr. Hamilton has been employing a steam shovel, available on another local building contract, moving from cellar to the next and taking out the intervening earth between each of them in succession.

The other houses, Mr. Hamilton has under way and well advanced are on Hopkins avenue, Monaghan road and Cambridge street.

It was reported that the five lots on Bethune street average around 39 feet frontage, slightly less than the minimum 40 feet recently proposed by the city council in a resolution which has not yet been resolved in bylaw form and authority. The entire property is understood to provide for eight lots with the closing of a lane, whose width would be distribution over the component lots. It was stated that Mr. Hamilton hopes to provide a turning area as substitute for the lane outlet. As the lane is registered in the plan, its closing would have to receive the approval of Judge Smoke, and it is understood Mr. Hamilton intends to apply for that permission.

In the meantime he is carrying on a substantial one-man building project, aided by the extension of favorable weather in these late November days.

Stockyards Face Possible Embargo

TORONTO, Nov. 27—(CP)—F. C. 2. A representative administration with certain representatives appointed by the United Kingdom.
3. Federation with Canada.

On the issue of confederation with Canada it is difficult to determine the real sentiment. Some sections of the press and the letter writing public express opposition in most cases quoting Nova Scotia's claims of disabilities to that province under the Canadian confederation. However, the silent public's views on that point are not clear.

But it can be said that general sentiment is against the governing commission. This feeling has been aggravated lately by the government's agreement to grant Canada a 99-year lease on the strategic Goose Bay airport area in Labrador without first seeking the public's views on parting with this territory.

Man Faces Second Charge Of Assault

Joseph Norman Brick, Wolsley street, who had previously been charged with assaulting Hum Horning occasioning actual bodily harm faced a second charge this morning of assaulting Willie Hum.

Brick asked for an adjournment to get a lawyer and witnesses and on the new count and the previous charge was remanded until Thursday on bail.

His brother Thornton Brick, was also remanded until Thursday on a charge of assaulting Hum Horning.

Sixteen-year-old Max Hunter pleaded guilty to having been drunk on Hunter street and was fined $10 and costs. In answer to a question from Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., Inspector Reid said that the boy had refused to state where he got his liquor.

Florence McGrath having been declared not mentally ill after having been examined by two doctors was acquitted on that charge but was fined $10 and $1.75 costs after pleading guilty to being drunk. A vagrancy charge was dismissed when no evidence was offered.

Col. H. Cockshutt Industrialist Dies At Age 76

BRANTFORD, Nov. 27 (CP) — Col. Henry (Harry) Cockshutt, one of Canada's leading industrialists, head of the Cockshutt Plow Company enterprises and former Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, is dead.

The 76-year-old dean of the agricultural industry in Canada who last Sept. 21 marked 60 years with the Cockshutt Company died here yesterday.

Col. Cockshutt, native of Brantford, was Chancellor of the University of Western Ontario at the time of his death. During his life he was actively connected with many financial and manufacturing interests. He was a director of the Bank of Montreal, the Canadian Pacific Railway, Bell Telephone Company and the International Nickel Company, and chairman of the Sun Life Insurance Company Advisory Board.

He became treasurer of the Cockshutt Company Dec. 19, 1888, secretary-treasurer three years later and managing director in 1894, at the age of 25. Despite his youth he made many trips to foreign markets.

Followed Brother

In 1911, he became president of the company, founded by his elder brother, I. J. Cockshutt and held that position until September 1934 when he resigned to become chairman of the board of directors.

In 1899, when only 31, Col. Cockshutt was elected mayor of Brantford, the youngest person on record to be mayor of this city. He was associated with practically every worthwhile civic endeavour launched here and in Brant county.

Col. Cockshutt was appointed lieutenant-governor of Ontario in 1921 and held the position for six years.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

Judge Studying Rebate Appeal

COBOURG, Nov. 27 — (ENS) — Judgment was reserved by Judge J. C. M. German on Friday in connection with the action brought by William Fraser, M.P. of Trenton against Hugh Hennesey of Murray township. Plaintiff claimed rebate of $161.20, being the amount claimed to have been overpaid on 240 tons of manure bought by Clifford Cochrane, agent for Mr. Fraser from the defendant.

Mr. Cochrane testified that in January of 1943 he purchased 240 tons of manure from the defendant at a price of 50 cents a ton plus 10 cents extra per ton if the manure proved to be of extra good quality. By error he certified the account on a basis of $1.25 a ton. Plaintiff hauled the fertilizer himself.

W. Willman of Trenton testified that he charged $1.15 a ton when he drew it and 65 cents a ton purchased at the barnyard. A. Brown of Trenton said that he sold manure at 50 cents a ton, and charged that price in sales on a number of cases to Mr. Fraser. R. Plews, another Trenton farmer, testified that he paid from 40 to 65 cents a ton for manure at the barn and $1.25 a ton when delivered.

Evidence Stands

R. D. Arnott, counsel for Hennessey objected to this evidence, but Judge German pointed ont that in spite of the fact that there had been a contract, it was proper to enquire into current prices to establish a yardstick to determine the price most likely to have been agreed upon when the deal was made between Fraser's agent and Hennessey.

The defendant testified that when Cochrane undertook to purchase the manure it was agreed that defendant would deliver it himself and the price decided upon was $1.15 a ton and if the quality proved to be as represented, 10 cents more a ton would be paid. Some time after the manure had been taken away, the defendant took his bill to Cochdane who computed it at 62 loads of four tons each at $5, a load, and backed up the account. About a week or so after the account was paid, Cochrane informed him that he had inadvertently overpaid him. Witness testified, however, that it was his understanding that the amount was to be $1.15 a ton, defendant to deliver, and ten cents extra a ton if it was as represented. He asserted that he had sold manure for a high at $2 a ton and never less than $1 a ton.

V.C. Winner Says St. Lambert Battle Was One Of The Worst

By DOUGLAS AMARON
Canadian Press War Correspondent

WITH THE 1ST CANADIAN ARMY, Nov. 27 (CP Cable) — The battle of St. Lambert Sur Dives was "the toughest and best action" of Maj. David V. Currie's military career.

"I'll never forget it," the 32-year-old soldier from Moose Jaw, Sask., and Owen Sound, Ont.—Canada's seventh Victoria Cross winner of the second great war—told correspondents Saturday. "The results gave everybody a good feeling."

Wearing a one-piece tank suit and a black beret, Currie stood up to a 40-minute questioning, which brought forth poised, modest, and straightforward answers about the three-day battle which virtually sealed the escape gap for the German 7th Army in the Falaise pocket.

He did not minimize the importance of the August operation, which he said he realized at the time was the biggest job ever given his squadron of the South Alberta Armored Reconnaissance Regiment.

St. Lambert was the key point of the Chambois-Trun escape route in Normandy.

The Germans, Currie said, felt that with superior numbers they had a better chance of breaking through than the Canadians had of holding them, but "our fire stopped them."

One shell from a Canadian tank pierced a house and blew up an ammunition truck on the other side.

"Fires started and when the shooting died down and it became fairly quiet, I could hear the shrieks and groans of the wounded Germans," Currie said, "I almost felt sorry for them."

All enemy attempts to smash through the Canadians with counter-attacks were foiled, but several times it was touch and go. On one occasion German S.S. troops clambered atop two Canadian tanks a few hundred yards away from Currie but tank-crews knocked them off by swinging the guns on their pivots.

Attacked At Night

Another time, at night, the Germans infiltrated to the tank positions, and were captured as they were preparing to set fire to the Shermans over which they had poured oil.

"I was much too busy for personal feelings," Currie said; but he admitted he was frightened when a shell from a Canadian medium gun burst three feet from his tank. The Germans were so close that he had to call for artillery support almost on his own position.

The squadron commander, who wore a beret throughout most of the three-day action because he does not like a steel helmet, had no time for sleep and little time for food. He had only one hour's sleep on the third day of the battle and one hot meal daily.

Lauded Soldiers.

He spoke highly of the soldiers under his command, one of whom, Cpl. Mike Ottenbreit, a gunner from the Alberta outfit, won a military medal for his part in the St. Lambert action.

A native of Saskatoon, Currie worked in a Moose Jaw garage before the war. He joined the N.P.A.M. as a private in 1937, and devoted much of his time to army work. He likes soldiering and says he considers staying in the army after the war.

"The boys we have are the best you can find and I like looking after them," he explained.

He came overseas in 1932 and saw his first west front action in mid-summer at Tolly La Campagne, just south of Caen. He has had only a few days' leave since then. He has always worked in co-operation with the Argylls, for whom he has the greatest admiration.

His squadron led the Canadians in Bergen Op Zoom, after the campain along the Leopold Canal, which Currie said was a "a little too tough for us because the country was flooded."

Currie—whom Gen. Crerar congratulated personally at 1st Canadian Army Headquarters Saturday—still is commanding his squadron. He doesn't know what's yet in store for him, but hopes his V.C. won't put him on the sidelines for the closing phases of the war.

Head Students Given Prizes

COBOURG, Nov. 27 — (ENS) — Annual commencement exercises of Cobourg Collegiate were held during the week-end in the school auditorium when prizes won during the years were presented. The principal, R. N. McKenzie, was chairman.

The prize for the best all 'round girl, went to Jeanne Thompson, the Hickey Cup being presented to her by Miss Hazel Grimmon. The Ravensdale Cup, for the best all 'round boy, was presented by Flight Lieutenant Arthur Ravensdale of Malton, to Keith Anderson.

The Kinsmen Club prizes for efficiency, presented by Harold Bellamy, were won by Jane Pirie, Lorraine Kerr, Kathleen Kimpton, Ellen Vagg and Romona Douglas. The Rotary Club efficiency prizes were presented by Fred Slade to Marion Ashdown, Kenneth Halligan, Jeanne Boswell, Patricia Birmingham and Bruce Stinson.

Diplomas and certificates were presented by J. R. McIlraith and the valedictory address was given by Barbara Wallace. During the evening a talk on vocational guidance was given by H. R. Beattie of the Ontario Dept. of Education. The contributors to the musical program were Bruce Curtis, Betty France, Betty Walden and Shirley Drope.

3 Months Sentence

COBOURG, Nov. 27—(ENS)—Arrested in Toronto with two others for theft of a car in Port Hope, Lawrence Banks of Toronto was sentenced to three months in jail by Judge J. C. M. German when he pleaded guilty to theft of a car owned by Fred C. Richardson. Bruce Rodden and James Devlin, both of Toronto, will stand trial later on the same charge.

Burnet, Dodge Seek Mayoralty

COBOURG, Nov. 27 — (ENS) — John Burnet, mayor of 1944 and Roy Dodge, ex-Reeve of Cobourg, will contest the mayoralty chair at the municipal elections on December 4. Others who had qualified by the close of the qualification period on Saturday night were: Robert Love and Reuben Jackson for reeve; Douglas Glenn, deputy-reeve by acclamation. Council: David Carr, Alan Field, James Goody, Edward Morton, Judd Kennedy, Ernest Jeffery, James Rollings, John Runciman, William Wenn and Mrs. Clara Delany. All but Carr, Goody, Jeffery, Runciman and Wenn are members of this year's council. Elected to the public utilities commission by acclamation was John Delanty. Acclamations to school board were Dr. G. Dundas, Fred Cockburne and Fred Nicholls.

Painful, Pus Filled Boils the Cause of Much Misery

If you suffer from boils you know how sick and miserable they made you feel.
Boils are an outward indication of impurities in the system, and just when you think you are rid of one another crops up to take its place and prolong your misery. All the lancing and poulticing you can do may not stop more coming.
To help overcome boils you should purify the blood, so why not give that old, reliable blood medicine, Burdock Blood Bitters, a chance to show what it will do in helping you get rid of them? Thousands have used it for this purpose for the past 60 years. Why not you?

These dimes work their heads off

No doubt you've seen dimes worn so thin that you can't see the heads on them.
That's what happens when money is really passed around.
That's what happens every year to at least two and a half billion dimes that are put into circulation through the life insurance companies. These dimes really go to work.
They come in the form of premium payments from four million policyholders and if you prefer figuring in folding money, they amount to 250 million dollars.
In peacetime these dimes are not idle. They are kept busy through investment in a great variety of local and national undertakings. For the past five years they have been busy in a strictly military sense—backing up our fighting men with more than a billion dollars' worth of Victory Bonds.
These busy dimes are helping to buy security for you and yours—both in the present and in the future—both at home and abroad.

Acclamation For The Mayor

The Examiner adds its congratulations to those which have already been extended to James Hamilton, Esq., upon the acclamation which makes him mayor of this city for the eighth successive year. Mayor Hamilton has given devoted service to Peterborough during difficult and complex times. Nor has he served only; he has led in many projects which demanded courage and foresight. He has been honoured by the mayors of other Canadian communities, and he has become known as an authority on municipal tax questions. Peterborough is lucky indeed to have a man of his capacity in office; he will serve for an eighth year, and there seems little reason why he should not serve for a ninth, if he wishes to do so, thereby equalling the record in office of the late Mr. Roland Denne. But it must be obvious that Mr. Hamilton cannot be expected to serve as Mayor indefinitely, and we think that aldermen who have any desire to succeed him should make their desire known during the early months of the coming year. Then, late in 1945 or 1946, they will be able to stand for election; the city's good fortune in having an able and willing Mayor should not kill all ambition in the Council.

The office of Mayor is the highest honour which Peterborough can bestow upon a citizen. Mr. Hamilton has been found worthy of that honour upon eight occasions, a circumstance which assures him more eloquently than any words of the trust and affectionate esteem which are reposed in him by the people of Peterborough.

The Municipal Election

Fears were expressed during the past week that a mistake had been made in changing the date of the municipal election from January 1 to the first Monday in December. There appeared to be no election talk and little interest in the approaching municipal contest. However, already these fears have been partially allayed by the large crowd which attended the nomination meeting on Friday night. It was one of the largest in many years, making it necessary to bring additional chairs into the council chamber. The strong slate of candidates for City Council also shows that greater interest than was thought is being taken.

While there is not going to be a contest for mayor or Board of Education it is assured that there will be very keen battles for the five seats on the City Council and the vacancy on the Utilities Commission. Eleven men are running for council, and this includes the five retiring aldermen, along with six others, all of whom go to make up a field from which the electors should have no difficulty in selecting five who will give strong support to the mayor and five other members of the council whose term of office did not expire.

For Utilities Commissioner two men are in the contest and both have given service on the Commission.

If the added interest shown in the nominations and the number of candidates in the field brings out a larger vote on December 4 then change in election date can be said to have been a step in the right direction.

In the retirement from the Board of Education of Dr. C. M. Scott and H. G. Walker the Board loses two members who for years have given faithful service.

German Generals On Our Side

General Eisenhower, as his name tells us, is of German descent, and the story is being told that he intervened at recent staff meeting, where 'the German point of view' was being discussed, to say that as the only German present he thought that his opinion was worth something. As we look through the names of the important commanders in the Allied ranks we find Nimitz and Spaatz, as well as Eisenhower himself, among the Americans, and we have not forgotten that Lord Louis Mountbatten was a Battenberg for the first 17 years of his life. And does anyone need to be reminded of the strong Germanic strain in the Royal Family?

We must not fall into the error of believing that Germans are evil simply because they are Germans, and that German blood is a kind of taint. To believe such things is to be as silly as the Germans who swallowed the stupid Nazi racial doctrines. One of the best friends democracy has had in recent years was the late Wendell Willkie, who was proud of his German ancestry. But Willkie and Eisenhower and Nimitz and Spaatz were raised in a free country and their training and environment have had little in common with those of their German contemporaries.

Do we seek to imply by this that Germany at present is full of people who are only waiting for an opportunity to reveal themselves as men of goodwill? Most assuredly we do not. The German people have had all the goodwill knocked out of them during the past thirty years, and during the Hitler regime those who refused to surrender their goodwill were forced to surrender their lives. The environment and training of the German people has been as uncongenial to enlightened and free living as anything short of actual slavery could be. Indeed, it must be said that the lot of a slave in ancient Athens was infinitely preferable to that of a citizen of the Third Reich, for the slave had humane and enlightened masters.

Germany presents us with the problem of a nation which has been systematically debauched and debased, and stuffed with grievances and hates until it has lost touch with the rest of western civilization. It will take as long to undo the damage as it did to make the Germany which we are fighting. That is a solemn thought. Are we ready to take on fifty or sixty years of unrelenting re-education? And are we fitted for it?

Death Of An Astronomer

To most of us astronomers are men of mystery, who live in a world so remote from our own that we do not even attempt to find out what they are thinking, or how their work influences our ideas about the world in which we live. Sir Arthur Eddington, who died last Wednesday, did more than any other living astronomer to explain himself and his colleagues to the layman. He was a great astronomer himself, and Professor of that subject at Cambridge; he was one of the very few men who thoroughly understood what Dr. Einstein was getting at in his studies of relativity; he evolved theories of his own about the structure and behaviour of the universe, and he put those theories forward in language which almost anyone of good education could understand.

His name was known to many people through his book The Expanding Universe; his other works were too difficult to attract the general reader. But in that one popular book he explained something of the poetry and mysticism of modern physics. The modern physicist is not, as many people imagine, a man who seeks to expose and destroy the ultimate mysteries of the universe, and express them in terms of measurement and mathematical formulae. He is, rather, an explorer of that unseen part of our universe which mankind has hitherto explored only by such essentially intuitive instruments as religion, in which the poetic element is strong, and often of uneven quality. Of course, Eddington engaged in many projects which were astonishing the people who were not physicists; on one occasion he amazed a group of reporters in New York by telling them that he had computed the number of protons in the world, and that the sum had reached eighty digits, of which the first was 1, and the eightieth a 6.

At one time it was estimated that only twelve men in the world knew what Einstein was doing in the realm of relativity. But Eddington, who was one of the twelve, wrote a book on the subject which increased the number to several thousand. He was not a 'popularizer' in the cheap sense, but he had an unusual gift for making abstruse matters less abstruse.

Eddington, by his life's work, has increased our knowledge of the universe in which we live. That is something which can be said of few men, even among those whom we call great.

Farming News and Views

By
HON. DUNCAN MARSHALL

THE wheat crop of France this year will reach 325,000,000 bushels. The Germans got such a surprise in France that they were unable to pursue any "scorched earth" policy. From the hour the Allied Army landed it was fighting all the time, and crops were too green to burn at that season. France has been an extensive grower of wheat and it was kept up, as no doubt the Germans hoped to harvest the crop.

President Roosevelt has expressed the opinion that over one million of the U.S. troops will settle on the land after the war, most of them young men who had worked on farms, or lived on their home farms, until they joined the forces. Something over fifty thousand Canadians expressed a wish, when enlisting, to farm after the war.

DURING the war over 7,000 specialists have graduated from Soviet Agricultural Colleges, and this year 11,000 new students entered these colleges. Some of the Schools of Agriculture in Russia, in towns formerly occupied by the German Army of Invasion, are now functioning again.

At an auction on Larchfield Farm, Maidenhead, England, mangolds were offered for sale and brought up to £63 (over $250) per acre. Pretty steep price for feed for dairy cows, but keeping up the supply of fresh milk in Britain is a very serious matter.

AN R.A.F. officer, who recently flew from Cherbourg to England, found a Colorado beetle in the fur lining of his jacket when he reached London. He presented his specimen to the Ministry of Agriculture and it created a small furore as the Ministry has shown a good deal of interest in keeping "potato bugs" out of Britain. This officer informed the officials that the Cherbourg Peninsula had a very large supply of these pests. The farmers in Normandy were rather too busy to give many such things their attention this summer. For thirty years the English agriculture authorities have guarded their coast against potato bugs, and successfully. They have spent a good deal of money in the effort.

A matter that Canada must take up seriously in the often referred to re-organization plan after the war is the Health of Animals. A good deal has been done to eradicate tuberculosis among cattle but Contagious Abortion, so called Bangs Disease, needs more attention. Much progress has been made with vaccines in Britain, and most of our breeders of pure-bred cattle in Ontario vaccinate their calves against Bangs with signal success. There has been a shortage of Veterinary Surgeons, many being in our armed forces, but when they return they should be put to work.

There will be no necessity for the payment of compensation in connection with Bangs, as has been done with T.B., so the cost will be much less. There is no reason, however, as a Vet. goes out to herds to test them for T.B., why he cannot at the same time and expense, take a blood sample to test for Bangs. There are two laboratories in Ontario which now report on these samples—one at Hull and the other at the O.A.C. at Guelph. There being really no range cattle in Ontario, it will be a comparatively easy matter to give the cattle of this province a clean bill of health.

We had a recent example of the advantage of this at the auction sale of feeder cattle at Little Current, on Manitoulin Island. This Island has been a T.B. free area for some years and so a farmer who wanted to put in a few steers to feed, and had an accredited herd himself, could buy these cattle and take them home with confidence that he was running no risk as far as T.B. was concerned. Many farmers gave orders to buy on that account. The cattle were then loaded and shipped out at once to their destination and not mixed with other cattle.

There are a good many cattle being wintered on the Manitoulin and there is a proposal to put on an auction in the spring, for cattle to go on grass, of between two and three thousand head.

A complete clean-up of contagious cattle diseases can be made, particularly in Ontario, with very reasonable expense. Mastitis is another ailment that should have attention at the same time, and dairy farmers would welcome this, as they have been pursuing it whenever it appeared in their own herds.

THERE seems to be a few new diseases developing among pigs. You hear of some farmer who has heavy losses and they seem to sort of drop down on him. There is a cause for these things; they don't just happen and the best way to guard against them is by cleanliness and sanitation about every pen or stall that houses an animal. We don't use enough lime. Lime scattered about the floors, after they are thoroughly cleaned, and whitewash on the walls. By the way, I talked to W. A. Dryden the other day, and the first thing he said was: "Say Duncan, that whitewasher came and he went through those box-stalls like a cyclone, and he certainly left his mark wherever the stream of lime hit." As a matter of fact, lime has a cleaning and sweetening effect even on land. Rudyard Kipling refers to it, in "The Land," as "cool grey healing chalk." Chalk is simply a soft form of limestone, and for centuries it has been used to improve English soil.

Thos. E. Wilson, the Chicago packer, speaking in Oklahoma City the other day, stated that three out of every ten pigs farrowed in that state died before weaning, and then pointed out the immense saving to the farmer of that state if one of these three could be saved. These are the leaks in farming; you can't plug them all, but they can be cut down, but only by the patience and care that an occupation as various in its applications, and intricate in its demands as farming requires.

JUST as a reminder, put in a few sods for the pigs during the winter, and not merely a few. Also, lay in a stock of Derris powder to delouse your cattle as the winter passes. Jimmy Watt one time said to me: "This is a queer country anyhow to raise cattle in. The flies eat them up in the summer and the lice finish them off in winter."

Russia has grown 1,850,000 acres of sunflowers this year. The clear climate there enables the seed to dry out well in the heads. The plants are allowed to mature and a good deal of fuel is secured from the stalks. From the seeds, vegetable oil is extracted and then the residue, as with linseed, is made into cattle cake. Cellulose is another product from this crop. Russia will get back to farming very rapidly. The marvellous manner in which they evacuated their cattle before the German Army, and then defeated the Germans and returned the cattle to their home farms, will be a cause for wonder by every cattle man who has read about it.

THE difficulty in processing cattle in the Packing Plants has eased up. During the week ending November 11th, there were over 35,000 head of cattle slaughtered in the Inspected Plants in Canada. This is the highest record for a week's slaughtering in such plants. It would appear from the present calculations that 1,300,000 head of cattle will be slaughtered in Inspected Plants during 1944, while in 1943 we just reached about 1,000,000 head. This is some beef production for Canada.

There are still a few complaints about the embargo on cattle going to the U.S., but we must remember that there are two parties to every bargain and we cannot treat our next-door neighbour and war partner to suit our own purpose alone. We still remember the Fordney-McCumber and the Hawley-Smoot tariffs, and so we must keep amicable relations with the U.S. This is too large a question to be trifled with, by trying to force something on an unwilling customer. We hope and expect to get into this market again when Britain does not want, or need, all our beef. Let it be as soon as reasonably possible, say we all!

On The Subject Of Sitting Still

(LONDON TIMES)

MR. Jeff Davies, America's "King of the Hobos," who recently paid his railway fare on a War Bond selling trip, reported that riding in the orthodox way in a carriage had its drawbacks. He complained in particular that having to sit still in one spot was "terrible," and in that he will hardly have the sympathy of travellers over here who spend their journeys wishing they had a place where they could sit at all.

To be sure some trace of that urge which in childhood made a railway journey a scurry between the windows so that nothing of interest on either side of the train should be missed survives, but it grows faint indeed when the business of getting from one place to another is packed with so much complication and unavoidable discomfort.

Although it does not normally rank among the pleasures of life, the strain of five years of war has made the prospect of sitting still and doing nothing wonderfully attractive. Edmund Payne, in the days of the old Gaiety musical-comedy, sang a plaintive little song about a man who tried hard to be lazy but could never be lazy enough, and it may well be that instead of the plunge into a vortex of furious pleasure and amusement which some prophesy we shall indulge in for a time after the war, people instead will find their relaxation in the negative, but by no means negligible, joy of doing nothing at all.

A poor life this if full of care wrote Mr. W. H. Davies, himself once of Mr. Jeff Davies' fraternity, and, with the substitution of the word "sit" for "stand," the sentiment has much to recommend it to a world which, when not busy working or fighting, spends its time in queues.

Contemplation, however, has never been a national habit, and, although we are not given to the larger gesticulations, we are generally inclined to be fidgety in our ways. The strain of keeping still for even so long as it takes a photographer to press his bulb is obvious in the staring eyes and unnatural expressions in the photographs of friends and relations, and inability to concentrate and be still betrays itself in that incessant rustling of newspapers, coughing, clearing of throats, crossing of knees, and tapping of pipes and cigarettes in which the British public indulges whenever it is forced into the passive attitude of sitting.

Indeed part of the attraction of smoking seems to lie in the excuse it affords for unnecessary movement, and "business" with cigarettes is, in life as on the stage, a convenient means of breaking any silence which threatens to last too long. It is a commonplace that women of today cannot walk and hold themselves in the manner of a generation which knew the discipline of the backboard, and the ability to remain quiet, to dominate by immobility, is another of the lost arts.

The technique of modern acting, whether on stage or screen, inclines in its idiom to the restless and informal, and while there are many who can imitate Gerald Du Maurier's mannerisms, there are few who can convey the stillness of nervous tension which often accompanied them. If, however, the knack of sitting still eludes us and a statuesque Orientalism of pose remains beyond our reach, the attraction of the idea remains, and the "terrible" experience of Mr. Davies seems enviable enough to people who look forward to the simple relief of putting worry from their minds and taking the weight off their feet.

Green Grow The Rushes—O

The elaborate and often extravagant employment of the interlacing technique of the stone- and -metal-work and the illuminated manuscripts of Late Celtic times owed something to the prevalance of the rush-plaiting craft in rural Ireland. In this connection the observation has been made that the smooth interlacings of the opus Hibernicum simulate the pliant rush rather than the angular straw, which, being mainly oat-straw, had in any case more profitable uses: . . .

We have the rush butterfly cage which, with a variety of materials and insects, can be paralleled from many parts of the Old World among pastoral societies. We may cite examples from Central Asia, India, and classical Greece. In their recent work on the Gobi Desert, Cable and French describe "the entrancing little toys, necklaces and bracelets made by the desert children. When the cicada begins to sound its queer, tearing cal in the great heat, every child cuts the desert grass to make a tiny cage to hold one of the fascinating tree hoppers. The Gobi baby's rattle, too, is a hollow ball of twisted grass enclosing a large bead." The Indian herd-boys, Kipling writes, "weave little baskets of dried grass and put grasshoppers in them." Theocritus described a Greek shepherd boy "weaving with asphodel stalks a neat locust-trap"; George Moore makes his shepherdess (in "The Pastoral Loves of Daphnis and Chloe") "scamper forth in the morning to gather some rushes to make a cage for a grasshopper." . . . .

There are also plaited bracelets and belts, and strips of plait woven together to make bonnets or hat-bands. And finally, though this does not exhaust the list, there are little baskets made for gathering wild strawberries or bilberries. The ritual element is well illustrated in the bilberry baskets, for it is still the practice in many hilly districts to celebrate the beginning of the harvest season on Garland Sunday, about the early part of August. August the first, in the old Celtic year, was the beginning of autumn, just as February the first . . . marked the commencement of spring. The custom is for the young people to make picnics to well-known spots in the mountains, where they weave their little baskets, pick the bilberries and engage in music and dancing. Thus the plaiting of rushes is linked up with the ancient customs of pastoral life, with the leisure of the hills where the Irish, like the Scots Highlanders and many other herding folk, spent most of the summer watching their cattle among the green rushy pastures.—Estyn Evans, in "The Countryman," Autumn, 1944.

A DISTURBING PRACTICE

A 10-year-old boy was charged in Ottawa Juvenile Court with breaking the seal on a freight car in the Broad Street yards, and it came out that the car was loaded with explosives.

According to our news story, cars of explosives standing in the Ottawa yards are not guarded, but are prominently marked to indicate their contents, this as a warning to the public.

Judge Fraser expressed the opinion that such cars, when standing in the yards, should be under constant supervision. We think most people will agree with him. A solemn admonition to beware the explosives means nothing to a youngster of ten, seals are easily broken, and the possibilities of such a situation are alarming.—Ottawa Journal.

A Bible Message

There were together Simon Peter, and Thomas called Didymus, and Nathanael of Cana in Galilee, and the sons of Zebedee, and two other of his disciples. Simon Peter saith unto them, I go a fishing. They say unto him, We also go with thee. They went forth, and entered into a ship immediately; and that night they caught nothing.

But when the morning was now come, Jesus stood on the shore: but the disciples knew then that it was Jesus. Then Jesus saith unto them, Children, have ye any meat? They answered him, No. And he said unto them, Cast the net on the right side of the ship, and ye shall find. They cast therefore, and now they were not able to draw it for the multitude of fishes. . . .

As soon as they were come to land, they saw a fire of coals there, and fish laid thereon, and bread. . . .

Jesus then cometh, and taketh bread, and giveth them, and fish likewise. This is now the third time that Jesus shewed himself to his disciples, after that he was risen from the dead.

So when they had dined, Jesus saith to Simon Peter, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me more than these? He saith unto him, Yea Lord; thou knowest that I love thee. He saith unto him, Feed my lambs. He saith to him again the second time, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me? He saith unto him, Yea, Lord; thou knowest that I love thee. He saith unto him, Feed my sheep.

He saith unto him the third time, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me? Peter was grieved because he said unto him the third time, Lovest thou me? And he said unto him, Lord, thou knowest all things: thou knowest that I love thee. Jesus saith unto him, Feed my sheep. (John 21: 2-6, 9, 13-17.)

Letter To The Editor

WHAT'S THE ALTERNATIVE?

Sir,—I have been reading with a great deal of interest the advertisements appearing in the Examiner and being sponsored by the Peterborough Property Onwers' Association. I am assuming that the purpose of the advertisements is to seek to defeat the bylaw regarding the hospital which will be submitted to the ratepayers at the forthcoming Municipal Elections.

If I am correct in this, I should like to ask the sponsors of the advertisements what alternative they have to offer in order to provide adequate hospitalization for those of our fellow-citizens who need this service. Surely, the advertisers cannot be indifferent to the urgency of the need for increased adequate hospital facilities, nor should they be unmindful of the benefits they, in company with many others, have enjoyed over the past fifty years from the beneficence of the late Mrs. Charlotte Nicholls.

I should also like to suggest for their consideration that the advertisements would, in my opinion, carry much more weight if the names of the sponsors of the advertisements were given.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your valued space, I am Yours sincerely,

JAMES DUTTON.

Unconsidered Trifles

The young husband eyed the greyish concoction with misgiving. Bravely he dug a spoon into the mystery, and began to eat.

After a few moments he straightened himself, eased his collar a little and asked: "What do you call this, darling?"

"It's date pudding, dear," beamed his young wife.

"Oh, yes," he breathed, "but—er—what date?"

IN A HURRY

The passing of 76 major items of legislation, including some acts of an extremely controversial nature, in three weeks is something in the way of a record for Saskatchewan legislatures. Such speed allows little time for examination and inquiry by the members and no observable time for hearing representations from the public. As a matter of fact some of the measures were passed after a direct refusal to have a committee study at which those of the public who are directly concerned could present their views either of approval or protest. Such was the case in the matter of the most controversial and most authoritarian law of the session, the Trade Union Act, which was not permitted to go to the law amendments committee for study.—Regina Leader-Post.

Helps Check Colds Quickly

You can often check a cold quickly if you follow these instructions.

Just as soon as you feel the cold coming on and experience headache, pains in the back or limbs, soreness through the body, take a Paradol tablet, a good big drink of hot lemonade or ginger tea and go to bed.

The Paradol affords almost immediate relief from the pains and aches and helps you to get off to sleep. The dose may be repeated, if necessary, according to the directions. If there is soreness of the throat, gargle with two Paradol tablets dissolved in water. Just try Paradol the next time you have a cold and we believe that you will be well pleased. Paradol does not disappoint.

11 Candidates Enter Council Field

Mayor James Hamilton has been returned by acclamation and four members of the Board of Education were also given acclamations but there will be contests for the Utilities Commissioner and the five seats on the city council. This was the final result of the municipal nominations when 9 o'clock came on Saturday night, the last hour when qualifications could be filed.

Eleven nominees in all have entered as candidates in the field for the city council and both nominees for Utilities Commission qualified.

The Board of Education although given an acclamation will have two new members, Walter Bannon, chairman of the North Monaghan School Board and Frank Jobbitt, treasurer of the Peterborough Lock Company. Dr. C. M. Scott and H. G. Walker, both members of the 1944 Board and ex-chairmen, who have given years of faithful services did not qualify. The other two nominees who qualified were C. Alex Sollitt and Fred Reed. Mr. Sollitt in 1945 will be starting his third term of two years and Mr. Reed his second.

E. R. Shirley, former member of the Peterborough Utilities Commission and Fred Hills at present a member of the commission are contesting the vacancy on the commission.

Eleven nominees qualified for the five seats on the aldermanic board. This included the five retiring aldermen, Herb. Bradburn, James Dutton, Max Swanston, John E. Sullivan and Adam Sands. In the field also are Col. John A. Dewart, A. E. Thompson, Hurrell Dodds, Walter Wright, Melville Morrow and W. Ken Sloane. Of this later group Mr. Dodds was a candidate last year and lost out by a few votes. Col. Dewart is a former member of the Board of Education.

RE-ELECTED—J. Fred Reed (Left) and C. Alex. Sollitt (Right) who were re-elected to the Board of Education by acclamation. Mr. Reed in 1945 will commence his second two-year term and Mr. Sollitt his third.

Omemee Man School Trustee

TORONTO, Nov. 27.—Assumption of 50 per cent. of the cost of education by the Province will assist in equalizing educational opportunities in rural and urban areas, by aiding in establishment of larger city school districts, Dr. V. K. Greer, chief inspector for Department of Education, told members of the Association of Ontario Public School Trustees and Ratepayers at the closing session of their annual meeting on Saturday.

Because rural districts near cities are unable to maintain schools of the same standard as the cities, without ruinous tax levies, he said, many cities and towns in Scotland and the United States had taken nearby country points into their school districts.

Dr. J. G. Althouse, Ontario Director of Education, told the Association that the time was passing when, although claiming only a small percentage of high school graduates, the universities through their entrance requirements, dictated the high school curriculum. The problem of adapting high school studies to local needs, he said, would fall to the trustees.

Election of officers for the coming year was by acclamation. D. Roy Kennedy, K.C., was re-elected president and L. H. Saunders, a founder of the Association, became honorary president. H. B. Fetterley and J. F. Twigg, K.C., are the vice-presidents, and J. D. Mills continues as secretary-treasurer. Directors are: Rev. Canon W. A. Townshend, London; D. Riddell, York Township; W. J. Saunders, Kingston; S. Cotterill, Hamilton; E. C. Kilmer, Brantford; Mrs. M. D. Baker, New Toronto; Mrs. Dorothy Hague, Swansea; W. N. Baulk, Kitchener; S. B. Carew, Omemee, and C. Winters, Sault Ste. Marie.

Rioters Burn 3 Union Jacks

RIMOUSKI, Que., Nov. 27 — (CP). — Three Union Jacks were burned in the course of anti-conscription demonstration here last night by about 200 civilians headed by a few soldiers from the vocational training school. Most of the participants were youths under 20.

The demonstration, which lasted about an hour, started with the youths marching through the streets singing "O Canada". They stopped in front of the city hall, where one flag was burned. Later, two more flags were burned in front of the Knights of Columbus canteen.

Police did not interfere and there was no further disturbance.

LEAVING BOARD—Dr. Charles M. Scott, who is retiring from the Board of Education. Dr. Scott is a former chairman of the Board and has served faithfully the citizens of Peterborough for eight years.

RETIRES—H. G. Walker, former chairman of the Board of Education, who did not seek re-election for 1945. Mr. Walker has been in poor health for some time and has been on leave of absence since September. For years Mr. Walker gave faithful service especially as chairman of the Property Committee, and the fine condition that our schools are in today is largely due to his service.

THE ANSWER IS UP TO YOU!

The answer to this question . . . for thousands of Canada's fighting men... will come from the hearts of volunteer blood donors. In Ontario donations are lagging. 50,000 new donors must be registered immediately if we are to do our share in giving our boys over there a second lease on life.

Did you ever talk to a boy, back from active service, whose life has been saved by blood transfusion? You ought to . . . because then, and only then will you realize the full import of this service of mercy. You'll realize what blood donor service means to our fighting men . . . to boys close to you or to your friends . . . who are taking their chances over there . . . for you.

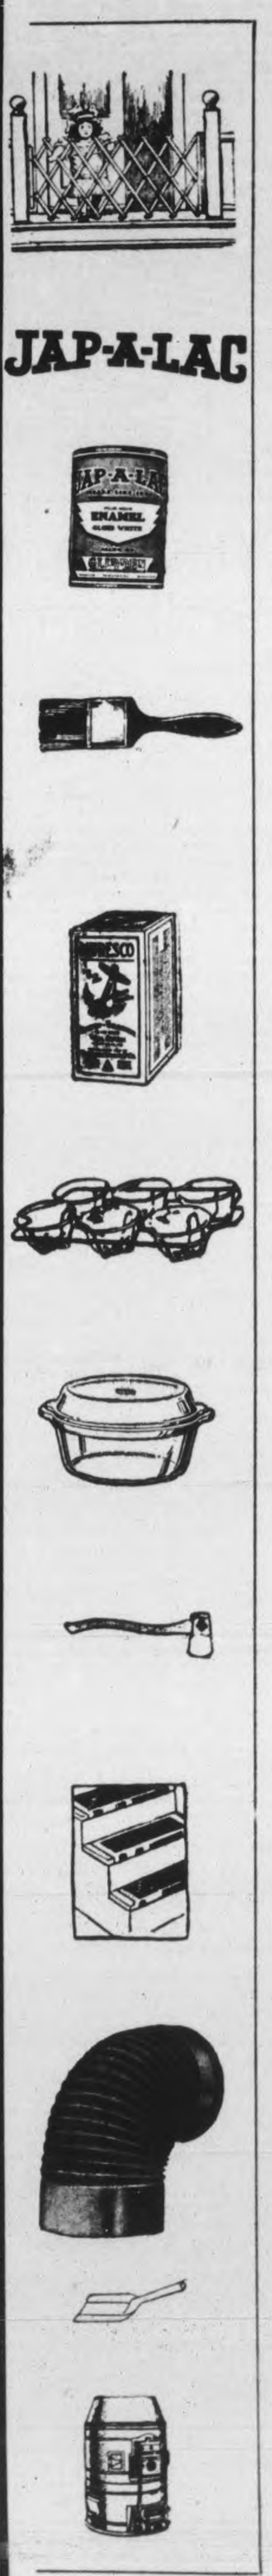
Vote Dec. 4th



It is important that all property Owners (even Peterborough Property Owners' Association?) vote December 4th, re Hospital Bylaw.

Presuming that the majority have read the clear facts so ably expressed by men who have the interest of all at heart and who have given of their time and business judgment in the daily and weekly press the bylaws should be assured IF you get out and vote.

Supposing a modern hospital is built which can operate with efficiency, how can anyone with business experience believe that the deficit should increase (if any) in proportion $330,000 plant to $1,400,000 plant? Modern equipment means less cost of operation. Old equipment has caused the present deficit due to the extra operation costs being required.

Granted the money came from the citizen that the City Trust and Utilities Commission has, it will still belong to the citizens and render better value giving service to the sick than lying idle or at interest. Incidentally, the endowment fund will still be invested in Nicholls Hospital. The money will be working serviceably. It has been already pointed out the interest for deficits will be offset by less labour.

Re the advertisements inserted by the Peterborough Property Owners' Association: "Think Before You Vote," quoting the original act of 1886, Section 13. Yes, think before you vote, especially of the misery and suffering that will be relieved by an up-to-date and well equipped hospital.

We can raise money to equip and pay men to fight and sacrifice their lives and of necessity destroy life. Why can there not be "enough and to spare" for those living in peace, yet suffering and in need?

Incidentally we sat in afternoon class with Mr. H. R. Sills (see his letter to the Editor, page 4, November 23) and both of us came from Kingston. There they have a real hospital. Our only regret since moving to Peterborough has been the lack of adequate hospital facilities. However, if everyone gets out and votes, the Bylaws should be assured of passage. This includes support of $75,000 in aid of the Memorial Community and Health Centre — another worthy project.

Re "outside patients": How many merchants get business from citizens of the County? We do and are glad as Property Owners to reciprocate or help "outsiders" who help to increase our volume of sales. The greater volume of business the better we are able to distribute and save Peterborough citizens on Hardware and Supplies.

In London, Ontario, they are going to spend $3,000,000 and have a total bed capacty of 3,000 beds.

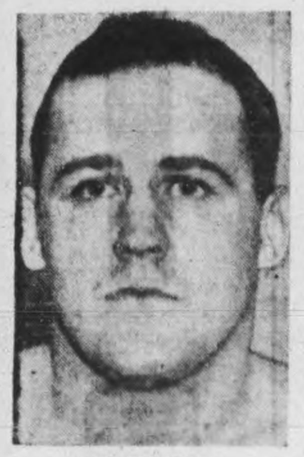
Empire Title Rides On Tuesday Battle



DR. LEN HALL

When Whipper Billy Watson meets John Katan here in the main bout of the Tunney show on Tuesday night the British Empire title which the Panther has long been claiming will be at stake. Katan declares there will be a new champ after this battle but Watson cannot see it that way. It should be a hectic argument. The semi-final with Dr. Len Hall meeting the husky Al B. Smith of Brooklyn will be no love feast either while with Bunny Dunlop in the opener, Jumping Jim Wallace of Chicago will really have to live up to his name. advt

Y House League Gets Underway

Basketball at the Y.M.C.A. got under way for the season Saturday night when the opening games in the House League were staged with Ray Routley's Panthers winning from Bill Kemp's Trojans 36 to 18 and Gord. Johnston's Lions winning from Roy Johnston's Tigers in a high-scoring second game 60 to 44.

Service men took a prominent part in the night's activities. Bill Jones, and Dunlop Mathias, RCAF players for the Panthers in the opening game, while in the second battle Spike Matthews, RCNVR, was on the Lions' lineup and Jack Craig, also home on furlough from the Navy, was at centre for the Tigers. Harry Currie who leaves for Kingston today to report to the Navy was a member of the Lions team.

The Trojans-Panthers game was a close-checking affair. Routley's team went out in front early and stayed there. They led at the half 12 to 8 and increased their lead by 24 to 10 after the rest period. The accurate sniping of Ed. Nicholls was the big factor in the Panther victory. The tall youngster came through with a 24-point scoring mark to make him high man for the night. Nicholls scored the whole 12 points credited to the winners in the first half. Captain Routley helped with 8 points. For the losers Geraghty was tops in scoring with seven points and Kemp had six.

The teams:

Panthers, 36—Routley 8, Nicholls 24, Collins, Mathias, Jones 4.

Trojans, 18—Shadgett 2, Menzies, Courtney 2, Geraghty 7, Upper 1, Franks, Kemp 6.

Referee, J. E. Craig; umpire, George Bouck.

Gord. Johnston's Lions, without the services of the captain of the team, won the second game by piling up a score in the first half. They had the Tigers down 36 to 16 at the half but Roy Johnston's outfit finally got rolling after the rest and outscored the winners 28 to 24 in the second half. Their rally was too late, however, to make much impression on the big early lead set up by the Lions. Harry Currie with 22 points and Plunkett with 18 were the big guns in the winners' attack while Jack Craig with 18 and Steve Csumrik with 16 points topped the losers in scoring.

The teams:

Lions, 60—Stewart 6, Griffin 12, Currie 22, Matthews 2, Plunkett 18, Whitaker.

Tigers, 44—Bouck 4, Johnston 6, Craig 16, Csumrik 16, Seabrook, Ketcheson, Spiers, Smith.

Volleyball Scores Count Up Equal

A curious record was set up in the Y.M.C.A. Volleyball League on Saturday afternoon in the 3:15 series of games. The Thunderbolts won the first game 15-10 and in the second game the Hurricanes reversed the situation by winning, again 15-10. Owing to the time limit a record score of 1-0 was rung up with the Thunderbolts getting the winning point. In the 2:30 series Spitfires won two, 15-13 and the last game 5-2 with the Typhoons who took the first game 15-10. At 4 o'clock Mosquitos won the first two games 15-12 and 16-14 while the Whirlwnids came back strong in the last game winning handily 13-6.

The attendance was the best and most consistent in some years with every team at full strength, one team with eight players and one with nine. Forty-one players in all took part. Every game was hard fought and some fine and lengthy rallies were staged.

The teams now stand as follows:

	Won	Points
Thunderbolts	5	10
Mosquitos	3½	7
Hurricanes	3	6
Spitfires	3	6
Typhoons	2½	5
Whirlwinds	1	2

Games next Saturday:
2:30—Spitfires vs. Whirlwinds; 3:15—Typhoons vs. Hurricanes; 4:00—Mosquitos vs. Thunderbolts.

Sam Snead Wins Big Golf Prize

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 27 (AP)—The "Comeback Kid" did it Sunday. Slammin' Sam Snead, making his first major golf tournament start in more than two years, won the 72-hole Portland Open with a score of 289.

Snead, meanwhile, pocketed the major prize of $2,675 in war-bonds and acknowledging it with a big grin, remarked, "It's great to be back."

Once the leading money winner in a single year, Snead was the magnet that attracted a gallery estimated at 5,000 fans yesterday in sunny, clear weather. The final day was played under conditions directly contrasting with the first three rounds, when players and fans were pelted with rain.

In spite of it, Snead trudged through four rounds to wind up only a single stroke over par.

Snead nosed out veteran Mike Turnesa of White Plains, N.Y., for the lion's share of the purse. It was an airtight match between the two from start to finish.

Snead posted four rounds of 70-74-73-71 for his 289. Turnesa carded 71-71-75-74 for 291.

Two of the big-name golfers who failed to reach the money circle were Ralph Guldahl of San Diego, two-time former United States open champ, with 303, and Craig Wood of Mamaroneck, N.Y., present national open titleholder Wood posted 306

SPORTS-Day by Day

By FRED D. CRAIG

Peterborough Collegiate seniors were vanquished 26 to 5 in the Cossa finals in Toronto Saturday afternoon. Up to half time the Peterborough students held their own with the Niagara Falls outfit and they were down only 6 to 5 at the rest period. In the second half however, according to my scouts, the losers were guilty of costly fumbles and the Cataract team was quick to cash in on these openings. In short it was not one of the P.C.V.S.'s best efforts of the season. They were nervous and shaky and loose ball-handling proved decidedly costly. Peterborough folk who saw the game report that ordinarily there would be nothing like 21 points difference between the two teams. However the Niagara Falls club deserves credit for the manner in which it made use of its openings. P.C.V.S. has had a good season, despite the loss in the finals. Out of the game for several years, Collegiate had to start all over again and the new coach Bev. Goulding was necessarily handicapped. In spite of the obstacles the Peterborough students developed sufficient strength to win their own group and that in itself was an achievement. Some good material was uncovered and now the school is back in the football picture, for keeps let us hope, there is reason to look forward hopefully to next season.

Hamilton Wildcats won the Dominion senior football honors last season by 10 seconds and Saturday lost a title for this year by a matter of nine or ten feet. A year ago the Ambitious City twelve got the winning touch with only a sixth of a minute left to play. Saturday the Wildcats went down to defeat because a kick by Joe Krol on the last play of the game went into touch three yards from the goal line. Had it gone into the goal area the game would probably have been tied up. But the boot failed and the Montreal Navy won by the narrow margin of 7 points to 6. It was a prize upset of the season. The winners had been beaten 12 to 1 on their own grounds a week before by Toronto Navy and the latter aggregation was not rated as strong as either Wildcats or Balmy Beach. And yet the Montreal sailors bounced back from that defeat to nose out the greatly favored Cats. Probably the explanation lies in the fumbles column where Hamilton made nine entries during the day. Had they booted half that many against Balmy Beach they would have folded up a week sooner than they did but they were letter perfect in their ball-handling against the Toronto club. The defeat must have been a stunning blow to the Hamilton players and fans.

Delving Into The Past

Reminiscing about the science of drop-kicking which he declares is now a lost art - although at that we saw in one junior game this season two converts made in this way, one by a Toronto player and the other by Vic Griffin of the Petes—Mike Rodden, Kingston sports scribe goes on to say: It was Frank Shaughnessy of McGill who brought about a reformation. He catered to the goal from placement and there was one season when McGill used an artificial mound on which to tee the ball, thus providing much amusement for their opponents.

So the goal from the field gave way to the placement and only a few players, Annis Stukus of Toronto being one of them, became proficient in the art. And yet as I look back into the years I see placement kickers who were vastly superior to Stukus at his best. 'Bull' Ritchie, of the University of Toronto seniors, was one of them and the late Jack Maynard of the same team was another. They reigned in an age when touchdowns were converted from placement kicking, the rule being that the ball had to be held by a teammate in line with the spot where the touchdown was scored and this was in operation until 1920, believe it or not.

On many occasions Ritchie and Maynard were called on to try the convert from the side line while 'shooting' at a very narrow target and yet they succeeded far oftener than they missed. Now with all the shouting about the art of placement kicking and about Stukus there isn't a placement kicker anywhere good enough to shine the shoes that Ritchie and Maynard used to wear.

House League basketball at the Y. M. C. A. Saturday night revealed the fact that there is more material around than was at first realized. True some of the service men who took part in the opening double-header will not be available in future games but outside of them there was a lot of young players who should develop rapidly and as a matter of fact in addition to the four teams already lined up enough others have materialized to make a fifth team a possibility. The playing of Ed. Nichols in the first game indicated that the promise he showed last season was genuine for he hung up a 24-point score, the highest total of the night. Young Plunkett who performed in the second game shot in great style, sinking nine baskets and he looks like a future star. And other youngsters gave a good account of themselves. The indications now are the Y will not only have a good house league but that out of the material that is being developed it will be possible to organize a strong city league for competition after Christmas when the House loop playoffs are over.

The Strength Of A Team

Manager Jack Adams of Detroit Red Wings claims that as good baseball clubs are built through the centre of the diamond, possessing a good catcher, a star keystone combination and classy centre fielder, hockey also is constructed in that fashion, it being essential to have stars in goal, at defence and centre, says Bill Gagnon in the Niagara Falls Gazette. This statement has been revealed by reviewing all great teams of past races. Going back to those great Ottawa Senator clubs we recall power in the spots mentioned, the 1920 and 21 outfits showing Clint Benedict between the pipes with Sprague Cleghorn and Eddie Gerard on the rearguard and Frank Nighbor at the pivot. When Benedict and Cleghorn were shifted, later Capital crews had Alex Connell doing the twineminding and King Clancy and George Boucher accepting work behind the blueline. The first of those fine Canadien teams of the twenties showed George Vizena in goal, Cleghorn and Coutu defence and Howie Morenz at centre. Succeeding Habitant outfits had Hainsworth wearing the large pads. Herb Gardiner and Sylvo Mantha defending with Morenz still pivoting. Boston's initial cup winner displayed Tiny Thompson goaling, Eddie Shore and Lionel Hitchman blocking with Cooney Weiland centering.

Toronto Maple Leafs took the N. H. L. leadership away from the Canadiens Saturday night, only to lose it again Sunday night. In the game at Toronto Frank McCool of the Leafs registered the first shutout of the season when the Day men turned back the Flying Frenchmen 2 to 0. Back on their home ice Sunday the Canadiens were flying with the Blake, Lach, Richard line setting the pace. Richard performed the hat trick by getting three goals as the Montrealers won 4 to 1 Detroit and the Chicago Black Hawks broke even in two high-scoring games, Jack Adams' men garnering the Saturday night affair at home 7 to 4 and then dropping the Sunday fixture in Chicago 6 to 5. Thus the two teams totalled 22 goals in two games which seems to hint that defence tactics in the N. H. L. are not what they used to be. Boston Bruins also did plenty of scoring to beat the New York Rangers 8 to 4 and the strangest feature about that is the fact that Bill Cowley, scoring ace only picked up one point. He got a goal inside the first minute and then shut up for the night.

West Seeking Play-offs For Vancouver

TORONTO, Nov. 27 — (CP) — Frank Sargent of Fort William, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, told the 55th annual meeting of the Ontario Hockey Association here Saturday night, that he attended the meeting to discuss the possibility of playing the 1944-45 Allan Cup finals in Vancouver. He said the western hockey associations had only started in their "fight" to block the "wholesale movement of young hockey talent from their home districts."

"Manitoba flatly refuses to transfer certain players this year," Sargent said, "and they have good reason."

"Other years, wholesale raids were made on Manitoba teams and if hockey is to survive out west, the clubs must be protected against such action.

"I have granted St. Michael's College, Toronto, permission to use Samis, Gray and Arundel this season as they are eligible under the preparatory school clause in our regulations, but warning is hereby given to St. Michael's and others in the east that the western branches are going to fight tooth and nail to have that certain clause removed from our regulations at the next annual meeting of the C.A.H.A."

Sargent announced the C.A.H.A. has decided to hold the Memorial Cup finals at Toronto Maple Leaf Gardens for the third straight time as games here "present the best means of producing the necessary revenue to keep the C.A.H.A. and hockey alive during thew ar years."

"It takes about $35,000 each year to operate the C.A.H.A. and last season went into the red a little due to the one-sided Memorial Cup final series when Oshawa won the title in four straight games from Trail, but I believe we'll be able to operate this year, despite the loss of a strong senior series without dipping into our reserve."

Officers Retained

The O.H.A. decided to retain its same officers for a third term and F. W. (Dinty) Moore of Port Colborne remains president. Jack Fulton, president of the Northern Ontario Hockey Association, and Clifford McGillivray of Niagara Falls, were added to the executive.

Treasurer George S. Dudley of Midland, reported a cash balance of $2,350 and $8,000 in war bonds at the close of last season.

It was decided to hold future O.H.A. annual meetings on the first Saturday in December.

Transfer of players under the "military replacement" rule will be abandoned this season unless sanction of the player's home club is obtained, it was decided.

Under the rule, club losing players through military callup were permitted to replace them with members of other teams in the league.

The convention decided that all player releases should be filed with the league secretary and should bear the signature of the president and secretary before becoming valid.

For the senior "A" and junior "A" circuits, the mileage rate paid visiting clubs will be $2.25 instead of the previous $1.50 per mile.

Quebec Admits 4 Outlaw Teams

MONTREAL, Nov. 27 (CP)—The Quebec Lacrosse Association held its annual meeting here yesterday, and all four teams which broke away from the Association to form an outlaw league last summer were re-admitted.

Cornwall St. Regis Indian, Lachine, Canadiens and Longueuil had broken away from the Q.L.A., and operated as an inter-provincial loop last summer after the O.L.A. had refused to reinstate St. Regis' playing manager, Angus Thomas. Thomas, suspended for striking a referee several years ago, has since been re-instated by the Q.L.A.

The Sports Round-Up

NEW YORK, Nov. 27 — (AP). — MAN WANTED . . . the one big task at the Major League meetings two weeks hence will be to decide what to do about a successor to Kennesaw Mountain Landis as commissioner of baseball . . . it has been suggested that the Major Leagues might return to the old commission form of government and it seems likely that secretary Leslie O'Connor will continue to do the work, with the two league presidents advising him, until the present agreement expires in 1946 . . . to make this setup permanent, however, would invite the same kind of trouble that led to the appointment of Landis in 1921 . . . not since that time has baseball been in so great a need of a firm guiding hand.

History Repeats

The famous Black Sox scandal which brought a new form of baseball government came shortly after the last war . . . then, as now, the big leagues still were full of young players, getting their first taste of big money, and old timers getting their last chance at it . . . the gambling wave was at flood tide and those two groups were approachable . . . no one questioned the integrity of the old national commission, but it failed to prevent that scandal . . . under Landis' rule no one got excited this year when the news came out that a Washington pitcher had been approached to throw a game at the end of the season . . . another good reason for appointing a new commissioner whose reputation and whose powers will at least be near those of Landis comes from the post-war problems baseball must face.

Sailors Surprise Wildcats Capture Title

HAMILTON, Nov. 27—(CP—The Navy Combines from H.M.C.S. Donnacona and St. Hyachinthe won the Canadian football championship for Montreal Saturday for the third time since the title was first decided in 1892 with the biggest upset victory in years. Champions of the Quebec Rugby Football Union, the Combines scored a 7-6 victory over the Hamilton Wildcats, Ontario Rugby Football Union champions and solid favorites to win their second successive Dominion crown.

During most of the game the stubborn Combines threw the powerful Hamilton team off stride with a charging line, deadly tackling and expert booting by Dutch Davey who more than held his own with the Hamilton kicking brigade which was headed by the great Joe Krol.

Davey kicked the first Navy point in the first quarter, hoofing to Krol from 40 yards out and the starry Hamilton half was rouged. In the second quarter Davey pitched a touchdown pass to Johnny Taylor, who ducked one tackle and then dashed 40 yards for the major score which was not converted.

Krol Gains 32

The Hamilton team hit its stride late in the third quarter with several big gains but it was not until the fourth that Paul Miovinovich and Krol carried the ball 55 yards in three plays for a touchdown. Starting from midfield, the hard-plunging Minovinovich went 20 yards to the Navy 35. Krol went 32 yards on the next play and then Miovinovich went over for the touchdown which Krol converted to tie the score.

A fumble on the kickoff and a short kick by Gordon Miller set up the winning Navy point. Miovinovich recovered and was downed seven yards from his goalline. Quarterback Al Hurley carried Miller's short kick back to the 20 before he was brought down and from there Davey booted to Ben Dyack who was rouged.

It was the second time a service team won the title and the Grey cup, the Toronto R.C.A.F. Hurricanes having carried off the honors two years ago. Montreal's first title win was in 1907 and the second was in 1931.

Although Combines won the Dominion title, they were unable to win the Canadian Navy championship, held by Toronto Navy Bulldogs who defeated the Combines 12-1 in Montreal the previous week. Bulldogs were not eligible for the Grey Cup as the Ontario Armed Services League did not file an entry.

Niagara Falls Swamps PCVS

TORONTO, Nov. 27—(CP)—Niagara Falls Technical Collegiate Institute swamped the Peterborough Collegiate Institute 26-5 Saturday in the final for the Central Ontario Secondary Schools Association football title.

A hard-hitting Niagara Falls line and a powerful backfield took advantage of every Peterborough fumble to build up the score.

Bors Duzunoff opened the Niagara scoring by kicking a single point in the first quarter. Claimenagh, the Falls' quarter, went over for a touch which was unconverted.

The only Peterborough score came in the second quarter after Rooke had carried the ball to the Falls' one-yard line at the first quarter whistle. Opening the second quarter "Red" Outram went over for the touchdown.

In the third period Bill Sullivan notched a field goal for the Falls and Claimenagh went over for a touch, which was unconverted. The fourth period saw Duzunoff score a single and Des Clements a touchdown which was converted by Sullivan. The last Falls' touchdown came just before the end, when Frank Shepherd raced 55 yards for a touch which was unconverted.

Week-end Stars

(By The Canadian Press)

Goalie Frank McCool, Toronto, who made the first shutout of the N.H.L. season as Leafs defeated Montreal Canadiens Saturday 2-0.

Maurice Richard, Canadiens, who scored three of the Flying Frenchmen's four goals as they whipped Toronto 4-1 Sunday.

Bill Mosienko, Chicago, whose third goal in Sunday's game gave Black Hawks a 6-5 win over Detroit.

Murray Armstrong, Detroit, whose two counters in 52 seconds helped Red Wings defeat Chicago 7-4.

Armand Gaudreault, Boston, who scored two goals and one assist as Bruins handed New York Rangers an 8-4 defeat.

Signs With Cards

GUELPH, Nov. 27 (CP) — Jack Hough, 17-year-old righthanded pitcher, has signed a contract with St. Louis Cardinals of the National League and will play for their Winston-Salem, N.C. farm club in 1945. Hough attended the baseball school operated by the world champions at Hamilton this fall.

TORONTO, Nov. 27 — (CP). — (Advance). — That idea from the west to let the football coach out on the field with his team as an extra man didn't find much favor with Mike Rodden of the Kingston Whig-Standard. Some coaches might be of value that way, says he, but most "wouldn't be able to get out of the way fast enough" to keep from getting hurt — Eddie McLean of Hamilton Wildcats for instance . . . anyway, the rule forbidding coaches signalling plays to their team doesn't mean too much, says Mike. If other signals can't be pushed through to the lines, there is always the good old dodge of sending in a substitute to act as runner with important communiques from coach to quarterback . . . that still leaves the coach with an advantage, because he can blame the field general if anything goes awry . . .

Sont la!

Montreal's Eddie Quinn has all the angles figured out for a French Canadian entry in the much-mooted Canadian professional football loop, reports Baz (Montreal Star) O'Meara. The game would go like a house afire, thinks Quinn, if all French Canadian football players, wherever they may be, in the U.S. or elsewhere, were gathered together — just "put them in the backfield and let them run." Other entries in the loop might include Ottawa, Buffalo, Hamilton, Toronto and Windsor . . . Maybe Jean Pusie can play football!

Incidentally:

Now they're saying better hockey is being played on the smaller N.H.L. rinks — in New York and Boston. Well, you can't convince the Bruin and Ranger fans of that, as far as their favorites are concerned . . . Ken McConnell of the Vancouver Province suggests horsemen out there might liven up their meets a trifle with a few added incentives in the way of trophies to round out their prize lists. Something like Orpen gold cup and saucer at Toronto's Dufferin Park, or the numerous gewgaws and bits of jewelry handed out at eastern tracks. . . they still think a lot around Winnipeg of the Blue Bomber team that copped the Grey Cup in 1939. Even their plays have been preserved, and high school footballers are using the old "44-pro-to-the-right" pass that downed Ottawa in that year, says Herb Manning of the Winnipeg Tribune. Kelvin High used the fake run and forward pass play to down their opponents the other day. . . .

Rip Collins Top Hitter

NEW YORK, Nov. 27 — (AP) — James (Rip) Collins, former St. Louis Cardinal first sacker and veteran manager of the Albany, N.Y., club of the Class A Eastern League, was baseball's champion batsman for 1944 with a .396 average.

The former gas house gang member enjoyed a 26-point advantage over his nearest competitor in the 10 operating minor leagues, L. H. Addington, director of publicity for the National Association, announced.

Second place went to Rene Monteaguado of Chattanooga of the Southern Association, a former pitcher who finished the season with Washington Senators.

There will be no big league comeback for Collins, unless it should be as a manager or coach, as the Albany skipper has a year-round connection in New York State's capital.

Reds Defeat Buffalo Bisons

By The Canadian Press

Providence Reds, eastern division cellar-dwellers, playing on home ice Sunday, defeated the first-place Buffalo Bisons in the only scheduled American Hockey League game.

Goalie Paul Leclerc starred for Providence, who held a four-goal lead until the last minute of the second period when Gordon Davidson made Bisons' first score.

Saturday at Hershey, Providence went down 4-3 before the Bears, who moved to within one point of the leaders.

In the western division, Pittsburg Hornets defeated St. Louis Flyers 6-3 at Pittsburg Saturday, while at Cleveland the Barons trounced Indianapolis Capitals 8-4. Results of these games put Pittsburg out in front of the division, two points ahead of Capitals.

Tommy Burlington starred for Barons in the game at Cleveland, scoring two goals and making the plays for three more. Leo Gasparini counted twice.

Pittsburg took a 3-1 lead against St. Louis in the first period but the Flyers evened the score in the second, in an attack sparked by the three Smith brothers. Tony Hemmerling and Bob Gracie put the Hornets ahead to stay in the last period

Toronto Wins And Loses Over Week-end

By ERIC SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

National Hockey League fans were treated to the season's best displays of puck-chasing during the week-end which saw Montreal Canadiens, last year's champions, lose and then regain the leadership and the cellar-dwelling Chicago Black Hawks win their first game since Nov. 1.

Toronto Maple Leafs, early-season pace-setters and short on manpower, outplayed the Canadiens all the way on home ice Saturday night to score a 2-0 victory for the first shutout of the season and took over the league's top spot for one night. On Sunday, the Torontonians allowed the Canucks to skate off with a 4-1 triumph.

In the other Saturday night affray, Detroit Red Wings strengthened their third-place position by handing Chicago a 7-4 beating, but dropped a 6-5 decision to the same team Sunday. Boston Bruins retained sole possession of fourth place by handing New York Rangers an 8-4 trouncing at Boston Garden Sunday.

Playing before a crowd of 13,000 at Maple Leaf Gardens Saturday, the Leafs, minus Ace Winger Dave (Sweeney) Schriner and Defenceman Elwin Morris, forced the pace from the opening face-off and were further handicapped when Lorne Carr, star right winger, suffered twisted ligaments in his right leg when he was crowded into the boards by Butch Bouchard.

Toronto set up a stalwart defence in front of Goalie Frank McCool whose expert workmanship gave him the season's first shutout. Big Walter (Babe) Pratt got the first goal early in the last period and Mel (Sudden Death) Hill notched the other seven minutes later.

McCool continued his stellar netminding as the two squads played on Montreal ice before more than 12,000 fans Sunday and it wasn't until early in the middle session that Maurice Richard found the mark for his first of three markers in the game. Fern Gauthier made it 2-0 before the period ended. Nick Metz was the Leafs marksman.

Wings Break Away

Chicago kept pace with Detroit for two periods of their Saturday night contest before the Red Wings broke away in the final stanza to score three goals before Pete Horeck counted Chicago's last. Two quick goals by Murray Armstrong and one by Carl Liscombe, his second of the game, cinched the match. Other Detroit marksmen were Syd Howe, Eddie Bruneteau and Jud McAtee. Bill Mosienko, Bus Brayshaw, Clint Smith and Horeck netted for Chicago.

The Sunday game was the most exciting and fastest on the Chicago Stadium ice this season. The lead changed hands every period. Carl Liscombe banged in the first goal of the game and the veteran Earl Seibert got that one back for the Hawks. Ted Lindsay made it 2-1 for the Wings before the period ended.

Mosienko, Horeck and Joe Cooper scored in that order before the halfway mark of the second period and then Art Jackson and Lindsay found the mark to leave the teams tied at 4-4 going into the final period. Joe Carveth gave the Wings a 5-4 advantage, but Mosienko went into action to tie the count and wind up by scoring the winning goal.

Bruins kept the Rangers in close check most of the way in winning 8-4. Bill Jennings and Armand Gaudreault, each scored twice for Boston and other marksmen were Bill Cowley, Art Jackson, Dit Clapper and Frank Mario. Grant Warwick, with two, Phil Watson and Joe Shack were scorers for New York.

Ohio State wound up its 1944 football season with an 18-14 triumph at Columbus Saturday over University of Michigan to register a series of nine straight victories, capture the big 10 college title but learn that conference board had ruled it could not accept an invitation to face Southern California in the Rose Bowl fixture at Pasadena Jan. 1. Meanwhile, Tennessee completed an unbeaten season with a 21-7 over Kentucky in the southern conference and will play at Pasadena New Year's Day instead of Ohio State.

Oklahoma Aggies and Texas Christian qualified for the Cotton Bowl clash while Georgia Tech will play Tulsa in the Orange Bowl, although the former dropped a 21-0 decision to Notre Dame Saturday. Duke smeared North Carolina 33-0 to earn a Sugar Bowl date against Alabama at New Orleans.

Manager Art Ross of the Boston Bruins Saturday sold defenceman Guy Labrie to the New York Rangers. Labrie, 24 and discharged from the Canadian Army, played 15 games for the Bruins last season.

Rick's Raft, owned by William Helis, upset the dope by winning the $25,000 Walden Stakes over Alexis on Saturday's, closing day program at Pimlico. Megogo of the Christiana Stable captured the gruelling $25,000 Pimlico Cup, 2½ miles, by eight lengths over the seven-year-old campaigner, Bolingbroke. It was Megogo's sixth victory of the year.

Leslie M. O'Connor, secretary of the late Kenesaw M. Landis during the 24 years he held the office of baseball commissioner, was suggested as the man who might be selected by the 16 Major League clubs as his successor.

West Hill High School of Westmount Saturday won the Montreal-Ottawa Interscholastic football honors by one point from Glebe Collegiate of Ottawa, the score of the return match being 7-0. One week previusly Glebe had won 19-13 on their own gridiron.

Gnr. H. J. Gray Injured In Accident

MARMORA, Nov. 25 — (ENS). — To the delight of his parents, his four young brothers and sister Lillian, Gnr. Harry John Gray is home from hospital in Kingston for a furlough extending to December 29. He was recently invalided home from overseas. Gnr. Gray only made four trips to the front line in Italy. His regiment of the R.C.A. had the job to break up enemy lines. It was when he was out from the Hitler Line for a rest period in June that the accident occurred which has left him a cripple for the time being.

With three comrades he was hitchhiking to his camp at Benovita and with them received a lift on a transport. Just what happened he did not know until he regained consciousness the next morning at a first-aid station in Benovita. He heard of how he was extricated from the overturned transport, and that Gnr. James Pritchard, one of the two with him had a badly smashed hip and shoulder, while the other two soldiers had escaped without injury. He was also informed that the driver was an Italian.

Gnr. Gray was in the hospital from June 25 to September 17. Later he was sent to hospital near Birmingham in England. He reached England on the hospital ship Oranje, whose captain and matron he said, were of Dutch nationality, while the nurses were from New Zealand. He thought this ship had a little edge on the hospital ship Lady Nelson, although the treatment afforded patients on both he considered to be excellent.

Didn't See Much.

The most famous of Italian cities visited by him was Naples. He said he would have liked to have visited Pompeii, but did not get the opportunity. Prior to leaving England for North Africa, he recalled he was on a scheme which took in a part of Wales. "I remember one thing about Wales,' he said, "and little else. It rained practically all the time we were there. I liked Scotland. I went to Edinburgh not knowing a soul there, and I soon found some friendly people who made my leave so enjoyable for me."

Gnr. Gray regretted that while in hospital in England his brother David, who is on active service there could not visit him because leaves were stopped at the time. His disability consists of a broken left leg, which will be kept in a cast for some time.

Club Has Discussion On League Of Nations

NORWOOD, Nov. 27 — (ENS). — The R.R.D. Club met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Weir and in the absence of the president, Mrs. E. Blodgett, vice-president, presided.

The new officers elected for the year 1945 were as follows: president, Miss E. Blodgett; vice-president, Miss L. English; secretary-treasurer, Miss Verner.

The subject for discussion, "How can we win the peace following the war?" was led by Rev. E. E. Pugsley, speaking on this subject. Rev. Mr. Pugsley maintained that if the League of Nations had adhered to its original policy the present war need not have occurred. It would be advisable therefore to take the old League of Nations as a pattern and set up a new organization for the maintenance of peace and security for the nations of the world. Discussion as to the form and character of this international body followed.

Dainty refreshments were served by the committee in charge and a social hour was spent.

Speaker Orders Words Expunged From Hansard

OTTAWA, Nov. 27—(CP)—Speaker J. A. Glen said Friday in the Commons that remarks by Wilfrid LaCroix, member for Quebec Montmorency, before he crossed the floor from the Liberal benches, should be expunged from the record and no publicity of any kind should be given them by the press.

Speaker Glen spoke after Prime Minister Mackenzie King moved the words of Mr. LaCroix be expunged from the record. Because of noise in the House at the time, Mr. King said he had been unable to follow what Mr. LaCroix was saying. Later, he obtained from Hansard a copy of the words used and they should should not be allowed in debate.

Mr. Lacroix had referred to the government policy on conscription for overseas as "treason" (trahison) to Quebec, and made it appear as if the government leader had betrayed someone, said Mr. King.

To maintain the dignity of the House, the words should not be printed in the record, Mr. King said. Both Mr. LaCroix's words and his own (the Prime Minister's) references to them should be expunged. He was not taking the words of Mr. LaCroix as a reflection on himself but on the House. Mr. LaCroix might have been asked to apologize and, if he failed to do so, he might have been suspended. But at this time Mr. King said he did not feel like moving such action. But if such a situation occurred again he would ask for suspension.

Speaker Glen said that while Mr. LaCroix was speaking he had no opportunity to inform the member he was using offensive words. Had the words used been brought to his attention at the time, he would have asked they be withdrawn. They were offensive in the worst degree.

No publicity of any kind should be given the remarks by the press. The words used by himself, as well as those of Mr. LaCroix and Mr. King should be expunged from the record.

Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative House leader, said Mr. LaCroix's words objected to might already have appeared in some publications, and others published later would thus be penalized.

Speaker Glen said there should be no further reference to the matter. The House could not help what had already appeared.

Apples Are Still Popular At Weekly Market

Apples in quantity were featured in colorful displays at the Farmers' Market Saturday morning, and although the weather was slightly cooler, outside stands seemed to be more popular than those in the hall.

Spies went generally from $2.25 to $2.50 a bushel, Talman Sweets sold for 50 cents a six quart basket, and Snow apples held steady at $2 a bushel. Baxters were out in quantity, and went for $1.50 a bushel, MacIntosh Reds No. 1 were $2.50, Domestic were $2, and, on some stalls, apple cider went for 65 cents a gallon, plus the price on the bottle.

Potatoes during the latter part of the morning appeared to be among the scarce commodities, but what were on hand sold for 35 cents a peck for the most part.

Eggs ran the gamut from 40 cents to 50 cents a dozen, chickens jumped from 30 cents a pound to 35 cents, depending on quality, and roasted chickens sold at 50 cents a pound. A few turkeys were on the stands, selling generally for 46 cents a pound, and one duck was seen selling at 35 cents a pound.

Honey was featured at one stand, at 42 cents for two pounds of white honey, and 40 cents for the same measure for mixed honey. Squash sold at 10 cents each, horse-radish generally at 25 cents a jar, and parsnips at 35 cents a six quart basket.

Carrots at 25 cents a six quart measure, onions 35 cents a basket, beets 25 cents a basket, and turnips at 5 cents were prices quoted. Cabbage sold at 5 cents a head or three for ten, as did savory.

Campbellford Man Buried At Renfrew

RENFREW, Nov. 27.— (CP).— Funeral services were held Saturday for W. J. Beattie, 78, a resident of Renfrew for 25 years, who died in hospital Thursday. Born at Campbellford, Ont., Mr. Beattie was employed by the Canada Furniture Company, Woodstock, Ont., and the National Table Company, Owen Sound, Ont., before coming here in 1919 as superintendent of Renfrew Refrigerator Company, from which post he retired in 1935.

He was instrumental in organizing Renfrew brass band which appeared at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, in 1935.

Peterborough Girls Believe Sinatra Has Voice That Compels

Ask almost any normal 'teen-aged girls in Peterborough these days if they saw the musical film "Step Lively" when it was showing at one of the city's movie houses last week, and the chances are they'll sigh and whisper back, "Yes, I saw 'him'!" "Him", in this case, meaning scrawny swoon-crooner Frank Sinatra, radio's most talked-about performer.

Sinatra's effects on large audiences comprised mostly of young femmes has been tooted in fan magazines and the daily press of two countries ever since he arose from an obscure night-club singer to overnight nation-wide fame, with his vocalizing of "I'll Never Smile Again".

Judging from a series of interviews held today among the younger set about town, Sinatra's effect on Peterborough audiences is just as potent as it is on crowds elsewhere.

Whether or not the swooning all began from a monstrous publicity stunt, as some of his rivals claim, the habit is here to stay it seems, whether the audience is in Peterborough or New York. And good, bad, denounced or commended, the girls are determined to keep it up, just as long as Frank's singing "does things to me".

Weak Knees

Among the symptoms of swoon-susceptibility found among local girls, were weak-knees, tears, headaches, and heart flutters. To an astonished reporter, the girls poured out their feeling for the skinny, pale, singer. None would be quoted, but they actually claimed they go limp when Sinatra sings something.

"He has the effect of making it seem as if he's singing to me alone", one girl said. "I'm helpless when he sings "I'll Walk Alone". "I feel as though I'm walking on air bubbles", said another.

Most of the girls would rather listen to the singer over the radio rather than see him on the screen. Admittedly not-too-handsome, Frank Sinatra is thin, with prominent cheek-bones and penetrating eyes.

At the "Step Lively" show, extremely audible sighs were commonplace, laughter was rampant, but down-to-earth screaming was noticibly scarce. Not at all like his two previous ventures before local film audiences, "Higher and Higher", and "Reveille With Beverley", in which he crooned his own favorite melody, Cole Porter's "Night and Day".

Everyone does not like Sinatra. "He leaves me cold", complained one girl, while in the same breath, she confessed being a Crosby fan. Men, it appeared, refuse to discuss him, and to most men, he is a sissy-type of person, much too effeminate to be popular among them. To elder women, he is practically unknown, merely a name they hear the youngsters talking about.

Psychologists and prominent symphony conductors have through the press made known their dislike of Sinatra, not as a person, but as a voice capable of producing mass hysteria.

Must Be With Others

Girls say that if they go to a movie to see Frank alone, they will sit through it and enjoy it, but make no demonstrations. But in a group, the girls will raise the roof, "just for the fun of it".

In New York recently, the preview of "Step Lively" was marked by a bucket of water at the end of each theatre row of seats, and of course this alone caused a minor sensation. Swarms crowded the theatre for the purpose of seeing if there actually were buckets of water, and whether they would be used on swooners.

Despite all criticism, the girls themselves know the element of publicity has a lot to do with Sinatra's popularity, but they are the first to admit that as Cecil B. DeMille, famed movie producer said, "Once in a century do you find a voice that compels; we have it in Frank Sinatra".

Two Men Facing Careless Driving Charges

As the result of a collision at the intersection of Highway 7 and Colborne street, Norwood's main corner on the afternoon of Saturday, November 4, Police Chief William Parcels of Norwood and Earl Hoffman, Havelock, a former member of the R.C.A.F. faced careless driving charges in police court this morning.

The case against the Norwood officer was proceeded with first. Provincial Constable Archie Grayling of Havelock who laid the charge prosecuted and Chief Parcels was defended by T. J. Carley, K.C.

Provincial Constable Grayling, first crown witness produced a plan drawn by himself of the scene of the accident and gave figures as the measurements he had taken after the crash. The witness said that after the collision a third car parked on the boulevard south of the intersection had been struck by Hoffman's car and that the latter vehicle came to a stop over 100 feet south of the point of impact.

25 Miles An Hour

Hoffman, called by the crown, swore that he was travelling east on Highway 7 at about 25 miles an hour when he approached the intersection. When he was about two car lengths west of Colborne street he said that he had seen Parcels' car coming south on Colborne street move into the intersection.

The former airman said that he had stepped on his accelerator and tried to swerve around the front of Parcels' car to avoid an accident but that his machine struck the front of the officer's automobile and then skidded sideways over the curb, colliding with a parked car and being brought to a stop after going back on to the roadway.

Pressed as to why he had turned down Colborne street to avoid the accident Hoffman said that he could not have made the turn at 25 miles an hour under the conditions that prevailed. "I put it to you that you were travelling at least 40 miles an hour when you reached the intersection," said Mr. Carley.

Witness maintained that his speed was 25 miles an hour.

Appears From Nowhere

For the defence Chief Parcels said that he had stopped at the stop sign before entering the intersection and had looked west, failing to see any approaching car. When he got out into the intersection he looked again and said that Hoffman's car was only 12 feet away. Witness said that he was travelling in second gear and immediately slammed on the brakes. He was going only five miles an hour at the time of impact while he estimated Hoffman's speed at 40 miles.

Charles Frederick, Norwood, service station operator, said that a car had passed his place, 1,000 feet west of the intersection, travelling at from 40 to 45 miles an hour. Seconds later he had heard the impact of the accident and on going to the scene had identified Hoffman's car as the one that had passed his service station shortly before at a high rate of speed.

After Mr. Carley had agrued for a dismisal of the charge the court adjourned for luncheon.

Religious Leaders Give Support To Memorial Centre Bylaw

Religious leaders were unanimous Sunday in voicing their approval of the civic project, the Peterborough Memorial Community Centre. They stressed the need for a living memorial which would in some measure prove a fitting tribute to the men from Peterborough who have lost their lives in this war.

Many ministers spoke movingly of the need for such a community "heart," and of the potential value of the Memorial Centre to our children and young people as well as to the older members of the city.

Taking as his text, "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works," the Rev. Capt. J. L. Hodgson of Trinity United Church said, "Those men of our city who have given their lives for us have given us also such a light . . . a light to shine before men. It is for us to see that this light burns steadily." Speaking in the same vein, Major John Wood of the Salvation Army asked his flock, "What better way to keep green the memory of those men who died on the field of battle for us than to provide a building that will be a permanent bond between members of the community . . . a monument to community spirit." "The Peterborough Memorial Community Centre," declared Rev. F. W. Craik of St. James United Church, "will provide a lasting memorial, built of faith and service as well as stone."

Speaking of the men who have sacrificed their lives, Rev. ... G. Whan of Park Street Baptist Church said, "We cannot possibly atone to them for the sacrifice they have made. But," he went on to say, "we can perform a service for our community that will keep their memory ever fresh." And with much the same feeling, Rev. E. C. Moore of St. George's Anglican Church told his people, "Let us remember always the boys who are gone were fighting for just such a community of spirit as the Centre will inspire."

Appealing to the hearts of those who have children and to public-spirited citizens who are interested in the welfare of the future leaders of our community, Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe of Murray Street Baptist Church delcared, "Children will receive instruction, not only in their sports, but in the spirit of fair play . . . which is the Christian way of life." Also, with an appeal to consider the youngest members of the community, Rev. W. A. Filer of All Saints' Church recalled to the minds of his congregation Christ's words, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." He then went on to suggest that in honor of Peterborough's living dead, we should erect a centre for our community which would serve our children.

An eloquent request for support of this community project was voiced by Rev. E. W. Young of St. Andrew's United Church when he said, "Every footstep that resounds in the corridors of the Centre . . . every child's voice that echoes there as he plays in safety . . . will be an unconscious tribute to those men who, in their passing, have left to us the trust to remember them fittingly."

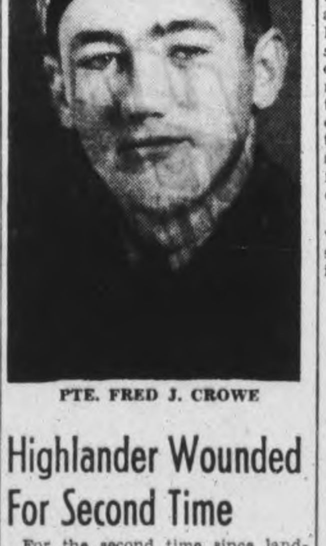
Stressing the need for a meeting-place to foster true community spirit, Rev. H. J. Maloney of Knox United Church told his congregation that "the Peterborough Memorial Community Centre will be a true heart for our community . . . a living breathing heart which will honor the dead, even as it serves the living."

The future of Peterborough is an assured one. It is looked upon by outsiders as one of Canada's coming cities. Its vision and progress now reflected in the twofold proposal facing the people, declared Rev. Dr. James Semple of George Street United Church.

"The Community Centre and the new Hospital.

"The best we can do by way of Memorial for our valiant sons and courageous daughters will be none too good. The Community Centre with its plan for health, culture and recreation is a step in the right direction.

"All church people will want to support the plan for a new hospital. There were no nurses in the Pagan world. The Great Physician inspires all such gracious ministries," Dr. Semple said.



PTE. FRED J. CROWE

Highlander Wounded For Second Time

For the second time since landing in France with the S. D. and G. Highlanders, Pte. Fred J. Crowe was wounded in action recently, according to word received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Crowe, 87 Hunter street. He is suffering a bullet wound in the thigh, and is now in a hospital.

In July of this year, Pte. Crowe was wounded in action, in what was described in the official telegram as "severe facial lacerations and chest injuries." Enlisting in June, 1940, he went overseas in July, 1941, after training in Peterborough, Ottawa, Kingston and Debert, N.S. Prior to enlisting he was an employee at the Albion woodyard and attended St. Peter's Cathedral.

Two brothers and a sister are also serving in the armed forces, Pte. Frank Crowe, overseas, Pte. E. Crowe, also overseas, and Pte. Teresa Crowe, C.W.A.C.

A Hot Mortgage

SOMEWHERE IN ITALY, Nov. 27—(AP).—A bomber of a squadron which attacked Munich Thursday made this report: "Flak heavy and intense. Ice cream frozen." It seems that Mess Sergt. James F. O'Mally had a Thanksgiving menu calling for 40 gallons of ice cream and no way to freeze it. He talked a crew into carrying the ice cream along to Munich.

School Children Assist Christmas Fund

No season of the year means more to school children than that of Christmas. Its coming is looked for most eagerly for a considerable period before its arrival, and this alone should make them conscious of what they can do, in order that other children not so fortunately situated as themselves, might also have a share in that spirit of happiness, which they themselves hope to enjoy.

As a matter of fact, while they may not altogether be aware of it, the more that they do to see that other people are made happy, and particularly those whose outlook is not as bright as their own, then the more does this same happiness accrues to themselves.

This is the 5th successive Christmas that the Peterborough and District British War Victims Fund has made a special appeal, in order that the large number of children who have been made homeless through the penalties that war inflicts, may in some measure have something extra to help take away the sting that absence from their own homes at this time might cause.

This special appeal, in the form of a letter, from the secreetary of the fund, has now been sent to all the teachers in the public schools of the city and district, and it is a fine thing to note that response is already being made.

Two of such, arrived to-day, one of them coming from far away school section No. 2 Verulam, or Dunsford School as it is best known by, where the teacher is Miss Doreen Cornell. This was made possible because they had money on hand from the collection of milkweed pods, and as the teacher remarked in the accompanying letter, the children then felt that a patriotic act was being made to do double duty, by utilizing the money in this manner.

First among the many groups of children in the various classes in the city public schools, Grade V Room 8 Central School taught by Miss A. Stout, are also to-day credited with a gift of two dollars, for this special Christmas donation, and it should be recalled that this class has given on quite a number of occassions.

Scottish Rite Assists.

Fraternalism becomes something that is most shallow indeed if those professing such do not follow its tenets out in practice as well as precept. While all such groups undoubtedly do adhere to this principle within their own select circle, it would seem they place a much wider significance to their professions, when they carry this into effect for the benefit of those without. It is all the greater when it happens to be for people thousands of miles away for whom there is little prospect that they will ever see.

Today marks a donation from the Peterborough Lodge of Perfection A. and A.S.R., they too following a custom of the past few years, in giving a helping hand to those whom the misfortunes of war have afflicted in Britain at this time.

Works In Dreams

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 27 — (AP). — Seaman Hayward Buttram, 24, dreamt he was scraping the side of a ship—and fell three stories from his hotel window. He told hospital attendants, where he was taken suffering from back injuries, that his last work before receiving Thanksgiving leave was ship scraping.

Two Soldiers Killed

While on active service with an Eastern Ontario regiment, L.-Cpl. Frederick Arthur James Lord, whose wife, Mrs. Vashti F. Lord, lives at 1 Choate street, Port Hope, has been reported killed in action as was L.-Sgt. Donald Pasquino, son of Stephen Pasquino. Lieutenant Richard Sydney Cornell, son of H. J. Cornell, 97½ Russell street, Lindsay, was wounded but is remaining on duty, his father has been notified.

Are You Aware Of The Fact?

That in the past fifty years the Nicholls Estate has contributed to hospitalization in Peterborough more than $1,250,000, and that Peterborough ratepayers have only provided $58,800 towards the upkeep of Nicholls Hospital.

That in the past five years patients from Peterborough County have totalled only 24.5 per cent. of those admitted to the hospital and for a new hospital Peterborough County is willing to contribute $150,000 or one-quarter the amount asked from the taxpayers of Peterborough and one-half the amount asked from the home owners of this city.

That Peterborough County has only half the population of the City of Peterborough.

WORKS AT BARRIEFIELD — Pte. Barbara Stewart, CWAC, is stationed at Barriefield, where she is on the telephone exchange switchboard. She left school to enlist 2½ years ago, and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Gillespie Stewart.

QUALIFIES—W. Ken Sloane, Peterborough businessman, who is one of the candidates seeking election to the City Council.

David Curtin Gets Acclamation

KINMOUNT, Nov. 27—(ENS).—At the nomination for municipal council of Galway and Cavendish, held in Parish Hall on Friday, the present reeve, David Curtin, received his seventh consecutive acclamation.

Five were nominated for councillors, the four present council, Frank Flaherty, Peter Pearson, Charles Molyneaux, Robert Allen and one new nominee, Lester Hickey.

An election will be held December 4th.

Allan Heideman Named A Major

Lt.-Col. Robert J. Bolton, officer commanding the Prince of Wales Rangers at Vernon, British Columbia, has announced that Captain Allan H. Heideman has been promoted to the rank of major. Major Heideman is one of the few remaining Peterborough officers who joined the unit on mobilization. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Heideman, 617 Water street.

It was also announced that Major L. C. Bateman, of Peterborough, and Major Heideman would be proceeding overseas as reinforcement officers in the near future.

Dr. Benjamin Fife Dies In Toronto

TORONTO, Nov. 27.—(CP).—Dr. Benjamin O. Fife, dental practitioner in Toronto for many years, died suddenly at his home yesterday.

He was born at Indian River, near Peterborough, Ont., where he received his early education. He was a graduate of the Faculty of Dentistry, University of Toronto. Dr. Fife served on the staff of the Royal Canadian Dental College for 25 years.

He is survived by his widow, a daughter and a son. A brother, Frederick, lives at Peterborough.

Raps Switzerland

MOSCOW, Nov. 27.—(AP).—The Communist newspaper Pravda, quoting statistics of Swiss armament production for Germany, declared yesterday that "these facts tear the hypocritical mask of 'neutrality' from 'democratic' Switzerland which has been one of the most active assistants of German Fascism."

Plumbers Meet In City For Convention

That the stock of salvageable plumbing and heating materials used during the war in the military camps, wartime houses and other buildings should be directed through the established channels of trade, was one of the resolutions adopted at the regional convention of the National Association of Master Plumbers and Heating Contractors at the Empress Hotel on Saturday.

The proposal was directed to the Government requesting that the authority of the War Assets Corporation, set up for the uprpose of disposing of the vast quantities of building materials and other equipment acquired by the Federal Government in the prosecution of the war, be extended to avoid dislocation of business in the involved process of returning to conditions of peace.

One of the possibilities apprehended by the trade is that such plumbing and heating materials as salvage might fall into the hands of dealers in scrap metal to the detriment of the manufacturers and of the jobbing and retail branches of the business.

Wartime Shacks.

Harry A. Weintraub, Toronto, said it was "too bad" the association was not formed prior to the war. "I don't think we would have had the 15,000 Wartime Housing shacks that are scattered all over the country." He referred especially to the type of plumbing adopted by Crown company, and said that the Wartime houses were a threat of "slum conditions," and that in Toronto better houses had been torn down to eliminate development of slums.

"About the trade here in Peterborough, I was talking to two Toronto plumbers, and they told me the Peterborough plumbers were all right, and were doing good work, but they also said the plumbing inspector here (A. G. Metheral) was tough. And they added that they were satisfied if they never got any more Peterborough jobs."

National Officers.

J. Fred Whitehead of Hamilton, president of the Ontario branch of the Association, and Fred. O. Goodfellow of Peterborough were joint chairmen of the sessions, morning, afternoon and evening. Mr. Whitehead was also chairman of the luncheon and evening dinner. Mayor Hamilton extended a civic welcome to the regional members and visiting national officers.

C. H. Hodge, editor of Farmers' Magazine, was the guest speaker at the luncheon. He said that many farmers in this province were definitely planning for the improvement of their homes after the war. They had been investing their money in Victory bonds, helping to win the war by greatly increased production, and the plumbing and heating industry should know farmers will have a substantial buying power after the war.

Of 133 Farm Forum groups who were queried last spring, 63 wanted their homes equipped with running water, 57 other groups wanted hot air heating; and 19 groups were thinking of steam heating. Farm needs have been accumulating under the restrictions imposed on do-

PERSONAL LOANS $20 TO $500

How to borrow without endorsers—Take up to 15 months to repay—12 monthly instalments of $9.46 each repay $100 loan in full

SHORT of cash? Need $100, $200 or more? Here's a loan plan that can help you solve your problem. You may borrow quickly and privately—and repay on the monthly schedule that suits you best. To apply for the amount you need you merely give us a few facts about yourself and your work. No endorsers or guarantors are ever required. We lend—to men and to women—largely on character and earning ability.

Payments to fit your budget

Notice in the table below that you may repay your loan in 2 to 15 monthly instalments. It's wise to repay as rapidly as your income and expenses permit. The sooner you repay the less your loan costs. A $100 loan repaid in twelve monthly instalments of $9.46 each—a total of $113.52—costs $13.52. If repaid in six monthly instalments of $17.85 each a $100 loan costs only $7.10. You are also welcome to repay your loan ahead of schedule at any time to reduce the cost. Payments shown in the table repay principal and charges. Our rate of charge (given below) includes everything. You pay nothing more—no hidden charges, no fees or extras of any kind.

Get cash to pay your bills

You may use your Household Finance loan to pay old debts, taxes, doctor bill, insurance premiums, make repairs, help relatives—for almost any purpose. If you have a money problem, phone, write or visit Household Finance.

Baby Band Hears Of Mission Work

An incentive to the George Street Baby Band, in their work, was presented by Mrs. F. W. K. Harris, special speaker at their regular meeting. She gave several interesting facts about Women's Missionary Society work, using illustrations from the lives of missionaries.

She showed what is actually being accomplished, contrasting the living conditions of several years ago, and of the present time. Mrs. Harris said that 49 per cent of the population of Canada is not Anglo-Saxon, and presented a great challenge, to show them the Christian way of living. She asked that it also be remembered that people from other countries had made wonderful contributions to Canada.

Mrs. H. Nicholls, McDonnel street, was hostess for the meeting, which opened with the reading of Psalm 128. Mrs. Mary Richardson played a piano solo, and Mrs. R. Kitchen sang a solo. At the close, the hostess served refreshments.

THE TEA HOUR GOSSIP . . . .

"He is getting the best meals that any soldier ever got anywhere." That is a warm and comforting thought for any wife or mother. But, out in the Pacific, across the Atlantic, up north, down south, our boys are dreaming of the good things mother used to make, pies, hot biscuits and chocolate cake with thick frosting and they are counting the days until they will be home again. That is why I am giving you the recipes below, so you will be able to serve what the boys like, when they come home.

Chocolate Cake

Gradually add ½ cup hot water to ½ cup of cocoa, stirring until blended, cool. Cream together ½ cup or shortening, 1 and 2-3 cups of sugar. Add 2 egg yolks and one whole egg, one at a time, beating after each. Then add cocoa mixture. Sift together 2 cups flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, ¼ teaspoon baking soda, ½ teaspoon salt. Add alternately with one cup of sour milk to creamed mixture. Add ¾ of a teaspoon each of almond and vanilla extracts. Pour into 2 greased layer tins. Bake in a moderate oven 35-40 minutes. Cool and frost.

Mom's Special Pot Roast

Trim fat from 3 to 5 lbs. beef chuck. Mix 2 teaspoons each, poultry seasoning and salt, ½ teaspoon dry mustard, 1 tablespoon brown sugar, 2 tablespoons flour. Rub into the beef. Brown ½ cup sliced onion in tdie-out fat. Add 1 cup water, Place rack under beef and cover. Simmer 3 or 4 hours, adding water if necessary. One hour before total cooking time is completed, add 8 halved carrots, 8 small onions and 8 potatoes. Thicken stock with flour.

Lemon Pie

1 cup sugar, 1 cup boiling water, 1 tablespoon cornstarch, 1 teaspoon butter, 2 egg yolks (2 lemons), juice of 2 lemons, grated rind of one. Mix cornstarch and sugar and add boiling water, stirring constantly. Cook for two minutes, then add the butter, the egg yolks and lemon juice and rind. Bake the crust separately and pour in the filling which has been cooled. Cover with meringue. Put in oven and brown.

This Week's Best Wartime Recipe

Contributed By Mary Moore Readers

DEAR MARY MOORE: I got this recipe from a bulletin and have changed it to suit myself and now am sending it on because it is so economical.

One-Egg Jelly Cake.

Two cups sifted all-purpose or cake flour, 2½ teaspoons baking powder, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1-3 cup shortening, ½ cup granulated sugar, ½ cup corn syrup, 1 unbeaten egg, ½ cup milk plus 1 tablespoon, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1½ cups your favorite jam or jelly—I like red currant. Sift flour, baking powder and salt together three times. Cream shortening until lift and fluffy, and sift sugar gradually into it, then corn syrup while continuing to work. Sift in ½ cup of the flour mixture, stirring just until smooth. Add egg and beat well. Add remaining flour mixture alternately with the milk, then vanilla. Bake in greased and floured (or papered) layer cake tins at 375 deg. Fahr. for 25 to 30 minutes. Turn out on cake cooler. When ready to serve split each layer, putting them together with jelly, and sprinkling top with powdered sugar. Of course, this may be put together with cream filling and frosted but sometimes you have jelly when you don't have sugar to spare.—M.J.

A grand everyday cake recipe that every mother should be able to hand to her daughter with confidence that it will turn out right. Thank you.

Airforce Couple Wed In Sydney

A military wedding of interest took place in the W.D. canteen at the R.C.A.F. station, Sydney, N.S., on Thursday, when W.O. 2, Leonard Gordon Smith, R.C.A.F., took as his bride AW1 June Louise Perry, R.C.A.F. (W.D.) The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Byers Smith, 228 Perry street, Peterborough, and the bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Perry, of Lethbridge, Alta. Both are stationed at Sydney.

One section of the canteen was decorated as a chapel for the ceremany, with Flt. Lieut. Dean, the station padre, officiating. Given in marriage by Flight Sgt. Olding, the bride wore her Airforce uniform, and a corsage of red roses and white carnations. She was attended by AW1 Donna Hornsby, R.C.A.F. (W.D.), who also was dressed in uniform, and had corsage of white carnations. P.O. L. Lewis, R.C.A.F. was best man.

There were about 75 guests at the reception, held in the other section of the canteen. Among the special guests were Wren Nellie Smith, W.R.C.N.S., sister of the groom, the C.O. of the station, Group Captain Taylor, and the boys and girls of the station were all present. Section Officer McMurchie R.C.A.F. (W.D.), the messing officer, was in charge of the refreshments.

En route to Peterborough on their wedding trip, the couple stopped off at Montreal for a short visit. They are now visiting the groom's parents for a few days, before returning to their posts at Sydney.

REBUILD SHOREHAM BEACH

SHOREHAM-BY-SEA, England — (CP). — Shoreham Beach, popular Sussex beach resort in front of this town, was destroyed by the military in 1940 for defence purposes. Now steps are under way to see if it can't be reconstructed.

Why Most Young Mothers
Use this External Way To Relieve Miseries of Children's Colds

STARTS TO WORK RIGHT AWAY.. KEEPS ON WORKING FOR HOURS!
Promptly Helps Relieve Coughing Spasms, Muscular Soreness or Tightness, Congestion and Irritation in Bronchial Tubes
It's really dangerous to neglect a child's cold! Most modern mothers know this.
That's why they turn to the time-tested home remedy for relieving miseries of children's colds —Vicks VapoRub. Experience has taught them what to expect when they rub VapoRub on throat, chest and back at bedtime.
Almost at once—in 3 minutes or less—the penetrating-stimulating action of VapoRub (explained above) starts bringing relief.
For hours this grand double-action keeps on working. Invites restful, refreshing, strengthening sleep. And often by morning most of the misery of the cold is gone.
Now when anyone in your family—child or grown-up—catches a cold, do what most modern mothers do, and use dependable VICKS VAPORUB

HALF-WASHED!"

GET BRIGHTER WASHES —SAFELY!
IT'S wonderful to use Sunlight after you've been struggling to get extra-dirty spots really clean. What a difference! Just the touch of this amazing soap instantly leaves a film of soap where it comes in contact with the dirt . . . and as you wash, Sunlight whips up into the richest, deepest-cleansing lather you ever saw. Clothes come brighter all over! No one can say your clothes look "half-washed"! Sunlight's marvelous for dishes, too. And so easy on your hands.

DOROTHY DIX . . . .

BEWARE OF WISHY-WASHY MEN

Soldier Blown About by Every Passion Is Not Good Husband Material.

DEAR MISS DIX — About two years ago my daughter met and fell in love with a young man who appeared to be in love with her, though there was no definite understanding. He was inducted into the army and for a while he wrote to her. Then he stopped. Twice he came home on furloughs, but never came to see her. Then, suddenly, he appeared again on the scene and gave her a whirlwind courtship and they became engaged.

He returned to his base and wrote breaking off the engagement. Said there was another girl. Then he made up again, and so on. So my daughter doesn't know where she stands and is very unhappy over the affair? What would you advise her to do?

MOTHER

Break Off the Affair

ANSWER—I would earnestly advise her to call off the whole affair and to break definitely and for good with the young man. Evidently he is one of the wishy-washy kind of people who never know their own minds and who are blown about by every gust of passion.

No woman can be happy with the on again, off again, gone again husband. What a wife wants in marriage is security. She wants to feel that her husband is loyal to her and that she can trust him anywhere, under any circumstances and amidst any conditions. No women are more unhappy than those who continually have to be forgiving their husbands for their philanderings and trying to befool themselves into believing their husbands' promises that they will never look at another woman again.

This young man upon whom your daughter has set her heart is poor husband material, and while it may cause her a wrench to break with him and some heartaches and bitter tears now, it will save her from the cruelest torment that a woman ever endures, and that is never being certain of a husband's affections and whether she is the current love or some other woman has temporary possession of his heart.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—I am 23 years old. I married a service man and soon after he was sent overseas, I was notified that he had been killed in action. I waited a year and then was remarried. My second husband was also called into the service. Now I have received a cable from my first husband saying that he is alive and well and on his way home. My second husband knows of this, but my first husband, whom I believed dead, doesn't know of my second marriage.

Now I can't be sure which one means the most to me. There are no children involved in either marriage. Should I notify my first husband of my second marriage? I am at a loss to know what to do.

BEWILDERED WIFE.

ANSWER — Certainly you should cable your No. 1 husband at once that, believing him dead, you had married again. For it would be too cruel a shock to let him come home thinking that he was returning to a waiting wife and to discover that she had consoled herself with another mate.

Your conduct in the whole matter has been blameless and if anybody is at fault in this queer mixup, it is your first husband who let you believe him to be dead when he was very much alive. He certainly showed little consideration for your feelings if he let you mourn him as lost when he could have saved you the tears of widowhood by writing to you that he was safe and well.

So in trying to decide between the two husbands and pick out the one you want to keep, you will do well to consider the temperaments and characteristics of the two men and which one will be the safest to tie to.

THE STARS SAY . . . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Tuesday, November 28

Conflicting testimonies are found in this day's astrological map. There are indications of definite progress and expansion in credit, money matters, constructive work, as well as in all the finer things, concerning social, domestic, affectional and artistic associations and ambitions. All should advance by the exercise of novel or original methods and in connection with large corporations or public relations. But impulsive or angry words and deeds would fail. Be circumspect and cautious in all activities, sincere and charming in romance.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year in which their own able and sensible tactics may win out against certain threatened dangers. This may menace from impetuous rash or disagreeable conduct, in both business and private relations. With originality innovation and determined efforts it is probable that influential personages may be graciously cooperative. Cultivate these by tact and charm, generously stimulated at this time, even to the exalting heights of romance, and affectional fulfilments.

A child born on this day should have many excellent talents, artistic, scientific and inventive, with charm and grace to win support from high places. Sincerity, efficiency and originality should assist to a happy career.

Anthony Voisin Dies At Age 102

KITCHENER, Nov 27 —Anthony (Tony) Voisin, oldest citizen in this community died early Saturday morning in his 102nd year, from effects of a stroke suffered Friday. He lived with his son, Louis, and marked his 101st birthday on Sept. 17.

Until a week ago, when his health began to fail, Mr. Voisin shaved himself with a straight razor, regularly listened to radio programs and read without the aid of glasses. He was a son of the late Joseph Voisin and the former Kathryn Maher. He was born at St. Clements and moved to Formosa when 23

Suspects Reason

WHEATLEY HILL, Durham, Eng., Nov. 27.— (CP).— Emanuel Shinwell, Labor Member of Parliament, protested in a speech here yesterday against "unwarranted interference" with the resistance movements in France and Belgium, asserting that he refused to believe they were suppressed for military reasons. "It was because they demanded the nationalization of banks and industries and the end of the infamous rule of reactionaries," he said.

Here's how you can get a NEW MODERN HOSPITAL For Less than HALF-PRICE!

Everyone agrees that Peterborough needs a new hospital. Based on our population, authorities estimate that a fully equipped modern hospital with the minimum number of beds required will cost....$1,400,000.

BUT—Peterborough taxpayers are only going to be asked to vote less than half this amount —or ONLY $600,000.—BECAUSE—

(1) The County of Peterborough has agreed to pay $150,000 towards the new hospital. As half the Peterborough amount will be paid by Business Firms and Industrial Companies, this means our County neighbours, who bring so much business into the City, will actually be putting up one dollar for every two put up by Peterborough householders	$ 150,000
(2) If you agree on Election Day, $300,000 will be transferred from the funds of the City Trust to the Hospital Fund	300,000
(3) The Trustees of Nicholls Hospital have agreed to turn over its Trust Fund of $250,000 to the new hospital as a memorial to Mrs. Nicholls. This, in addition to its land, buildings and equipment	250,000
(4) The Peterborough Public Utilities Commission have offered to donate $50,000 from its surplus account	50,000
(5) The Department of Health of the Province of Ontario will provide $50,000 in accordance with its Hospital Building Program	50,000
TOTAL ALREADY AVAILABLE - - - -	$ 800,000
Estimated Cost of New Hospital - - - - -	1,400,000
BALANCE NEEDED—Only - - - -	$ 600,000

Truly A Hospital At LESS Than Half Price

what does this mean to YOU?

1. It means BETTER HOSPITALIZATION for you, your family and neighbors. It means that when you need a hospital you'll have the best in the land with the best facilities, best equipment. When you are sick makeshifts won't do.
VOTE "FOR" THE HOSPITAL

2. It means ECONOMICAL HOSPITALIZATION. The Hospital By-Law will call for $600,000 of 3% Debentures payable in 20 years. This will mean approximately 1½ mills on the tax rate. As the average residential assessment is $2,000, this will mean an annual average cost to householders of 6c a week—less than 1c a day.
VOTE "FOR" THE HOSPITAL

3. It means THE COUNTY PAYS ITS FAIR SHARE for the first time. Up until now the County hasn't contributed to Peterborough's hospital cost. Now it is going to pay its share as outlined above. This makes your share less.
VOTE "FOR" THE HOSPITAL

4. It means INDUSTRY AND BUSINESS PAYS HALF THE COST. Half of the assessment in Peterborough is on business property. Consequently, half the cost of the hospital will be borne by Business Firms. This means that actually the householders are getting $1,400,000 worth of hospital for $300,000—or less than ¼ of the total.
VOTE "FOR" THE HOSPITAL

5. It means HOSPITALIZATION FOR EVERYONE. When you need a hospital you need it badly. At the present time 50 patients are waiting to get into Nicholls hospital. EVERYONE will be taken care of promptly.
VOTE "FOR" THE HOSPITAL

6. It means THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN LIFE AND DEATH FOR YOUR FELLOW CITIZENS—PERHAPS YOU. It means comfort for the ailing, hope for young and old. It means Humanity!
ALL FOR THE COST OF A CHOCOLATE BAR—6c A WEEK.

OBITUARIES

MRS. MARY MICKS

The funeral was held today for Mrs. Mary Micks, formerly Mary Gordon, 425 Stewart street, who passed away Saturday afternoon in Nicholls Hospital after a short illness. She was in her 86th year.

Held from the family residence, 425 Stewart street at two o'clock, burial was in Little Lake Cemetery.

Born in Omemee, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Gordon, she has resided in Peterborough about 45 years, previously living in Winnipeg for some time. Her husband, A. E. Micks, predeceased her in 1934.

Mrs. Micks was a member of George Street United Church, and also a life member of the Missionary Society, a member of the Women's Association, and an ardent worker in all church affairs.

She leaves to mourn her loss one step-daughter, Mrs. C. G. Thomson, of Collingwood, and one grandson, Gordon E. Thomson, with the H.Q. staff in Belgium.

The pall-bearers were F. Bronscombe, M. McIntyre, L. Mark, A. Northey, P. Hetherington, and H. Bonney.

JOHN McMURRAY

The funeral of John McMurray, life-long resident of Douro, who died early Thursday morning in his 90th year, was held from his residence, lot 14, concession 1, Douro, to St. Joseph's Church, where Requiem Mass was offered by the pastor, Rev. J. J. McCarthy.

The presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends at the service and the numerous spiritual tokens presented to the family at his late home testified to the high esteem he enjoyed in the community.

Mr. McMurray was a member of the Holy Name Society ever since it was organized and as a mark of respect the Society attended in a body at the services in the church and cemetery.

Interment took place in St. Joseph's Cemetery. Rev. J. J. McCarthy conducted the services at the graveside. Pallbearers were Thomas J. McMurray, Joseph McMurray and William McMurray, Frank McMahon, Thomas McMurray, Roddie Culbertson.

MICHAEL DONOGHUE

A resident of Peterborough for 11 years, Michael Donoghue passed away in the House of Providence, Sunday, after a lengthy illness. He was in his 86th year.

Mr. Donoghue was born in Downeyville, the son of the late Hugh Donoghue and Catherine Jordon. Before coming to Peterborough, he lived for a time in Lindsay and Downeyville.

The remains are resting in the parlors of the House of Providence. The funeral will be Tuesday morning with Requiem Mass at 10 o'clock. Interment will be in St. Peter's Cemetery.

ROY DAVID DWYER

The funeral was held Saturday afternoon of Roy David Dwyer, beloved son of Mrs. Mary Dwyer, 231 George street, who passed away early Friday morning in his sixth year, after only a brief illness.

He was born in Peterborough, and attended the kindergarten of Central School. The funeral was held from the Nisbett Funeral Home, 347 Charlotte street, and burial took place in Little Lake Cemetery. School playmates from Central School acted as pall-bearers for the child, and they were William Duffy, Frank Bandanburg, Jeddie Thompson, Ronlad Bandanburg. Rev. F. Craik, of St. James' United Church, conducted the service.

The little boy is survived by his mother, a sister, Mrs. Kenneth Masters, and a brother, Arthur Dwyer.

MRS. WILLIAM JOHNSTON

The funeral of the late Mrs. Madeline Johnston, wife of William Johnston, R.R. 2, Omemee, was held on Friday from the Comstock Funeral Homes with interment in St. John's cemetery, Ida. The service was in charge of the Rev. W. E. Honey. Mrs. Johnston, who was in her 67th year had suffered from a lingering illness. Born in Smith township she was the daughter of the late Henry and Mary Head.

Pallbearers were Ross Latimer, George Hooten, Sidney Connell, Arthur Rutherford, Vincent Jones, and Robert Johnston.

There survives her husband, one daughter (Mabel) Mrs. Bert Foster, one son Stanley with the R.A.F. in the Middle East, one sister, Mrs. Harriett Petty and one brother, William Head, both of Peterborough.

Completes Probe

VANCOUVER, Nov. 27.—(CP). — Lt.-Gen. E. W. Sansom left for Ottawa by plane yesterday after completing an investigation into recent statements of Pacific coast officers on recruiting. Gen. Sansom made no comment on his probe. Local army officials emphasized he came in "a fact-finding rather than judicial capacity." It is believed Gen. Sansom's report will be made to the army council in Ottawa.

Hockey Moguls Discuss Rules

TORONTO, Nov. 27—(CP)—New regulations regarding discharged servicemen were discussed at an informal meeting of officers of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association here last night and will be presented to the CAHA executive for addition to the present rules, W. A. Hewitt, registrar-treasurer of the association, said today.

The new rulings make servicemen discharged eligible to play in any series of the CAHA in their age category. These men will be regarded as free agents and will be entitled to select which club they wish to play for.

Clubs which have already registered the maximum number of players will be permitted to replace one or more of their players by men released from service. Also included in the proposed regulations is a clause allowing players on leave awaiting discharge to be considered as discharged for the purpose of the proposed regulation.

The regulation does not permit men on furlough to play for CAHA clubs, and such servicemen who are property of professional hockey teams shall revert to those clubs, unless they have been re-instated in the CAHA.

Sports Editor Dies

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 27—(AP)—Ed Frayne, 51, former sports editor, died of a heart attack at his home in Van Nuys, Calif., last night. Frayne, born in Brooklyn, N.Y., was sports editor of the Los Angeles Record and later, from 1926 to 1939, was sports editor of the New York American. In 1939 he returned to California and brought the Turlock Journal, which he owned and published for a year, he then retired.

Times Carries On

LONDON, Nov. 27—(CP-Reuter).—Today the Times of London issued its 50,000th consecutive edition. For nearly 160 years the Times has never missed a single issue and as far is known, it is the only newspaper still in existence to reach the 50,000 mark.

Plumbers Meet

mestic building and improvement during the war. Farmers knew that their first interests were in their own homes, and investing improvements in them, but it as likely that after the war a busy lot of stock salesmen would be after the farmer's accumulated funds which he had been saving in accordance with the Government's appeal to prevent wartime inflation.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics disclosed the farm income for all Canada in 1943 to be $1,300,000,000, indicating that a large number of farmers were potential buyers for after the war at reasonable costs.

Soil Pipe Unused.

Charles E. W. Watson, Montreal, national president, reported that stocks of soil pipe acquired by the Government for wartime purposes were still unused at Sarnia and Halifax. Representations were made to the Federal authorities, bringing the reply that inventories would be taken at once, and any surplus stocks would be re-allocated through the War Assets Corporation and made available to the public.

Labor Shortage.

J. P. Dwyer, Toronto, of National Selective Service, told the convention that the demand for labor continued greatly in excess of the supply. Ontario reports for this last week showed that applications had been received for 43,000 male workers of A and B priorities, but the actual number of workers applying was only 3,000. Malleable iron workers were being brought from Western Canada to help that industry in the east. Present pressure of demand was especially for the shell filling plants.

Scarcity of workers continued, Mr. Dwyer said, not because of, but in spite of, Selective Service.

According to a United States estimate four million persons would be temporarily out of employment in that country within 30 days of the cessation of hostilities. In his personal opinion, Mr. Dwyer said, a proportional dislocation might develop in Canada shortly after the war ended. He informed the association that approximately 30 per cent of Ontario's population was now enrolled under the provisions provisions of Federal Unemployment Insurance.

Enactment of a uniform sanitary code for Ontario was proposed to the Provincial Government in one of the convention's resolutions. City Engineer Parsons addressed the morning session.

In the vote of thanks to the Peterborough branch for its hospitality, including a sightseeing tour of the city, Mr. Watson especially mentioned the excellent service of the Empress Hotel, the courtesy of the staff, and the friendly atmosphere. "I have never been in any hotel where I was so well treated as right here in the Empress," he said.

Rfmn. D. Cane Wounded

COBOURG, Nov. 27 — (ENS) — Word has been received by Mr. and Mrs. William Cane that their son, Rifleman Douglas Cane has been wounded in Northern Europe. He is a member of the Winnipeg Rifles and is 19 years of age. A brother, Alfred, was wounded in Holland last month. Rifleman Cane enlisted in 1942 and went overseas in July of last year. He is one of five brothers in the army.

DEAR MISS DIX—I have been married eleven years and am a good wife, mother, housekeeper and business assistant. I make good on all of these counts, but I seem to fall down on being a woman, for my husband seems to regard me as only a household convenience and a super-saleswoman. He never shows me any affection and never takes me out anywhere for an evening if he can help himself. He never pays me a compliment, yet he depends on my judgment in business. Otherwise I think I bore him to extinction. What's the matter?

ANSWER—Perhaps you and your husband see too much of each other and he is fed up with your society. Or perhaps he is jealous of your being a better business man than he is. Few men enjoy looking up to their wives.

FEW HANDS ARE BLANK

YOU HEAR a lot of people say "I held a Yarborough," but seldom is that true. The expression dates from an offer of 1,000 to 1 which a certain Lord Yarborough is supposed to have made nearly a hundred years ago that in the next Whist deal you would have at least one honor. The odds should have been more than 1,600 to 1, for that is the frequency with which honorless hands appear. So if one opponent has doubled or otherwise indicated possession of most of the high honor strength which is out, it usually pays to count his partner for lower honors which were not a necessary part of the other fellow's action.

West led his heart K. South took it with the dummy's A after noting that he still had a heart stopper left if the suit got led again to him from the West. Counting up his tricks, he saw two sure in spades, one already scored in hearts, three in clubs, and therefore, as he reckoned, three needed in diamonds. He banished the idea of trying for an even break in clubs because that was a minority chance of about 6 to 4 against him, whereas he reckoned that finding the diamond Q well placed was better than even, due to West's double. Then there was always the chance that West might lead hearts to him, to produce a trick.

So he took in his club A and K for the second and third tricks, then led the diamond 8 and finessed the J. East won with the Q, returned his heart through South, and thus gave his side four tricks in that suit. The diamond A then set South a second trick.

The probability that East had the diamond Q was very likely greater than that the clubs would fail to spit. If South had figured that way, and had played the K when West played low on the diamond lead, he would have made his contract. For the clubs would have broken, giving him right there the five tricks he needed in addition to the four in the other suits.

Fliers Rush for Ground Jobs

OTTAWA, Nov. 28—(CP).—An increasing flow of airmen back from overseas is resulting in a steady demobilization of RCAF administrative officers from Commonwealth training plan stations throughout Canada but the discharge of non-flying personnel overseas is slower, an Air Force spokesman said today. Previous to the November 17 partial demobilization announcement, there had been scattered discharge of administrative personnel who had either lost their essentiality to the Air Force or were needed in essential industry or both.

But under the November 17 announcement:

1. Non-flying personnel in Canada who submit their application for return to civil life could be demobilized if they were no longer needed or repatriated airmen were available to take their places.

2. Where administrative surpluses developed in Canada as a result of the gradual closing down of the training plan and the increasing flow of repatriates from overseas, administrative discharges will be mandatory.

Can Go Home.

3. Overseas administrative officers with more than three years' service overseas will be repatriated for demobilization unless they wish to remain in Britain and if "suitable employment" is available there.

4. Administrative officers with less than three years' service overseas will be sent home if they so desire or if they become surplus to Air Force requirements.

The partial demobilization program includes a plan by which repatriated aircrew have an option of discharge or succeeding administrative officers in ground posts. With a decreasing need of aircrew to staff the reduced air training plan there is a rush of fliers for ground jobs in Canada.

However, aircrew must first qualify as administrative officers before taking these posts, and when they are unsuccessful they stand a chance of being discharged if there are no flying berths available. This discharge does not bar them from posts in the post-war R.C.A.F.

Death Toll Grows Rapidly After Munitions Blast

BURTON-ON-TRENT, England, Nov. 28—(CP).—Estimates of the death toll in yesterday's explosion of an RAF underground bomb dump still ranged from 20 to more than 250 today. A former British Army officer declared "enough bombs for hundreds of major raids on Germany" were detonated in the blast. Scores of persons "simply have disappeared and until we can check up on them we are unable to say whether they are dead or alive," a Burton policeman said. The Press Association said the toll might mount to 250 or more.

One bomb burst and the rush of air apparently acted as a detonator for all the bombs in the dump, situated near Burton. This detonating wave underground caused the earthquake effect felt several miles away, driving many persons to air raid shelters.

The blast shook the entire countryside like an earthquake, and sent bombs high into the sky. They rained down like a large-scale enemy bombardment.

Scores were trapped in wreckage. Rescuers tunneled through rubble to bring out safely 40 persons buried in a munitions works near the scene.

Cows Killed

Windows 32 miles away were broken by the explosion, one of Britain's worst in the war. Secondary blasts followed.

Craters torn out by falling bombs hampered rescue workers.

Hundreds of cows were reported killed. Buildings, trees and telegraph poles in the vicinity were hurled into the air and shattered.

A cement factory was destroyed. Buildings at the bomb depot simply disappeared.

"Nothing like it was ever seen on a battlefield," a witness said. 'Roads are churned up. Part of a village is gone; the rest is rubble. It looks as though every house had a direct bomb hit. Everywhere there are craters."

BRIG. MESS RESIGNS

OTTAWA—Brig. James Mess, deputy adjutant-general in charge of recruiting, has resigned and his resignation will become effective Dec. 20, Defence Headquarters announced today.

PREMIER KING

Col. J. L. Ralston, former defence minister, was asked to head the government and take the responsibility for a conscription policy but would not do so. Other cabinet ministers also declined to head the government.

Canada faced the possibility of "anarchy" unless the House of Commons could unite behind a government that could carry on.

Canadian soldiers now were among Allied troops fighting on German soil in some measure.

Home defence troops ordered overseas may convert to general service by volunteering up to the time of embarkation.

His resignation as Prime Minister would be forthcoming if he did not get the support of a large majority of his own party on a vote of confidence motion.

He had never sought to appease Quebec or to please one province rather than another, but he attempted to have the people understand Quebec.

GORDON GRAYDON
Progressive Conservative Leader

The crisis was a reinforcement crisis and it could have been solved itself had it had the courage to do so without creating the distress it created.

The Progressive Conservatives believed the government should have made all draftees available for overseas service.

The House had lost confidence in the Prime Minister.

His party's amendment to the vote of confidence motion declared that the government had failed to obtain adequate reinforcements by

Huns Backtrack Across Italy

ROME, Nov. 28 — (AP).—British troops of the 8th Army have driven most of the Germans from the Lamone River's east bank to positions on the opposite side in the Albereto region five miles north-east of Faenza, Allied Headquarters said to-day.

New rainfall brought fresh mud to the front.

South-west of Faenza patrols crossed the Lamone and established contact with the Germans on high ground beyond.

On the eastern sector of the 5th Army front Indian troops pushing north-west of Modigliana against slight opposition captured Casale, less than 10 miles south of Faenza.

Patrols were reported active along the remainder of the front.

Tried To Promote Harmony
Prime Minister King Uses Words Of Laurier

OTTAWA, Nov. 28. — (CP).) — Prime Minister Mackenzie King yesterday concluded his address to Parliament with a quote from a speech the late Sir Wilfrid Laurier made 44 years ago while serving as Canadian Prime Minister at the head of a Liberal Government.

Mr. King quoted Sir Wilfrid as saying:

"'If there is anything to which I have devoted my political life, it is to try to promote unity, harmony and amity between the diverse elements of this country. My friends can desert me, they can remove their confidence from me, they can withdraw the trust they have placed in my hands, but never shall I deviate from that line of policy. Whatever may be the consequences, whether loss of prestige, loss of popularity, or loss of power, I feel that I am in the right, and I know that a time will come when every man will render me full justice on that score.'"

Mr. King said he wished to repeat "those words as my own, having in mind at this moment all that Sir Wilfrid Laurier meant to me as a leader, all that he meant to me as a friend, all that he meant to me as a great Canadian and a great statesman."

"I wish to use those words to this House of Commons today, and I want them to be words that will be remembered by my fellow citizens when I am gone."

Premier Says Anarchy May Result
Col. Ralston Slated To Give Views Before Vote Taken

By FRANK FLAHERTY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, Nov. 28 — (CP). — Just a few more speeches today will set the stage for one of the most momentous votes the House of Commons has taken in years.

The issue, defined yesterday in speeches by Prime Minister Mackenzie King and three opposition party leaders and in motions proposed by three of the four, is whether the government's plan to send 16,000 home defence troops overseas is to be approved or whether all 68,000 home defence troops are to be made immediately liable for service overseas.

Party leaders have spoken. It now remains for Col. J. L. Ralston, former defence minister who left the cabinet on the issue, and for a spokesman for the anti-conscriptionist Liberals, if one arises, to address the House before the principal points of view will be on a record and an appraisal of the results of the vote can be made.

Before further speeches, however, and over the protest on the Progressive Conservative members, a short secret session will be held at which Defence Minister McNaughton will give information on the overseas army reinforcement position which he declined to give in public.

In one of the more important speeches of his long political career yesterday, Mr. King passed the issue to the House as a whole and made it clear that if he did not receive a substantial vote of confidence the present government policy he would resign. He went on to predict that a resignation would almost inevitably lead to a general election, but only after a new government was installed which would see to the enforcement of conscription.

Mercy Killing

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 28 — (CP).—A two-year-old buck deer, wounded by some hunter's gun, wandered on to a pasture on the Bruce Douglas farm near Ilderton on Sunday. The deer was killed by blows from the hoofs of one of five horses in the pasture — the only horse which had been recently shod. Farmers call it a "mercy killing."

Soldier Rioters To Lose Pay At Terrace, B.C.

VANCOUVER, Nov. 28 —(CP)—A military spokesman at Terrace, B.C., today described draftee troops who have engaged in anti-conscription demonstrations there for three days as "mutineers" and said their pay and allowances have been stopped while they refuse to take orders from their officers.

(The brigade at Terrace is made up of a French-Canadian regiment from Quebec and English-speaking regiments from Saskatchewan and Prince Edward Island.)

The demonstrations at Terrace, 450 miles north of Vancouver, were the largest of a half-dozen in British Columbia during the week-end. The third day of the demonstrations at Terrace came to a close last night without violence and the spokesman at brigade headquarters indicated the present attitude among the men would be allowed to run its course providing there is no injury to civilians or damage to civilian property.

Carry Guns

A dispatch from Terrace said that draftee troops from the camp of a French-Canadian regiment began to parade at 1:30 p.m. Monday and marched for hours through the streets. They were not as noisy as in earlier parades but some carried Bren guns for the first time since the demonstrations began. The parade which was followed by officers in vehicles, stopped at a sawmill where a meeting was held.

Secret Session Brings Objection

OTTAWA, Nov. 28.—(CP).—Procedure on the holding of a short secret session of the Commons to discuss the reinforcement situation is expected to be discussed in the Commons to-day before the public is admitted.

The normal practice is that after the members assemble for the afternoon session the gallery doors remained closed until immediately after prayers.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King in proposing a secret session suggested last night that the secret meeting should start immediately after prayers. This would avoid the complication of having the public admitted to the galleries and then within a few minutes, having the galleries cleared, he said.

Several Progressive Conservative members objected to the holding of a secret session. The usual procedure in calling a secret session is for some member to report "I spy strangers" in the gallery.

The opponents to a secret session said with the galleries empty such a course could hardly be followed. Mr. King said he would propose, before the gallery doors are opened, that a secret session be held.

Speaker Glen announced at the adjournmest hour last night that the doors would be opened immediately after prayers but a decision would be reached on a secret ssesion.

Members of the Senate are admitted to the Commons during a secret meeting, but no report is taken of the discussions. The Senate is not scheduled to meet until to-night.

Allies Gain 4 Miles Into Reich
Huns Concentrate Reserves Before Cologne

By WILLIAM FRYE
Associated Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Nov. 28 — (AP). — Americans on the drenched Cologne plain reached the Roer River today and drove up to a mile into intricate German defences along the flooded stream while infantry of the 3rd Army advanced within 10 miles of Saarbrucken, arsenal capital of the Saar.

Surging forward in pre-dawn blackness, 1st Army infantry fought into the streets of Inden and Jungersdorf and close to Lamersdorf.

The only activity reported from the British 2nd Army front in Holland was continued probing of Venlo's defences and clearing of a pocket north of Venlo.

On the southern flank, Germans south of the Rhone-Rhine Canal in Alsace virtually were wiped out with the capture of Danne-Marie and several adjacent villages. Scattered resistance contained in the Vosges mountains where the U.S. 7th Army pressed forward through snow and mud.

British 2nd Army men in the north cleared a pocket north of Venlo and again probed the maze of defences before that Dutch road centre.

A Reuter News Agency dispatch today said parts of the 2nd's front were so quiet the only sound audible was the chirping of birds.

Germany had the bulk of her forces and her precious mobile reserves deployed on the Cologne plain. Advances accordingly were slow, for the fight there was a great battle of attrition and Gen. Eisenhower's maximum objective was to destroy the Germany army.

Weakened at Saar

The massing of German strength on an 18-mile sector beyond Aachen weakened the enemy before the Saar, rich in coal and steel, and it was here that Lt.-Gen. Patton threw his 3rd Army at this gateway into Germany. The 7th Army in part joined the 3rd in this offensive north of Saarebourg.

The 80th Infantry advanced 3½ miles capturing Seingbousse, 10 miles southwest of Saarbrucken, city of 135,000. The 95th Division moved within five miles of Saarlautern on the frontier.

The 3rd Army moved well beyond the captured road town of St. Avold and swept toward the German border along the entire Lorraine front, while exerting steady pressure on the 19-mile sector inside Germany beyond Luxembourg.

The 7th Army, its flanks secured by a break-through to the Rhine, sent tanks chasing withdrawing Germans north of Saarebourg. The Germans were under great pressure as they retreated toward the refuge of the Siegfried Line.

German concern for safety of the Saar was reflected in a Berlin

Civilian Casualties Number 136,116
One Of Every Three Homes Hit In Past 5 Years

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28—(AP).—Five years of war have cost England 733,030 casualties, 136,116 among civilians. One out of every three houses in Britain has been destroyed or damaged.

These figures are among many in a statistical White Paper released simultaneously in Washington and London to-day.

By the end of last year Great Britain lost 11,500,000 gross tons of shipping, two-thirds of the tonnage she had when war broke out in 1939.

Civilian casualties through last September 3 included 57,298 killed. Casualties among the armed forces totalled 563,112 with 176,081 killed. In addition 29,629 merchant seamen have been killed and 4,173 interned.

The White Paper reported that more than a third of all British men between 14 and 64 are in the armed forces and that nearly all the country's women between 14 and 59 are in uniform or in industry.

A 64-page document, the White Paper said Britain has produced 70 per cent of all munitions turned out by or supplied to the British commonwealth; 722 major warships, over 100,000 airplanes, over 25,000 tanks and nearly 4,000,000 machine guns and sub-machine guns.

Cost Heavy.

Lauding material aid from Canada and the United States, the White Paper said it permitted men and women to be taken from export production and put in uniform or war plants because cash no longer was required to pay for purchases from those countries.

Reviewing the financial cost of war, the White Paper said governmental expenditures have jumped from $4,000,000,000 in 1938 to $23,000,000,000 in 1943.

It pointed to sharply increased tax rates and heavy borrowing, adding that "although the government has in this way been able to raise the money needed for the prosecution of the war, the consequences on the economic structure of the country have been far-reaching."

In addition to war damage at home, the White Paper said, the government has sold assets abroad amounting to $4,260,000,000 and has added $9,200,000,000 in foreign debts.

Commercial exports from the United Kingdom, it said, have been halved in value. They dropped from $1,884,000,000 in 1938 to $928,000,000 last year.

"When allowance is made for the rise in prices," it added, "the quantity of exports was reduced to only 29 per cent over the 1938 level."

Pointing to the effect of the war on the civilian economy, the document said the total quantity of goods and services purchased by civilians has fallen 21 per cent, without taking into consideration quality deterioration.

4,500,000 Men Have Enlisted From British Isles

By E. FRASER WIGHTON
Reuter Staff Writer

LONDON, Nov. 28 — (CP-Reuter). — In five years of war, Britain's 45,000,000 citizens have produced more than 100,000 planes, nearly 6,000 naval vessels and 6,750,000 deadweight tons of merchant shipping, and raised a fighting force of 4,500,000 men.

The approach of victory has prompted the government to release today these impressive figures of the United Kingdom war effort.

Till now, they have been highly secret, but a White Paper issued today said:

"As a result of the change in the military situation, it is no longer necessary to withhold some of this information."

The government publication tells the story of John Bull in anger. It tells how, against a background of complete blackout, under a rain of bombs and shells, with homes shattered and broken, the ordinary man and woman forged the weapons for victorious war, saved immense sums and suffered and overcame many adversities.

The White Paper, prosaically entitled "statistics relating to the war effort of the United Kingdom," outlined Britain's achievements.

It told of the tremendous job done in making Britain self-sufficient agriculturally.

Land under the plow was increased from 8,813,000 acres in 1939 to $14,617,000 in 1944 to enable Britain "to maintain total food supplies at an adequate level while reducing imports of food by 50 per cent." The women's land army, with a strength of more than 80,000 during the middle of this year, played a big part in that work.

Youths Staged Silent Protest

MONTREAL, Nov. 28.—(CP). — A group of 700 young men last night staged a parade through Montreal streets and congregated at Phillips Square in the heart of the city where they stood silently for 15 minutes as a token of their opposition to conscription. The men carried a number of banners bearing various anti-conscription slogans in French.

Some read: "Down With Conscription," "Fight Conscription to the End," "Down With Imperialistic Dictatorship," and 'Why Conscription in Canada?", while stickers fastened to poles along the route of the parade asked: "Do You Want Conscription?"

The wording on the stickers added: "No! Wake up then. We prefer to live freely in our old Quebec rather than die victims of an anti-French confederation which is more imperialist than Canadian."

One of the leaders of the parade stood on the base of the statute of King Edward VII on Phillips Square and told the gathering that the purpose of the demonstration had been achieved in the silent protest. The youths then disbanded.

Meanest Thief

WINDSOR, Nov. 28—(CP).—A new candidate for the "meanest thief" title is the man who tendered the blind operator of a cigarette stand a bill in payment for a packet of cigarettes and asked change for a $2 bill. Leonard Springett, the salesman, put the bill to one side. Later, a friend told him it was a $1 bill.

Winter Weather Will Aid Russian Push
Reds Must Iron Out Flanks Before Attacking In Centre Of Line

By DEWITT MACKENIE
Associated Press War Analyst

With the whole Allied world hoping for an early end to the war against Germany, it's natural that there should be eager speculation as to when Russia is likely to strike again against the Vistula line, thereby putting the big squeeze on Hitler.

Moscow, is, of course, getting set for a fresh attack on these powerful German defences of which Warsaw has been one of the key positions. There are, however, several reasons why the Red Command might be disinclined to rush this great operation.

In the first place we must recognize that the Russians are maintaining a fighting front of maybe 1,000 miles—more than that if you count the far northern operations. On their right flank in the Baltic States and East Prussia, and on their left flank in the Balkans and Hungary, they've been waging heavy offensives, and those two campaigns in themselves have been a terrific load to carry.

plains of Eastern Europe through which the Vistula winds are freezing so that they will once more bear the weight of war machines. The fall rains turn this whole area into a sea of mud which is among the world's worst. Generally by this time the frosts have tightened up the terrain, and by about the mid-

Sea of Mud

Moreover—and this is important—it's only now that the great dle of December virtually all the rivers will be frozen so that the ice will bear the weight of troops and equipment.

However, apart from the mud and bad weather, it's understandable that the Red Command should want to iron out those two great flanks before making another drive against the German centre on the Vistula. Those flanks would constitute a danger to the Red advance in the middle.

Up on the northern flank the Russians still are in process of dealing with some 30 German divisions in Latvia. These forces must be eliminated or at least neutralized. But the big show, of course, has been the successful and highly profitable Red swing through the Northern Balkans and into Hungary, thereby aiming a battering-ram at the Danubian gateway into Austria. The importance of that drive can't be overemphasized.

The Red Army stands at the gates of the Hungarian capital of Budapest astride the Danube. Moscow reports today that the heavy snow, followed by a bad sleet storm, has slowed the Red attack but the fact remains that Budapest is in a precarious position.

The fall of this great rail and river centre, which is a distribution hub for Southeastern Europe, will open the route to the neighboring Austrian border. It will make invasion of Austria possible, thereby to the heart of Germany.

Stettinius Succeeds Hull
New Appointment Wins Wide Acclaim

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28—(AP)—Quick Senate confirmation was predicted today for the appointment of Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., as United States Secretary of State. Speed was indicated not only by the general acclaim which greeted President Roosevelt's chosen successor to Cordell Hull but also by the urgency of pending international problems, headed by the need to complete the Dumbarton Oaks plan for world security.

Chairman Tom Connally (Dem., Texas) summoned the Senate Foreign Relations committee to meet tomorrow and Vice-president Wallace said he is confident "the Senate will support the President's choice by confirming him unanimously."

At the state department the 44-year-old Stettinius, who has been Acting Secretary since Mr. Hull entered the Naval hospital at Bethesda, Md., buckled down to the enormous job confronting him in guiding American foreign policy into new fields of international co-operation.

With a Churchill-Roosevelt-Stalin meeting indefinitely delayed by the prolonged winter war in Europe, it is likely that the President will turn over to Mr. Stettinius the job of completing the Dumbarton Oaks plan either through diplomatic channels or in a conference with foreign minister of Britain, Russia and China.

151 Jap Ships Total Bag In November

PEARL HARBOR, Nov. 28—(AP) —The toll of Japanese ships sunk or damaged this month in relentless American carrier-plane raids on the Manila area stood at 151 today with upward revision of figures on Friday's attack which bagged 48 ships and 87 airplanes.

Admiral Nimitz in a communique added two ships sunk and 23 damaged to the earlier score.

The fight for Leyte Island slithered to a virtual standstill in the Ormoc corridor's mud as terrific rains fell, but U.S. planes based on the island dropped 235 tons of bombs on Japanese air installations on Cebu and Negros, and at Davao Friday, Gen. MacArthur's communique reported.

In the Friday blows on the Manila area, fighters and anti-aircraft batteries on American surface ships downed 58 Japanese planes, in addition to 29 more destroyed and 32 probably damaged on the ground.

Admiral Nimitz' communique listed the following vessels sunk in the attacks:

A heavy cruiser at Santa Cruz, on the west coast of Luzon; one destroyer at Santa Cruz; two old destroyers at Marinduque island, about 100 miles southeast of Manila; one destroyer escort; three medium landing ships 10 miles west of Santa Cruz; one cargo vessel north of San Fernando, a port 150 miles north of Manila; one small freighter off Subic Bay, 50 miles north of Manila; four oilers near Lubang Island, about 75 miles southeast of Manila; four small coastal freighters at Banton Island, 137 miles south of Manila; two luggers west of Bataan.

Sailors Upset Draftee Parade

OTTAWA, Nov. 28— (CP).—An anti-conscription parade of about 100 N.R.M.A. troops was broken up by active service troops, sailors and civilians last night within a few blocks of its starting point at nearby Lansdowne park.

The group formed up on a side street and, carrying signs reading "Down with conscription," printed in English, made their way up Bank street. Spectators said that at Bank and Clemon streets in Ottawa south two sailors and an active service soldier spotted the parade and mixed it with the paraders when their invitation to "step out and fight" was refused.

Arrival of city police squad cars, army provost cars and members of the naval shore patrol caused the demonstrators to flee. Police said no arrests were made and no serious injuries were reported.

An earlier report said the parade apparently was meant to travel through the centre of Ottawa to Parliament Hill.

M. J. COLDWELL—C.C.F. Leader

The C.C.F. party felt that wealth as well as manpower should be conscripted for an all-out war effort.

All parties in the House had repudiated conscription in 1939, but he now was convinced reinforcements were necessary and the voluntary system was inadequate.

Under the government's policy, Canada would have four different types of servicemen — general service personnel, volunteers for the European theatre, men drafted to the front line and home defence troops.

His party's sub-amendment to the confidence motion called for removal of all distinction between drafted and volunteer personnel in the army and total conscription of resources.

As stations close down in Canada, however, fewer administrative officers are needed and in some cases they will be automatically discharged.

Among the branches of non-flying officers affected by the R.C.A.F. partial demobilization program is the public relations directorate. And, as is the case of many other sections, there is little overseas demobilization but in Canada there have been a dozen discharges within the last few months — the most notable being Wing Cmdr. Roger Irwin, who has gone back to newspaper work in Toronto. Wing Cmdr. Irwin was formerly chief public relations officer overseas.

Frieburg, Neuss British Targets

LONDON, Nov. 28.—(CP).—British heavy bombers flying in forces totalling at least 1,000 dealt sharp blows before dawn to-day to two German supply bases just behind the western front.

One wing attacked Neuss, a railway centre in the northern Rhina Valley from which tracks branch to all sections of the front where the British 2nd Army and the U.S. 9th and 1st Armies now are engaged.

Another battered Frieburg, across the Rhine opposite the U.S. 7th and French 1st Army sectors. American heavy bombers attacked German rail movements at Offenburg north of Freiburg yesterday.

British Mosquitos made another attack on Berlin.

American fighter pilots shot down 98 German planes yesterday in the greatest all-fighter air battle of the war, and destroyed another four on the ground, bringing their kills for 24 hours to 212. The total for the entire U.S. 8th Air Force, including bomber-gunners, thus was raised to at least 239 German fighters downed for that period.

Thirteen American fighters and one bomber were missing from yesterday's operations.

At places, the 3rd Army was at the outer works of the Siegfried Line. At many points the Americans were under the guns of those enemy positions, and at many others they were through the old Maginot Line, many of the forts of which were built on eastern slopes of hills making reversal of guns impossible.

The 3rd passed Hombourg, 11 miles southwest of Saarbrucken and seven miles southwest of the French frontier town of Forbach. Hagenau, where railroads lead from the extreme east of France to Karlsruhe and Neustadt, was threatened.

The 9th Army fighting for the ruins of Julich (pop. 8,585) cleared Kirchberg "rather easily," an official report said. Fighting progressed in nearby Koslar. The Germans were tossed from Merzenhausen again and two counter-attacks were repelled.

The 1st Army hacked out a mile advance and reached Inden. The attack in the cold dawn also was directed toward Lamersdorf, just south of Inden. Another force pushed into Jungersdorf, about half a mile south of Langerwehe.

Churchill Lauds Canadian Army

LONDON, Nov. 28 — (CP). — Prime Minister Churchill today told the House of Commons he realized "the magnificent character of the Canadian war effort."

He made this remark when a member asked him if he were aware that 86 per cent of the Canadian Army had volunteered for service anywhere.

The Prime Minister promised "another wall will open with greater vigor at the other end of the world when this present one is finished." He was speaking in reply to a query about the reconstruction of the British Army after the war.

He told the House "national service as a foundation of our military system" was under consideration, but contended the matter was not urgent, because Japan yet remained to be beaten even after the fall of Germany.

In the meantime, he assured the House, "there is no reason to support a belief that the British armies will be short of the necessary ammunition to fight their battles."

The Prime Minister's statement, made in answer to a query soon after the parliament, elected in 1935, opened its 10th consecutive session, followed a statement by President Roosevelt that shell shortages were costing the lives of American fighting men.

Mr. Churchill based his reply on factory workers' maintaining their present planned output, which, he said, "they may even improve upon." He added: "we have very considerable reserves, the use of which depends on the varying estimates as to the duration of the German resistance."

Veterans' Official To Help Ex-Soldiers

Peterborough will have in the near future a Veterans' Welfare Officer, of the Department of Veterans Affairs, to assist discharged persons including those handicapped in finding suitable employment, D. G. H. Melton, chairman of the Peterborough Citizens' Rehabilitation Council announced Monday evening. This was decided at a meeting held under the auspices of the Citizens' Advisory Council of the Unemployment Insurance Commission. E. L. Merrill, Ontario official in placing handicapped people in employment, was guest speaker.

The meeting was advised that space is being provided in the Unemployment Insurance Commission building for this service. The officer, who will be in Peterborough, will have gone through an extensive training course in Ottawa, on appropriate issues.

Mr. Melton also made the announcement that there will be a meeting soon of the Reception and Welfare Committee of the Rehabilitation Council, to discuss plans for meeting soldiers arriving in Peterborough after being on active service overseas. Instances have been reported, he said, of telegrams being received by the Mayor, and civic officials or others going to meet the soldier, but that the object of the welcoming doesn't show up, due to last-minute arrangements.

Another meeting will be called in the near future, Mr. Melton said, of the Housing Committee, to study the situation in regard to housing which will be considerably aggravated when discharged persons return from overseas.

OBITUARIES

MRS. M. J. MURRAY, SR.

The death of Mrs. Michael J. Murray, Sr., 364 Braidwood Avenue, occurred on Monday after a long illness. She was born in Peterborough 55 years ago, Mary Ellen Redmond, daughter of the late Mrs. Katherine Lonergan and John Redmond.

Mrs. Murray is survived by her husband, two sons Gerald of Windsor and Michael J., Jr., Peterborough, and two daughters, Mrs. Allan Medd, Sudbury, and Mrs. Fred Stewart, Peterborough. She was a member of the Church of the Sacred Heart, its Altar Society, and the Catholic Women's League.

The funeral will take place on Thursday at 9 a.m. from the J. J. Duffus Funeral Parlors to the Church of the Sacred Heart and thence to St. Peter's Cemetery.

WILLIAM S. STILES.

BONARLAW, Nov. 28 — (ENS). —The funeral of William S. Stiles, who died in his 75th year, was held from his home in Bonarlaw with Rev. Mr. Brownlee of Marmora officiating. Burial was in the family plot in the 12th Line Cemetery.

Born in Seymour Township, son of the late Bartholomew Stiles and Margaret McKeown, he moved with his parents to the residence where his death occurred, when a small child. During his entire life, he was engaged in farming. Keenly interested in municipal affairs, he served as councillor for several years. President of the Maple Leaf Cheese Factory for 30 years, Mr. Stiles was also a prominent cheese buyer. He held membership in the Springbrook L.O.L., St. Mark's Anglican Church, and also superintendent of the Sunday School of St. Mark's Church.

He is survived by his widow, Edith Shortt, whom he married 39 years ago, two daughters, Mrs. Elmer Cotton of Harold, Mrs. Reg. Cross of Toronto, and three sons, William of Chatham, Ernest at home, and Harold of Bonarlaw. Eight grandchildren also survive.

Pall-bearers were all members of Springbrook L.O.L., George Eastwood, Allen McComb, J. Baker, John Morrison, Clayton Burkitt, and Morley Barlon.

Flower-bearers were: George Thompson, Burton Bateman, William Neal, Charles Lough, W. J. Barlon, and Roy Brown.

Premier Says

The Prime Minister said Canada faces the possibility of "anarchy" unless the House can unite behind a government that can carry on.

Mr. King moved "that this House will aid the government in its policy of maintaining a vigorous war effort."

Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative House leader, moved to substitute the following:

"This House is of the opinion that the government has not made certain of adequate and continuous trained reinforcements by requiring all N.R.M.A. personnel, whether now or hereafter enrolled, to serve in any theatre of war and has failed to assure equality of service and sacrifice."

M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, moved an amendment which would strike out Mr. Graydon's wording and, if adopted, make the House's expression of view read:

"This House will aid the government in its policy of maintaining a vigorous war effort which, in the opinion of this House, requires the immediate removal of all distinction between drafted men and volunteer personnel thus making the entire home defence army available for reinforcements overseas and requires further the total mobilization of all the resources of Canada, material and financial as well as human, to ensure a total war effort, adequate re-establishment of the members of our fighting forces and full employment after the war."

Suspect Politics

John Blackmore, Social Credit leader, offered no amendment and said his group had not yet decided how they would vote. They were suspicious that there was politics in the controversy and proposed to find out what was behind it.

The other development of a tense day of debate before packed galleries was Mr. King's acceptance of the resignation of Air Minister Power and the former minister's tried declaration that conscription was not necessary, that the government had "no right to tear the country asunder at this stage of the war" and that he could not change his mind in a "matter of minutes".

In a speech lasting nearly three hours Mr. King took the House through the whole history of the war effort and the development of the conscription issue. He bared the secrets of the cabinet in a detail seldom exposed as he dramatically divided the events of recent weeks into "crisis No. 1" and "crisis No. 2", with crisis No. 3 in the offing.

The chief new bits of information disclosed were:

1. He asked Col. Ralston if he would assume the responsibility of forming a government and received a negative answer. He did the same with other ministers and got the same response.

2. Late in October the cabinet was agreed on a further appeal for voluntary enlistments but could not agree on setting a time limit for the appeal and making the time limit known.

3. It has been decided that drafted men detailed for overseas service may volunteer up to the time of embarkation. The number who do so will be deducted from the 16,000 so that the army will have power to send 16,000 in addition to those who volunteer.

In connection with the appeal for volunteers Mr. King expressed the opinion that some army officers did not try to get volunteers, but that the appeal would have succeeded had the government had the co-operation of opposition leaders and the opposition press.

Near the end of his speech Mr. King said he was thankful the responsibility for deciding whether there should be another crisis rested on the members of parliament and not on himself. He recalled that he is nearly 70 years old, has been 25 years leader of his party and nearly 18 years Prime Minister.

"As long as I can continue to serve my country in any capacity I shall do the best I can toward that end," he said. "May I tell you frankly and honestly that the load is getting heavier and heavier day by day and I need all the support I can get from men who are like-minded in their thoughts and aims and ambitions to carry on at this time."

Admits Crisis.

Mr. King, in apparent reference to the possibility of Quebec Liberals leaving the party in substantial numbers, said he would not carry on with the support of Opposition groups alone. He wanted a substantial majority of his own party with him.

Canada faced anarchy at home while men fought overseas unless the House could "unite in reasonable measure to support an administration that can carry on at this time," said Mr. King. He compared the crisis to that faced by Sir John A. Macdonald in the pre-Confederation province of Canada when the people were divided on the issue of "representation by population."

Looking to his fellow members he declared himself prepared to step aside for anyone who thought he could obtain greater confidence from the country. Looking to the Opposition he asked each of the three leaders if he was prepared to take the responsibility of forming a government.

In his account of events leading up to crisis No. 1, the resignation of Col. Ralston Mr. King said on Aug. 7 there had been a request for 700 additional men for the forces in Italy. At that time in the presence of Col. Ralston the chiefs of staff assured the government providing those men would not affect the manpower situation.

He regretted no reply was made to representations which came following the Quebec conference that troops were not properly trained. He presumed Mr Ralston wished to be sure of the facts and on Oct. 13 from overseas Col. Ralston had cabled a reassurance about training.

On Oct. 18, Col. Ralston, having returned from overseas, recommended conscription and portrayed a critical situation which might develop next year.

A movement arose in the country which would some day be exposed and condemned for total conscription. It created a situation the government had to face. When the Cabinet was unable to agree Col. Ralston informed him almost every day that he would resign if the question was not settled. It appeared that other ministers would follow.

Easy To Criticize.

Air Minister Power who was also Associate Defence Minister was ill so that he faced, in Crisis No. 1, not only the possibility of having no defense minister but the loss of other ministers. It was when Col. Ralston's resignation was a matter of hours that he called in Gen. McNaughton who agreed to take on the responsibility.

"I took care to ask one colleague after the other would he take the responsibility that was mine," said Mr. King. "I asked the Minister of Defence himself, would he take the responsibility of heading a government and putting through that particular measure. I was told by him that he would not.

"It is very easy to criticize the government and put up opposite policies but unless men are prepared to back those policies by taking a responsible position and carrying them out they have no right to leave a ministry in a condition where the whole structure is certain of collapse."

Crisis No. 1 passed when Gen. McNaughton took over and attempted to get the reinforcements needed by the voluntary system. Crisis No. 2 came when as parliament assembled last week it was found that the reinforcements were not to be obtained in that way and again the Cabinet was divided.

That crisis ended with the adoption of the Order-in-Council to apply conscription and involved Maj. Power's resignation.

Mr. King portrayed the action as consistent with his statements in 1940 when Bill 80, authorizing the Government to impose overseas service was passed. He said then one of the circumstances which might make conscription necessary was the need of supplying necessary reinforcements for the overseas army.

The policy was defined as "not necessarily conscription but conscription if necessary" and, he added, "necessary" meant "to the extent necessary."

Not Appeasing Quebec.

Mr. King said he had never appeased Quebec or any other part of Canada. He has sought to make the position of Quebec understood and to protect Quebec from the unjust attacks sometimes made by persons in other parts of Canada.

Had it not been for the French-speaking people of Quebec Canada would not have remained under the British flag. Canada was a country of minorities and could not be governed without respect for minority rights.

During this war he had had to ask that redistribution, due following the 1941 census, be postponed and Quebec alone stood to lose by that action. His enactment of Bill 80 was not appeasement of Quebec. It had started the split in the Liberal Party which would grow as a result of the latest action.

Mr. King said the "yes" majority in the plebiscite was not a mandate to carry out conscription as had been suggested by organizations such as the Canadian Legion. Later the Government was given authority, under Bill 80 passed in 1942, to impose conscription for overseas if considered necessary.

At the Quebec Conference in September there had been no mention in discussions with chiefs of staff of the possible need of reinforcements such as to make overseas conscription necessary.

Impact A Shock

"I mention all this in order that the House may realize the impact of the shock that came upon the government a little later on, just as honorable members themselves must have felt the impact of the shock which has come to them in the last few days when they were told that they would have to consider this question of sending men across the seas by conscription at this stage of the war," said Mr. King.

As the cabinet debated the question "a measure of unrest was being organized the like of which has not been seen in the history of Canada before, not even in a political campaign. One may condemn this movement, the day will come when it will be exposed and will be fully condemned."

Mr. King said he could not see that dissolving parliament would help the men at the front, but Col. Ralston had not been out of office a day when the papers asked if the prime minister was thinking of an election.

"Yes, I could have swept the whole province of Quebec, carried every seat in it. I could have carried seats from one end of this country to the other and I have not the least doubt that I could have come back to this parliament as prime minister as the result of an appeal in circumstances such as these."

But there would have been two months of political warfare, while the international war was raging. He had to consider who he would call on to form an alternative cabinet. His cabinet colleagues were not ready to take the responsibility and "I do not know whether any gentlemen opposite would have been prepared to take it. I wonder if they would?"

Resignation would almost certainly be followed by dissolution and as a prime minister could not hold office without supporters.

Gen. McNaughton appealed for voluntary enlistments at once and plans for further efforts were made by the cabinet.

But the appeal was not supported by the opposition. Instead of the appeal reaching the people they were dinned by the efforts "put forth by those who were determined they were going to have conscription no matter what the cause might be."

In this situation Mr. King said he decided to call parliament so members could share the responsibility of accepting the Government's stand or rejecting it.

Soldier Rioters

As a result of the demonstration yesterday, school classes being held in the Terrace Canadian Legion Hall have been cancelled. Officials said they feared damage to the school as demonstrators damaged a sign there Saturday.

The army spokesman said the parade involved 1,000 to 1,500 men. He added that not more than 25 per cent of the troops in the area were actively involved and that the remainder were forced into the demonstration by intimidation. "Men are going active just to get away from those people," he continued.

At the week-end the men took Bangalore torpedoes and mortar bombs but returned them later, saying they were too dangerous to fool with. However, they still have rifle ammunition, said the spokesman, adding that messages have been sent to Prime Minister Mackenzie King through the general officer commanding listing the grievances of the demonstrators.

"It boils down to the fact they just don't want to go overseas," said the spokesman.

A dispatch from Terrace last night said that draftees from three regiments took part in the demonstration and that they had demanded that they be returned to their homes in Quebec.

Pacific Command headquarters here announced that inquiries will be made into demonstrations at six British Columbia centres since Friday in which draftee troops protested the Dominion Government's decision to make 16,000 callup troops available for overseas service.

Demonstrations have been held at Vernon, Chilliwack, Nanaimo, Courtenay, Prince George and Terrace. The only recurrences yesterday were at Terrace and at Prince George where about 500 men marched through snow-covered streets for less than an hour, carrying anti-conscription placards and shouting slogans.

Police Act

At Vernon an attempt to organize a second demonstration last night was squelched by military police who dispersed paraders gathering outside their barracks. From 150 to 200 draftees had gathered when the military police arrived. Earlier yesterday section seven of the King's rules and regulations of Canada were read to every home defence man in camp with emphasis on the penalty phrase threatening imprisonment for life for any soldier convicted of inciting to mutiny, rioting or taking part in any similar disturbances.

Platoons were assembled in drill halls and barracks to hear the rules read by their officers. The name of every home defence man was taken following the reading and each man was informed that now that he had been made aware of the rules he was liable to be fired on if he took part in a demonstration.

Individual soldiers interviewed on the streets following the abortive demonstration agreed similar outbreaks were likely in the near future.

Storms Slowing Red Drive Across Hungary

MOSCOW, Nov. 28—(AP)— The heaviest snowfall in one year following a severe sleet storm slowed down action today in the battle for Budapest, with German and Hungarian troops occupying defence positions along a 26-mile curve from the southern limits of Budapest to the rail junction of Aszod on the northeast, front advances said.

The Russian command made no mention of progress on that front although reports here said the situation in the Hungarian capital was tense.

The Soviet war bulletin, however, reported capture of 50 additional hamlets in the puppet state of Slovakia. Red Army columns in a six-mile penetration of Northern Slovakia crossed the 2,700-foot Carpathian mountains along the Polish frontier. Other units in the south advanced to within 11 miles of the big North Hungarian rail centre of Satoraljauhely.

Thus Col.-Gen. Ivan Petrov's 4th Ukraine army widened its front to 75 miles from a point west of Dukla Pass in the north to the Hungarian frontier, and further imperilled the enemy strongholds of Presov and Kassa (Kosice). Red Army units 25 miles to the east already menace those two points.

For two months Russian divisions and units of the 1st Czechoslovakian Army have been trying to force Dukla Pass by a frontal blow.

The assault from the rear by Petrov's troops promised to shorten and better his supply lines to Red Army bases in Poland.

Rumanian Gain

A broadcast Romanian communique recorded by the Federal Communications Commission said Romanian troops, renewing their attack northwest of Tokaj in Northeastern Hungary, had captured Bekecs, 12 miles northwest. Southwest of Miskolc and northeast of Budapest tank-supported enemy counter-attacks were repulsed by Romanian and Soviet troops, the communique added.

Asthma Mucus Loosened First Day

If choking, gasping, wheezing, coughing Bronchial Asthma attacks rob you of sleep and sap your vitality, accept this liberal trial offer: Get the prescription Mendaco from your druggist and see how quickly it loosens and removes thick strangling mucus, thus giving free easy breathing and restful sleep. Under the liberal trial offer, unless Mendaco frees you from the suffering of Asthma attacks, you simply return the empty package and get all your money back. You have everything to gain—nothing to lose. So don't suffer another day without asking your druggist for Mendaco.

THINK Before You VOTE!

Are there any plans in existence for the proposed new hospital? There are not.

Do we definitely know how much the hospital will exactly cost? We do not.

The only information we have at present indicates that it is planned to build a hospital of so many beds, and each bed will cost so many thousands of dollars. Multiply the dollars by the beds, and you have the estimated cost.

Rather vague, isn't it? Yet, that is exactly the present position

We have in mind the Hunter St. bridge, which was supposed to cost $300,000, but by the time it is fully paid for (and THAT won't be until 1951), it will have cost almost $1,200,000, or four times the original estimate.

Are we sure that we are not going to have "another Hunter St. bridge" in the proposed new hospital?

Remember this fact when you vote upon the proposed new hospital.

MR. AND MRS. ETHAN ALEXANDER CURVIN

Ethan Alexander Curvin Dies In Cobourg At 84

COBOURG, Nov. 28 — (ENS) — Ethan Alexander Curvin, 84-year-old resident of Cobourg, was buried this afternoon in Cobourg Union cemetery, with services conducted by Rev. W. P. Woodger of Trinity United Church. It was the first death in a family of 11.

Mr. Curvin, who was an ardent lawn bowler, was a life-member of Cobourg Lawn Bowling Club. Up until about a year ago he was a regular attendant at the greens and when ill health prevented his active participation in the game, he was an enthusiastic spectator. Mr. Curvin was very fond of pitching horse shoes and five-pin bowling. A poet of ability, it was his wont to mark any special sports event with a poem.

He was born near Baltimore and except for a few years spent in Wiarton he was a resident of this district all his life and had resided in Cobourg for the past 50 years. For some years he conducted a furniture and undertaking business and was associated with the late George Thompson in business here. Of more recent years he was an upholstered. He married Emmie Jane White of Oak Heights and they celebrated their diamond wedding two years ago. They were the oldest married couple in Cobourg.

Mr. Curvin is survived by his widow and nine children, Mrs. Clarence Brayley of Cleveland, Mrs. Ray Maxwell of La Crescenta, California, Mrs. Walter Wood of Belleville, Mrs. Alex Dodson of Toronto, Tom of Peterborough, William of Hamilton, Frank of Wiarton, Ray of Detroit and Carl of Buffalo. A brother, Jesse, lives at Yale, Michigan.

This picture was taken on the occasion of his 60th wedding anniversary two years ago.

Kidney Acids Rob Your Rest

Many people never seem to get a good night's rest. They turn and toss—lie awake and count sheep. Often they blame it on "nerves" when it may be their kidneys. Healthy kidneys filter poisons from the blood. If they are faulty and fail, poisons stay in the system and sleeplessness, headache, backache often follow. Tomato Growers Hold Annual Meeting

COBOURG, Nov. 28 — (ENS) — Northumberland and Durham Tomato Growers' Association held their annual meeting at Brighton with more than 30 growers present. S. J. Tinson, chairman, stated that the year had been a satisfactory one and made suggestions for the future in regard to better plants. A. T. Sirett, director for this district on the Provincial Board, reviewed the factors that had resulted in the minimum price of $20.10 per ton last year. It was pointed out that, while odd acres were reported to have produced as high as 600 bushels, this was exceptional, and that the average was likely around one-third of that amount.

W. I. Walker of Dunnville, director for District 3, was the main speaker of the evening and gave an encouraging and practical discussion. In regard to contracts he felt that grading should be introduced and the processor agree to take all tomatoes that would come under the grade standard. With special consideration to post-war years, canners should not over-contract as they had sometimes done, he declared. The help situation was reviewed and it was pointed out that some 50 high school children in the Dunnville community saved the day by their services for a few weeks.

Grading in the essence of quality, the speaker declared, and this was the point from which export markets could be best maintained. There was no doubt that Ontario can produce readily 10 times its needs and that a high quality product was required to hold the province's place on the markets of the world. Mentioning his own farm, he said that he had grown 450 bushels to the acre on four acres and received 66 cents a bushel. This he felt was a satisfactory side-line to farm operations. He expressed satisfaction with the principle of floor prices but thought them harder to control than ceiling prices. It was pointed out that prices in the United States are one-third higher than in Ontario and that growers had a right here to expect assistance with floor prices.

In discussing grading, he said that since quality and quantity went together, the good grower could produce 85 per cent No. 1s. He dedeclared that he didn't think it was the duty of governments or boards to look after the growers' business and that the tomato growers themselves should forward their interests through their own association. Marketing was a very important part of agriculture and it should be resolved to see that agriculture got a square deal from every angle. Questions relative to canning brought out the information that canners were prepared to pay the salary for graders to the Ontario Dept. of Agriculture who would hire suitable men for the picking period who would be trained and move from plant to plant if necessary. Hope was expressed that the Wartime Prices and Trade Board would announce prices before February 1.

Reformatory Terms Given 2 Car Thieves

COBOURG, Nov. 28 —(ENS)— William Affleck of St. Thomas and Paul Elliott of Tillsonburg were sentenced to reformatory terms when they appeared before Magistrate R. B. Baxter Monday. They were arrested about a week ago at Perth after Chief W. J. Carey had notified police in other centres of the theft of a car here on November 20, owned by John F. Lean of Cobourg.

Each faced two charges of car theft when they appeared in court. On a joint charge of theft of Mr. Lean's car they received 15 months definite and three months indefinite in the reformatory and on a joint charge of theft of a car on November 18, owned by Jack Wilson at St. Catharines, they were sentenced to 12 months in the reformatory, to run concurrently with the Cobourg charge.

Leo Jarvis of ,335 Bloor street E., Oshawa, a second offender, was fined $200 and costs in police court Monday for having liquor in an illegal place. Jarvis and some companions were found parked near Grafton on the night of October 22 by Provincial Constables Alex MacLeod of Cobourg and Russell Pollard or Port Hope. The fact that the dome light of the car was on, attracted the attention of the officers.

The constables testified that they removed a bottle of liquor and a bottle of beer from under the driver's seat and a carton containing empties and full bottles of beer back of the driver's seat as well as a carton of full bottles and several bushel hampers in the truck compartment. Jarvis said that they were going to pick wild grapes, for which purpose they had loaded the hampers into the car. He disclaimed any knowledge as to how the beer got into the car.

Claims Toronto Wants Discord Across Quebec

MONTREAL, Nov. 28.— (CP).— Hon. P. J. A. Cardin, former Public Works Minister who left the King cabinet in 1940 on the conscription issue in 1940, told a tumultuous anti-conscription rally in east-end Maisonneuve district that "conscription for overseas service is not necessary" and that "if our commitments are too great, they should be reduced to smaller proportions, in conformity with our capacity.

The meeting which at the start was interrupted by a group of hecklers who prevented Sarto Fournier, Liberal Member of Parliament for Maisonneuve Rosemont, from speaking to any length, quietened down to listen attentively to Mr. Cardin, member for Richelieu Vercheres who is still sitting on the government side of the House.

However it was not until Jacques Sauriol, a defeated Bloc Populaire candidate in Maissonneuve in the last provincial general elections, was evicted after trying to speak, supported by a group of partisans, that the jammed hall of the Maisonneuve school gave its full attention to Mr. Cardin.

An attempt by the organizers of the meeting to have the crowd sing "God Save the King" in French at the start of the meeting was foiled when a strong group of listeners objected and began to sing "O Canada" with some shouting "down with the king!" and "down with conscription."

Mr. Fournier, who said the meeting had been called to provide Mr. Cardin and himself with an opportunity to explain their present and past attitude in regard to the conscription problem, said that "such behavior by a small, obviously-organized group will certainly not help our cause with English-speaking groups outside the province who sympathize with our ideas."

Affects 9 Provinces.

"Let's not belittle the conscription problem by such goings-on," Mr. Fournier said. "It's a problem which vitally interests the nine provinces, the country as a whole."

Mr. Fournier said that "those 200 people in Toronto who control The Globe and Mail would welcome disorder in the province of Quebec."

"Indeed, it would make them very happy. Don't fall in their trap. Breaking a few windows in the offices of the Montreal Star or the Montreal Gazette won't settle the problem.

Peterborough Business Firms Endorse New Hospital

AND WILL PAY HALF THE COST!

As half the total assessment in Peterborough is on business property, business firms will bear half the cost of the proposed New Hospital.

This means that, as $800,000 of the total Hospital cost is already provided for from other sources, the householders of Peterborough are only actually going to carry half of $600,000 being asked for on Election Day. The residential ratepayers get a new, modern hospital worth $1,400,000 for only $300,000. This is the biggest Municipal bargain Peterborough has ever had—or is ever likely to get again.

Peterborough needs a new hospital badly — our citizens deserve the care and protection it will give—don't lose this opportunity to—

Peterborough As a Hospital Centre

Next Monday the ratepayers of Peterborough will be asked to vote $600,000 for a new civic hospital, to be paid for over a period of twenty years. As Alderman Adam Sands has made clear, this will mean a cost to the ratepayer of one cent a week for every $10 he pays in taxes. This is admittedly a change from the fifty years during which Peterborough has had a free hospital, owing to the benevolence of the late Mrs. Charlotte Nicholls. But the change is an inevitable one brought about by the growth of the city, and if we want the city to keep on growing we must accept the change and the responsibility which it brings.

Peterborough is the largest city in an extensive area. It is a progressive city, and it has prospered greatly during the century of its existence. That growth brings privileges and duties, and one of the principal duties of a progressive city is to set a high standard in matters of public health and humane provision for the sick. Between 60,000 and 70,000 people are served by the hospitals of Peterborough; it is impossible to establish a more accurate figure, because not only patients from our own county, but also patients from Victoria, Northumberland, Durham, Hastings and Haliburton come to Peterborough for hospital care in considerable numbers. It is useless to say that they should go to hospitals in their own counties; a county is an arbitrary geographical expression, and often Peterborough is a more convenient centre for places outside the county limits than is the county capital. Peterborough has an excellent system of roads connecting it with rural districts in every direction; those roads bring trade to Peterborough and they also bring hospital patients. We must accept our responsibility as well as our good fortune.

Because Peterborough is a progressive city it also attracts good physicians and surgeons; it is extremely important that a city which takes the lead in a large area should have a first-class medical faculty. But a group of talented doctors works at a disadvantage in a city where the hospitals are too small to accommodate the number of patients who need hospital care, and where the principal hospital is handicapped by an old and inconvenient building. In 1943 it was necessary to refuse 245 patients admission to Nicholls Hospital. That is a condition which should not exist in a progressive city. At present both hospitals in this city have accommodation for 210 patients; for the area which they serve, 310 beds would be a conservative number. Anyone may see that the time has come when Peterborough must have more hospital accommodation, and that a new hospital, built on modern lines, is the answer to our problem.

Of course the new hospital will cost money. Any adjunct of civilization costs money. But the growth of Peterborough as a community has made it absolutely necessary that this money should be spent. Money is of slight importance compared with the fact that Peterborough is very poorly prepared for an epidemic, or even for the normal demands of a year's treatment of the sick. The hospital bylaw is not primarily a matter of money; it is a matter of duty and responsibility. The time has come for Peterborough to take a forward step.

Provincial Aid For Music

Ontario's greatest single artistic asset is the Toronto Symphony Orchestra. The Art Gallery is good in its way, but comparatively few people in the Province ever enter it; the Royal Ontario Museum is excellent, but it suffers from the same disability (although some attempt now is being made to send loan exhibitions to schools). But the Symphony, which is by long odds the finest in Canada, is not a collection of inanimate objects, but a group of men who are quite capable of travelling. Why don't they travel more in the Province?

During the past ten years the Symphony has grown enormously in achievement and in popularity. This season it will increase its number of concerts from 19 to 38; the 'series' concerts have been increased from 10 to 12; the students' concerts have been increased from 5 to 10; there will be 10 'Pops' concerts and in addition the Symphony will play in Hamilton, Guelph, London and Montreal. Fifteen concerts will be broadcast. Obviously the Symphony is increasing its audience by leaps and bounds.

But if the Symphony is going to play in Guelph, which has a population of 23,000, why is it not going to play in Peterborough, which has a population of 25,000? And if in Peterborough, why not in Kingston, Brantford, St. Catharines, St. Thomas, Ottawa, and a dozen other Ontario cities? We should like to see the Symphony make a tour of the Province every year.

Where would the money come from? A good deal of it would be taken in box-office receipts, for we think that the smaller cities of the Province would give the Symphony a splendid welcome. As for the deficit (for such a tour would be costly, and there would be a deficit) we suggest that the Provincial Government make it up. Let no taxpayer consider this as an irrational and outrageous attack upon his pocket. Such a tour would not cost a tenth of the expense involved in some of the projects which Ontario undertakes every year without a murmur.

Our provincial government spends very little money on the encouragement of the arts, and we think that it is time that it earmarked a sum for that purpose in every budget. We do not suggest that the Symphony should become a government project; we suggest merely that the government guarantee it against loss on a tour which would be of inestimable benefit to the cultural life of Canada's richest province.

Sources Of Revenue

The Rev. Dr. J. R. Mutchmor, the Secretary of the Board of Evangelism and Social Service of the United Church, recently issued a statement endorsing the C.C.F. party; to what extent this was the result of Dr. Mutchmor's own opinions, and to what extent it was the considered policy of the whole United Church, we cannot say, but Dr. Mutchmor's reason for his action was interesting. It was because the C.C.F. had "all along refused to take a single dollar from the liquor interests"; Dr. Mutchmor implied that the two older parties had done so.

But this needs some clarification. Does Dr. Mutchmor mean that the Liberals and Conservatives accepted money from brewers and distillers for party funds, and gave in turn promises that they would look after the brewers and distillers when they came to power? If that is what he means, we think that Dr. Muchmore ought to give his authority for saying so. We should also like to know if the brewers and distillers have ever tried to give money to the C.C.F. If Dr. Mutchmor means only that brewers and distillers, as individuals and party supporters, have given sums to party funds, his statement means very little.

Political parties, like churches, accept contributions, and solicit them, in order to further specific political and religious ends. They do not refuse one man's money and accept another's, unless the money carries with it an obligation to return favours for it. We venture to say that the United Church does not forbid those among its adherents who sell liquor to put money on the collection plate; once the money is given to the church, the church is at liberty to use that money to advance its own interests, and those interests may include the total abstinence cause. It is the same with political parties: they accept money from whoever wants to give it, with no strings attached.

If Dr. Mutchmor knows for a certainty that either or both the old parties have taken money from brewers, and have given promises in return, he should certainly make his knowledge public. And if he knows that the C.C.F. has scornfully repulsed offers of money from brewers, he should make that public too. We should all be delighted to know the facts of the case.

Protest In Quebec

By GRANT DEXTER

OTTAWA: The storm centre of the conscription crisis is now the Province of Quebec. The reaction of the Quebec Liberals to the proclamation of Bill 80, notwithstanding the device of restricting the first allotment of draftees to go overseas to 16,000, has been one of profound shock. Already one Quebec minister has resigned and several members have crossed the floor. But the crisis in Quebec is only beginning. What the situation will be by the middle of next week, no one can imagine.

The unfortunate fact is that it has been difficult for Quebec to understand that between the exchange of letters between Col. Ralston and Mr. King, at the beginning of November, the voluntary system received its final test and failed.

Only if today's position is regarded in relating to the past, can existing opinion among Quebec members be appreciated. There is the distant past, familiar to every one. In 1939, the Government and Parliament accepted the formula of no overseas conscription. In 1942, by the plebiscite the Government obtained a free hand, and in Bill 80 the new policy of "conscription if necessary" was adopted.

If events had proceeded in logical sequence from that point forward, the position in Quebec today would have been vastly different. Certainly the shock of the last 48 hours would have been avoided. The development of policy would have been clear, logical and inevitable. The breaking point in this policy is the retirement of Col. Ralston and the emergence as minister of General McNaughton.

FROM the standpoint of the Quebec Liberals, the story is this:

The policy of "conscription if necessary," as laid down in 1942, was rejected by leaders like Mr. Cardin and many of the Quebec rank and file, who voted against it. The Quebec Liberals continued to support the Government in the belief either that the necessity would not arise or that, in any event, they believed their influence in the Government would be suficiently powerful to prevent Bill 80 being proclaimed. As the war progressed, the chances of getting through on the voluntary system improved. Last September, for example, conscription seemed definitely to be out and the oblique references by Col. Ralston, in his resignation letters to Mr. King, to statements made at that time by the Prime Minister, indicate that the Quebec members may have had the highest authority for their optimism.

THE test of strength began when Col. Ralston made his recommendation on October 18. If the Government had gone through on this recommendation, the Quebec Liberals would have revolted, but there would have been no sense of outrage. In fact, however, Col. Ralston was dismissed by Mr. King (this is made clear in the correspondence) and Qeubec took the fall of Col. Ralston—mistakenly as events speedily proved—as a decisive victory over the conscriptionists. It seems not to have occurred to the Quebec members that those in the cabinet who had stood with Col. Ralston would fight on with greater determination than ever.

The summoning of General McNaughton, however, was taken by Quebec as the final affirmation of the no-conscription policy. The reasons are obvious: In Mr. King's reply (dated Nov. 3) to Col. Ralston, the Prime Minister said that General McNaughton believed the voluntary system would obtain the needed men "and that in his belief he (General McNaughton) would be prepared to assume the responsibility of minister of national defence...."

And General McNaughton in a series of speeches and statements made it crystal clear that his belief in the voluntary system was a matter of rock-ribbed conviction: "I believe with every atom of my being in the voluntary system." Conscription, he said, had not been of benefit in the last war. The voluntary system offered "the best hope," and, later on, "the only hope" of meeting the problem. General McNaughton went to the extreme length of saying that, if Mr. King had not held to the voluntary system, he (the general) would not be the Minister of National Defence. And General McNaughton was not speaking loosely. He had read all the reports, taken the advice of his experts, was speaking himself as an expert.

The effect of all this on Quebec was electrifying. The advocate of conscription had been dismissed from office. A Daniel had come to judgment. And what a Daniel. Here was the greatest military man of the day who publicly testified against conscription.

For Quebec the crisis was over. Conscription was out.

When, later on, General McNaughton declared that his views had not been shaken by the advice of his D.O.C.'s—called to Ottawa for consultation—the belief in Quebec that conscription was discredited was only deepened.

ON Wednesday, last, at 3 o'clock when Mr. King read the Ralston resignation correspondence, the Quebec members listened with approval to the letter in which Mr. King, himself, declared that conscription was not now necessary.

But the following 24 hours brought shattering disillusionment. At 3 o'clock on Thursday, the same Mr. King arose in his place and read the order-in-council applying over-all conscription. The reference to the 16,000 could not and did not hide from the Quebec members the fact that this was conscription.

The effect cannot be described. It was not that conscription had been proclaimed, rather it was a deep sense of betrayal. If Bill 80 had been proclaimed on Col. Ralston's recommendation, there would have been disappointment, resentment and opposition, but the Liberals of Quebec would have understood that their English-speaking colleagues were acting on conviction and in strict accord with past pledges. If Mr. King had then resigned, they would have cherished no personal animus against his conscriptionist successor.

But what explanation, they asked, could there be of the events which had occurred since General McNaughton's appointment? What military disaster, between 3 o'clock Wednesday and 3 o'clock Thursday, had made conscription necessary? How explain General McNaughton's stand for the voluntary system right up to Thursday and then his appearance from behind Mr. Speaker's chair to say that he had changed his mind?

Thus it is that today among the Quebec members there is a burning sense of betrayal. An honest difference of opinion is one thing; a sudden about-turn, without explanation, is another.

THE explanation is, of course, rational, obvious and inevitable. General McNaughton, in spite of his expressed belief in the voluntary system, never denied the validity of Col. Ralston's figures as to the urgency of the need of reinforcements. Neither did Mr. King, either in his broadcast or before the House. The fact is that the urgency was admitted on all sides. All that was at issue was an honest difference of belief as to the means whereby the reinforcements could be provided.

But this, apparently, escaped Quebec. It hailed General McNaughton as an anti-conscriptionist based on an unshakeable principle of opposition to compulsion, without regard to the effects that such a principle might have in practice on the strength of our striking force in the Low Countries and in Italy. In this, Quebec was wrong, for, when the pinch came, when a three-week trial had proved that the voluntary appeal would not produce the numbers of trained reinforcements required, General McNaughton and Mr. King alike changed ground.

The fact is that the voluntary system received its final trial during three crucial weeks—and it failed. Conscription was applied as and when "necessary" but not a moment before.

UNFORTUNATELY General McNaughton's statements in the House of Commons Thursday did nothing to explain this apparent change of front. At one point he even indicated that if volunteers could be dredged up, no draftees would go. The Quebeckers, however, had read the order-in-council; they knew differently. When on Friday, General McNaughton explained his previous confusions and said explicitly that all draftees are now liable to service in Europe and that 10,000 had ben selected for dispatch that very morning—it caused not a ripple of interest.

At the Quebec Liberal caucus Friday morning, no decision was reached. There will be a debate on a confidence motion next week. Mr. King leads off on Monday. The Quebeckers will be there to hear him. They will have their say later on.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

EXPECTS ASSOCIATION TO CO-OPERATE

Sir,—I am grateful to you for publishing my letter of the 21st and will not trespass on your courtesy by following up the many enticing "red herrings" that the secretary of the Peterborough Property Owners' Association has drawn across the trail.

I find that the Association is in basic agreement with my friends that an adequate hospital is essential and the problem is one of haggling over terms. If the "atmosphere" of my letter was unfortunate it was engendered by the motives to which the Association's advertisement appealed. I was left with the same clammy feeling as if I were asked to let a child drown so that I would not spoil my clothes. Moreover the omission of the secretary's and the chairman's names from such an advertisement, as well as the basis of the authorization for it, is not normal practice.

However, the basic difference seems to be one of computation; to quote the secretary's words: "The only apparent difference between us is, that the members of the Peterborough Property Owners' Association feel that the burden of providing and maintaining a hospital for 60,000 persons should not be placed upon about 3,200 taxpayers, or about 5 per cent. of the prospective hospital patients". There are times when one has delusions that he is carrying the burdens of the whole world, but not often that he commits such fantasies to cold print.

It is, I believe, generally agreed that the contributions of approximately $600,000 from the City Trust, the Nicholls Hospital Fund, and the Provincial Government can only be used for the common benefit of the 60,000 persons in this community and the "3,200 taxpayers" have only a 5 per cent. interest therein: hence this is outside of the problem. The haggling is, then, over the distribution of the other $750,000 between the city and county, and the other question of whether or not social services should be a charge against the land.

In regard to the first part of this, the distribution between the city and the county, there may be some question as to whether the $600,000, $150,000 is equitable, but, on the record of the hospital that the patient ratio has been 76 per cent., 24 per cent., and that under present conditions that only seriously ill may be admitted and not all of them; the contribution ratio does not appear to be significantly out of line with the patient ratio when the accommodation is adequate to take care of the ill as well as the desperately ill. At the most it is a matter of $20,000 one way or the other, in other words approximately one-fifteenth of a mill on the tax rate, or $8.33 on $125,000 assessment, not enough to pay for the Association's advertisement.

In regard to whether or not social services should be a charge on the land is a question that is not likely to be settled in our day. Present practice is that it is a charge on the land and present-day values of land and levels of rent are based on fact that costs of community services are so proportioned and collected.

I must decline the invitation to a public debate as I have had no connection with the Hospital and am unfamiliar with the details except those published in the "Examiner". I am but one of the general public to which the Association's advertising was directed and I was merely inquiring as to the advertiser's credentials. While the Secretary of the Association has successfully evaded a direct answer to questions asked, he has, I think, disclosed the basis for their advertisements. As I see it, it is entirely a matter of miscalculation rather than principle and we may expect that the Association will co-operate with the city to make the Hospital a reality.—Sincerely yours,

H. R. SILLS.

Mackenzie King and Conscription

(KINGSTON WHIG-STANDARD)

HARSH criticism is being hurled at Prime Minister Mackenzie King at this time for the reluctance he has shown to institute a measure of compulsory overseas service. Many of those who voice criticism do so from purely partisan motives and many others criticize without understanding anything of the fundamental political philosophy which has guided Mr. King throughout his many years of service to this Dominion.

The Prime Minister is a liberal as well as being leader of a Canadian political party which is also named Liberal. Throughout his public life, he has tried to implement true liberalism and nothing is more foreign to that political philosophy than compulsion of any kind. During the war, the Government which Mr. King heads has been forced, in order to prosecute the war to its very fullest extent, to institute many compulsory and arbitrary measures—the final compulsion of conscription having been delayed until the Prime Minister was convinced, beyond any doubt, that it was absolutely necessary. We feel sure that this matter has caused him great personal regret, but he has finally submerged his personal feelings and has taken a step which he believes to be in the best interests of the whole nation.

His political opponents charge that Mr. King thinks only of his own political fortunes and those of the Liberty party when deciding upon any course or policy. Those who dispassionately study his record, realize, however, that he is guided by much higher ideals. A mere political opportunist would never have retained the confidence of the Canadian people through all the years which Mr. King has enjoyed it and would never have led this country to such a successful prosecution of its part in the greatest war that has ever been known to man. A mere political opportunist would never have guided, during five war years, a nation whose military, industrial, economic and agricultural record is regarded outside its own boundaries with the very highest respect.

At this very, very late stage in the war, with certain victory in sight, the Prime Minister wished, with all his heart, to avoid any step which would disrupt, in any way, the united front which Canada has shown throughout this war. Infantry casualties, far heavier than any forecast by the military experts, have created a reinforcement crisis for the Canadian Army. Conscription of N.R.M.A. personnel has been agreed upon as only practical solution to meet the overseas reinforcement situation. Mr. King has placed the welfare of the Canadian Army Overseas and Canada's commitment to her Allies above any personal or domestic consideration. We believe that, if given the opportunity, he will strive with all the power he posses to maintain unity in Canada, even under these most trying circumstances, and to prosecute Canada's war to the fullest degree of which this country is capable.

A Bible Message

Bless the Lord, O my soul, O Lord my God, thou art very great; thou art clothed with honour and majesty. Who coverest thyself with light as with a garment: who stretchest out the heavens like a curtain.... Who laid the foundations of the earth, that it should not be removed for ever.... He causeth the grass to grow for the cattle, and herb for the service of man: that he may bring forth food out of the earth....

O Lord, how manifold are thy works! in wisdom hast thou made them all: the earth is full of thy riches.... Thou sendest forth thy spirit, they are created: and thou renewest the face of the earth.

The glory of the Lord shall endure for ever: the Lord shall rejoice in his works. (Ps. 104: 1, 2, 5, 14, 24, 30, 31.)

THE KENSINGTON LADY

This is a story about a Kensington lady in the old "blitz" period. A warden hammered at the door of a Kensington house late at night and when a slightly dishevelled lady appeared he told her that a light was showing in an upper window. "I beg your pardon," said the lady, "that's not a light—it's an incendiary bomb. And if you don't disturb us again my sister and I will put it out."

This is the best from a Kensington lady since the burglary case after the last war. The chief witness was a Kensington lady, who deposed—"I heard a noise and a metallic sound, so I got up and went to the top of the stair and called out, 'If there is anyone there, will he say what he is doing in this house?' "Of course," she added, "I spoke in the third person."

Well was it said that Hampstead is as Hampstead does but Kensington goes by favour.—The Manchester Guardian.

Unconsidered Trifles

This true story is reported from a country post office:

An aged woman entered, asked for a money order for £10, and some odds and ends of stamps and postcards, totalling three shillings and sixpence.

She handed the latter sum over the counter. When she was told the total amount was £10 3s 6d she looked surprised and protested:

"But I was told that the money order was free if it was for income tax."

Inequitable Liquor Laws

In county police court at Woodstock this week, a man convicted of a second offense under the Dominion Excise Act was sentenced to pay a fine of $500 and costs of $10.75 and also to serve a term of six months in jail, with an additional six months if the fine were not paid. The charge, as reported by The Woodstock Sentinel-Review, was that the accused "did without lawful excuse have in his possession a quantity of spirits, namely ten ounces, unlawfully manufactured or imported, contrary to the provisions of Section 18 of The Excise Act of 1934 and amendments thereto."

To some, it may appear that the sentence was unduly severe. As pointed out by the prosecution, however, it is the minimum penalty under the law. Nevertheless it will occur to many people that it seems distinctly out of proportion for one man to be jailed for six months and fined $500 for having in his possession ten ounces of illicit liquor, while other offenders, repeatedly found guilty of illegally selling spirits and beer, get off with much lighter sentences. Without in the least condoning the breaking of the law, personal possession of ten ounces of liquor, no matter what the strength or where obtained, is certainly less blameworthy than bootlegging and selling, often at fabulous prices, black market liquor (sometimes well-watered).

If the law, in the case of the Woodstock charge, be regarded as just and proper (which, no doubt, it is), then the law as applied to what may be called the average bootlegger and the operation of "blind pigs" is inequitable and inadequate. An adjustment is urgently needed, and it should be in the direction of "making the punishment to fit the crime" in the case of bootlegging, a view said to be finding favour with the Provincial authorities.—Brantford Expositor.

The Inside Struggle For Conscription

By GRANT DEXTER

OTTAWA: Five weeks of unrelieved crisis were eased, if not ended, when Mr. King announced in the House of Commons that the Government has imposed overseas conscription.

At first breath it might be thought that the crisis was over. But this is uncertain. All that is clear is that the point of strain has been shifted. The resignation of English-speaking ministers has been avoided, but there may be defections among the Quebec minister and members. The position of the Government, therefore, is in doubt and may remain so for a few days. And it is this account that the crisis may be said to be continuing, although in a less tense way.

The crisis began when Col. Ralston, just returned from overseas, recommended conscription as the only way in which our overseas forces could be adequately reinforced. The correspondence read to the House Wednesday tells the story of the struggle in cabinet—Col. Ralston forcing the issue relentlessly with the active support of some of his colleagues, and Mr. King and others of the cabinet seeking to retain the voluntary system. This preliminary phase ended on Nov. 1 when Col. Ralston was requested by Mr. King to resign.

But it did not end there. Col. Ralston had not fought alone. In describing his differences with the Government in his exchange of correspondence he had, he explained, "certain colleagues" with him. He did not identify them, but it is now apparent that they fought on. The appointment of Gen. McNaughton did not convince these "colleagues" that the overseas army could be maintained by volunteers. Despite General McNaughton's unqualified assertions to the contrary, the pressure within the Government for conscription increased.

In retrospect it will be seen that, for a time, the tide ran heavily against the conscriptionist wing of the cabinet. General McNaughton's unwavering support of the voluntary system would, perhaps, have been understandable in a newcomer unfamiliar with the facts. But the General did not speak out until, in his own words, he had "explored every possibility with the utmost care," and "read and studied all reports from officers in the field and at home." Having done so, he publicly insisted that the voluntary system "offered the best hope." Later, he made a public "declaration of faith in the system of voluntary enlistment for service overseas." Indeed, he declared that "there is no other way to correct this situation to be in time to be of use." He repeated - declaration made by himself earlier in the war, "that Canada could only carry the war to success if our war effort was based on the voluntary enlistment system." He also said that he believed in the voluntary system "with every atom of my being."

These and similar statements, particularly with regard to his conference with the D.O.C.'s, all contributed to make the fight of the conscriptionist ministers more difficult. And the crisis, too, was fed by Mr. King's broadcast and Col. Ralston's public statement.

Then Parliament was called. In retrospect it is clear that this indicated that the breaking point had been reached.

The Commons met Wednesday at 3 o'clock. Mr. Speaker was on his throne. Clerks in black gowns and three-cornered hats sat writing industriouly upon papers which seemed to appear from nowhere. The mace—golden and refulgent—reposed in its place. The benches were crowded and the tenseness of the atmosphere was eased by calls of greetings and friendly waves of the hand as old friends, often of opposed parties, renewed acquaintanceship.

There was a restless impatience about the Conservatives. They behaved like small boys who had found out in advance about dinner and are eager for the feast. Mr. Coldwell was exteremely alert and watchful. The Government benches seemed depressed. Mr. King sat motionless except for the fingers of one hand which drummed his desk top. Farther along, Col. Ralston sat, chin resting in the cup of his left hand. The ceiling lights glinted on the gold bridge of his glasses and his wristwatch sparkled like a small star.

The House has a way of taking the tension out of crisis. Mr. King was soon on his feet paying tribute to a deceased member. Then came the Ralston resignation correspondence. The House relaxed under the Prime Minister's monotone. Mr. King mumbled through it. At one point he missed a line and the Colonel, who was vetting the performance from his own texts, interrupted. "You skipped a line," said the Colonel. "Dear, dear," said Mr. King, and went on more painstakingly.

This was, of course, not the occasion for a kill. But some of the Conservatives seemed to think so. Mr. Graydon moved a motion demanding instant action. Everyone, including Mr. Graydon, knew it was out of order and quite evidently the Conservatives were in disagreement. Half of them tried to force a vote. The rest sat tight. The gesture was pathetic and old-time Conservatives among the spectators could be heard later on discussing darkly the ineptitude of their party and warming their hearts with thoughts of what Borden, Meighen or Bennett would have done under similar circumstances.

The crisis, plainly, did not embrace the House as such. It was focussed on that Liberal front bench. It was almost vocal in the set lines of the shoulders, the grim lips. Mr. Ilsley's head was up and his flaming red hair gave him an oddly bellicose look. As Mr. King's replies to Col. Ralston were read, there was an obvious intense concentration among the men surrounding Mr. King. Here, whatever their names might be, were the "colleagues" to whom Col. Ralston referred.

The House adjourned. A throng of curious Liberal members trooped to the party caucus. But here, again, nothing was forthcoming. The crisis stayed right where it had begun—within the cabinet. The caucus lasted only a few minutes and the cabinet struggle was renewed.

Late Wednesday night the cabinet rose and news began to trickle about that the crisis had ended; that Bill 80 was to be proclaimed; that the Government had adopted conscription.

Thursday came really as an anticlimax. The Liberal caucus met to hear news that was beginning to grow stale, and when General McNaughton appeared before the Commons at 3 o'clock it was to tell a story already in some of the early editions. Ostensibly, it was General McNaughton who brought about the change in policy He had discovered that his earlier statements, based though they were upon careful study and deep thought, were ill-founded. He had found out that Col. Ralston had been right.

The Liberal front bench listened attentively as the General made his statement. The "colleagues" had won the fight but, looking down upon them, it was impossible to identify victors from vanquished. The Conservatives, somehow, had lost the elation of the previous day and Mr. Coldwell, as the events unfolded, took off his pince-nez and cleaned the eye pieces carefully with his handkerchief.

Armouries Worker Injures Left Hand

MILLBROOK, Nov. 28.—(ENS).—A. J. Henderson received severe injuries to his left hand at the weekend, while helping Wilbert Fallis with the drilling of a well back of the armouries. Slipping on the wet ground, Mr. Henderson put out his hand to save himself from falling, receiving the full impact of the descending block with which the drilling is carried on. His thumb had a bone broken next the hand, and was badly cut at the base, requiring four stitches to close the wound. Dr. M. E. Hobbs gave the necessary medical attention, and took Mr. Henderson to the Clinic at Peterborough on Monday for further examination and treatment. The left hand has been placed in a cast, and it is likely to be some time before he can use it again.

Train Busting Lot Of Fun Rotarians Told

Flight Lieutenant Donald F. Morrison, D.F.M., D.F.C., Trenton, one of those seemingly fabulous young Canadians who helped wrest supremacy of the air from the Huns, was guest speaker at the Rotary Club luncheon Monday at the Empress Hotel. It was the first anniversary of his repatriation from Germany, where he had been prisoner of war for a year, and the occasion called for a little celebration of their reunion with his wife at Belleville last night.

Young and amiably modest, and maturely reticent about his part in those eventful and fateful years overseas, Flight Lieutenant Morrison merely sketched the high lights of his experiences during the tense months after the Battle of Britain, when Goering's Luftwaffe gradually yielded pride of place to the youth of the R.A.F. and the R.C.A.F., reinforced eventually by the first wings from the United States. He was introduced by George H. Roper, and at the conclusion was tendered a vote of thanks in a motion by Norman Hamley who was with the R.A.F. in the last war, with considerable time in the air on the Piave front in Italy. The applause accompanying the expression of appreciation as conveyed by Gordon S. Matthews, chairman, was an exceedingly warm tribute of admiration for a young veteran of the skies who seemed more like a boy graduate of Collegian years.

Planes Were Few

Don Morrison enlisted in Toronto four years and a half ago, "and I have had the privilege since then of association with the finest chaps Canada can produce. My only regret in looking back is in the number of my friends that are gone. Our work was chiefly within that period between the Battle of Britain and the Invasion of France. It was fairly exciting for us, and more or less paved the way for the success we have had since. After the Battle of Britain, the day raids in late 1940 and the night attacks up to May and June, 1941, we began to switch the offensive. We didn't have much equipment, but we began making greater use of the Spitfires we had, shooting up German installations in France.

For a while we were sending up one to three squadrons, along the French coast and venturing inland. Usually we were chased home, but I think we did something valuable to those who were doing the chasing."

"Train busting" was a lot of fun, in Don Morrison's memories of those precarious months before Allied production of planes and crews began to swarm into the skies. Seeing the engineer and firemen bail out as the planes swooped over them was a pleasant preying on Hun transport. Sometimes the boys were lucky when they came across German troop trains.

Skates are in demand for the use of Canadian troops overseas, according to word received by the Peterborough Y.M.C.A. from John W. Beaton, senior secretary of Y.M.C.A. war services. Mr. Beaton wires that at the request of General Crerar, commanding the 1st Canadian Army, a dispatch requesting gifts of skates for Canadian soldiers in the overseas forces has been released. The overseas headquarters of the Y.M.C.A. has pledged the support of all local associations throughout the Dominion and the Peterborough "Y" is anxious that the response for this city should be worthwhile. There must be in many homes throughout Peterborough hockey skates and boots that are not being used and these could all be utilized by the men of Canada's army, in accordance with the request that is now being made by the Y.M.C.A. overseas services with the endorsation of General Crerar. The local Y.M.C.A. would be delighted to hear from any citizens who are in a position to make a donation of skates for shipment overseas.

Peterborough juniors have completed arrangements for a sudden-death game in Oshawa Saturday with Sammy Manson's Hamilton team in a battle for the unofficial Ontario junior title. This game will strictly be for glory. It is almost certain to be an expensive proposition for both teams for Oshawa sport-lovers are interested only in the Generals right now and the paid attendance is not likely to be large enough to pay for blowing up the ball. However both clubs were sporting enough to go ahead with the arrangements in spite of the financial outlook, and they deserve credit for the spirit they are showing. This Peterborough outfit has had to carry on all season confronted by similar handicaps. Bringing three Toronto clubs here in a row was an undertaking that wrecked the treasury but in spite of that experience the Petes have been game enough to go ahead with this Hamilton arrangement. It is to be hoped that their determination will be rewarded with a win over the strong Hamilton youngsters.

St. Mike's Quinte Winners

St. Michael's Academy, Belleville, who after playing six-man rugby all season have swung into the orthodox brand of football with great success are the winners of the Bay of Quinte Conference. Ken Colling has this to say of their feat: "Coach Jack Doran's St. Michael's Academy gridders hung up their second consecutive Bay of Quinte senior COSSA Interscholastic rugby football title by beating Stirling High 20 to 1 yesterday. It is to be hoped that the Quinte Interscholastic loop will be ready to step out into full COSSA competition in 1945. After all it appears as though there are as good good secondary school gridders in Belleville as elsewhere, despite the fact this city has three schools contending for such honors. In years past Belleville held its Interscholastic football head high and there is no reason why such shouldn't be the case in 1945. As for yesterday's Quinte championship game, Coach Powell's lighter Stirling squad did themselves a glorious effort and were in no degree disgraced. On the other hand Skipper Doran's local "Irish" held up in the line and were blessed with the strong work of Dick Fitzpatrick, their quarterback, who has proven himself as one of the best Interscholastic football players seen in Belleville for these many years. Of course Dick has such backfielders as Bob Wilson, Gord Donovan, Jerry Moher and Bob Lucy to depend on. And that quartet seldom let him down on his calls. (That's football.)"

"Billy Cupolo's early showing gives the thought that the Falls boy is set for quite a career in National Hockey League ranks," says the Niagara Falls Gazette. "Billy popped in three goals and assisted with two in his first four games and that's a great deal better than many of the more publicized performers have done. He's getting a lot of playing and knowing his conscientious habits, one has to surmise that he will be mighty prominent in tallying records at quitting time. The circuit boasts many rookies this season, and already the first year crop has come through nicely. Ted Lindsay of Detroit, Frankie Eddolls of Canadiens, Harvey Bennett and Kenny Smith of Bruins and Wally Atanas of Rangers, all have acquitted themselves creditably, but not one member of this flock has been any more conspicuous than the Cataract city product and when the schedule ends, young Mr. Cupulo may be extending anything in the major loop for the Calder Trophy."

Rules Are Unchanged

"Apparently some people still are not clear about minor pucksters playing in anything above junior "B" ranks and then returning to a lower category," says Chick Appel in the Stratford Beacon-Herald. "This was advanced as the reason why the three Chin brothers of Lucknow returned to their home, rather than play for Port Colborne in the junior "A" series. It should be pointed out that present regulations do not bar a boy from playing in all series up to and including senior hockey during the same year, provided his age complies with the various minor series rules. Neither is there any legislation in the constitution of the Ontario Minor Hockey Association which would prevent a boy from playing junior "A" and then reverting to juvenile or lower category in the same year. When the Stratford Minor Hockey Association submitted an amendment to the O.M.H.A., which, if adopted, will bar all players from junior "A" up from the minor series they had no ulterior motive, other than to give the small centres the break they have been clamoring for during the past few years, particularly after what happened last winter."

Scoring records of the N.H.L. have a decidedly familiar look. It is evident that if youth must be served the cash-and-carry circuit hasn't heard very much about the adage and doesn't believe in putting it into force. All but two of the players who figure up at the top of the heap are veterans and that pair Bodnar of the Leafs and Billy Mosienko of the Black Hawks are not freshmen. Leading the parade is the well-known figure of Bill Cowley, smooth-working centre ice player of the Boston Bruins with 22 points and right on his heels is Toe Blake of the Montreal Canadiens with a total of 21. The Canadien ace picked up three points over the week-end to climb into second spot. Clint Smith of Chicago is third with 20, the durable and reliable Syd Howe of the Detroit Red Wings and Gus Bodnar of the Leafs, are tied for fourth, one point behind. Billy Mosienko is sixth with 18 and Toronto's two disabled veterans, Sweeney Schriner and Lorne Carr are tied for seventh with 17 points each. The old boys in the circuit evidently know too much for the new-comers and are determined not to let any of the rookies shove them around.

Lakefield Rink Loses In Bonspiel Played At Oshawa

OSHAWA, Nov. 28.—With a complete entry list of 64 rinks, the first annual five day bonspiel to be staged by the Oshawa Curlig Club got away to an auspicious start here Monday. Top-notch curlers from almost every club in the Province commenced play for the handsome new Col. R. S. McLaughlin Trophy, with the Sykes Memorial Trophy as the premiere award in the consolation event. Handsome prizes will go to the individual members of the winning rinks and runners-up.

Chief upsets in the preliminary round in the morning were provided when Capt. Bill Gifford's local rink sent J. G. Parker, Dr. Alex Elliott and his mates into the discard. Ben Ward skipped his Oshawa rink to a 17-1 victory over A. P. Ross' Granite Club foursome and C. R. Redfern's Toronto Vics rink went down to defeat at the hands of Frank Simmons' strong Barrie entry. The Barrie rink then eliminated Ben Ward's rink in the second round, with a spectacular shot by the skip on the final end.

Only one Oshawa rink survived after the first two games had been played, Eddie Goodman's rink reaching the second draw in the consolation event.

Canuck Boxers Have Bad Night

LONDON, Nov. 28 — (CP Cable) —It was a bad night for Canadians in a boxing competition at the Royal Albert Hall last night when Cpl. Harry Hurst of the Royal Canadian Artillery of Montreal and Big Al Delaney, Canadian Army trooper who calls both Oshawa and Windsor, Ont., his home, both lost 8-round bouts by a decision.

Hurst, who weighed in at 141½ pounds, lost on points to Lefty Flynn of Jamaica, who was fighting his first bout since he returned to port after six months at sea with the British Merchant Navy. Flynn weighed 143¾ pounds.

Delaney lost to Ken Shaw of Dundee, formerly Scottish amateur heavyweight champion. Shaw on his only previous London appearance drew with Delaney, a veteran who is becoming little more than a trial horse for Britain's young heavies. The Canadian had little defence against Shaw's powerful left-hand smashes.

Wants Title Bout.

Hurst, a leading Canadian lightweight before coming overseas, has applied to the British Boxing Board of Control for an Empire title match with 27-year-old Ronnie James of Wales, who took the British and Empire lightweight titles from Eric Boon of Liverpool a couple of months ago.

James was disqualified last night in the sixth round of a scheduled eight-rounder with Sgt. Gwyn Williams, a parachute instructor, who participated in the Arnhem landing. Williams, just 23, now has won 65 of 67 amateur and professional fights. Like James, he is a Welshman, but resides in Oxford.

The referee raised Williams' arm in victory after he stopped the fight during an exchange of body punches. Until then Williams was well ahead on points.

Expensive Butler

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 28 — (AP).—Arthur Treacher who has acted the part of more movie butlers than you could shake a stick at, turned into a real one last night. Treacher had advertised that he was for hire as a butler to the highest war bond bidder. Atwater Kent, radio manufacturer, got Treacher to buttle at a dinner for filmdom's elite. His bid: $300,000.

Harry Davis Signed To Manage Leafs

TORONTO, Nov. 28 (CP)—Harry Davis, popular first baseman of the Toronto Maple Leafs of the International Baseball League today was signed by President Peter Campbell as playing-manager for the 1945 season. Davis, who has spent the last three seasons with the Leafs and was here for three seasons some years ago, has been in professional baseball for 16 years. He succeeds Burleigh Grimes as manager.

Mickey a Secret

LONDON, Nov. 28 — (CP) — The secret of the "mickey" a radar device which permits bombing through dense clouds and smoke screens, was disclosed today. With it British and United States airmen have bombed German targets through cloud cover three miles thick.

Cleo Shans Wins In 3 Over Fatta

BALTIMORE, Nov. 28 —(AP)— Cleo Shans, Los Angeles Negro light-weight, scored a technical knockout over Carmine Fatta of New York after three rounds of a scheduled 10-round slam-bang feature last night.

Shans weighed 134, Fatta 136½.

Fatta, managed by Katie Jenkins wife of the former fighter Lou Jenkins, won the first stanza by a shade. Shans carried the fight to his opponent in the second, with battering-ram blows to the body.

The New Yorker seemed unable to protect himself at close range and repeatedly was backed against the ropes. In the third, Shans beat Fatta about the body and head almost at will and the heavier fighter collapsed about 10 seconds before the bell. He was in an upright position, but still unable to fight back at the count of nine, when the bell sounded.

After Fatta was carried to his corner, Referee Eddie Leonard signalled the fight had ended on advice of Fatta's seconds.

Lions Club Spends $1,370.54 On Pool-Playground

Hurrell Dodds, reporting to the Lions' Club on the cost, progress and success of the Lions' Club playground and wading pool which started this year, produced a statement that drew approval from the members.

He traced the growth of the project from 1943 when work was started on the river-bed below the Hunter street bridge alongside what was formerly the Tourist Camp, and outlined the state of development which has been achieved.

Total outlay in cash for the enterprise to the close of the year was $1,370.54, which included $630.00 for salaries, and $740.54 for labor, material and equipment. This does not include much valuable playground equipment which was obtained through the efforts of Thomas Doughty, vice chairman, and which is valued at $900.

To finance this major service club venture, the club had to rely on proceeds from the annual Carnival, but here they ran into difficulties when inclement weather reduced the receipts, and forced the club to dig into the reserve of cash.

Opened July 1.

The pool and playground was officially opened on July 1, with a lifeguard, a female playground supervisor and a senior male supervisor. The lifeguard was Jim Buchan, a returned soldier, while Miss Sylvia Boorman, a University of Toronto student, who is majoring in sociology, was in charge of the playground, and James Burns, principal at May's School, was senior supervisor and responsible for general supervision of the entire program.

These three people were well suited for the work, and not only won the admiration and praise of the parents but enjoyed the confidence of the children as well.

All work in connection with the building of the playground and pool was done by the Lions' Club members themselves, with the aid of a bull-dozer supplied by Tom Doughty, while certain welding and machine work was paid for in part.

400 Daily.

The greatest number of children in the pool and playground at one time was close to 400, while the daily average was over 200, and there were 190 children in the water at one time on several days. The season passed without an accident beyond a few minor cuts and bruises. On Sundays when the supervisors were off duty, the members of the club took turns supervising the grounds and pool.

Almost fifty loads of sand were dumped into the pool and along the shore, trees were trimmed to afford a clear view, much work was done on the shoreline, and most of the stones were picked from the bottom of the river and placed on shore. All broken glass, cans, pieces of tin and other debric were buried.

Parks' Foreman Helped.

Since the opening of the plant, swings have been permanently anchored in concrete, as have several of the teeter frames, and two large sandboxes were built. Several portable teeters were built by Thomas Doughty, and some supplied by W. B. Butcher, parks department foreman, whose whole-hearted co-operation was greatly appreciated.

A set of quoits was donated by Higgins Hardware, and considerable baseball equipment was purchased. With the assistance of Alex. Kay, well known baseball umpire, two hardball teams were organized, reviving the game for the first time in several years in this city. Plans are underway to extend this phase of the playground work next year.

Commenting on plans for the future, Mr. Dodds said it is the hope of the committee to purchase 6 water scooters, 4 more teeters, 1 water slide, and one land slide, 2 kiddies' merry-go-rounds, 2 waterballs, 2 sets quoits, 2 volleyball sets to round out the facilities during 1945.

Merry-Go-Round.

Investigation is being made on the possibility of purchasing a full-size merry-go-round, installing a permanent refreshment both and building a band shell under an arch of the bridge close to the river. Committees are at work on all three and before spring all of the plans should be completed. Mr. Dodds also stated that considerable discussion had taken place on the prospects of building outdoor grills to permit the holding of corn roasts and weiner roasts. He also said the committee wished to extend the beach south along Riverside Park to permit swimming for adults, with a diving tower to be built. This would fit in with the projected plan to build a horseshoe grandstand at Riverside Park, when dressing rooms might be put under the stand.

Mr. Dodds received high praise from the club members for his able direction and driving force which was one of the main reasons for the project having reached its advanced state of development, but he in turn gave his vice-chairman Thomas Doughty, a large share of the credit, and lauded the committee which consisted of Sim Gledhill, George Hildenbrand, Shocky Mein, Vert Reynolds, Pete McGillen, Ron MacGee, Fraser Watson and Jim Burns.

He also paid warm tribute to members of the City Council, the Quaker Oats Company, A. L. Killaly, Mr. Spicer of the Ontario Marble Co., Canada Packers, City Engineer Parsons, B'nai B'rith Club, Peterborough Canoe Company, and the Peterborough Examiner for interest and valuable assistance.

During the year the only organization which recognized the work of the club in a material way was the Local Council of Women which made a donation of $25.00 to the project.

Newhouser Tops American Loop

NEW YORK, Nov. 28 — (AP). — Harold (Lefty) Newhouser, brilliant Detroit pitcher, today was named the most valuable player in the American League in 1944 by a four-vote margin over team-mate Paul (Dizzy) Trout in the annual balloting of a 24-man committee of the Baseball Writers' Association.

The 23-year-old native of Detroit, who won 29 games for the Tigers in one of the most thrilling pennant races in baseball history, received 236 votes to 232 for Trout. Trout, however, picked up 10 first place ballots to seven for Newhouser, who pulled ahead by polling 10 seconds and six thirds.

Vernon (Junior) Stephens of the pennant-winning St. Louis Browns, whose 105 runs batted in led the circuit, finished third with 193 points. The slugging shortstop was named on four first-place ballots.

Newhouser became the first southpaw and the third hurler to qualify for the most valuable designation in the long history of the American League award. Washington's Walter Johnson (twice) and Spurgeon Chandler of the 1943 Yankees were the others so honored.

The six-foot 1¾-inch former sandlotter also is the fourth Tiger played to be named. The others are Ty Cobb, who received the first award in 1911, Hank Greenberg (twice) and Charlie Gehringer. He is the first member of a non-pennant winner to be selected since Jimmy Foxx of the 1938 Boston Red Sox.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29 — (AP). — Earl Ruby, Louisville Courier-Journal sports editor, nominates Tennessee's John Barnhill as the coach of the year . . . "Barnhill came from no team at all to the Rose Bowl in one year," says Ruby. "A year ago he was teaching calesthenics to students. Today he is teaching his Vols new tricks for those U.S.C. Trojans." . . . and Scoop Latimer of the Greenville, S.C., News suggests: "Miami may wonder if it picked a le[illegible] for the Orange Bowl if Georgia Tec's defeat by Notre Dame was the acid test." . . . probably won't care, Scoop, so long as there's a juicy gate.

Wrong Direction

Lieut. Joe Maniaci of the Bainbridge Navy Commodores tells this one about a golf game with Jimmy Demaret, Bob Hope and Bing Crosby when he visited the west coast with Chicago Bears . . . on the first hole, Hope asked his caddie the distance, teed up his ball and proceeded to slice it a mile out of bounds. On the second he again asked, then hooked beyond the boundary . . . each time Bob decided there wasn't any use playing out the hole after such a bad start . . . on the third tee, Hope again asked his caddie how far it was to the cup . . . "Mistah Hope," replied the youngster, "you don't want to know how long this hole is; you want to know how wide."

Here and There in Sport

By The Canadian Press

Tom Forgie of the Hershey Bears continued to lead with 22 points in individual scoring, according to the statistics of the American Hockey League issued last night at New Haven by President Maurice Podoloff. Bob Gracie of Pittsburgh was runner-up with 19 while Tom Burlington of Cleveland, Len Halderson of Buffalo and Hector Pozzo of Hershey were tied for third place with 18 points.

The Associated Press poll of 82 grid experts to determine the outstanding college team in the United States voted Army as the best of the lot, gave Navy the runner-up spot and picked Ohio State third. The majority of specialists picked Army to beat Navy in the big game at Baltimore Saturday.

Roger Bedard, 19-year-old left winger who last year played with Montreal Royals of the Quebec Senior Hockey League, joined Toronto Maple Leafs on their week-end trip to Montreal and will turn out with the National Hockey League club this week, it was announced last night. Bedard will probably appear on the third line when Leafs play New York Rangers here Saturday night.

The seven clubs in the American Hockey League have voted 4-3 against a proposal to combine the eastern and western divisions of the loop and the two groups will continue for this season, the winners of each to engage in the post-season playoffs.

President of the Dominion Football Association from 1927 to 1934 William Edward Dean, 72, died at his home in Hamilton yesterday. Born in England, he had been an alderman of Hamilton.

Canadiens Laud Goalie Durnan

By The Canadian Press

Montreal Canadiens rise to leadership of the National Hockey League underlines the importance of defensive strength in a winning campaign.

So far in his sophomore year cool Bill Durnan has let only 29 pucks into his net in 13 games for an average of 2.23 a game, which would have been a creditable figure before the days of high-scoring wartime hockey. And he is only one rampart of a fine defensive citadel, with outposts capably manned by Butch Bouchard, Glen Harmon, Wilf Fields and Frank Eddolls.

The Habitants' nearest competitors in defensive excellence are the second-place Toronto Maple Leafs, whose Frank McCool has been beaten 41 times in 13 contests for a 3.15 average. Right behind is Detroit's Conny Dion who is letting them by at a 3.25 rate, with 39 goals in 12 games.

Thus by "goals against" yardstick of effectiveness, the six N.H.L. teams rate exactly in order of their current standings.

List the teams in order of scoring punch and it's a different story. Detroit leads with 56 goals in 12 games for a 4.67 average, followed by Chicago, 4.18; Toronto, 4.00; Boston, 3.91; Montreal, 3.62 and New York, 3.20.

Sir Peter Shows Rare Style At Dufferin

TORONTO, Nov. 28.— Sir Peter, may pacing gelding, and Louie James, driver, were the big noises at Dufferin Park yesterday when the harness racing program carried over from Saturday was completed. Sir Peter threw a surprise into the fans and speculators alike when he won the second and third heats in commanding style, coming from behind in both heats to lead the field at the pay station. The way wasn't paved for the gelding as he was forced to go around the field to win in both heats.

Bendonna, with owner-driver Len Fraser in the pilot house, landed the second and third heats of her race, after standing a terrific drive through the homestretch each time to stand off the challenge of Linna Lee who was a threat at all times. Cyrus Martin accounted for the fifth race, although he dropped the last heat to the Michigan owned pacer, Rose Carlton, from the Pat Harvie stable. Lady Harvester, owned by J. L. Waples, Victoria Harbor, went a good race in the seventh event, winning the first two heats and then just beaten in the final by Dazzle Henley. A complete new card will be programmed for next Saturday when all races scheduled will be completed that afternoon and likewise on Monday.

HE'S THE NEW RING SENSATION—Danny Webb, new ring sensation of the Canadian Army, boxes with a capable boxing partner as he limbers up for an important ring battle. Montreal is Danny's home town, but he is well known to sports fans in Toronto. He forced Jackie Paterson, world champ in his class to throw in the towel in a recent non-title bout. This picture was taken at a training camp in England.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

TORONTO, Nov. 28 — (CP). — With all the talk about rule changes and whatnot—especially the whatnot—in Canadian football, it's interesting to get the reaction of a real expert of the game. With that in mind, Dink (Montreal Gazette) Carroll went to the oracle in the person of the one and only Frank alias Shag Shaughnessy.

Shag, who started the forward pass movement in the Canadian game, thinks that the Canadian and American games are getting closer together all the time, but he wants to see teams this side of the line retain the single in their scoring, and keep the punt as an effective offensive and scoring weapon. By the same token, he thinks the American game could well adopt the single without losing anything by it.

Another innovation he suggests is to drop the 12th man, "particularly in these days of manpower shortages."

Cause celebre:

Some background on the Ezinicki case, not previously aired for the public, was revealed by Andy Lytle of the Toronto Star.

According to Andy, the fiery former Oshawa General and Toronto Leaf player was given some papers by a non-com when he reported after his military callup, and told to sign them without stopping to read the official phraseology. Bill refused and the documents were more than slightly ravelled in the ensuing argument.

When the matter was investigated, Lytle says, Ezinicki was exonerated and the corporal reprimanded for his part in the affair. The Star sports editor is of the opinion the whole thing never would have occurred if Ezinicki hadn't been a prominent sports figure, and hence fair game for the hue and cry that attended his military "arrest" and later enlistment.

Incidentally:

Maybe you're not particularly interested, but blue geese flew south through Manitoba this fall for the first time within the memory of the usual oldest inhabitants. Maybe spring is just around several corners.....Sub-Lieut. W. R. Roberts has an interesting sport program cooking for Sea Cadets in the North Bay-Timmins area. Instead of the usual winter calisthenics, he plans indoor track meets throughout the winter, with special competitions to keep the lads interested.....Much has been written about hockey fans throwing things in the heat of a hectic game, but Frank McCool has the lowdown from a player's viewpoint. The Toronto Leafs goalie, writing a column for the Toronto Star, reports that at some games paper airplanes are so plentiful the rink looks like an aerial testing ground.

Cowley Leads Scoring Race

MONTREAL, Nov. 28 — (CP). — Boston's apparently-ageless Bill Cowley is all alone at the top of the National Hockey League scoring race, a position that is by no means strange to the man who has won scoring honors twice in the past and come close on several other occasions.

Official league records released today showed Cowley with 22 points, on eight goals and 14 assists, for a two-point margin over his nearest challengers. Chicago's Clint Smith and Canadiens' Toe Blake held down second spot together, Blake with nine goals and 11 assists, and Smith with six goals and 14 assists.

Syd Howe of Detroit and Toronto's Gus Bodnar were tied for fourth spot, each with 19 points, while Bill Mosienko of Chicago was holding sixth alone with 18. Sweeney Schriner and Lorne Carr of Toronto, both out with injuries, were tied for the next spot with 17 points apiece.

Maurice Richard of Canadiens, running ninth in the point column, led the league in goals with 12, one more than Mosienko and Schriner, the only other double-figure goal scorers. Bodnar led the assist list with 15, one ahead of Cowley, Smith and Howe.

Pat Egan of Boston took over the race for the title of league's bad man, with 22 minutes in the penalty box to date.

Remember When—

(By The Canadian Press)

Georges Vezina, hockey's peerless goalkeeper, took his position in Montreal Canadiens' nets for the last time in his ice career 19 years ago tonight. One of the greatest netminders of all time, Vezina had a temperature of 102 and suffered sharp pains in his side which caused him to retire after the first period. He died March 28, 1926.

Port Colborne Loses To Irish

By The Canadian Press

St. Michael's of Toronto again showed marked superiority last night at Port Colborne with a 9-6 victory for their third straight win in the Junior "A" series of the O.H.A. to put them on top in the eastern group standing with six points against the four points held by Oshawa Generals in second spot. Neither the Students nor Gens have lost an engagement thus far but the break-up should come when St. Mikes travel to the motor city next Saturday.

For the recreationists it was their third successive defeat and it put them well into the cellar of the western group which is headed by St. Catharines Falcons.

Blute had a field day for the Collegians with a total of three goals while Turik turned in two tallies, the balance of four being divided between Thompson, McCormack, Gravelle and Sloan.

Bowen, for Ports, also did well for himself in registering three of the losers' six scores, the other snipers being Latnosk, Matheson and Morgan.

Doll Scarcity

TORONTO, Nov 28 (CP)—Dolls manufactured in the United States are being imported to make up the Christmas shortage of Canadian-made lolls and have already appeared on the market, the Prices Board said yesterday.

O'Connor Will Decline Landis Title

CHICAGO, Nov. 28 — (AP). Leslie M. O'Connor, the man most widely mentioned as the likely successor to the late Kenesaw Mountain Landis as Commissioner of Baseball, will decline that office if it is proffered to him.

Secretary to Judge Landis since the major leagues created the commissionership 24 years ago, Mr. O'Connor asserted yesterday he would refuse any nominations for the job should they develop at the winter meeting of the National and American circuits here December 11-12.

"I have a short life to live," 56-year-old O'Connor declared, "and I want none of that job. It's a killer."

The quiet-spoken lawyer, the man-behind-the-scenes in many of Judge Landis' important decisions, frequently has asserted that, in deference to Landis' incomparable position in baseball his office should never be filled.

Like other big league officials, however, Mr. O'Connor shies away from any definite proposal as to what form the future governing of baseball should take.

His disinclination to assume the commissioner's post, though, pointed more than ever toward a likely three-member commission composed of Will Harridge, president of the American League; Ford Frick, National League president, and O'Connor himself.

Should major league club owners extend the major league agreement which perpetuates the commission's office, as recently recommended by a steering committee of the two circuits, it probably would be with the understanding that the three-member commission would rule baseball with at least some of the authority granted Judge Landis.

Canadian Tries To Salvage Air Conference

By C. R. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

CHICAGO, Nov. 28.—(CP).—H. J. Symington, head of the Canadian delegation, made a final effort yesterday to save the international civil aviation conference from partial failure by submitting a compromise proposal for possible reconciliation of the Anglo-American disagreement.

The Canadian plan, offered at this morning's meeting of the joint sub-committee, leans toward the American stand for use of a "fifth freedom"—concerning pick-up traffic on long hauls—in establishing the volume of business used as a basis for increasing flights under the original Canadian "escalation" plan.

Delegation leaders and their chief advisers from Canada, the United Kingdom and the United States, met last evening for three hours and submission of the Canadian compromise proposal yesterday was taken as evidence that there seemed no hope of the two larger delegations agreeing.
